Jack Cowling, the popular manager at the Apollo Theatre, Schildergasse, is to be congratulated upon the success of his directorship. Since its inauguration Cowling has been indefatigable in his efforts at the Apollo. He is an experienced man in the theatrical business, having over twelve years experience. As a soldier he has seen much active service in addition to his duties as manager to various army theatres.

* * *

In our report of the "Robin Hoods" Concert Party on Thursday last our correspondent attributed the producing of the revue, "The Pearl Chase" to Capt. J. B. S. Payne. This was a mistake. In all fairness we must credit Pte. Bert S. Lennard with the writing and production of the revue. To a professional of eight years standing like Lennard we think due prominence should be given to the correction.

To be proud of over 24 years stage experience is the privilege of George Huntley, the comedian of low-comedy renown, of "The Tabs" Concert Party. He started as one of "Payne's Little Vagabonds" in 1895. Having had a varied and interesting career including some years with the well-known Fredk. Melvilie Company, he joined partnership with Wright, and as Huntley and Wright, cross-talk comedians, made quite a hit on the music halls. As the waiter in "Get Busy", the recent Tabs revue, he did exceptionally well.

* * *

By-the-way who is this O'Leary billed on the Hagenbeck Circus programmes? He is styled as a clown of some celebrity, and has some performing geese.

* * *

As Sir Allbutt in 'Get Busy,' Ernie Roberts was a gigantic success. He is one of the most versatile and laughter provoking comedians with the Rhine Army. His drolleries and spontaneous wit have made him quite a name. Before the war he specialized mainly in purely dramatic work. While playing the part of a German spy in a well-known drama, his German accent and general Teutonic appearance and gestures caused the suspicion of several of the spy-catching monomaniacs. He was watched, then arrested, but being able to explain the position, he was liberated and permitted to carry on. Now this speaks well for Roberts' dramatic ability, but we imagine comedy is his forte.

BRITISH WOOL CLIP DISPUTE.

FARMERS AND MERCHANTS AT LOGGERHEADS.

The resumption of the British wool fairs this month is being looked forward to with keen interest throughout the wool trade, especially in view of the fact that it will mark the return to normal methods of wool-buying after three years of Government purchase says the Daily Express. The shortage of Colonial combing wools of the finer grades will cause the fine downs and half-bred wools from the eastern counties and the south to be greatly welcomed.

Unfortunately a serious dispute has arisen which threatens to interfere with the fairs. Prior to the war the custom with regard to the allowance for drafts varied in different parts of the country, and the British Wool Federation, with the Country Wool Merchants' Association, are making an effort to standardise the practice of allowing a deduction of 2lbs. per hundredweight as a draft. The farmers, however, are up in arms against this proposal, and through their various unions and the National Farmers' Union, have gone so far as to declare that they will keep back their wool for twelve months if necessary rather than submit. It would be unfortunate if there were any hitch of this kind, but the feeling in the trade is that the farmers will not go to extremes because, by doing so, they would run the risk of missing a very favourable market.

Values are now at the highest point in the stronger grades, such as Lincolns and northern wools, are not in such keen demand as the finer sorts, there is no doubt that the farmers will get a very substantial advance on what the Government paid them last year.

PASSPORTS FOR WIVES.

Mr. T. Griffiths asked the Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs whether, in connection with applications for passports to South Africa or elsewhere, it was the practice, in cases where the applicant was a married women, to require the husband's consent in writing.

Mr. Harmsworth replied that in a certain number of cases evidence had, in fact, been asked for that the proposed journey was to be undertaken with the knowledge and consent of the husband. This requirement was instituted by the Chief Passport Officer in view of several protests being received from husbands against the issue of passports which had enabled their wives to leave the country without the husband's knowledge, and sometimes in company with other men. Passports for South Africa were issued only on the recommendation of the High Commissioner for the Union, and it was understood that in the case of married women before making such recommendations he usually required to see a letter from the husband.

Answers to Correspondents.

J.H.D.—We will find the information for you.

A.M.—Doubtless, you will have difficulty in being released on those grounds.

Ha tlepool.—No, you cannot claim to be released.

Dummkopf.—Your gratuity, etc., will be given on permanent rank.

T.Y.—Yes, you are entitled to the rosette.

W.P.—It is possible providing you know some person owning a camera. If you do not, try one of the photographers in Cologne.

J.LL.—Your service on the troopship counts as active service, and you are entitled to wear service chevrons according to the period you were serving.

Anxious.—Liverpool is larger than Manchester.

R.A.S.C.—Your assumption is correct.

Cpl. P.M.G.— Thanks for your contribution. It is a little too sultry, however.

Sapper:— You are very much out of date with your humour. The pickled walnuts joke is too "chestnutty" to catch us.

Turf:— We published a complete list of previous Derby winners in Thursday's issue.

B.S.—Officially, no. You can only obtain petrol on indent through the usual army channels.

M.L.—You are not entitled to release. The order refers to service prior to 1916 and in this war.

T.E.H.—You do not say when you enlisted, and so we cannot give you any information.

BRITISH NAVAL RAID IN THE BALTIC.

AUSTRIANS VIOLATE ARMISTICE.

AFGHAN RULER'S FEAR OF MURDER.

TURKISH EX-MINISTERS AWAITING TRIAL.

MODIFICATIONS OF AUSTRIAN TREATY.

QUESTION OF ARMAMENTS.

The Temps (Paris) states that the Council of Four yesterday decided to modify the clauses of the Austrian treaty by which the small Allied Powers of Central Europe were bound to limit their armaments. It is known that this limitation had been fixed as follows: 80,000 men for Poland, 50,000 for Czecho-Slovakia and for Roumania, and 40,000 for Jugo-Slavia. The Council of Four has recognised that such a limitation is unjustified in the case of Allied States. Satisfaction has therefore been given to the claims presented on this matter by their representatives at the Conference.

BROCKDORF-RANTZAU VISITS COLOGNE.

Count Brockdorf-Rantzau is paying a flying visit to Cologne. He arrived yesterday afternoon to discuss the question of the future of the Rhineland with Cardinal von Hartmann.

TURKISH EX-MINISTERS UNDER ARREST.

Malta: 3rd June.—Sixty-six Turkish prisoners have arrived under a strong military escort. There is the greatest reticence regarding their names but it is known that they comprise practically all the Ministers of the old regime who were responsible for the Armenian massacres, deportations and other crimes and intrigues.— Reuter.

BRITISH RAID ON KRONSTADT.

It is stated in London that a British squadron in the Baltic has raided Kronstadt harbour, sinking two Bolshevist ships and forcing the Bolshevists to evacuate Fort Alexandros. The British casualties were few and the damage to the attacking ships not material.—Reuter.

MYSTERIOUS DOINGS AT AMERONGEN.

EX-KAISER'S VISITORS.

Amsterdam.—Although no details have yet leaked out, it looks as if something mysterious is happening at Amerongen. Some time ago, Dr. Kriege, a former member of the Reichstag, was staying in the village and paid daily visits to the ex-Kaiser, ostensibly for the purpose of making arrangements about the ex-Kaiser's property in Germany. Next, the former Foreign Minister, Herr Zimmermann, arrived at Amerongen, and was speedily followed by Herr Schulbach, of the German Legation at The Hague.

It is impossible to glean the slightest idea of the reason for these gentlemen's presence at Amerongen. Then came the interview of the ex-Empress with the Crown Prince, which is alleged to have been of an entirely personal character. It is assumed that money matters were discussed between the mother and her son.

The ex-Kaiser continues to saw wood every day. Since the publication of the Peace Treaty he has become very nervous, and works with feverish energy. His bill at Amerongen is steadily increasing. He has to pay for the apartments he occupies in the castle, for his special guard, and for the help he requires when sawing. Up to the present, however, the Berlin Government has paid all the ex-Kaiser's bills out of the income from his property in Germany. —Reuter.

AUSTRIANS VIOLATE ARMISTICE.

An official communiqué, dated May 31, from Serbian General Headquarters says:

At the beginning of May the Austrians violated the armistice on the Carinthain front, drove away the population of Velikovatz, and crossed over to the right bank of the Drave. Advancing more than twenty kilomètres to the south of the Drave, they attacked in the region of the tunnel on the Podroznica-Rosenbach line, and seized the north end of the tunnel. Throughout the whole expanse of occupied territory the undisciplined Austrian troops did a great deal of harm to the Slovene populations. The negotiations at Celovac-Klagenfurt with a view to putting an end to hostilities, on the basis that the Austrian troops should retreat to the line of demarcation made before this aggression, have come to nothing. The Austrian delegates did not agree to the conditions, and our troops, therefore, began the offensive in Carinthia on May 29. They defeated the enemy, and in two days recovered nearly all the ground lost at the beginning of the month, as well as a part of the territory which the Austrians had occupied by force of arms last December. In this offensive our troops captured a large number of Austrian soldiers, guns, mitrailleuses, and various war material.

General Sir Herbert Plumer, the new Governor of Malta, is expected to arrive there on the 9th June.

AMIR AND CONDITIONS OF ARMISTICE.

FALSE AFGHAN HOPES.

No reply to the armistice conditions has been received as yet from the Afghan Government.

During the past week there has been some movement in Afghanistan. Probably owing to a large concentration of Afghans, under General Nadir Khan, in Khost, we have evacuated our advanced posts in the Upper Tochi Valley and in Waziristan. These have been occupied by the Wazirs and the Mahsuds, who have burnt the majority. The town of Thal has been gutted by them, but the fort has resisted all efforts upon it. There are signs that the Bolshevik propaganda in Afghanistan and India is continuing. A small Afghan force from Herat has arrived on the Persian frontier. The Afghan commanding officer at Herat received orders to send six battalions to Kabul, but was unable to do so, as he knew that his troops would not obey, and it appears that the natives in this neighbourhood are not anxious for war. The Amir, it is stated, is endeavouring to buoy up his troops with hopes of help from Russia.

OFFICIAL COMMUNIQUE.

Last night the India Office issued the following:

Information received from the Government of India, dated June 3 and 4, shows that an enemy position on low hills two miles north-west of Thal, was attacked and captured by our troops on June 2, and the General Nadir Khan, commanding the Afghan forces operating round Thal, has applied for a cessation of hostilities under orders received by him from the Amir. He has been given certain periods of time in which to start withdrawing his force to Afghan territory, and within which to complete it.

There is no change in the situation to the north of the Kabul river or in Tirah. Some portions of the Orakzai and Zaimukht tribes have joined the Afghans, but the bulk of these two tribes have not committed themselves. It is reported that there is now no enemy east of the Kurram river. The situation in the Tochi Valley is now quieter, owing to the successful action of our troops near Miramshah on June 1, but tribal lashkars are still reported to be active in the Jandola-Murtaza area.

Incursions by Mahsuds and Sherannis are reported to have occurred on our border to the west of Dera Ismail Khan. From Chitral reports have been received of an Afghan advance up the Kunar river from Asmar; to meet this our Chitral column has taken up a position astride the Kunar river north of Birkot.

CONDITIONS FOR KOLCHAK.

Reuter's Agency is informed that there is no truth in the suggestion that conditions of an arbitrary character were imposed by the Allies in their Note to Admiral Kolchak, stating the terms on which they would be prepared formally to recognise his Government. In fact, M. Sazonoff, Admiral Kolchak's Minister for Foreign Affairs, has admitted the reasonable character of the proposals put forward. In framing these proposals the Allied and Associated Governments had simply in view their desire to have assurance that whatever Government is recognised shall take the earliest possible means to ascertain the opinions of the Russian people as a whole, and shall be prepared to carry out these views.

Further, it must be made clear that there can be no question of a return of the smaller Baltic States to their former conditions. It is known that the Government of Russia desires to control the Baltic shores, and probably there would be no objection to this, provided the general status of the Baltic States is not thereby prejudiced. The Allied Note was despatched to Admiral Kolchak just over a week ago, but as doubtless Admiral Kolchak would have to confer with General Denikin, it is not expected that no reply will be forthcoming for some days. Up to the present, so far as is known in London, no answer is yet to hand.

AMIR'S FEAR OF ASSASSINATION.

Further reports concerning the theatment of the Amir's uncle Nasrullah Khan, state he is fed with delicacies from the Amir's table, which probably led to the rumour that he had been poisoned. His family are not allowed to have access to him, but in no other way is he treated with harshness. It appears that the money made by Nasrullah in his gun running trade has been confiscated.

It is difficult to obtain information as to what is happening in the Royal Palace in Kabul. The Amir, it is reported, lives in constant dread of assassination, and hardly leaves the precincts of the palace. Only very trusted persons are admitted to his presence, and he transacts most of his business over the telephone. The palace is fitted with a complete telephone installation, by which it is connected with Jelalabad. There have been no durbars since that at which the Amir announced his intention of invading India. It remains to be seen whether he will have the courage to hold a durbar to consider an armistice. Afghan precedent demands that important steps of this kind must not be taken without a speech from the Throne. We shall soon learn the physical and moral effects of the recent bombing raid on Kabul.—Reuter.

The Government has handed over the destroyers Anzac, Swordsman, Tattoo, Stalwart, Success and Tasmania to the Australian Commonwealth.

THE FRENCH — ASQUITH CONTROVERSY.

FURTHER QUESTIONS.

Members of the House of Commons continue to ply Ministers with questions about the statements contained in Lord French's book.

Yesterday, Brigadier-General Page Croft (N.P., Bournemouth) asked the Prime Minister whether Field-Marshal Lord French had published various confidential documents which he learned of in his official capacity, including his original instructions from Field-Marshal Lord Kitchener, and a memorandum which he addressed to the War Cabinet; and, if so, what action it was proposed to take.

Mr. Bonar Law said he had the articles referred to examined by the War Office. The publication of several of these documents was not authorised. On the other hand, had permission been sought, it was probable that it would have been afforded. As he was informed, they did not make public anything that was detrimental to the national interest. The whole subject was now in the region of public controversy, and the Government did not contemplate any special action in regard to it.

Brigadier-General Page Croft: May I ask whether, in view of the fact that proceedings were taken against the Morning Post, and Colonel Repington, and against other journals during the war, will the Government make it perfectly clear that in the case of future disclosures of secrets of this description, drastic action will be taken?

Mr. Bonar Law: I am sure the hon. gentleman will not expect me to give any expression of opinion on such matters in answer to a question. The case to which he refers was very different. The war was going on, and it was the view of the Government that harm was being done to the public interest.

Commander Bellairs (C. U., Maidstone): May I take it that just as great liberty will be accorded to junior officers in these matters as has been accorded to Lord French and Lord Jellicoe?

Mr. Bonar Law: I cannot make any statement on that subject. The Secretary of State for War explained, and I think the House agreed with him, that the position of the Field-Marshal, though nominally on active service, is, from the War Office point of view, quite different from that of anyone who is really on active service.

Major Ormsby-Gore (C. U. Stafford): Will General Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien be allowed to reply to the attacks made on him in these articles by Lord French?

Mr. Bonar Law: I think the answer I have just given is all I can say on that subject.

LORD KITCHENER'S SHELL REPORT.

Mr. Holmes (L., Derbyshire, N. E.) asked the Prime Minister whether the report by Lord Kitchener on the supply of shrapnel and high-explosive shells in September and October, 1914, could be issued as a Parliamentary Paper.

Mr. Bonar Law: I do not think it would be wise to take the action suggested in the question. The publication by the Government of isolated documents would, I am sure, be inadvisable.

Mr. Holmes: Does the right hon. gentleman suggest that the publication of this report now will be detrimental to the public interest?

Mr. Bonar Law: The reason I gave for not publishing it, and I think the House will agree with me, is that to publish one side of the correspondence and leave out everything else would be quite impossible.

SCENE AT TRANSPORT CONFERENCE.

"SPORTSMANLIKE TRADITIONS."

There was a lively scene at the Transport Workers' Conference at Cardiff yesterday. In the course of his presidential address Mr. Harry Gosling said: I think that as a nation with sportsmanlike traditions and character we should shake hands with our old-time opponents. There are great problems awaiting us, and experience teaches us that capitalist employers would take advantage of national and racial enmities existing among workers of the two nations in order to subject them to greater indignities and increase their own profit. No organization stands in greater need than the transport workers of international co-operation, and the International must be reformed on a foundation that will withstand all future tests. We have carried out the instructions imposed upon us that the headquarters of the International must be removed from Berlin. We found at the opening conference of the new International at Amsterdam the German delegates anxious to co-operate, even to the point of admitting most of what had been said in our criticisms of their conduct before and during the war. I think we are all prepared to let bygones be bygones, and to think only of the future possibilities which lie in the greater co-operation of the nations.

At the conclusion of the president's address, Mr. Havelock Wilson said he wanted to move rejection of Mr. Gosling's report.

Mr. James Sexton, who had temporarily taken the chair, said this was a most unusual attitude to take up. It was not a report but an address, and was merely an individual expression of opinion. He asked Mr. Wilson not to press his motion.

The resolution of thanks to the president was put and carried.

MUNICH SPARTACISTS LEADER SENTENCED.

Copenhagen, 2nd June. A telegram from Munich states that, after a two days' trial, a court-martial at Munich has sentenced Dr. Eugen Levine, the Spartacist who was implicated in the Munich revolution, to death for high treason. Levine is a Jewish journalist. He was born in 1884 at Petrograd, and is a subject of Baden.

An architect, Wilhelm Zimmer, who was charged with being accessory to an act of high treason, was committed to the civil court for trial. Dr. Adolf Arthur Saly, a private tutor, of Munich, and Herr Botho Schmidt, an artist, were acquitted.—Reuter.

A Munich telegram states that Levine was executed on the afternoon of the 5th June.

SOCIALISTS, PRIME MINISTER, AND PEACE.

PREMIER'S DENIAL.

In the House of Commons yesterday Mr. R. McNeill (C. U., Canterbury) asked the Leader of the House whether his attention had been called to the report that certain Labour leaders and other personages of political and financial influence had brought pressure to bear on the Prime Minister to modify the terms of peace in a manner favourable to Germany, and whether the personages referred to include Mr. Ramsay McDonald and Mr. Arthur Henderson, and whether he would make any statement which would relieve the serious anxiety of the public caused by this report. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Bonar Law: I have not had time since I received notice of this question to communicate with Paris, but I do not think there is any cause for the anxiety to which the hon. member refers. I can assure the House that neither the Prime Minister nor any other delegate will be influenced by any particular interests, but will be guided by what they believe to be the public interest. (Cheers.) As a matter of fact, also, I feel certain the Prime Minister has not seen—though, of course, he would have a perfect right to do so if he chose—either of the gentlemen named, and, to the best of my knowledge, the only people whom he has consulted are the British and Overseas delegates now in Paris, and a considerable number of his colleagues in the Government who went to Paris for the express purpose of discussing the matter with him. The right hon. gentleman was understood to add that, while his colleagues might have political influence, he was sure none of them had any financial interest in the matter.

Mr. McNeill: Is the right hon. gentleman in a position to give any information at all as to the report, which has been given very authoritatively, that the Prime Minister is at variance with the French Prime Minister and the President of the United States on the question of the modification of the Treaty of the terms of peace in a direction favourable to Germany?

Mr. Bonar Law: I am quite sure my hon. friend must realise that if there was any truth in that statement it would be the last thing it would be right for me to speak about.

Mr. MacVeagh (Nat., Down, S.): Get the 400 to send him another telegram.

The following official statement was subsequently issued:

"The Prime Minister authorizes the denial that he has had any communication of the nature indicated with Mr. Ramsay MacDonald or Mr. Arthur Henderson, or that any pressure by persons of political or financial influence has been brought to bear upon him to modify the terms of peace in a manner favourable to Germany."

PRIME MINISTER'S LIST OF BIRTHDAY HONOURS.

The Prime Minister's list of birthday honours does not include a single peerage, baronetcy or political award. It chiefly consists of rewards to civil servants and it is understood that the list was reduced to a minimum in view of the expected conclusion of peace, which will doubtless be marked by fresh honours.

There are twenty-six promotions and appointments to the Order of the Bath and twenty-six knighthoods. Sir Reginald Brade and Sir Llewellyn Smith each receive the Grand Cross of the Order of the Bath, and Mr. Walter Defrece, who is the husband of Vesta Tilley, receives a knighthood for services at the Ministry of Pensions.

GOVERNMENT'S FIRM STAND WITH POLICE.

In the House of Commons yesterday, Mr. Shortt, who asserted that the Police Union had broken the agreement entered into last August and associated itself with the extremist policy, stated that the Government had definitely decided that the present state of things would not be allowed to continue.

The Government would set up a statutory body under which every policeman would be entitled to take his grievance to the highest authority.

Members of the force would be called out of the Police Union, and men insisting on remaining would cease to be policemen.

SEARCH FOR MISSING R.A.F. PERSONNEL.

A specially formed unit of the Royal Air Force left London yesterday for the Royal Air Force Headquarters in the field. It consists of twenty officers who will be detached to various army units for the purpose of searching for any possible traces of officers and other ranks of the Royal Air Force who were posted on the Western front as missing. The utmost endeavour will be made to ensure that no members of the force are still in the hands of the enemy.

MINERS STRIKE AGAINST INCOME TAX.

The agitation among the South Wales miners against paying income tax led to a strike at Coedely Tyleha Collieries yesterday. Two Coedely men arrested a month ago for non-payment of tax were first released and subsequently re-arrested. Negotiations followed, resulting in the release of the two men and resumption of work.

It is pointed out by the Board of Agriculture that the supply of agricultural labour is still very short, and that considerable difficulty is experienced in providing housing accommodation for the increased labour required for gathering in the harvest. In this connection the Board have come to an agreement with the War Office for the loan of huts, tents, bedding, etc., with a view to establishing a series of hostels for the use of harvest workers.

TRUCKLOAD OF POWDER EXPLODES.

APPALLING LOSS OF LIFE.

Wilkeabarge, Pennsylvania, 5th June.—Sixty-nine miners were killed and forty injured this morning by the explosion of a truck of black powder attached to an electric train in which the men were being conveyed to their work.

The accident occurred just after the train had entered the mouth of the tunnel. It had got about 200ft into the tunnel when the trolley-wire broke and fell. The sparks ignited the powder, which instantly exploded, and in a moment the bodies of the men were flying in all directions. The flames caused even greater loss of life than the explosion, while others of the men were suffocated while trying to reach the mouth of the tunnel. The disaster followed a night of rejoicing in celebration of the homecoming of sons and brothers of the miners from service in France. —Reuter.

(Later.) Many of the injured lived only a short time. The death list is constantly growing, and is estimated this afternoon at from seventy-five to 100. Most of the bodies were burned to a cinder, and identification is impossible. Hundreds of women and children, shrieking and crying, are gathered near the mouth of the tunnel, terrified at the sights that meet their eyes. The rescuers threw streams of water on the train, but meanwhile the cries of the dying and injured could be heard above the roar of the flames.

The catastrophe, which is one of the greatest that has ever occurred in this section of the anthracite coalfields, is attributed to carelessness and to violation of the mine laws. There is a drastic prohibition against the transporting of men on trains carrying explosives. Investigation will disclose whether the company or the men are responsible. It is now stated that the train carried twelve kegs of powder used for blasting. One of the survivors, who saved himself by jumping into the ditch running along the side of the tunnel, said: "We were about fifty feet inside the tunnel when I saw a blinding flash, and flung myself into the water. Bodies were hurled all about me, and the flames made a veritable hell. No one could possibly escape unless he got into the water, buried his face, and rolled over as I did."—Reuter.

KINMEL CAMP COURT MARTIALS ENDED.

THIRTY-THREE CONVICTIONS.

The Field General Court Martial at Liverpool which has been inquiring into cases arising out of the Kinmel Park mutiny, concluded its sittings yesterday.

The proceedings began on the 16th April and continued without intermission. Altogether there were thirty-eight cases, involving fifty prisoners almost all of whom were charged with mutiny and many with other offences. The Court acquitted seventeen prisoners and convicted the remaining cases, although in six cases they did not convict of mutiny but on minor charges. The Higher Authority, however, declined to confirm the convictions in three cases.

BRAZIL'S PART IN THE WAR.

Doctor Pessoa. President of Brazil, left London yesterday morning by special train for Portsmouth on his way to Lisbon. He was accompanied by his wife and daughter and Sir Maurice Bunsen and Mr. Syne of the British Foreign Office. In a long article dealing with Brazilian friendship with Britain the Times points out the details of the Brazilian war effort. The armistice forestalled the appearance on the French front of a Brazilian Army of a quarter of a million. A Brazilian Naval squadron co-operated with the allied fleets in European waters. Brazil, realizing the Allies need of foodstuffs, increased her production and shipped great quantities, even to the point of deprivation of her home markets. The article concludes "The new President of Brazil carries with him the grateful feelings of our country for his own, and our warmest wishes for the task that lies before him. Our only regret is that he is called back to Brazil to assume office and his stay is too short for more than hurried tokens of appreciation to be given him."

CANADIAN DEMOBILIZATION NEARLY COMPLETE.

According to present arrangements the Olympic will sail from Southampton early on Saturday morning, with 5,511 Canadian troops, including the last of the 4th Canadian Division. On the same day the Royal George will sail from Liverpool with 1,550 Canadian troops. After these sailings there will then remain only about 70,000 Canadians to be repatriated, and of those a certain percentage will take their discharge in this country. In May no fewer than 54,519 Canadian troops left England for home.

SALE OF OLD LORRIES.

Old Army lorries, some of which had been salved from ships sunk by submarine, and others returned from service in Mesopotamia, Egypt, and France, made extremely good prices at the second day's sale of surplus vehicles at the Motor Transport Depôt, Bromley-road, Catford. Some 30cwt Hall-Ford lorries, fitted with van body, which had been completely overhauled prior to the auction, sold at prices ranging from 475 guineas to 600 guineas each. Derelict three-ton lorries made anything from 35 guineas upwards. The first day's total of the sale was said to be approximately £50,000.

BRITISH DRAMA.

Some time ago we discussed the subject of the theatre and culled some lessons from the municipal scheme that prevails in Germany. Of late the question of dramatic performances and ideals has been widely canvassed in England. There are, happily, manifest indications that the conscience of our fellow-countrymen has been awakened to the untoward plight of the British theatre. The awakening is not unexpected in these moving times, but it is none the less welcome.

An alliance has been formed between the Shakespeare Memorial Committee and the Governors of the Shakespeare Memorial, Stratford-on-Avon, and now we have in being "The New Shakespeare Company." Sir Israel Goilancz declares that it is in a large measure an outcome of the war and that it will promote the recognition of our national dramatist throughout the length and breadth of the British Empire. But more is needed than the proper rendering of Shakespearian drama, and more has been done. Last week there was inaugurated in London the British Drama League, and the movement has been blessed by representatives of the Church, the University, the State, and the People.

It is of some interest to note that hard words were spoken of the present day stage. Miss Lena Ashwell, a good friend of the British soldier, declaimed with hearty vigour and in terms that were almost unmeasured. She attacked "entertainment" that have become all too popular and pilloried them as detrimental to the wholesome life of the nation. Mr. H. A. Jones was almost as critical, for he held that "English drama, on the whole, has never been in so degraded a condition as it is to-day.

We believe that much of this criticism is just, but it is wise to beware of exaggeration. There have been, in the history of British drama, times less unblessed than our own. After all allowances are made for changed conditions of life, it is only fair to record that our ideals are higher than those of Englishmen in the days of Charles II. Restoration drama was the symptom and consequence of popular reaction against the stern repression of austere Puritanism, and it may well be that the more unworthy forms of stage repertoire in our own times are due to the stress of living and the craving for respite from the sorrows and anxieties of existence.

It is an old saying that a nation deserves the government it suffers, and it may be that a people deserves the theatre it patronizes. But representative government is never so perfectly organized that it can absolutely correspond with the will of the people; and the sympathy between stage and audience is never so delicately adjusted that the ideals of playwright and playgoer are equally realized. The criticism that of late has been so widespread shows that the nation desires something better and worthier than that which has been offered to it.

It seems to us that the theatre has two functions—one is educative and one is recreational. There is an increasing number of men and women who are tired of theatrical trivialities and vulgarities and are longing for the production of dramas that have some real connection with the glories of English literature. The demand which Labour has properly made for more adequate leisure gives a notable opportunity for the production of plays that will satisfy more than uneducated tastes. There are, however, men and women who in the evening hours of busy days yearn for an entertainment that will brush away the memory of toil and vexation. For them, the stage should furnish bright and happy pictures of life, not at its lowest pitches, but in all the bravery and humour of its normal attitudes. We are not really attuned to the spectacle of horrid episodes, wayward intrigues, and degenerate souls. To most of us the drawing-room is as interesting as any other in an Englishman's castle, and to all of us there is still a philosophy in Sartor Resartus.

ROYALTY AND LOYALTY.

WILLIAM R. PATTERSON F.R.G.S., etc.

I was a spectator once at a socialist meeting. A red flag waved in the wind. The orator advocated the abolition of Royalty, of titles, the confiscation of estates and other drastic measures. The majority of the audience — quite good fellows, no doubt, when alone — applauded the extravagant utterances of the speaker each imitating the example of those about him for, usually, if one applauds it acts as an incentive to others to do the same. The speaker finished up with a wild revolutionary suggestion — then the meeting closed.

Almost at once a second orator rose up on a stool near by — the Union Jack above him — and spoke of loyalty to King and Country and of the nobility. The former audience drifted towards him and the same individuals applauded his discourse, too. This goes on all the year round and every year. What may one think of it? It is politically unreasonable.

It clearly shows that some people are too apt to be influenced by oratory on the spur of the moment. This is often the direct cause of bolshevism, other such revolutionary ideas and all similar controversies of disloyalty, not only to the King but to the country and one's fellow men.

Now, you young Britons — representatives of a great, virile and noble race must learn to form really honest opinions of your own. Read, in your leisure hours, the glorious history of our race and you will understand what I mean. Do not be misled by the revolutionary opinions of others. You can see for yourselves what disaster has been caused in the world by recent upheavals. I firmly believe that our country was ever meant to have Royalty and aristocracy. — It has always sacrificed its best of all classes in the cause of right and freedom, and our history proves that both Royalty and aristocracy have given innumerable lives towards the welfare of our land and the upholding of its traditions and its honour. Yet when a revolution breaks out, the noble are the first to suffer pain of death those who have often to work more hours a day than the heathens who slaughtered them.

Those who cause these infernal uprisings are, in the majority, the most indolent people of a nation, excited by greed and lust, and followed by a rabble of criminals, bent on destroying the property of others. Again, I say, read history for proof of this statement. Now, listen! Some used to imagine that our aristocracy was composed of pampered weaklings but I think one of the results of the recent war has been to disprove this; in point of fact, there remains no doubt that this has been disproved.

Again, some imagine that the aristocracy od no useful work. This also is false. If a revolutionary tells you this, it is not necessary that you should form a negative or positive opinion, until you are in a position to judge for yourself; until you have actually seen. If we have, as revolutinaries will tell you, any 'idle rich' in our country — and if there are any at all, they must be few in number — remember that their money is always circulating, and that they employ men and women and that they support charities. There are rich people even in republics some perhaps may also be termed 'idle' by the lazy and discontented. If revolutionaries worked even half as hard as the King and his nobility they might have occasions to put forward a grievance and if all men worked as they should work, they would find themselves far happier, richer and less dissatified with their lot.

Most men can succeed by diligence if they will. Come, now, let us uphold our King and Great Britain! Let us work and study!

ECLIPSE OF THE SUN.

The following message has been received at the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, from Professor Eddington and Mr. Cottingham, Prince's Island, West Africa: "Eclipse was observed through clouds, but we are hopeful of obtaining good results."

The frequent luck of eclipse observers appears to have attended Prof. Eddington's efforts. We trust his hopes may be justified, for among other things, there was an extraordinary interesting kind of observation that he had on his programme. This was no less than an attempt to weigh light, a proceeding which most of us have hitherto looked upon as impossible.

A certain mathematical theory demands, however, that light should have weight. That is, that it should be attracted by all other matter having weight by the force known as gravity.

He proposed to do this by photographing the images of those stars, the light from which would have to pass very near to the eclipsed sun. If light has weight, the rays of light from the stars would be gravitationally attracted from their ordinary straight-line paths by the huge mass of the sun and therefore would not appear to reach us from the usual direction. Thus the photographs of these stars taken during the eclipse would show apparent displacements of the stars when compared with photographs of them taken at night-time, when the sun is not near the path of the light we receive from them. Prof. Eddingtons estimates that if light has weight in proportion to its mass like matter, there is an appalling amount of light in an ounce. To such an extent is this so, in fact that the light supplied to us by gas and electric light companies, if bought by weight, would work out at something like ten million pounds per ounce. Here we see a weighty justification of the Daylight Saving Bill, or habits to that effect, for the sun pours down upon us, calculating on the lines followed by Prof. Eddington, about 160 tons per diem. Yet we often neglect this free gift and go on buying light of much inferior quality at the rate of ten million pounds per ounce.

A POSER.

Here is a problem, says a correspondent in the Daily Mail, that always reduces his scientific friends to mental chaos. Suppose a pipe, with a bore little larger than the thickness of a man's body, were pierced through the earth and a ladder ran through the length of the pipe. Assume a man starts through the pipe from London to an Antipodean island. He descends the ladder feet foremost, and he is going downwards until he reaches the centre of the earth.

When he reaches the centre of the earth he, presumably, will thenceforth be going upwards, until he emerges at the Antipodes. But how can a ladder on which one is descending become a ladder on which one is ascending? Furthermore, how could one go up a ladder feet foremost?

Whenever he puts this problem to scientific people they try to change the subject.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

FOR THE YOUNG GUARDS.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir, — I have heard this suggestion many a time amongst the young Guards that there should be a special coloured chevron made for them to show that they belong to the Army of Occupation. Surely many of the guards are in favour of this idea, therefore it should be carried out.

CINEMA SEAT PRICES.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—I should like to draw your attention to the absurdity of the prices of admission to cinemas in Cologne. On Saturday last I paid two marks at the No. 3 Army Cinema for a front seat and on enquiring the price of a seat at the rear of the theatre, I was told one mark. Is it not the usual thing for the front seats to be the cheapest in a cinema theatre?

ONE OF YOUR READERS.

"FORTHCOMING HENLEY REGATTA."

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—Perhaps if the gentleman who signed himself "A.H.B." in your issue of Friday, June 6th, would come down to the Rhine Army Officers' Boat Club he would be able both to see and to hear for himself, and would not then be dependent upon that fickle female "Dame Rumour."

CAPTAIN OF THE RHINE EIGHT.

WHITSUNDAY.

A CLAIM AND ITS REALIZATION.

(BY A CORRESPONDENT.)

Christian festivals such as Whitsunday are not, as some people think, formally designed substitutes to supersede obsolete Jewish feasts. They are memorials or commemorations, reminding us of great events, as e.g. at Whitsuntide of the outpouring of the Holy Spirit of God upon the Church at Pentecost nearly 1900 years ago and of the Life from above given to every Christian. They are a natural expression of Christian joy the joy which is the fruit of the spirit. There is no doubt that relics of joyous social custom from pagan ancestors do survive in some good Christian customs; because human nature, whether it be in the dark or in the light has but one source; it comes from God, and was created for God, and has the same essential need of joy in God. And joy, wherever there is any, needs to express itself, in order that it may know itself. Joy in the Lord, the fruit of the Spirit, gradually created festivals in the Church as naturally as in simple homes the joy of family life makes festivals of the children's birthdays. Now, Whit Sunday, the Christian Pentecost, has sometimes been called the birthday of the Church — when the Holy Spirit of God was outpoured upon it, and it became a living organization. If men were still to know God revealed in Christ, it was necessary that Christ should have a body through which He could reveal Himself to men. We can only know other men, through their self expression in their bodies, and men can chiefly see Christ, through their self expression in their bodies, and men can chiefly see Christ, through His self expression in human lives and bodies. There is no man living who can show Christ's wonderfully many-sided freedom and power to men. Yet each can show some part of Him. So each showing a part, the Church corporate, the body which He created should show that the whole, though different members, are really united in spirit. The Christian Church then — we use the term Church, in the widest possible sense — is the body of Christ, through which he reveals Himself to men.

We discover in these days that men are growing sick of shams whether in religion, in politics, or in the general life of the community. Old institutions and ancient usages alike are being tested in the fires of criticism. Every institution and every custom has to face sooner or later such questions as these: "How did it come to be?" "What purpose does it subserve?" "Does it justify its existence; if not, how can it be cleared out of the way?"

The Christian Church has to face such a critical enquiry to-day. Already we have briefly tried to answer the first question, "How did it come to be?" In answer to the second it is claimed for the Christian Church that she is the power-house from which flows the energizing influence of the saviour of mankind — to rescue the degraded man from degradation and to restore him to a sound mind, to elevate multitudes of imperfect, yet struggling men, to higher degrees of holiness and virtue — to purify, redeem and glorify everything human — to transform and re-adjust society so that it can work out justly and mercifully for its members — to establish the kingdom of God and of righteousness amongst men.

After an effort extending over nearly nineteen centuries has that claim been realized, or if not, are there signs that it will ever be realized? Does the Christian Church justify her existence? The answer must be, Yes. Look around you on the political and social life, unsatisfactory as it still is, of the modern world, and observe how they bear the impress of the Christ. Where is the legislative power in Europe or America which does not accept the principles which underlie the teaching of Christ as the basis on which society ought to rest and at least profess to embody them in practice? Nor has the attempt been a vain one, for every institution in the modern world is more or less leavened with its principles and is getting more and more so year by year. The teaching of Jesus Christ is pre-eminently opposed to warfare and we live to see a serious attempt made to put an end to war.

When we survey man in his social relationship it is in the teaching of Christ which constitutes the acknowledged rule of duty between man and man among the progressive races of mankind. Though the Church at the present time may not be prominent in the great movements to secure equality, brotherhood, and freedom, — yet it may justly be claimed that the Church has had much to do with creating that sense of human worth which has given rise to the present powerful demand on the part of the dispossessed for a better condition of life. The Church of Christ to-day calls us to recognise a new sense of community with one another, to covet the joys which may be shared in common, to wean ourselves from self-centred motives and self-centred satisfactions, to refuse the sense of well—being and enjoyment of ease, so long as there are classes of society unable to share our ease and well—being; we are bidden to feel shame for the uncleanliness of our city slums and sympathy for the forlornness of the thriftless and degenerate of our citizens, to learn a new pride in the prosperity of the poor, a new sense of joyful communion in the co-operation which is of the essence of industry and trade, to seek in the religion of economics an equivalent to the doctrine of spiritual equality.

CRICKET CUP MATCHES.

51st Bn. Royal Sussex Regt. v. 121st Heavy Bty. R.G.A., at Allenrath on Wednesday. The R.G.A. were dismissed for 49, Sergt. Saunders (13 not out) and Br. Hopwell (10) being the only players to reach double figures. Pte. Edden bowled extremely well for the home team, taking 5 wickets for 15 runs. Lt.-Col. Bond took 4 for 27. The 51st Royal Sussex compiled a total of 111. Sergt. Evans (29), Lieut. Rea (18), and Lieut. Argent (16) being the principal contributors. Br. Hatfield for the visitors took 5 wickets for 32 runs. The 51st Bn. Royal Sussex Regt. thus won their first match in the competition by 62 runs. Tea was served to both teams after the match, and many thanks are due to Rev. F.H. Stude for his services in superintending this most welcome finish to an enjoyable afternoon's cricket.

D/190 Bde. R.F.A. (72) v. H.A.C. (69) at Poll on Wednesday. H.A.C. score mainly due to an excellent 38 from Manby's bat. "D" Battery then went in; owing to a terrific wagging of their tail, won by 12 runs, thanks to the efforts of Sergt. Tams (18) and Dr. Morphew (9 not out). The bowling was of high standard in both innings, especially that of Dr. Bingham R.F.A., who got 6 for 23, Lieut. Baines 4 for 30; for the losers Clark bowled very well and steadily, obtained 7 for 33, and Manby 3 for 29.

509th FIELD COY., R.E. v 16th FIELD AMB. at Weilerswist. The Engineers batted first and finished with a total of 144, out of which Spr. Thorpe made a brilliant 45 and Spr. Fouracre compiled a useful 24. The Ambulance's total response only realised 14, so the match ended with an easy win for the Engineers. The bowling of Sappers Gatch and Phillips was too deadly, the former averaging six wickets for 11 runs, and the latter three wickets for 4 runs.

34 BN. M.G.C. (54) v 180 LABOUR COY (63). At Troisdorf on Friday. For 180 Labour Coy. Pte. Smart scored 30, and Pte. Jennett 12. Pte. Howarth 5 wickets 10 runs.

For 34 Bn. M.G.C. Pte. Smart had 5 wickets for 27 runs.

52nd Welsh Regt. v. 10th Corps Signals, on the ground of the former, resulted in a win for the homesters by 71 runs. The home team, batting first, had to play with caution against the excellent, slowbreak bowling of Walker. Sergt. Kaye, going in first, played beautiful cricket for an hour being eighth man out a 102, his 59 included a 6 and four 4's. The visiting team soon crumbled up before the bowling of Cpl. Wallwark and Pte. Lawton, the former capturing 5 wickets for 14 and the latter 5 for 21. Scores:— 52nd Welsh, 112 (Walker 6 wickets for 46); 10th Corps Signals, 41 (Sergt. Luttor 18).

VI CORPS HEADQUARTERS 73 v. 2nd M.G. SQUADRON 53, at Lanzerath on Thursday; for the winners Private C. Heap took 6 wickets for 25 runs, in addition to being the highest scorer with 18.

19th DURHAM L.I. (84 for 5 wickets) v. 15th DEVONS (70). At Kalk, on Thursday. The best batsmen for 9th D.L.I. were Pte. Bewick (20) Pte Jewsey (15) L.Cpl. Gustard (13 not out). For the Devons Sergt. Smith took 6 wickets for 30. For Devons Lieut Harrell scored 15, C.Q.M.S. Sharpe 12, Pte Fox 11; Lieut Harrell took 3 wickets for 4.

15th SOUTH STAFFS (50) v. IX CORPS TROOPS M.T. COY (35). At Euskirchen. The Staffs batted first and made 50, thanks to C.S.M. Norman with 16 and Lieut Napier 14, Leach taking 6 wickets for 24. The M.T. Coy. could only muster 35, White being top scorer with 8; Sergt. Burton taking 6 for 16, and Lieut Smith 4 for 16.

LIGHT DIVISION SIGNAL COY R.E. v. LIGHT DIV. HQRS. At Frimmersdorf on Wednesday. Scores:

Light Div. Signals, 85. (L/Cpl. Harrison 20. L/Cpl. Harrow 16. Cpl. Woods 14).

Beech and Hopkins bowled well for Light Div. Hqrs.

483 SIEGE BATTERY R.G.A. v. 52nd SHERWOOD FORESTERS. After a very close game the former won by 32 runs. For the gunners the best scorers were Carpenter 14 and Naylor 12 while Tams took 5 wickets for 12 runs. A feature of the Foresters, play was the fine bowling of Corporal Wakelan who took 6 wickets for 14 runs.

51st NORTHUMBERLAND FUS. 25, (L/Cpl. Bayant 4 for 10, Pte Dodd 3 for 9, 3 men run out.) v. 4th R. SUSSEX 64 for 8 wickets (Pte Dench 21, Sergt. Stanford 15. Pte Pounch 11), at Sulz on Friday, 4th. R. Sussex won by 9 wickets.

91st FIELD AMBULANCE (72) v. 86th BATTERY. R.G.A. (26). On the Colnstrasse Bonn, on Wednesday and resulted in a victory for the Medicals by 46 runs.

For the winners Howarth compiled a neat 25 and Dickson was in deadly form with the ball, capturing 5 wickets for 13 runs and also performing the hat trick. He claimed four wickets in that over.

CAPTAIN DICKINSON IN BRILLIANT BATTING AND BOWLING FORM.

The cricket season opened in Bonn on Wednesday with a match between the Divisional Troops, Eastern Division (late 34th Division) and the 1st King's Brigade, Lancashire Division (late 32nd Division), in the X Corps Cricket Tournament. The match was played in the Hofgarten, Bonn, and considering that this ground was continously used throughout the winter for football, it reflects great credit on all concerned for its present excellent condition.

Owing to the rain overnight the wicket was in favour of the bowler. Play commenced at 11.30 a.m., Eastern Division team batting first. Runs were difficult to get. Lieut. Hoyland batted well and was unlucky in mis-timing a ball to leg and being easily caught at cover point. Sapper Thomas hit well, but was unfortunate in finding no one to back him up. Captain Foss made two smart catches at point. Captain Dickinson bowled well, taking 8 wickets for 29 runs in 14 overs.

Captain Dickinson and Lieut. Drakeford opened the batting for the King's Brigade. Runs came fast and their opponent's score was passed before the latter was bowled, having batted very steadily. Captain Dickinson continued to score freely all round the wicket; he was missed when 52 at the wicket, and again after passing the century. Included in his score were one 6 and sixteen fours. Scores:—

9th D.L.I.—A. COY v. H.Q.

A keenly contested game was played on Wednesday between A. and H.Q. Coys. The match was interesting from two points of view. It brought forward new players, and it also brought out humorous qualities in many of the spectators. The final score was a fair result, A. Coy winning by 3—0.

"D" BATTERY H.Q. 190 BDE. R.F.A.

Played at Poll, Cologne on Sunday, resulting in a win for "D" Battery by two runs. "D" Battery went in first and knocked up 69 against good bowling by Brigade Headquarters. The Battery then went in, reaching 67 with three wickets in hand. They failed to add to their score, however, against the bowling of Lieut. Baines and Dr. Bingham, and were all out for 67. Sergt. Mc. Callum played an excellent innings of 38 for the losing side. Lieut. Baines took 6 wickets and Dr. Bingham 3.

The great professional golf tournament at Killermont near Glasgow this week opened sensationally, as briefly reported yesterday, with the defeat of Harry Vardon by Jack White, who was two up at the turn and who won by 3 and 1. Another surprise was the defeat of Abe Mitchell, the world's longest driver, by James Batley by 3 and 2. The victory in both cases was due to wonderful approaching and putting.

OLD SCHOOL STILL WINNING.

A later message from Reuter states that the Golf professional tournament at Killermont shows the old school still in the ascendant with George Duncan hotly challenging them. Vardon and Abe Mitchell were in great form in the stroke competition on Friday morning going round in 72 and 71 respectively.

There was a great match between Braid and Duncan in the semi-final. Braid was 2 up at the eleventh, and one up at the 15th. Duncan squared at the finish, and was over the last green with his second but holed his chip shot back thus winning. Duncan meets Taylor in the final.

53rd MANCHESTERS CHAMPION PLATOON v. SCHOOL STAFF.

A very exciting game was played at Menden on Tuesday night between the above teams. Brilliant efforts were made by each side without avail. Half-time came without any score being registered.

Mr. Birkett, formerly the schoolmaster, who had come from Cologne to play, scored the first and only goal for the School Staff. The Champion Platoon then made a valiant effort and shortly afterwards scored their first goal. Some very exciting play then took place and the ball was kept near the centre of the field. Hulme, the School's right half, played a very good game. The Champion Platoon secured the winning goal by a long shot from Sergt. Wilde. The score 2—1 rather flatters the Champion Platoon as the School had quite as much of the game.

SOUTHERN DIVISIONAL RACE MEETING.

EXCELLENT SPORT ON EXERZIER PLATZ, KALK.

As briefly reported yesterday, the opening day (Friday) of the Southern Divisional Race Meeting on the Exerzier Platz proved an unqualified success which augured well for the second day. Despite a shower of rain the going was somewhat hard; entries were good and a record crowd witnessed some excellent sport. Every sort of conveyance was used to take troops to the course, but the most novel was undoubtedly the stage-coach and four which a battery of R.G.A. managed to secure, and which by the way served as an ideal "grand stand." The riders included two Generals, Brigadier-General G. F. Boyd's "Mary" being beaten by a neck in the international pony stakes.

The stewards were: Major-General Sir W. E. Peyton, K.C.B., K.C.V.O., D.S.O.; Major-General Sir D.G.M. Campbell, K.C.B.; Major-General Sir S. T. B. Lawford, K.C.B.; Major-General Sir W. C. G. Heneker, K.C.B., D.S.O.; Brig.-General J. G. Rotton, C.B., C.M.G.: and Brig.-General A. D. Kirby, C.M.G.

The Judges were: Brig.-General A. E. W. Harman, D.S.O., and Brig.-General W. P. Monkhouse, C.B., C.M.G., M.V.O.

Lieut.-Col. T. W. Rudd, R.A.V.C. officiated as starter.

Other officials were: — Clerk of the Course, Captain F. J. Mullins, R.F.A.; Clerks of the Scales, Captain J. O. Power, R.A.S.C., and Captain C. N. T. Jennings, R.A.S.C.; Hon. Secretary, Captain R. Marx, M.C., R.A.; Hon. Medical Officer, Colonel D. Cogan, D.S.O., R.A.M.C.; Hon. Veterinary Officer, Major A. B. Bowhay, R.A.V.C.

Thanks to the splendid arrangements everything passed off without a hitch.

The following results of the first day's racing were not received in time for publication in Saturday's issue:—The Stewards Plate, 1, Suzanne, Capt. Harris, Divisional Train); 2, Sticks, (Capt. Barnard, Divisional Signals); 3, Lucifer (Capt. Mc. Niel, R.F.A.). The Beecher's Brook Steeplechase: — 1, Chummy (Cpl. Beney); 2, Ginger (Br. Wilkins, H.A.C.); 3, Brutus (Sergt. Whelpton, 113 R.F.A.).

YESTERDAY's RESULTS.

In glorious weather and before a large and enthusiastic crowd the Southern Division Race meeting ended yesterday. Better organization have we rarely seen and to say that the crowd thoroughly enjoyed excellent racing is to put it very mildly.

"THE COLOGNE POST" CUP.

SCRATCHING OF MATCHES.

Enquiries for locations of units are still being sent to this office, and it is again pointed out that secretaries will save time by communicating with each other direct, as in many cases we have not the information at hand.

Some amount of correspondence has been incurred through clubs failing to turn up after arrangements for matches had been made and attention is directed to Rule 7 of the competition.

In cases where there is reasonable excuse for engagements not being fulfilled secretaries should inform us and their opponents of the reason, and arrange another date. Where no good reason exists for not playing clubs should notify us and their opponents that they scratch the match.

A difficulty has arisen through some units having to move from their league areas to training camps, the move being in some cases to such a distance as to make it impossible for these units to fulfil fixtures in their league area. Various solutions to the difficulty are being considered and an announcement on the subject will be made shortly.

7th FIELD AMBULANCE v. 52nd BN DURHAM L. I.

A very interesting match was played on Wednesday between the 7th Field Ambulance and 52nd Bn Durham L.I. The Durhams batted first and thanks to Sgt. Bacon, 39, and Mr. Extras, 19, reached the useful total of 94.

The Field Ambulance, however, fell short of this total by 41 runs. Capt. Mann scored 12, Pte. Coldwell 12 (not out) and Sgt. Fenwick 11, these being the only ones to get double figures.

For the Ambulance, Capt. Mann captured 5 wickets for 44 and Capt. Montgomery 2 for 18, whilst for the Durhams Colonel Frixel obtained 5 victims for 27 runs and Lieut. Brown 5 for 21, five extras making the total of 53.

THE LAST LOOK ROUND.

Oxford 224 (Waldock 72); Warners XI, 200 (Bosanquet 91).

Australians 2nd Innings:— Willis 35, Oldfield 30, Extras 1, Total 66 for 0. The Australians won by 10 wickets.

A Reuter's Amsterdam message says the association football match between the R.A.F. and Holland resulted in a draw of one goal each. There were 10,000 spectators.

"THE LIMITS."

BY A CORRESPONDENT.

The candid critic has a thankless task. When he takes up his pen to praise, he is haunted by the thought that his praise will be stinted and unworthy of that which he praises. And if he would condemn he must do so with a sorrowing heart, lest his criticism should be destructive and not constructive, as all true criticism should be. But it is with an easy heart that I take up my pen to describe the concert produced on Tuesday night by "The Limits" — the newly formed concert party of the 6th City of London Rifles.

My first impression was that the programme was a little too ambitious for a battalion troupe. It certainly was a big undertaking that the "Limits" set themselves, but by no means did it prove too big for them. They romped home and took the house by storm. I am not surprised at this when I consider the past experience of the members of the troupe. These include Harry King (of the leading London halls), Harry Edwards M.M. (late partner in "Earle and Earle," Alfred Barnard (the well-known "Basil Gwynn" of the London concert halls), Jack Chapman (comedian and cleaver dancer), Will Johns (tenor, late of the "Cinema Star"), and Frank Barkham (a reputed lightning sketch artist). Last, but not least, is Naito, member of Japanese troupe which travelled and showed in the Rhineland in pre-war days.

The regimental theatre at Nettesheim, in which the show took place, was arranged as closely as possible to resemble a London music hall. There was a complete orchestra pit, also a balcony, to say nothing of the stalls.

A Galaxy of Talent.

The programme consisted of a series of songs by individual members of the troupe (the majority of whom displayed great talent) a number of turns taken by the whole company, and a Wilkie Bard sketch. Alfred Barnard was responsible for three songs — "Come to the Fair," "Prayer in Absence" (set to music by Sgt. H.J.A. Wells), and "One Little Hour," — each rendered in such an able manner that the enthusiastic audience received them with prolonged applause. Jack Chapman and Will Johns sang with undoubted merit and were well received. Harry Edwards was a tower of strength to the troupe; he seemed to reach everybody's heart with his quaint mannerisms and by his sense of supreme confidence on the stage. Harry King, too, was a star turn entirely in keeping with his reputation made on the halls. Frank Barkham, the mad artist, kept the audience amused for quite a long while with his lightning sketches. His drawing of the smile on a soldier's face when told that he was bound for the Rhine, and "Old Bill Demobbed," were favourites. Naito very effectively put the wind up the Orchestra, with his juggling and acrobatic turn. Whirling balls, spinning barrels and a vision of legs waving dexterously in the air, made the watchers' brains sing-giddily.

Harry King was superb in the sketch entitled "The Night Watchman." His persistent recitation of a "poem" entitled "In Memoriam," brought the audience to tears — — of joy!

Merit for the show must be given to 2nd Lieuts. E. Morris and W.J. Brown, who worked hard to make it a success. The former and Sgt. H.J.A. Wells, orchestrated the music, while the latter was an able manager and no mean performer. Mr. Morris' work as conductor of the orchestra was good beyond mere discipline, and even dangerous — — when Naito was on.

The scenery, by Rfn. Barkham, came as a surprise to everybody. The painting of a London street scene with 'bus complete, was particularly happy.

The costumes and "props" were quite professional.

"The Limits" aim at providing a first class show, which will help to keep us all smiling, no matter how fares the day.

ADMIRAL WEMYSS NEW COMMAND.

SKIPPER OF FISHING BOAT.

Rear-Admiral Edward Wemss, retired, of Plymouth, has temporarily bycome skipper of one of the small fishing cobles, which regularly ride the rough waters of the North Sea. He is combining a pleasure trip with a business experiment as the friend of Mr. Horace Albrecht, of the Leeds manufacturing firm of Albrecht and Albrecht, Limited, who have purchased the little craft.

About ten tons of Yorkshire manufactured goods are being taken as cargo in the craft to ascertain if there are any customs or waterway difficulties to interfere with a direct journey with cargo from Leeds to the Continent. If the experiment is successful bigger boats may go direct with bigger cargoes, and thus do away with the great delay in unloading and reloading.

The converted fishing boat, renamed Burmantofts, began its journey to Brussels from the Aire and Calder navigation wharf at Leeds. It is driven by a 35-h.p. engine. In length it is 43ft., and has a draught of 3ft. unloaded and 5 or 6ft. loaded. The crew consists of Admiral Weymss, Lieut. I. Franks, R.N., two engineers, and a boy. The boat will go to Goole, then Hull, and Yarmouth.

UNION OF BRAIN-WORKERS.

MANUAL WORKERS INELIGIBLE.

The Society of Technical Engineers, 25, Victoria-street, S.W. 1, is forming a union of brain-workers, beginning with engineers, and extending in time to all ranks of qualified men, including doctors, scientists, and chemists, and embracing buyers, experts, and managers of businesses and industries. Employers are ineligible, and manual workers are to be left to their own unions.

It has been calculated that there are at least 500,000 men coming within the scope of the new union.

Hitherto the society has worked quietly without attracting notice, but it has now made an application to be admitted to representation on the Industrial Councils which are to be formed and upon the National Industrial Parliament, which is to be the outcome of these councils.

SCIENCE AND THE WAR.

In a lecture on "Science and War" delivered at Cambridge yesterday Lord Moulton, the great British scientist, alluded to "Big Bertha," the gun with which the Germans bombarded Paris.

He said "The world was at first incredulous, then it credited the Germans with having invented some new propellant of marvellous power. But our artillerists knew better. They realised that such a range could be obtained in a gun of determinable proportions if it were worth our while to build it. Indeed, the whole details of such a gun and the charge necessary to accomplish the feat were at once worked out and the gun could have been manufactured if it had possessed sufficient military value to warrant the work and expense, but it did not.

"In its flight the shell from "Big Bertha" must have reached a height five times that of Mount Everest, the highest mountain in the world. If the Germans had taken the trouble to aim at any particular building they would have been obliged to allow half a mile for the fact that during the flight of the shell the rotation of the earth would carry the target further towards the East than it would carry the gun."

In conclusion Lord Moulton said there was an over-mastering lesson to be learned from what science had done during the war. She had made many discoveries too formidable to be allowed to have recourse to war. Uncontrolled indulgence on part of either nation or individual of all the powers which science had placed within reach was too directly fatal to civilization itself. It was easy to criticize the League of Nations, but we must never forget that some combined action of this kind was an imperative necessity.—British Wireless Press.

KITCHENER MEMORIAL CHAPEL IN ST. PAUL'S.

The Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's have approved a design submitted by the Kitchener Memorial Committee, of which Lord Plymouth is the chairman, of a special memorial chapel which is to be constructed in St. Paul's Cathedral. In an interview with Canon Alexander on the subject, a Press representative learned that so far, the design had only been considered in a rough outline, and details were not yet settled. Particular features, however, will be the recumbent figure of Lord Kitchener and an altar with the figures of St. Michael and St. George. The chapel is to be situated at the base of the south-western tower at the entrance to the Cathedral. The architecture is entrusted to Mr. Detmar Blow and the Cathedral architect, Mr. McCartney.

ENFIELD SMALL ARMS FATALITY.

A fatality occured on the rifle-testing ranges at the Royal Small Arms Factory, Enfield Lock, on Friday. Samuel Callaghan, employed in the Army Inspection Department, had been working on the 600 yards covered range, and went on to the 600 yards open range to a hut used for stripping and examining rifles after they had been tested. He entered the door to tell the men employed there the name of the Derby winner, and had barely got this news out when a rifle exploded, blowing off the top of his head. Two other men were also injured slightly by the same explosion. It is supposed that by some means a cartridge had been left in a rifle, and that this went off while the barrel was being examined. Callaghan was an ex-Army man, with two wound stripes. He lived at Crowland-road, Tottenham, and had three children.

THE URGENCY OF HOUSE BUILDING.

Sir Robert Horne, the Minister of Labour, has informed a deputation of the Scottish Employment Council that the Prime Minister is resolved to tour the local authorities after his return from Paris, in order to urge upon them the greatest possible expedition in carrying out building improvement schemes.

He also stated that Mr. Bonar Law would this week meet representatives of the local authorities in England and urge upon them the importance of the housing question. The menace of unemployment, said the Labour Minister, is very sinister and it is as important to build houses to-day as it was to make shells in 1915. He appealed to all local authorities to expedite their schemes.

CHEERY WAR PRISONERS.

AN OFFICER'S EXPERIENCES IN GERMANY.

Lt. Riley (King's Liverpool Regiment) gave a most interesting account of his treatment while a prisoner of war in Germany to a very large audience at the British Empire Leave Club on Friday.

He described how he was taken prisoner on Oct. 28th 1914 and treated with much indignity on the way to Crefeld, his final destination. Rather a curious coincidence is, that the place where he was subjected to the greatest insults was Cologne where, at present, the inhabitants are now so engratiating.

Lt. Riley had a great experience of German camps and the various types of prison commandants. The worst type of commandant he came across was a certain general, who was of the lowest type of coward and bully. Outwardly polite he would greet newly arrived officers with "Well, Gentlemen, if there is anything I can do for you, I shall be delighted." The next moment he would be stooping to unspeakable bullying.

Marvellous methods of escape were devised and it was heartrending to hear how on one occasion after nearly a whole year's work on digging on the "International Tunnel," the plan was given away by a spy, probably a Russian orderly. Another very clever way in which three English officers managed to escape was by getting suits of German uniform which curiously enough was kept at the top of the house. Dressed up in these they marched out and boldly ordered the guard to open the gate. The officer in charge of the party spoke most fluent German and gave the guard such a dressing down for hesitating that the second gate was open waiting for them! He himself managed to get out of the camp one day but was recaptured after 3 days liberty. In consequence of this he was put into solitary confinement for three months then tried and condemned to another three months.

A Little Leg-pulling.

It is marvellous to relate that through all the sufferings and deprivations the prisoners managed to preserve a tremendous sense of humour which must have often been the saving clause. On one occasion the Germans came to the conclusion that the English officers did not know how to drill, so an instructor, an exceedingly old captain was sent to teach them. The officers were drawn up in groups of four and told to copy exactly what their instructor did. "Achtung," cried he, but nothing happened as no-one knew that "Achtung" meant "Attention." Finally they copied his antics in an exaggerated way. One English officer appeared to him to be more clever than his companions at coming smartly to attention, so he was called out to perform alone. His instructor made him a glorious bow and a flourish, and the Englishman prompty took a leap frog over the old man's back. That meant a month's imprisonment.

After many more interesting stories Mr. Rifley ended his lecture by calling on his audience to remember that cases of maltreatment of officers were nothing to compare with what the men had been through. They were starved, bullied and very often done to death, but they had kept up their indomitable spirits throughout. What British lads went through in comparison with the treatment received by German prisoners in England, should not be forgotten.

CINEMA NOTES.

An Air Raid Scene.

In "Forgive us our Trespasses", the first Marsh Allen production, there is a realistic representation of an air raid on London. The depiction of the searchlights sweeping the skies, the bursting of the anti-aircraft shells, and the final destruction of the Gotha is of extreme interest. The view around London taken from above showing the winding course of the Thames, the maze of streets and houses, with the objects of interest dotted here and there, are also good The picture is due shortly in Rhineland.

New Harma Players.

Miss Marjorie Villis and Bernard Dudley, whose acting in "A Romany Lass" evoked appreciative notice from American critics when the play was shown in New York, have signed contracts to become members of the Harma Stock Company.

Tommy on the Screen.

The Ideal Film Company have just issued a film entitled "Our Lads in Germany". It is an official film depicting the daily life of our soldiers in the Army of the Rhine. Not knowing exactly what ground it covers, one cannot dilate upon it, but it would be extremely interesting to see the film at one of the Army Cinemas here in Cologne.

Latest Releases.

Perhaps the most notable of the recent releases is "Inside the Lines", the film version of the Apollo Theatre success. It is a spy play, but it differs from most of the others in that it has no special reference to the war. There are many thrilling incidents and some fine pictures of the British Fleet off Gibraltar.

Another release, or rather, re-issue, is the "Broken Melody" by the Ideal Company. The success achieved by the acting of Martin Harvey as the violinist, and the general excellence of the production is sufficient justification for its revival.

"The Sawdust Ring", featuring Bessie Love as a bare-back circus rider, is the latest film released by the Triangle people.

Wallace Reid appears in the new famous Players-Lasky production, "Less than kin". He plays a dual role of completely opposite types, being both the hero and the villain of the same play.

Films Galore.

Owing to the relaxation of the war restrictions the market is being gradually swamped with films of all descriptions, good, bad and worse. It is quite possible that at the present rate of output two years may elapse between the completion of a play and its exhibition to the public. This is unsatisfactory, for it does away with the topical play, and in many ways films will be distinctly unfashionable.

Only one Rolls-Royce is included in the 59 motor-cars being used by Government Departments, said Mr. Kellaway, and it is to be sold and a cheaper type substituted.

It is hoped the public will again be admitted to the park and grounds of Alexandra Palace when it is used for the housing of Government staffs, states Sir Alfred Mond.

BRITISH GUARANTEES IN NORTH RUSSIA.

FLIGHT OF AFGHAN CHIEF.

WAR BETWEEN ESTHONIA AND GERMANY.

SERBIANS FORCE AUSTRIAN RETREAT.

BRITISH ACTIVITIES IN NORTH RUSSIA.

FINANCIAL GUARANTEES.

A telegram from Helsingfors states that the British have begun an advance along the Murman railway.

According to a telegram from Reval dated 7th June, via Stockholm, an Anglo-Esthonian agreement has been concluded. Under its provisions British troops will occupy the Island of Oesel as guarantee for British financial assistance to Esthonia. Fifty British warships will be stationed off Hangoe, Helsingfors and Reval.

SEVERITIES OF MARTIAL LAW AT PETROGRAD.

CITY'S DEFENCES.

Stockholm.—A telegram from Petrograd states that martial law is being most rigorously enforced. All cafés, theatres and cinemas are closed and espionage is rampant. Zinovieff in a recent speech exhorted all proletarians to watch not only the bourgeoisie but also their own ranks owing to the presence of a great uumber of counter-revolutionaries.

Part of the Bolshevist High Sea Fleet is stationed at the mouth of the Neva. It is believed that the Government intends to sink the ships in case of attack in order to block the seaward approach to the city. It seems as though the Bolshevists have now decided to defend Petrograd.
Reuter.

SERBS FORCE AUSTRIANS TO RETREAT.

MANY PRISONERS TAKEN.

Serbian headquarters state that in consequence of the failure of negotiations with the Austrians, arising out of the hostile Austrian advance into Corinthia, the Serbs started an offensive on the 29th May. They more than wiped out the Austrian advance and captured a number of men, together with a large quantity of equipment and munitions. The retreating enemy destroyed the bridges over the Drave towards Stryia.—Reuter.

OUR TOTAL RUSSIAN CASUALTIES

Since the Armistice there have been, in all parts of the Russian theatres of war, 13 British officers and 116 rank and file, killed, 14 British officers and 152 rank and file wounded, and two British officers and 26 rank and file missing.

This makes the total British casualties during the last six months in Russia—29 officers and 294 men. The number of killed is out of proportion to the number wounded, said Mr. Churchill in the course of a House of Commons debate, but that may be due to the ferocity with which the Bolsheviks are waging war.

MINE-SWEEPING IN THE BALTIC.

The Helsingfors minesweeping flotilla will on Thursday next begin to sweep the waters between Hangoe and Helsingfors and on the direct Southern route across the Baltic.—Reuter.

KRONSTADT RAID CONTRADICTED.

Reuter learns that a similarity of names led to a misunderstanding concerning the evacuation of Fort Alexandros by the Bolshevists. The Fort Alexandros which was evacuated is on the Caspian, where two vessels were sunk by British Naval Forces. There is no questions of an attack on Kronstadt harbour in the Baltic, pending the clearance of the minefields.

MOBILIZED RUSSIANS FORCED INTO ACTION.

An Omsk telegram says that an operation of some importance was attempted by four enemy detachments on the 27th May at the mouth of the Kalmez. Fierce fighting ensued in which the Siberian troops captured six hundred prisoners and a considerable amount of material. Prisoners stated that the mobilized troops can only be persuaded to go to battle under the menace of Communists behind them. General headquarters report that Koltchak has advanced to the North of the Kazan railway where further villages have been occupied. North and South of the Perm railway several villages have been recaptured. An attempted Bolshevist attack near Simbirsk was repulsed. Reuter.

NO REDUCTION IN SWEDISH MILITARY SERVICE.

Stockholm.—The first chamber of the Swedish Riksdag, after a considerable and heated debate, rejected the Bill for the reduction of compulsory military service. The Bill was strongly supported by the Liberal and Socialist parties.—Reuter.

Reuter learns that the French Government has selected about 140 famous sites along the whole front which will be preserved in their present state as monuments of the war.

WAR BETWEEN ESTHONIA AND GERMANY.

DUM DUM BULLETS.

Messages dated 5th June received by the Esthonia Legation run as follows:— "The German Landeswehr, supported by the German Government Iron Division, has destroyed the railway bridge between Wendon and Ramotsk, cutting off our troops acting in the direction of Kreuzburg. On our demanding them to retire southward the Landeswehr last evening opened rifle fire with dum-dum cartridges on our rearguards between Wendon and Ramotsk. They attempted to surround one of our armoured trains and commenced this morning an advance from the south of Wendon. Consequently we are compelled to begin war operations against Germany."
Reuter.

Copenhagen. 8th June. The Esthonians have reached the Dvina from East Lettland and have occupied the junction of Kreutzburg and Jacobstadt, on the river, after successful fighting. The Lithuanians are rapidly approaching Dvinsk from the south and the Bolshevists are fleeing. The northern corps on all sectors in Germanland have renewed the offensive and captured a considerable number of prisoners and a quantity of booty. Fighting in the Petrograd sector is taking place twenty miles west of Gatschina.

INDIAN RESPONSE TO APPEAL BY VICEROY.

MEN, MONEY, AND MUNITIONS.

The India Office has issued the following telegram from the Viceroy, dated June 4:

At the beginning of the Afghan trouble I wrote personally explaining the situation to all Ruling Princes and Chiefs. All important rulers have in their replies offered their resources to the Government, and have expressed unswerving loyalty to the Throne and detestation of the Amir's action. Necessary measures have been taken by the Nizam, the Begum of Bhopal, and other Rulers to ensure that the real circumstances of the Afghan attack are fully understood by their Mohammedan subjects, and the latter realise that no question of religion is involved. In placing his Imperial Service troops and resources at the Government of India's disposal, the Nizam of Hyderabad has specially asked me to convey to his Majesty the King his humble and respectful offer. The Rulers of Baria, Ratlam, Patiala, and Dholpur are among those who have offered personal service. Staff appointments in the field have been given to the Nawab of Loharu's two sons, including the Heir-Apparent. We are considering other offers.

Sir Partap Singh was eager to go, but in view of the importance of his duties as Regent of Jodhpur I discouraged him. Units have been offered by all Ruling Princes and Chiefs who maintain Imperial Service troops. These units have in some cases only just returned from the front. We have selected for active service or garrison duty in India contingents of infantry, cavalry, artillery, sappers, etc., from Gwalior, Faridkot, Jaipur, Indore, Khairpur, Kashmir, Patiala, Maler, Kotla, Sirmur, Theri, and Rampur. We are considering employment of Imperial Service troops of Bikaner, Nabha, and Kapurthala. We are receiving and accepting offers of camels, motor-cars, and money for providing comforts for the troops engaged in the campaign.

Assistance was offered by the Nepalese Government in February last on the death of the late Amir. I asked the Prime Minister for a Nepalese contingent at the outbreak of hostilities, and in spite of the great difficulties of moving troops through Terai in the hot weather he promptly agreed. Arrangements for their reception in India are being made. Chiefs and Governors of the Gilgit Agency, Khan of Kelat, and tribes in Baluchistan have also sent offers of assistance and loyal messages. Active assistance in repelling raiding parties has been given by the Mehtar of Chitral. The Nawab of Dir has expelled all Afghan agents who were in his country, and has offered his son's services.

FLIGHT OF AFGHAN CHIEF.

Simla 5th June.—The following news has been received from the frontier:

"Nadir Khan has hurriedly retired to Khost, abandoning tents, documents, hospitals, stores, two gun carriages, and a thousand live shells at the Yusuf Khel Camp. During his retreat much baggage and ammunition was dropped, which the villagers looted. A portion of the Kandahar force, which had been assembled at Dabrai under Abdul Qudu, is now withdrawing westwards."—Reuter.

EMPIRE DAY IN INDIA.

Empire Day celebrations at Bombay included a large meeting of the Hindu community, at which a resolution was passed expressing loyalty to British rule and wishing success to the British arms in Afghanistan.

A public meeting of Afghans and frontier tribesmen resident at Bombay was held in the purpose of expressing displeasure and hatred against the actions of the new Amir. The chairman dwelt on the benefits of British rule in India, particulary pointing out the religious freedom allowed and the facilities given to Kaj pilgrims.—Reuter.

ANTI-FOREIGN RIOTS IN SOUTH WALES.

BROKEN HEADS AND WINDOWS.

Serious racial disturbances occurred at Newport (Mon.) on Saturday morning. The trouble started overnight, when a coloured man is alleged to have made an offensive remark to a white woman. A large crowd congregated and after some altercation and exchange of blows the black men retired to two houses in George-street where a number of them live.

A little later some more black men appeared. This was the signal for stone-throwing at the windows. Eventually the hostile crowd swelled into a mob of about three thousand and the appearance of about thirty black men with sticks and pokers led to a general riot. The police drew their batons and in a few minutes there were a large number of broken heads. The police managed to convey twenty-four black men and three white men to the police station. During the rioting every window and door of every house in George-street was smashed. The crowd subsequently raided a Chinese laundry, a Greek boarding house and a coloured seamen's lodging house in other streets.

At a special court held on Saturday evening twenty-five coloured and three white men were charged with rioting and were remanded. Many of the coloured men had their heads swathed in bandages, while two of the whites were dressed in khaki, one of them wearing the Mons ribbon. The affair is attracting the more attention owing to the fact that it follows similar anti-negro disorders in the East-end of London. These were also due to the attentions of negroes to white women.

The disturbances were renewed late on Saturday night, large crowds again collecting in the vicinity of coloured seamen's boarding houses. They were dispersed by the police, who made a baton charge in which several were injured. A police sergeant was among those conveyed to hospital. Many more windows were smashed by stones and iron bolts.

STRONG COMMON-SENSE WORDS.

CENSURING THE TRIPLE ALLIANCE.

Among the questions raised at the resumed annual Council meeting of the National Transport Workers' Federation, held at Swansea, were the blockade, the release of "Conchies," Russia, and the attitude of the Triple Industrial Alliance on conscription.

There were some pronounced opinions, forcibly expressed. Colonel Will Thorne, who opened the debate on the report of the Executive Council, said:—

"As far as I am concerned, I am not much concerned about the raising of the blockade. I would remind delegates of the position in this country this time last year. It was not a question then of raising the blockade. The policy of the Germans was to sink every boat they could, with all the foodstuffs. The cry was sink at sight and without trace. I deliberately say the Germans are absolutely responsible for the shortage of foodstuffs in this country and their own. They were depriving our women and children of food during their submarine campaign. They were not concerned about the babies then. Now they are crying like great big babies about the effects of the blockade." He asked what authority Mr. Carmichael, London Trades Council, had for saying at the Hyde Park police meeting that when the police were called on by their union to strike they would know they had the Triple Alliance behind them.

Mr. Havelock Wilson said there were 1,000,000 men and women out of work, and the Government were blamed for it. He blamed Messrs. Williams and Company. (Laughter.) "It is not a matter for hilarity," said Mr. Wilson, "that there are all these people out of work. You are hilarious about it. All common-sense men are a little alarmed about this state of affairs. The capitalists would like to develop industry and make work, but they can't because there is no guarantee for the future. It is the stunts started by Williams and Company that are creating unemployment." The talk about conscription was all "flapdoodle." It was not the feeling of the rank and file. The "conscription racket" was only a dodge. He should be opposed to any form of conscription when the time came for it to be abolished. "Mr. Williams," said Mr. Wilson, "has declared that Lenin and Trotsky are decent fellows. I declare they are damned rogues, and I have more evidence of their rascality than Mr. Williams may have as to their being white angels." He moved a vote of censure on the executive of the federation for allowing the resolution on conscription to be tabled at Southport without any notice being given to the affiliated unions.

Mr. E. Cathery (Sailors' and Firemen's Union), in seconding, objected to the Triple Alliance being used to release a lot of cowards.

Mr. Ben Tillett moved a resolution instructing the executive, when in conference with the Triple Alliance, to refrain from committing the unions affiliated to the federation to strike action without a ballot vote being taken of the unions concerned.

TAY PAY'S OPINION.

Speaking at a demonstration of the United Irish League Convention at Leeds, Mr. T. P. O'Connor, M.P., said that some branches of the League in Great Britain had ceased to exist because most of their members voluntarily went, out to fight. This was the answer to the cowardly charge that the Irish race had not done its duty in the war.

There was a heated debate on the question of an alliance with the British Labour Party. Many delegates stated that they had been instructed by their branches absolutely to oppose such an alliance.

Mr. John Devlin, M.P., while favouring the complete independence of the league, said he failed to see why members, many of whom are active trade-unionists, should not hold office in the Labour Party if so desired. The Convention decided that the League shall retain its independence.

GRIM OUTRAGE ON UNIVERSITY STUDENT.

TARRED AND FEATHERED.

The existence of a domestic tragedy is suggested by an incident which occurred at Cambridge on Saturday. Early in the morning the police found a young man in Harvey road bound to a tree by heavy chains secured with two padlocks. He was naked and was coated with tar and feathers.

It was subsequently ascertained that he is a naval officer in residence at the University. The perpetrators of the outrage are said to be an army officer and his brother. The tree to which the victim was bound stands outside the Y.W.C.A., where the army officer's wife is living.

FEDERATION OF DEMOBILIZED MEN.

ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

The annual conference of the National Federation of discharged and demobilized soldiers and sailors opened at Manchester on Sunday.

In reply to a communication regarding the employment of ex-Service men, the Minister of Labour wrote saying the Premier agreed that they were entitled to special consideration. The Employment Exchanges had been instructed to give preference to applications from ex-service men and a further scrutiny of Government offices was being undertaken with the view to ensuring that the largest possible number of suitable places be occupied by demobilized men. Consultations were being arranged with trade advisory committees for the purpose of setting up in various trades an arrangement whereby a certain proportion of partially disabled men shall be provided with employment, and if necessary Parliament will be asked to give special consideration to this project at an early date.

It is also announced by the Ministry of Labour that new conditions have been laid down to secure the State employment donation. Civilian applicants in general must satisfy the local employment committees that they were employed for not less than twenty weeks last year.

AUSTRALIAN GENERAL ASKING FOR TROUBLE.

"THE BEST STORM TROOPS"

A farewell dinner was given on Saturday night at the Piccadilly Hotel to the officers of the Fourth Australian Division.

General Rawlinson, responding to the toast of the visitors, referred to the heroic exploits of the Fourth Australian Division at Hamel in which engagement, tanks were used to such great advantage.

Lieut. General Cox, who founded the division in Egypt, described the men of the Fourth Division as "The best storm troops in the world."

General Monash said the division at one time had a great aversion to tanks but in the battle of Hamel he insisted on their going into action with the tanks because he knew that if they made a success with the new tanks the division would be successful in subsequent operations.

SUSPECTED SMALL-FOX ON INDIAN TROOPSHIP.

DEMOB.'S REFUSE ISOLATION.

The transport Katoomba arrived at Plymouth on Friday with two thousand troops from India and Egypt aboard, including fifteen hundred men who had served in the Balkans, Gallipoli, Mesopotamia and Palestine. These were the last to be repatriated of General Allenby's force. There were several suspected cases of smallpox during the voyage.

All the civilian passengers were landed at Plymouth on Friday night. The troops from Egypt were yesterday ordered to proceed to an isolation camp but they refused to go. Finally the military authorities permitted them to proceed to their respective dispersal centres.

THE VICTORY MEDAL.

The following Army order was issued on Saturday. "It has been brought to notice that in some cases officers and soldiers are wearing ribands of foreign commemorative war medals for service in connection with the present war. The Allied and Associated Powers have agreed to institute an Inter-Allied war medal, to be designated the Victory Medal. As this medal will obviate the interchange of Allied commemorative war medals, the wearing of such Allied ribands is prohibited.

CORNISH JURY UPHOLDS UNWRITTEN LAW.

Despite the judge's admonition as regards the "unwritten law" a Bodmin jury, without leaving the box, acquitted a miner indicted for the manslaughter of a Captain Schiff, who it was alleged, had had relations with the accused man's seventeen year old daughter. The accused met and fought Schiff, who succumbed to his injuries.

WAR MEMORIAL TO JEWS.

A memorial signed by Lord Swaythling, Major F. C. Stern and Mr. R. Waley Cohen has been addressed to Major Lionel de Rothschild respecting the erection of a permanent War Memorial to those Jews of the British Empire who have fallen in the war and as a thanks offering for those who were spared.

It is proposed that the memorial take the form of a British College of Jewish learning at Oxford or Cambridge, and the suggestion is that the Jews College at Bloomsbury be transferred to one of those seats of learning.

Major Rothschild has promised to support the effort.

R 34 TO FLY THE ATLANTIC NEXT WEEK.

GENERAL PERSHING A/M.

It is expected that the R.34 will start on the trans-Atlantic flight next week. Major Scott, R.A.F., who is in command, has drawn a screen around the airship while the final preparations are being made and no person can get past the vigilant naval sentries without a special permit.

General Pershing has asked permission to join as a member of the crew of R 34 and has offered to do any class of work aboard.

MANIFESTO BY ARMY CHAPLAINS.

THE TIME IS RIPE.

The direct result of their experiences among the troops is a manifesto signed by the leading chaplains of all denominations in the Aldershot Command. This appeal, which has just been issued, urges that "The time is ripe to reconsider how far ecclesiastical customs and usages should stand in the way of closer co-operation. Churches in each locality should be federated forthwith for united action in all departments of social service. In every locality representatives of the churches should systematically meet to survey the spiritual conditions prevailing around them."

The manifesto welcomes the coming of a world conference on faith and order and trusts that a generous agreement on fundamental principles may be reached in order to remove the stumbling blocks to interchange of pulpits and open communion.

WHY ENGLISH SHIPPING IS IN DANGER.

LABOUR TROUBLES.

The Shipping Controller, Sir Joseph Maclay, has given a very interesting interview on the subject of the disappointing position of British shipping, despite the Armistice and consequent diminution of transport required for military purposes. He said that while there were other contributory causes, the blame was largely due to labour troubles.

Ships employed on military work required extensive alterations before they were usable for mercantile purposes. Many others needed repairs, which were long overdue. At one time over 600 ships were held up owing to strikes at the big repairing yards. The threat of a coal strike had also diminished carrying capacity by compelling ships sailing from American ports to load enough coal to take them back. In that way we had lost 100,000 tons of cargo space in one month alone. A third cause was the inadequacy of dock labour, resulting in such delays that it now often takes a ship longer to perform a round journey than it did in war time with all the delays of the convoy system. Consequently the ships we have are not doing the work to be expected of them. It is unlikely that freights will ever be as low as before the war. A sailor who used to get £4 10s. per month before the war is now getting £14. Coal, formerly 13s. 6d. per ton, is now 50s. and the cost of repairs had doubled.

Sir Joseph defended the continuance of control, thereby enabling the Government to fix low freights for necessaries, as it threw the whole burden of increased freights on the less vital imports. He admitted nevertheless that the system made us more dependent on purely British shipping, to which alone Government control applies.

MILITARY TITLES OF CHAPLAINS.

Questions having arisen as to the proper designation of chaplains, the War Office states that chaplains rank with combatant officers as follows:,

Chaplain, 1st class, ranks as colonel; 2nd class, as lieut.-colonel; 3rd class, as major; 4th class as captain.

This ranking is, however, relative only, and a chaplain is not authorized to describe himself or to be described as "Captain," "Major," &c. The proper mode of address for a chaplain is "The Reverend ——, Chaplain to the Forces.

GERMAN DELEGATES' TIPS REFUSED.

Versailles.—In the hotels here occupied by the German representatives the staff have steadfastly refused to take any tips from the enemy delegates. As in the big hotels the employees are not paid and depend entirely on tips, the management of these hotels has now decided to raise the price of meals served to the Germans by 10 per cent., and to hand the yield from this addition to their employees.—Reuter.

M.P. SENT TO PRISON.

Mr. Ginnell M.P., was sentenced at Mullingar on Saturday to four months imprisonment for participating in an unlawful assembly at Westmeath on the 27th April and for inciting the people to boycott the police.

STOP YOUR WHEEDLING, JOCK.

A telegram from Syndey states that the Repatriation Committee has asked Sir Harry Lauder to discontinue for the present his appeals on behalf of Scottish soldiers as it is feared his great success may prejudice the Committee's scheme for Australian soldiers.— Reuter.

GOING on leave is a more frequent occurrance now than in the old fighting days. Hundreds of troops pour into London daily from Rhineland . . . On leave they have money to spend—and they spend it—fitting out —buyng comforts to take back, visiting theatres and all places of amusement, placing orders for thousands of pounds worth of goods on behalf of their units for sports, music, theatricals prizes etc. British advertisers can secure first hearing through the medium of

THE GREATEST CRIME OF ALL.

Germany has committed many crimes against the world, though she herself vigorously denies the fact. She has broken international law, violated the Hague convention and been guilty of innumerable breaches of the laws and customs of war. The special sub-commission charged with the examination of the official documents on the origin of the war has determined "that the responsibility for it lies wholly upon the Powers which declared war in pursuance of a policy of aggression, concealment of which gives to the origin of this war a character of a dark conspiracy against the peace of Europe.

Doubtless Germans would vehemently deny this accusation, and allege various reasons to the contrary. But we are not concerned this morning with this vexed question of responsibility, though we propose shortly, in the light of the official documents now to hand, to deal with this subject, including the Bavarian State papers known as the Lerchenfeld Revelations.

But to-day we will consider Germany's greatest crime, viz — that committed against herself and the whole world. For what was the position of the chief enemy country on the eve of the outbreak of the war? The German Empire was feared and respected throughout the world. Her army was the most gigantic and formidable instrument of power ever wielded by any monarch or republic. Her fleet stood second to Britain's only. Her mercantile flag was seen in ever increasing numbers all over the world. Her commercial interpenetration of all the countries in the world formed the theme of every commercial gathering where German competition was alike dreaded and admired.

Meanwhile the race in armaments went on apace, Germany leading by a long lap. When other countries suggested a reduction or a "naval holiday," Germany alone declined to accede to the idea.

Whilst Pan-Germans declaimed on the future of a Greater Germany which should extend from Switzerland to Holland, embracing all these smaller states within a customs union, the voice of reason was unheeded. Endeavours were made by the Liberal Government between 1911—14 to lessen the tension. In both countries societies were formed with the object of fostering friendly relations and soothing the animosity which prevailed.

* * *

Suddenly an Austrian archduke is murdered and Germany backs Austria in issuing an ultimatum the like of which the world has never before seen addressed even to a minor independent state. The issue is widened and Russia, France, Belgium and Great Britain are successively involved.

When we now gaze upon the ruins of European civilization we find it difficult to frame words wherewith to measure the crime Germany has committed both against the world and herself. For in the great family of nations, better than in any concert of Europe there lay enshrined the idea of a common contribution to the European civilisation which we all share. France, Germany, and Britain—these were the three standard bearers, and each had certain qualities and national genius. The genius of France lay in her pallucid lucidity and clarity of thought, her artistic genius, her democratic republicanism.

The genius of Germany lay in her solid intellectual and scientific contribution to the knowledge of the world. Science and industry conjoined had brought German commerce to a pitch of perfection hitherto unrivalled. Material prosperity and scientific town-planning had reached their zenith.

Great Britain stood allied to both these two great main currents of European civilization.

Sharing many common characteristics in outlook on life with our Teutonic cousins, we yet owing to the Norman conquest, partook of the Latin civilization of France. It was our fair dream that these three great nations should have been the standard bearers of the progress of the world.

But Prussian militarism fell like a dark shadow athwart this fair dream. As Faust says, "Two souls do dwell, alas, within my breast." And so Germany yielded to the dark angel of militarist reaction, and with the violation of international agreements she set back the clock of European civilization.

And so the great veil of the temple is rent in twain. How long will this state of affairs continue? Until such time as inner reflection and repentance have brought the German nation to its senses. Then she will learn to see that the true greatness of a nation consists, not in captains nor in kings, but in that humility of spirit whereby alone nations are great. We too have had our fits of jingoism in the past and have recovered from them. And so we are looking, a trifle wistfully perhaps, to see some sign of the re-appearance of the former Germany we knew and loved. When that takes place, and she resumes once more her rightful place in the family of nations to which she belongs, then, and not till then, shall we be ready to hold out the hand of reconciliation, and to pass the sponge over the dark past.

WANTED—AN INTERNATIONAL LANGUAGE.

The upheaval caused by the great war has accentuated the need for a lingua franca or common medium of intercourse between the nations. At various stages of history, proposals have been made for adopting one language as the medium of intercourse. In the Middle Ages, Latin was such a medium between the learned, and indeed up to a recent time Latin was used as the vehicle of teaching in the Universities of Hungary, just as Latin addresses are given on Speech Days at Oxford and Cambridge. From the time of Louis XIV, le Grand Monarque, up to the time of Napoleon, French was the language of the grande monde, and remains still the language of diplomacy, of the Railway Union and of the Postal Union. It is significant, however, that French and English were both equally used at the Peace Conference.

* * *

Admitting, then, the need for an international medium, what shall it be? There are, I think, three possible competitors, English, French and an artifical language like Esperanto. German, I think, no one outside the Fatherland will advocate. When Mark Twain, in the appendix to "A Tramp Abroad" called "The Awful German language," said that you can learn English in thirty hours, French in thirty days and German in thirty years, he was speaking epigrammatically but with a basis of fact. If you read that essay, as witty as true, you will see how impossible German is as an international medium, even if any non-German were so ill-advised as to advocate its use. Eliminating German and a fortiori, Russian, we are left with French and English among living tongues, and Esperanto, the artifical medium invented by Dr. Zamenhof, the Polish doctor of Warsaw. Esperanto, I admit, is a great improvement on any artifical language hitherto invented. It is easy to anyone that knows a Teutonic and a Latin language; but whether it is as easy as its advocates claim, may be doubted. The one great argument in its favour is that it is neutral, that it does not excite national jealousy. To this, it may be replied that no nation hitherto has felt it a reflection on its national amour propre, to use French. Esperanto is unnecessary, we have enough languages without Esperanto and two of the living tongues, English and French, are ready to hand.

As regards French, everyone admits the admirable qualities of French as a medium of thought — its lucidity and precision. But is French an easy language? The popular English conception is that French is a language to be "picked up" in six months or even six weeks. But any serious student of that language will admit how delicate and subtle a tongue it is. It is perhaps the most idiomatic of all languages.

Let us consider now the merits of English as a World Language. These may be divided into two heads. First, it is the most widely distributed of tongues. It is pre-eminently the language of the Sea and of Commerce. Most seafaring men of all nations know something of it. It was a compulsory subject in the German Royal Navy. It is spoken by about 160,000,000 people as their mother tongue, and there must be from five to ten million people who speak it, more or less, as an acquired language. English is the language of the East. Naturally it is the language of India's Intelligenzia and in China and Japan, it is English first and the rest nowhere. Thus, in Japan, papers are printed half in English and half in Japanese.

Second, the structure of English is the simplest of all languages. Our grammar has been reduced to the lowest term of simplicity. We have no artificial (and therefore false) genders. We have no useless apparatus of declinations such as embarrass German, and serve only to obstruct the path of the learner.

There is, however, one obstacle in English, its pronunciation. But it is not the pronunciation that is difficult. It is our idiotic spelling that makes the pronunciation difficult. Intrinsically difficult sound in English is perhaps the th combination which Latins find difficult. If we had an improved spelling such as the Simplified Spelling Society (44, Great Russell St.) advocates, our language would unquestionably be the most practical instrument of thought in the world, the real Esperanto of the future.

Oh! but you say, will other people like to have English thrust upon them? It is not, however, a question of forcing English upon other people. The world will accept the language that has most points in its favour, unconsciously English is making its way by peaceful penetration and the upshot of the great war which established the supremacy of the Anglo-Saxon race will also establish the Anglo-Saxon tongue as the World language. "French" said Walter Bagehot "is the patois of Europe, but English is the language of the World."

COLOGNE OPERA HOUSE.

"THE MASTERSINGERS OF NÜRNBERG."

On Saturday evening we found ourselves in the romantic atmosphere of sixteenth century Nürnberg, among the worthy burghers equally devoted to business and music. We followed with admiring interest the fortunes of Walter von Stolzing, and a "perfect, gentle knight" did Herr Menzinsky make of him till he received the double prize of the singer and the lover.

As Hans Sachs, Herr Liszewsky surpassed himself, particularly in his discomfiture of the egregious Beckmesser, to the drollery of which role Herr Robert did ample justice. There is a fine ringing tone in Herr Liszewsky's voice which is very welcome. A word of praise is due to the admirable David of Herr Clemens and to Herr Höttges' Pogner. Sophie Wolf was a sweetly attractive Eva.

The mise-en-scène, as usual, was very effective, the church—scene in the first act and the grouping of the crowd in the last being highly picturesque. The principals were enthusiastically recalled, nor did the audience forget the conductor, to whose baton much of a brilliant performance was due.

THE CONSCRIPTS.

Dinner is over, the last glass of canteen port has found its way to its appointed resting-place, and the Mess President has given the signal to rise.

What is this solemn hush which descends upon the mess, as the officers wend their way to the ante-room? Why do the subalterns herd together like sheep, casting startled glances over their shoulders?

Ah! The adjutant descends upon them, and in peremptory tones announces, "Jones and Smith — you are for Bridge with the Colonel to-night." Once more the buzz of conversation resumes its sway, as the shrinking victims are led to the scene of their humiliation! K.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

UNWELCOME ATTENTION.

Liverpool.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—Possibly the account of a rather embarrassing adventure which befel myself and a few other "demobbed" men recently may serve to prevent similar happenings to those of your readers who are "sweating" on getting home.

As is well known, the admiration in which the British Tommy is held by our gallant Allies in Belgium usually manifests itself in a desire to possess any old thing of his as a souvenir, and the man is indeed callous to whom the chic appearance of "les demoiselles belge" clad in wondrous garments fabricated with inimitable skill and artistry from G.S. blankets does not more than compensate for anything the quarter-bloke may say.

This craze for tangible reminders of "les braves Tommies" has broken out in a fresh direction.

Our train having halted — presumably for water and food during the small hours, we were visited by some inveterate souvenir-hunters of Charleroi. Considerately refraining from disturbing our slumbers, they collected about twenty pairs of boots, mine among the number.

Needless to say, all those who had been so honoured were charmed at this new evidence of popularity, one man regretting he was unacquainted with the gentleman who had singled him out, otherwise, he said, he would certainly, in addition to the boots, have given him "socks."

I think you will agree that all this is as it should be; still, as the trains halt at various places on the way to Dunkirk to enable the men to obtain meals, a few walks along the permanent way in stockinged feet are apt to make one inclined rather to deplore this great popularity.

Perhaps, if you would care to publish this for the benefit of those concerned, an alternative distribution of thick ears in lieu night be arranged.

RECKLESS MOTORISTS.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—When driving a three-in-hand (unicorn) under Beuel Bridge, Bonn, last Sunday at 18.03 hrs., I had my team and my coach passengers' lives placed in imminent peril by the extremely reckless driving of the chauffeur of a covered car which contained two staff officers. May I crave sufficient space in your invaluable paper in which to express my heartfelt desire that, in future all chauffeurs, whether driving Army, Corps, Divisional or other cars, be instructed in the usual courtesies "et petits soins" of the road.

CAPT. R.F.A.

"BONN AMUSEMENTS."

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—I read, with interest, the letter signed "L.W.M." in to-day's Cologne Post.

What he says re the paucity of entertainments is right, and certainly has caused plenty of grumbling amongst troops, who are billeted in this area. Why only one cinema, with so many German halls in the place; why is only the Stadt Theater available (and then only on certain days) for our musical shows?

The hot weather, of course, makes Tommy somewhat disinterested in indoor amusement, but the dark nights and bad weather will come, and then he will surely look for an improvement — somewhere. How will he get it? More cinemas, more musical shows and better facilities for a feed when he visits the town? All of these things are certainly needed, and will be looked for.

H.N.

A SAD STORY.

THE LAST MAN IN—AND OUT.

Cuthbert Swingit was no hero. He had no unhealthy yearnings to end his life on the battle field facing about ten thousand foe. In fact the mere idea of such a calamity gave him mental paralysis. Therefore Cuthbert took up the unadventurous career of a purveyor of socks and hats, etc. Then a war bounced over the horizon and most of Cuthbert's customers went to a rival establishment where hats and hosiery, etc., were provided gratis. Cuthbert gave them a hearty send-off and went back and added khaki shirts and ties to his stock. This was in 1914.

Towards the end of 1915, certain uncharitable people began to tell him that it wasn't a private war; anyone could join in. So Cuthbert affected blue glasses and a really artistic "grave-yard" cough and carried on.

In 1916 the gentle chiding of his neighbours having become a menacing roar, he began to look for a really safe way of winning the war (at home). Once he nearly joined the special Constabulary, but luckily heard in time of a special being badly mauled by a Bolshevist buck navvy. At length, just as cruel conscription was going to crump him into khaki, Cuthbert crawled into a munition factory, where he won the war in leaps and bounds, by polishing nosecaps of shells with "Soldiers Friend" at 15 pounds a week and overtime.

Early in 1918 the blow fell. An unreasonable British Government intimated that they would like to win this war if possible and they simply couldn't do it without the aid of Cuthbert. So the nosecaps went unpolished and Cuthbert went to France where he speedily won promotion to the position of Battalion "Lead-swinger." For a time he prospered exceedingly, but one foggy day there came a "general mix up" and the "lead-swingers" got jumbled up with the "Pukka" soldiers and when next Cuthbert was able to think coherently he found himself on the Rhine, having exchanged two fingers for a small piece of gold tape. Then with commendable swiftness he grabbed the softest job going and sat down to wait for Peace and "Demob."

Many years rolled by. A familiar figure in the Hohenzollern-Strasse was an aged and decrepit man with venerable white hair and long jagged edged whiskers, dressed in frayed khaki, with broken boots. One day while standing on the side walk gazing with meditation at the busy traffic, a young soldier sighted him and dashed forward. "Cheer up, Dad", spake the 1936 recruit boisterously slapping the frail old man on the back, "Haven't you heard the news? Peace was signed yesterday and you are for Demob. on Monday." The white haired old man turned a glazed eye upon the youth and, adroitly twitching his whiskers from beneath a passing street-car sadly murmured, "Nix Fustien."

The young soldier turned aside and dashed away a tear. Alas, poor Cuthbert Swingit would never see home again. He had forgotten the English language.

DAWN'S AWAKENING.

Slow lift the night-black lashes from before
Her eyes of myst'ry, sparkling with the dew:
The clouds unveil her; rosy blushes o'er
Her sweet face pass, — renew.

Soft sighs she, stirring; sleepy still, she slips
From out her misty raiment, rosy-white:
A moment in the bath of gold she dips, —
Then clothes herself with Light.

ONE-ACT PLAYS.

LENA ASHWELL'S TALENTED CONCERT PARTY AT MUNSTEREIFEL.

That the action of Mr. Albert de Sourville in taking a London theatre solely for the productions of one-act plays was justified was undisputably demonstrated on Wednesday evening at Munstereifel, where a crowded "house" gave a rousing reception to Miss Lena Ashwell's Concert Party. It has been the writer's privilege to witness many Lena Ashwell Concert Parties during the war, but the present company surpasses all, in their presentation of three one-act plays. One has an opportunity of seeing in the flesh Miss Cicely Hamilton, the authoress of "Diana of Dobsons," to mention only one of her many successful works, and the writer of a book which has been recently published in England, under the title of "William, an Englishman."

"Box 'B'."

The first play shown was the ever-popular "Box 'B'," a play as full of witty lines and pithy sayings as a pepper dredge is full of holes. The part of the charming, but very vain, young widow was played to perfection by Miss Hilda Davies, a talented young actress of whom we are likely to hear much in the future. The part of Capt. Bobby Stroud, the bold lover who has quite a unique way of making love, was taken by Mr. Julian D'Albi, and the difficult part of "The Programme Girl," was taken by Miss Lorrie Telford.

"Mrs. Armstrong's Admirer."

Gracefully attired in a fascinating pink dress, with gold lace trimmed sleeves, Miss Hilde Davies looked exceedingly pretty and quite captivated her audience in the one-act play "Mrs. Armstrong's Admirer," by Miss Hamilton. The play tells how a professional burglar visits Mr. Armstrong's flat, but is interrupted in his work by Mr. Armstrong's wife. He successfully makes love to her, but he seemed doomed to interruptions that evening, for in the middle of the love-making process Mr. Armstrong himself arrives on the scene. The burglar hides, and Mr. Armstrong accuses his pretty wife of faithlessness. The burglar, re-appearing, points out to the irate husband at the pistol's point the folly of the accusation, and by a clever ruse re-unites husband and wife, and then leaves the flat a much richer man than when he arrived. Miss Davies was eminently successful as "Mr. Armstrong." Mr. Robert Notte was not one whit the less successful as the professional burglar, and the irate husband was played to life by Mr. Wm. Fazan, who also staged-managed the whole entertainment.

"Postal Orders."

The third and last sketch was entitled "Postal Orders," and in it the audience were treated to a delightful piece of character acting by Miss Cicely Hamilton herself, as the suburban postmistress. Miss Hamilton's severity and her bitter tone of speech drew forth both howls of laughter and sounds of applause, and she was strongly supported by Miss Lorrie Telford and Miss Marie Ault, whose verbal duets were much enjoyed. Mr. Julian D'Albie proved his merit as the jilted lover, while Gladys Graham, his fickle fiancé, was played by Miss Hilda Davies.

During the intervals popular selections were given on the piano by Mr. H. Carlisle. After the performance had concluded the party were entertained to dinner by Col. Williams and the officers of the 53rd S.W.B's. During dinner an unrehearsed but nevertheless realistic exhibition of shellfire was given by Lieut W.H. Gild. Lieut L. Green is certainly to be congratulated on his admirable arrangements, and when the party appears at the Apollo Theatre, Cologne, next week, no opportunity should be missed of seeing them.

DEFEAT OF THE GREAT THREE.

VICTORY FOR YOUNGER GOLFING SCHOOL.

DUNCAN THE CHAMPION.

In the great Golf Professional final of 36 holes at Killermont near Glasgow, on Saturday, Duncan beat Taylor by 6 and 5.

A huge crowd witnessed the match in which Duncan, the leader of the younger school of professionals, met Taylor, the representative of the old school, whom Duncan had lately being challenging. Duncan halved the first, second and third, holing an eight yards putt at the second, and won the sevens and ninth turning four up and also finishing the round four up.

Scores, Out:—Duncan 35;
Taylor 39;
Home:—Duncan 37;
Taylor 39.

Rain fell heavily in the afternoon when 3,000 spectators accompanied the players. Duncan led by five at the turn taking 37 to Taylor's 39, and took 15 for four homeward holes against Taylor's 16.

In the match for third place Ray beat Braid by 8 and 7. Braid was completely out of form.

NEW GOLFING ERA.

Duncan and Alec Herd are to play Vardon and Taylor in an International 36 hole foresome at Bogside on Saturday next.

The defeat of the triumvirate, Braid, Vardon and Taylor at Killermont is commented upon as the opening of a new golfing era.

Mitchell won the Stroke competition with 145 to Vardon's 146, the younger school thus winning both events from the "monopolists."—Reuter.

TAYLOR ON RECENT CONTROVERSY.

Taylor, speaking after the finish of the professional tournament, referred to the recent controversy excited by his criticisms of Scottish golfing style. He said he relied on the good sense and sportsmanship of the Scottish public, and it would be base ingratitude if he should cast any reflection on the national game. His sole intention was to give golf a fillip.

WRAF'S v. RAF'S.

AIR FORCE MALES AND FEMALES TRY CONCLUSIONS AT CRICKET.

An exceedingly interesting, and for Rhineland, novel cricket match was played on Thursday last on the splendid Rear H.Q.R.A.F. pitch, between the male and female members of this unit. In fairness to the ladies the men stipulated to bat and bowl left-handed which tended to make the former confident of a win.

Batting first, the ladies made a very fine show, knocking up the splendid total of 73, the top scorers being Members Park, Curley, and Burnett. Assistant Administrator Wood, who was last to bat, was not out after making a couple of runs.

Not being ambi-dexterous, the airmen failed to snatch a victory and were defeated by just two runs, after aggregating 71. The airmen on the whole failed to play the ladies' bowling. Only three of the side appeared to get set, viz., the Captain Airman Watson, who knocked up 23, Symons with 12, and Smith 7.

The ladies, who were loudly applauded when the last wicket fell, entertained the losers to an excellent tea, and later in the evening to a whist drive and dance. Excellent music was discoursed by the band of the Royal Engineers.

EPSOM ECHOES BY "JERRY M."

EXCLUSIVE TO "THE COLOGNE POST."

Never has the historic old town of Epsom had such multitudes, as assembled on the famous "Downs" for this year's summer meeting. The hotel proprietors and the tradesmen must indeed have made up for some of the "lean" war years. The racing has provided many thrills; some of the finishes were as exciting as they were unexpected.

Tuesday's card was not taken very seriously, everyone talking of the Great Victory Derby, the only item of real interest being the Woodcote Stakes which Roltara won in great style.

Much has already been written of Derby Day. The race resulted as I foreshadowed in my last article, with the defeat of the very hot favourite "The Panther" i have opposed Sir A. Black's colt ever since I saw him so narrowly win the Guineas. And in coupling Grand Parade with All Alone we hadevery reason to rejoice in the result.

On Thursday Lord Glanely completed a very nice double with HE in the Coronation Cup.

Oaks Day again attracted huge crowds in most glorious weather. Backers were quickly on good terms with themselves for the favourites all won in the first three races, Donoghue completing the "Hat Trick." Then came the "Ladies Classic" with Donoghue in such form and the Stable openly confident. "Roseway" was practically unbackable. The field got away well together, the favourite laying well up, and holding her position round Tattenham Corner, she then began to draw to the front. At the distance Bayuda made a very strong challenge, and, gradually overhauling the favourite, won amidst great excitement. Personally I saw Donoghue was a little over-confident and I look on Roseway as an unlucky loser.

The chief event this week will be the "Manchester Cup." At the time of writing I have received very strong tips for

HAPPY MAN and SILVER BULLET.

And for the moment I leave the race at that until I get to Manchester.

THE 1st SIGNAL SQUADRON SPORTS MEETING.

The Sports Ground at Quadrath, on June the 19th and 26th, when the 1st Signal Squadron hold their Sports Meeting, promises to be the scene of much athletic prowess and keen competition.

Twenty events will be contested, among them being a number that cannot fail to be amusing, including an obstacle race, sack race, band race (when instruments must be played), slow cycle race, and mixed boot race.

ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL.

142 HEAVY BATTERY R.G.A. (HEAVIES) v. 185 SIEGE BATTERY R.G.A. (REDS).

At Cuchenheim, on Thursday, the Heavies started off well, and it looked as if the rest were not going to get a look in, especially when a misunderstanding between the Reds' back and goalkeeper let in the Heavie's forwards, to score a good placed goal, by their inside right. This reverse set the Reds going, and after a fine solo run by Davies (who enticed the Heavies' goalkeeper to leave his charge), placed the ball well out of Blake's reach, and put the Reds on level terms. Half time arrived with the score:— 142 Heavy Battery, 1; 185 Siege Battery, 1.

With the wind in their favour, the Reds had the better of the play in the second half, and raided the Heavies' "goalie" time after time. During this time Downs at outside right was putting in some fine centres, which should have been accounted for, and from one of these he enabled Mills to score a fine goal off his head, which rather puzzled Blake.

The Reds were still trying to increase their lead, when the whistle blew for time, and eventually the Reds ran out winners of a very fast and exciting game by 2—1. Final Score:— 142 Heavy Battery R.G.A., 1; 185 Siege Battery, R.G.A., 2.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

Tuesday, June 10, 1919.

Moderate westerly breezes. Fine and warm day, visibility good.

PROFITEERING TRADESMEN WHO GET SOLDIERS INTO SEVERE TROUBLE.

A WARNING TO TROOPS.

The Evening News disclosure concerning the wearing by Service and ex-Service men of an unauthorized silver rosette on the ribbon of the 1914 Star led a Staff officer to criticize forcibly manufacturers of "musical comedy decorations."

"Hundreds of soldiers and officers are getting into trouble," he declared, "simply because shops are flooded with these spurious ribbons and rosettes.

"The soldiers buy them in the belief that they are authorized.

"Scandalous profiteering is going on. Some shops in the West End are charging 1s. 6d for an inch of '1914' ribbon on a brooch. Two shillings is charged for one of the irregular rosettes.

"The Italian Independence Ribbon mentioned in The Evening News on Thursday— a decoration authorised by the Italian Government, but not allowed to be worn by British soldiers— is not the only ribbon now being irregularly used.

"There is a fictitious multi-coloured ribbon called 'The Allies' ribbon,' which many soldiers and civilians are wearing in error.

"The other day I pulled up a man who had a ribbon who said it was the 'French wounded ribbon' (blue and white stripes with an orange centre).

"With regard to the British General Service Medal, although the War Office may have approved of the colours, those who manufacture it and those who wear it are in the wrong".

'YE MERRIE MUFFINS" VISIT COLOGNE.

"Ye Merrie Muffins," the Highland Divisional Concert Party, opened a week's visit to Cologne, yesterday, at the Deutsches Theatre with the exceedingly amusing and entertaining comedy "Fair and Warmer." The party is under the charge of Lieut. R.C. Matthews, himself a very fine entertainer, and includes "Teddy" and "Davy," two gifted female impersonators.

Visitors to "The Muffins" performance yesterday found the fare served to them of a very high standard of excellence. The party's visit to Cologne bids fair to be as successful as its appearances in Düren and elsewhere have been.

NON STOP FLIGHTS TO INDIA.

IDEAL FOR AVIATION.

An interesting paper on "Aviation affecting India" was read by Lord Montague of Beaulieu at a meeting in London yesterday. He said the East was more suitable for flying than the West and in the whole of the East there was no country so suitable as India. In respect of weather, facilities for making landing grounds and supplies of liquid fuel India was ideal for aviation. The present land and sea communications of India left much to be desired, so there was great incentive for the development of flying. The main difficulty as regards hill stations was the provision of suitable landing grounds but aeroplanes would soon be capable of landing on a space equal to the area of six tennis courts and the Government of India could easily make such where they were required.

He gave suggestions as to probable internal Indian air routes, of which the more important would be Bombay, via Delhi and Lahore, to Peshawar; Bombay to Calcutta; Bombay to Madras; Bombay, via Mysore, to Colombo and Calcutta, via Cawnpore, to Delhi.

There would also be a great development of aerial mail services between England and India. By means of photography letters could be carried in a very small compass. Typewritten letters could be photographed and reproduced on arrival so that ten thousand words would only take up an ounce in weight. The mail service, by a properly organised aeroplane route, would only require three days for the journey.

He also dealt with dirigibles and expressed his belief that in future airships will provide a non-stop passenger service between England and India.

DEPOPULATED FRENCH CANTONS.

ASTONISHING FIGURES.

In yesterday's Daily Mail is published a description of conditions in French territory which was occupied by the Germans, pointing out how the number of inhabitants of the Meuse district decreased during the war.

The article says "In many places where the armies of the Crown Prince camped, plundered and pillaged, no human being is to be found nor will be for years to come. The Montmedy district, which in 1914 had a population of 48,193, has been reduced to 13,389. But what is that compared with the Verdun district? Of a population of 67,171 only 6,165 remain. The Cantons of Charny, Etain, Fresnes-en-Woevre and Varennes, which numbered altogether 24,000 inhabitants, have not even one left.

"I remember during the heroic defence of Verdun, finding myself in the nearest town — Bar-le-Duc — I saw in the cemetery a great extent of freshly stirred up earth marked into lines of little graves surmounted by little crosses of white wood. I asked the grave-digger what it meant. He replied simply 'They are children of refugees from the Verdun region.' In all the cemeteries of France one finds children and old people from those devastated regions, where there remains not a man, not a house, not a tree, not even a blade of grass."

PRIZES FOR NAVY LEAGUE ESSAYS.

In order to encourage the scientific study of "Sea Power" and its uses in war and peace time, and to stimulate interest in the achievements of the Royal Navy and mercantile marine, the Navy League has decided to award a series of prizes for essays on naval subjects. Particulars can be obtained from the General Secretary of the League, 13, Victoria street, London, S.W. 1.

HONOURS TO WEST KENT HEROES.

Many present and past officers of the Royal West Kents, including General Sir Edmund Leach and General Sir E. A. H. Alderson, attended yesterday the memorial service at All Saints' Church, Maidstone, in honour of the men of the regiment who fell in the war. Canon Hardcastle, in his address, quoted Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien, who told the remnant of the 1st Battalion of the regiment after its fighting at Neuve Chapelle, "Everyone is talking about you."

SOLDIER ENLISTS 4 TIMES.

A Birmingham man, Sergeant G. H. Tibbetts, has enlisted for the fourth time. He served in South African war as a despatch rider and was wounded. He re enlisted in 1914 and served in France, but was discharged as unfit after being wounded three times. He enlisted once more in 1918, being demobilized in February 1919, and yesterday he joined the Labour Corps. He wears the D.C.M., the Russian Order of St. George, the Queen's and King's South African Medals, the Long Service Medal, and the Mons Star.

WOMEN J.P.'S.

"BON COMRADE."

EX-SERVICE MEN'S NEW MAGAZINE.

No 1 of a bright little publication, profusely illustrated with humorous and other drawings, reaches us from Hull.

Bon Comrade is the title of this latest addition to the list of monthly publications and it claims to be owned, edited and controlled by ex-service men.

The editorial why and wherefore of the new journal's birth announces:

"It has been felt in many quarters that a most useful purpose could be served by a journal supporting the cause and expressing the views of those who have fought or suffered in the Great War; and the Hull Branch, Comrades of the Great War, aims to fulfil this purpose in publishing the Bon Comrade, which will appear on the 15th of each month. We shall endeavour to justify our title by acting as a good comrade to all who have served.

Bon Comrade will be entirely non-party-political, and its policy will be the same as that of the great organisation of ex-service men it represents. By adopting a reasonable attitude on controversial matters much unnecessary hostility and strife can be avoided, and it is our experience that when the ex-service man's views are put forward in a fair and impartial manner they receive a great deal more consideration than when a hostile tone is adopted."

WHITSUN MONDAY.

PROCESSIONS, EXCURSIONS AND MERRIMENT IN RHINELAMD.

VISITS TO THE COUNTRY.

Bathed in brilliant sunshine, the whole of the occupied area gave itself over to real holiday-making yesterday. Scenes of gaiety were everywhere and all the favourite haunts of the excursionist were packed to overflowing.

The sweltering heat of Sunday, when the exercise of even the slightest physical effort produced beads of perspiration, was mercifully relieved yesterday by a gentle breeze.

From early in the morning there was a steady exodus of civilian pic-nic parties from all the large towns armed, almost without exception, with the wherewithal to satisfy the needs of the inner man.

CHURCH PROCESSIONS.

The cycle of events in Germany — ever a procession-loving country — brings with it at definite periods of the year religious demonstrations by various of the churches. Yesterday, apparently, was a more than usually popular day for such functions, and in many tiny villages as well as in the important towns, processions of children — all in their best "bib and tucker" — demonstrated on behalf of the particular church to which they belonged.

In Cologne, the distinction fell to the Gereons Church yesterday to produce what was undoubtedly an extraordinary achievement in juvenile organisation. Several hundred children, all dressed in fresh-looking white frocks, and carrying little trays of flowers, paraded the streets associated with their church, headed by a band and a large number of prominent German church dignitaries.

A BUSY RIVER DAY.

Many troops stationed in the neighbourhood of Düren visited, and marvelled, at the wonders of the scenery of Gemünd; Rodenkirchen and Königsforst received an uncomfortably liberal amount of patronage from Cologne while the beautiful surroundings of Bonn and Euskirchen came in for a great amount of attention.

There was not a single river-trip steamer that did not carry its full complement of passengers, the introduction of bands on some of these proving a popular innovation.

Despite the heat, all places of amusement were crowded to capacity in the evening.

JAPAN'S BROOM DUMP.

The huge increase in the imports of brooms and brushes from Japan is shown in the following table comparing this year with 1914, given by Sir A. Geddes yesterday:—

	1919.	1914.
	£	£
January	86,230 ...	4,094
February	106,360 ...	3,104
March	117,358 ...	3,341
April	86,084 ...	2,324
Total, 4 months...	396,032 ...	12,863

ALEXANDRA DAY INTENTIONS.

The aim of the Alexandra Day (June 25) Committee this year is to raise the fund to £1,000,000, the seven previous collections having totalled £700,000.

SEQUEL TO DERBY VISIT.

Mr. John Goodman, aged 60, of Harleyford-road, Vauxhall, was one of a party returning in wagonette from Epsom Downs yesterday. He was apparently asleep when the party reached Mitcham, but when some of the members tried to wake him up they found he was dead.

SERIOUS CHARGE AGAINST MAGISTRATE.

James Jones, 69, a magistrate and local preacher, of Blaenavon, was remanded at Pontypool (Mon.) charged with a serious offence at Blaenavon between January 23 and May 13.

When charged he is alleged to have said: "I only did it in a jocular way—as a joke."

Superintendent Barry said he was instructed to oppose bail. It was for the protection of Jones. Bail was, however, granted.

ACROSS CANADA IN FOUR DAYS.

The new Canadian Pacific Trans-Continental de luxe train, the Trans-Canada Limited, left Montreal on Sunday on its first trip, with a heavy load of passengers, including numerous British travellers going to Vancouver and the Orient. The train makes the fastest connection between the Atlantic and Pacific, accomplishing the journey in less than four days. There are thirty-one stops on the 3,000 mile run.

REVOCATION OF MARTIAL LAW IN INDIA.

NATIVE MURDERERS SENTENCED.

MASSACRE OF HUNGARIAN PEASANTS.

AFGHAN TROUBLE SUBSIDING.

MARTIAL LAW REVOKED IN INDIA.

AGITATORS IN PRISON.

An official communique states that Martial Law in India was discontinued on the 9th June in all areas except on the railways and at Lahore.

Simla, 8th June.— It is officially stated that the Government of India possesses ample evidence, in the shape of original letters, that Mohamed Ali and Shankat Ali, who were interned at Chandwera, have been openly inducing the Moslems to assist the Amir and inciting them to abandon their attitude of loyalty. The Government has decided to detain both of them in gaol. Reuter.

TRIAL OF EGYPTIAN MURDERERS.

Cairo.—The military courts have expeditiously dealt with a large number of ordinary cases of pillage, rioting, robbery, receipt of stolen property. The cases are very carefully sifted, as is evidenced by the discrimination in the sentences, which range from a few months of imprisonment to penal servitude for life. The accused invariably gets the benefit of the doubt. In seven cases the death penalty was pronounced, but was confirmed only in four cases, namely, the murderer of a British soldier at Galioub on March 15 the murderer of an Egyptian officer of police at Gharbia, and the native who attempted to wreck a military train. It is interesting to note that in many instances the condemned were notorious evildoers. One of those executed was a well-known chief of brigands. Four of his followers received life sentences. A great Cairo bully, known as "Black Ali," has been sentenced to seven years for extorting money by threats of death from shopkeepers. Another Cairene received a similar sentence for demanding money, for the "Black Hand." In a considerable percentage of the cases the accused were acquitted, and in many cases the General Commanding reduced the sentences.—Reuter.

PORTUGUESE ROYALISTS ESCAPE FROM PRISON.

FIVE DAYS IN OPEN BOAT.

Las Palmas.—Eight members and high officials of the Royalist Government at Oporto, who were arrested after the collapse of the Royalist rebellion and imprisoned in the fortress at Madeira, have arrived here in a small boat. They escaped by tying the bed linen to the bars of the windows and seized a boat lying on the beach. The voyage took five days and all the men suffered severely from lack of food and water.—Reuter.

STRIKE OF NAVAL STOKERS.

FIFTY ARRESTS AT SEA.

Adelaide, 8th June.—Prior to the departure of the cruiser Australia from Fremantle (West Australia) the men declared that the officers had not fully reciprocated the welcome accorded by the residents. The captain refused to delay his departure, being bound by schedule time. The men refused to raise steam in the boilers and the Petty Officers were therefore ordered to do so. When the cruiser reached the open sea the Captain read the King's Regulations covering mutiny and disobedience of orders and the men returned to their posts. Fifty of them were arrested.

Only a restricted number of privileged visitors were allowed aboard the cruiser at Adelaide and only a few sailors, mostly English, were permitted to go ashore. The Australia has left for Melbourne.—Reuter.

DOMINION TROOPS LEAVE FOR MURMANSK.

At noon yesterday seven hundred British Canadian and Australian troops left Leith for the Murmansk coast aboard the ex-German merchant vessel Steigerwald. The passengers included a Russian General and his Staff, French and Italian officers, and the band of the Scots Greys.

A local band played selections on the quay, where a great crowd had congregated. The Provost of Leith addressed the departing troops, and as the vessel left the dock "Auld Lang Syne" was heartily sung.

MASSACRE OF PEASANTS IN HUNGARY.

ATTEMPTED COUP FAILS.

A telegram from Vienna states that about 4,000 armed peasants assembled on the 6th June near Odenburg (Western Hungary), between Zinkendorf and Kellerhof, with the object of effecting a counter-revolutionary coup against the Soviet Government at Oldenburg. They were, however, intercepted by the Odenburg garrison, comprising infantry with machine guns and artillery, near Zinkendorf, where a bloody battle ensued. The peasants were driven back surrounded in Kollerhof by the Red Guards. After a short siege, Kollerhof, which is now in flames, was taken by storm, and a terrible slaughter took place. The entire Odenburg county has been declared in a state of siege, and a military dictatorship has been proclaimed.—Reuter.

SEVENTY-FIVE STRIKERS SHOT.

Berlin. A serious outbreak is reported from Stein am Anger, in Hungary. The workmen there refused to accept the so-called "white" money issued by the Budapest Government, and riots occurred. Hundreds of people were arrested, and seventy-five of them, including many railwaymen, were shot. A strike was thereupon declared on all the Hungarian railways. A People's Commissary who was sent from Budapest to deal with the matter was forced to turn back, as he was told he would by lynched if he entered Stein.—Reuter.

AFGHAN TRIBES CALMER.

Simla 6th June (delayed).

General Nadir Khan's withdrawal at the Amir's request for the cessation of hostilities has had a good effect on the tribal situation on the Khost border. Laskhars composed of Orakzai and Zaimukht clans, which had collected in the East Kurram district, are now dispersing, and tribal enthusiasm in the Tochi Valley is waning.

The trouble in South Waziristan, which spread to the Zhob Valley, led to risings of the Sheranis at Mandu Khel. The withdrawal of our posts at Mognal Kot and Mirali Khel was carried out under great difficulties. The garrisons in these places have been concentrated at Fort Sandeman ready to deal effectively with local troubles, and also to prevent the Sheranni disorders from spreading any farther. With the assistance of local troops the Sherannis and Mahsuds twice attacked the Brabano-Derajat border, but failed. An attempt to capture Chaudhman was repulsed. —Reuter.

TWENTY DEATH SENTENCES.

Simla, 3nd June. The court-martial on those concerned in the murder of British bank officials at Amritsar has sentenced twenty of the accused to death.—Reuter.

SPY WHO BETRAYED MISS CAVELL.

FORTHCOMING TRIAL.

Next month the sixth court-martial will deal with the case of Gaston Quien, alias Luc, 40 years of age, who was released by the Germans from Saint Quentin prison, where he was undergoing imprisonment for a common law offence for which he was sentenced in 1914. After his release Quien became a German espionage agent, and denounced many of his compatriots to the Germans, including Princesse de Croy, who was arrested. He afterwards entered Belgium and obtained admittance into the nursing home of Miss Cavell, as the result of which she was arrested and shot. The Germans later repatriated Quien through Switzerland, on the ground of serious illness.

Some sixty witnesses have been summoned, including the Princesse de Croy and Madame Rovard, who was charged with Nurse Cavell by the Germans.—Reuter.

The British Minister at Brussels has sent to M. Hymans, the Foreign Minister, a letter from Nurse Cavell's family warmly thanking the Belgian King and Queen and the Belgian people for the tributes paid to the memory of Nurse Cavell.—Reuter.

PRESIDENT WILSON'S DEPARTURE.

ANTI-NEGRO OUTBREAK IN LIVERPOOL.

KNIVES USED.

Fresh riots between white and coloured men occurred in Liverpool on Sunday night, as the result of which several negroes were badly injured and two white men were stabbed about the hands.

Since the previous disturbances, when four policemen were severely injured, a bitter feeling has set in against the negroes. There is a growing impression that unless they leave the city the whites will hunt them out.

One negro who is alleged to have brandished an iron bar and shouted continuously "Down with the white race," has been arrested.

CAPTAIN FRYATT'S REMAINS FOR ENGLAND.

PUBLIC FUNERAL.

According to a communication addressed to the Imperial Merchant Service Guild, the Government has decided to accord a public funeral to the body of Captain Fryatt. The remains will be conveyed from Bruges to Zeebrugge, thence by destroyer to Dover. When the body reaches London a procession from the station to St.Paul's Cathedral will be made. Afterwards the remains will go to Dovercourt for final interment.

WAR MEMORIAL REFERENDUM.

The referendum taken in the town of Newmarket on the question of the precise form of War Memorial to be adopted resulted in favour of cottages for disabled soldiers and their dependents. This scheme gained 625 votes.

Other suggestions were the acquisition of the Severalls as a cricket and football ground, 554 votes, the provision of a social club and free library 308 votes. About one-third of the electors voted.

APPOINTMENTS DEPARTMENT DETAILS.

Reuter has ascertained the following interesting details of the work of the Grants Committee of the Ministry of Labour in connection with the training of officers and men. This committee is working in connection with the Appointments Department. Hitherto over 700 recommendations for grants have been received. Of these 472 have been examined and 337 sanctioned, only twenty-five having been refused. Of the 472 applications dealt with 203 were from officers and 269 non-commissioned officers and men. Of those actually studying, 123 are in training as accountants, 99 as engineers, 58 as solicitors, 32 as architects and 32 as veterinary surgeons.

Of the United States present air service personnel 27,084 are still in Europe, and 1,558 in the States. Reuter.

POSTHUMOUS V.C.'s.

The London Gazette notifies posthumous awards of the Victoria Cross to Lieut.-Colonel Elstob of the 16th Manchesters for bravery at Manchester Redoubt, near St. Quentin, and to Lce.-Cpl. Sayer, of the 8th West Surreys for bravery at Levergoier, both exploits being performed on the 21st March 1918.

The Gazette contains the following note: "A further list of awards for services in the Archangel and Murmansk commands will appear later." Recommendations for services with the Kut expeditions are still being considered, but owing to the inevitable delay due to the necessity for referring to the Indian Government, it is impossible to forecast the date of publication of the awards.

SHOT BY SENTRY IN IRELAND.

At the inquest at Dundalk yesterday on Matthew Murphy a young commercial traveller who was shot by a military sentry, Mr. Healy, K.C., suggested that an adjournment be granted for a fortnight. He said he believed that the inquiry would be a turning point in the present distracted state of affairs in Ireland.

The inquest was adjourned.

HOLIDAY RACE FATALITY.

Three people were killed and several injured in a motor smash at Hawick on Saturday afternoon. A motor charabanc was returning form the racecourse when the brakes failed to act. The vehicle ran down a series of steep inclines and overturned.

The number of German civil prisoners repatriated up to May 22 was 23,073, the number interned on May 23 was 3,634.

The Sopwith aeroplane undercarriage which Hawker dropped when passing the coast has been brought into Presque Harbour by a fishing vessel.

The London General Omnibus Company announces that it now has a thousand fewer women bus-conductors than a year ago.

OFFICER TARRED AND FEATHERED.

NAVAL INQUIRY ORDERED.

The name of the naval officer who was found tarred and feathered and chained to a tree at Cambridge is Sub-Lieut. Desmond B. Kinahan. The savage treatment to which he was subjected is alleged to have been in connection with his friendship with the wife of an Army Lieutenant.

Sub-Lieut. Kinahan has gone to Chatham to await a Naval inquiry.

It is stated that a young Army officer who came from abroad to join at the outbreak of war came to Cambridge on leave last December and married the daughter of a Cambridge doctor. He is himself a member of a well-known Cambridge family.

He returned to Salonica, and his wife joined the R.A.F. Subsequently he received information that a naval officer was paying attention to his wife, whereupon he returned to England and saw the officer, who shortly after the interview was given a few days' leave. At the same time the young lady was granted leave from the R.A.F., and both went away.

When they returned the husband requested the naval man to meet him in a garden in the suburbs of Cambridge, and the appointment was kept. With the assistance of his brother, he tarred and feathered the naval man, and took him in a motor car after dark, and chained him outside the Y.W.C.A., where the wife lives. Some hours later the police released him by breaking the padlocks and chains.

They took him to the police station, where he made a statement, and was subsequently taken to his rooms by friends. The police have the matter in hand.

The Army officer has twice been taken prisoner, has gained the M.C., and is now on the intelligence staff. After he and his brother had committed the act they distributed leaflets saying what they had done.

LABOUR M.P.'S. SCATHING WORDS.

THE APEX OF INSANITY.

Speaking in London at the annual conference of the National Democratic and Labour Party, Mr. J. A. Seddon, M.P., the president, said that the principle underlying their program was to recognize the people not as factions, however powerful but as all classes forming a nation. Revolution, as a democratic state, he said, was the apex of insanity and the instrument of intellectual self-seeking bullies. Mr. Seddon added: "We stand resolute and immovable against the Bolshevist madness of Russia or its would-be imitators here. The National Democratic Party will seek annihilation if it follows the so-called Labour party in trying to become the knight errant of the world, to the neglect of the Empire's Unity, social equality and industrial reorganisation. In conclusion Mr. Seddon dwelt on duty of the country to aid the widows and orphans of those who had fallen or become broken in the war.

STARTING THE VICTORY LOAN CAMPAIGN.

"SAFETY AND JOY."

Despite the Whitsun holidays great interest has already been aroused in connection with the Victory Loan which will be inaugurated with considerable ceremonial at the Guildhall on the 16th June.

According to one of the chief officials the Loan has two keynotes—safety and joy—and it has been happily suggested that it should be known as the "Joy Loan." It is a Loan with the Empire behind it and should appeal to every man and woman throughout the Empire.

Reuter learns that the Prime Minister hopes to be in London next Monday to take part in the civil and national inauguration. If possible he will leave Paris in time to speak at the meeting at the Guildhall, which commences at noon.

MEMORIAL TO LONDON TROOPS.

At the request of the Lord Mayor's Committee, Sir Aston Webb, president of the Royal Academy, has submitted a design and model of a memorial to the London troops for erection—if the Corporation agree—in front of the Royal Exchange. The memorial consists of two tall Venetian masts in copper, the top of each bearing a symbolical figure and the broad base an appropriate inscription. It will probably be unique of its kind in the Metropolis.

DARING DAYLIGHT ROBBERY.

An audacious robbery in broad daylight was successfully effected at Plaistow on Saturday. Four men entered some business premises and carried out a safe containing about three thousand pounds sterling in gold, silver and treasury notes, some bundles of securities and a quantity of jewellery.

Loading the safe on a motor van they drove away unchallenged.

NO ROYALTIES FOR ENGLISH OIL CONCESSIONS.

The Ministry of Munitions has granted a licence to bore for oil in an area near Newark to "Oilfield, of England, Limited."

No royalties will be payable to the land owners and the Ministry reserves the right to acquire the undertaking.

Among the improvements in the service of the Great Western Railway which will come into force on the 7th July is the reinstatement of the Cornish Riviera express, which was the pre-war record non-stop run in England.

PATHETIC DROWNING TRAGEDY IN SOLENT.

FATHER REFUSES RESCUE.

An exceedingly pathetic holiday tragedy occurred off the Isle of Wight on Sunday. Setting out from Portsmouth, a discharged soldier named Charles William Watts took his thirteen year old son and two other boys for a row to Ryde. Just off the shore in Stokes' bay the boat overturned in a squall.

Watts swam and dived repeatedly in search of his son but failed to find him. Although a rescue boat was on the spot, he refused to board it but persisted in his efforts. He eventually became exhausted and was himself drowned with his son. The other boys were rescued.

SALVING THE SOPWITH MAIL.

SHIRT AS DISTRESS SIGNAL.

Lieut.-Commander Milvers, U.S.N. Reserve, of the ss. Lake Charlottesville, of Toledo U.S.A., who found Hawker's aeroplane and the mail it contained, wrote Mr. Lloyd George the following letter, dated "At Sea, May 27":

Dear Sir—I am writing you these few lines to inform you that I am sending you a letter addressed to you which was found on the wreck of the Sopwith plane in which Mr. Harry Hawker and Commander Mackenzie-Grieve had attempted to fly across the Atlantic. This mail came into my possession under the following circumstances: While making passage between Montreal and Falmouth, and in latitude 49 degrees and 40 minutes north and long tude 29 degrees and 4 minutes west on May 23, I was called on the bridge by the officer on watch on account of some object visible on the starboard bow. We thought it was a shipwrecked crew out in a lifeboat, and headed immediately for it; as we drew nearer we saw that it was an abandoned aeroplane. When I saw the name Sopwith on it I immediately realised that it was Hawker's. It was floating in the sea tail up, and on top of the tail was a white shirt tied as a signal of distress. Near the top was also lashed a brown mail bag marked "Newfoundland." G.P.O. The mail in it was very much water-soaked and otherwise damaged. We dried it, and pasted the stamps back on them, and I trust that the letter will reach you safely and in good condition. It is believed from the conditions as enumerated above that the occupants remained for some time by the wreck, and the fact that the mail was found near the distress flag causes me at this time to entertain grave fears for their safety, but I sincerely hope that they are safe and well. In view of the sentiment attached to this first Transatlantic air mail, it is thought that you might be interested to know how it came to be delivered after having been wrecked in mid-Atlantic. Hoping the letter from Newfoundland reaches you in good condition, I am, sincerely yours.

A. C. MILVERS, Lieut.-Commander,
U.S.N. Reserve.

To this Mr. Lloyd George replied as follows:—

Dear Captain Milvers—Your very interesting letter has reached me in Paris to-day. It has afforded me the greatest pleasure. I desire to express my best thanks for your kindness in forwarding Sir William Lloyd's letter and for the dramatic account of the finding of the aeroplane. We are all rejoicing that the aviators were saved. Yours faithfully.

—Reuter. D. LLOYD GEORGE.

NEXT FOR THE ATLANTIC FLIGHT.

St. John's, 5th June. Captain Alcock, pilot of the Vickers machine, has given formal notice that he will start on the trans-Atlantic flight on the 11th June. The Handley-Page in also expected to start this week.

MORE FLYING PRIZES FOR AVIATORS.

San Francisco.—A Californian cinematograph magnate has offered a prize of ten thousand pounds for a flight from California to Australia, and another prize of seven thousand for a flight to Hawaii. In the event of no aviator reaching Hawaii by a given date, one thousand pounds will be paid to the aviator making the best show. Reuter.

MILITARY TOURNAMENT RECORD.

In a most admirable respect the Royal Naval, Military and Air Force Tournament which is due to open on the 26th is creating a record, bookings being made at the average rate of two thousand pounds daily. All profit goes to Service funds for those stricken in the war. Quantities of materials are constantly arriving from France. Entries for the skill at arms competitions embrace men from nearly all the armies of occupation abroad as well as from home commands. Special provision will be made for wounded men to see the tournament and it is hoped that facilities for some of the wounded soldiers of our Allies to be present will be provided.

AMERICAN DEMOCRATS RUSH FOR THE PRINCE.

A telegram from New York states that H.R.H. the Prince of Wales will probably visit the United States at the conclusion of his tour in Canada.

It is reported that in New York the possibility of the visit is causing the greatest interest. There is much flustering among the social leaders as concerning who will entertain him. Mrs. Ogden Goelet, mother of the Duchess of Roxburghe, has already invited the Prince to be her guest at her Newport home, Ockre Court, which is one of the most magnificant summer villas in America.—Reuter.

THE CINEMA IN EDUCATION.

There are in these days many signs that the claims of education have captured the imagination of England. New schemes and new ideals have been advanced, and the prospect is fair. Even in the occupied area of Germany the schoolmaster has come into his kingdom. Old-time conventions command decreasing respect, and every worthy agency is welcomed as a handmaiden of learning.

It is recognized that "half our knowledge we must snatch, not take," and accordingly men of prevision are pressing the Cinema into academic service. Till a few years ago moving pictures provided only relaxation from the stern tasks of life. Then in a vague fashion it was seen that in them recreation might be united to instruction, and attempts were made to give a didactic aspect to cinematograph entertainments. The last stage has been a serious and wise effort to provide education by swift-passing pictures, and the pleasure of the pursuit of knowledge has been placed second to the efficiency of the quest.

Undoubtedly the Cinema provides manifold opportunities for the educational reformer. During the years of war films have been produced which have made easier the work of army instructors in explaining to their pupils the intricate technicalities of gunnery and bombing, and it is inevitable that the cinematograph will soon become a recognized means of education. Already there are innumerable films which can be used for instruction in subjects of scientific, historical, literary, and religious interest. All that is needed is that these films shall be used in accordance with proper principles of teaching and shall not be shown in any uncorrelated, hap-hazard manner.

The Cinema does not represent the philosophy of the second-best; it need not be the despairing attempt of a teacher who has to cajole the attention and imagination of his scholars. It can furnish unrivalled help to experimental science, for the camera judiciously used at varied intervals of hours, days, or weeks can produce films which make plain in one continuous picture the successive evolutionary stages of ornithological or plant life—to take but two of many possible examples. No more need the troubled teacher break up into unsatisfactory serial parts his scientific story.

Any student of geography and history knows how barren of interest and imagination are the usual methods of instruction in his department. We can learn, for example, that Constantinople was captured in 1453, that it has a Church of S. Sophia, a population of one million, and an unwholesome canine collection; but with the help of well-chosen pictures we can have a real and living knowledge of the great city where meet the East and West. And worthy education is a matter of real and living knowledge. Is it not true, then, that the Cinema can help, that it can even provide "apples of gold in pictures of silver?"

In Cologne we have many cinemas and much education. May we suggest that in some places these should be united in a scientific manner? Much has already been done in the British Army of the Rhine to further healthy recreation and the advancement of learning — it is because so much has been done that we can confidently look for more. It may be that even in academic circles it will be said of our Lady Cinema: "to love her was a liberal education."

TRIUMPH OF YOUTH.

There have been several classic triumvirates in history — famous bands of three who have fought or ruled or written. There is something in the very word which prepares us for long tradition and heroic exploit. Even in the realm of sport there has been a triumvirate, for have not Vardon, Braid, and Taylor captured and held the imagination of all who love the royal and ancient game of golf?

War put a stop to the many efforts that were made to break the tradition of success so long and honourably held by these three masters, and it is only within the last few days that a beginning has been made in serious trials of golfing strength. Yet already, in the first tournament, each of the triumvirate has failed to prevent the victory of a younger rival, and some of the glory has departed from the trio. The coterie of masters must be enlarged, the triumvirate must admit at least one other to its ranks. The Atos, Aramis, and Porthos of golf have been joined by the dashing d'Artagnan.

George Duncan may yet be beaten many times by the older players, but their invincibility is no more. It is impossible to avoid the reflection that the years of war have told their tale—they are the years that the locust has eaten. There is many an athlete who could well have kept on playing cricket or football or tennis for many a day with marked ability who feels now that he will never regain the lost ardour and the verve necessary for supremacy. And there must be many who during almost five years of tragedy have had few opportunities for serious sport and now feel less able and willing to command success. The pluckiest fail in defiance of Time.

GREATNESS—BY CALMNESS.

Writing in "Die Zukunft" recently, Maximilian Harden first puts the question — To sign or not to sign? and then implores his countrymen to look at the matter calmly, judicially without prejudice or hysteria. "Let us leave shrieking and gesticulating to children," says he.

A nation which, in the same breath, beseeches assistance and vilifies the potential helper, is acting in a manner as silly as the man who would borrow money, and approaches the lender thus: "As I cannot go on further you must, you greatest scoundrel on earth, you greediest beast of the virgin forest, you must lend me 1000 Marks." Harden adds "Who dares to disgrace beautiful, immortal Germany by such meanness.?" In the succeeding pages Harden discusses the efforts made by the press to bring to life again the spirit of August 1914. He shows the futility of those who built their hopes on the protest of the labour party (as distinct from the powerful Trades Unions) and the French socialists against the Peace conditions.

Then Harden, speaking for himself says, "I ask every one of you and all together. The Independent Socialists and a few social Democrats of the Left would have protested, as did Bebel against the annexation of Alsace-Lorraine in 1871, but the remainder of Germany would have uttered a concerted shout of joy."

THE QUESTION OF TONGUES.
VI
WILLIAM R. PATTERSON F.R.G.S., etc.

When a young man commences to learn a profession or to serve an apprenticeship, his studies should include at least one modern foreign language. He himself will know best which one would be most suited to his requirements. He must ask himself—What is my employer engaged in; whence comes the raw material? The latter should give him a clue to the language which would prove of the greatest advantage to him. If his employer deals with South American merchants, he should acquire a sound knowledge of either Spanish or Portuguese—the latter for Brazil.

French is extremely useful in trading in wines, silks, laces, etc.; Italian for purposes of art. I do not profess to know all the material and manufactured goods that continually pass from one country to another, so that I cannot say decisively what tongue would be necessary in each individual case, but I know that there exists some language which would prove of great worth to members of most trades and professions. For general purposes one ought, I think, to possess a good knowledge of the language of the French, since they are our nearest neighbours and much trade in many branches will be done with France in the future—much more than many of us realize.

There is wealth to be made by the industrious trader, but let him learn languages for purposes of negotiation. It pleases the foreign trader when one can converse with him in his own idiom; he becomes ever so much more willing to do business, and affairs can thus be arranged in a much briefer space of time than if one were obliged to acquire the services of an interpreter. This is a most important point.

There is also the question of foreign correspondence. Let us not employ foreigners in our offices. Let us enhance our own worth by doing what the foreigner undertook in pre-war days! It will be better for us; it will be better for our country.

Then, there is the question of Russian. Far-seeing people understand clearly that Russia will not always remain in such a state of chaos as at present. They are learning the Russian tongue. In a few years' time, when order will have been restored, out trade with that vast land will develop enormously if we so desire, and provided that we are able to compete with the foreigner—the German above all. Remember that Germany borders on Russia and that the majority of German trade representatives know the Russian language well. But the Briton can compete successfully with anyone—if he will!

We desire their oils, minerals, woods, furs and a hundred other of their products. Certainly a good knowledge of Russian will prove invaluable in future years, not only for the needs of commercial correspondence but also to those British subjects—pioneers of industry—who will venture forth in order to discover possibilities of trade and enterprise. By a close scrutiny of the map of Europe and by comparing Russia with other European countries, you will at once realise how spacious it is. There is wonderful wealth in and upon its soil. Let us therefore endeavour to secure concessions—before any other competitor. And I would say to those who realise the quantity of latent wealth in this Slavonic land—learn Russian!

"C'EST LA GUERRE."
A TRAGEDY IN TWO ACTS BY O.O.

Act I, Scene 1.—A gaily beflagged road along which a celebrity is due to pass. Soldiers line the route. A few show signs of suppressed excitement, looking about with keen expectancy. The rest smoke silently; indifferent, abstracted like British workmen having a pipe after lunch. In the distance the noise of gunfire.

Officer (rushing on at hearing discharge of guns and trying to look enthusiastic): "When the celebrity's car comes level, cheer like hell."

Act I. Scene 2.—(The car is seen approaching. The great man is recognized.)

Soldiers (waving their caps, cheer like hell.): "Hurrah! Hurrah! Hurrah!" (A soldier's cap badge is seen to fly out and drop into a culvert. Consternation on face of unfortunate.)

Act II, Scene 1.—(Interior of Q.M.S., sits at a little desk, a genuine choleric specimen. Time: next day.)

Soldier (entering timidly and shamefacedly, like a returning truant dog): "Please Quarter have you got another cap-badge? I lost mine—."

Q.M.S. "! ! ? — ? — ! ! !"

(Swears like hell.)

CURTAIN.

HARMONIUM RECITAL.
PAUL MANIA AT THE HOTEL DISCH.

An enthusiastic and grateful audience gathered on Tuesday evening to listen to Paul Mania's wonderful playing on the "Schiedmeyer Master Harmoniums Dominator." This magnificent instrument compared to the far more powerful concert organ, has not only the advantage of a finer colouring, but it gives the artist, especially one of Mania's disposition, heretofore unknown possibilities to bring out light and shade within one register. On the big organ however the tone remains immovable and a 'crescendo' can only be obtained by adding more registers, which of course has the result, that the individual "timbre" of the register chosen first has to give way to a more general character of tone.

It was simply wonderful to watch how Mania mastered this instrument, from the softest pianissimo to the grandioso fortissimo, so that one could imagine sometimes, that a whole orchestra was playing. This was mostly shown in Liszt's "Lorelei." The Praeludium by Bird was played with full registers and the introduction to the 3rd act of Kunihild was the most characteristic with regard to the use of the registers.

"Abendstille" by Rich. Strauss was very modern and "Schwanengesang" by Schartel was most effective in its tone-colouring. An "Etude d' Orchestre" by Paul Mania showed all the possible orchestral effects this instrument can produce, but the climax of Mania's incomparable technic was shown in the "Jagdnovelette" by S. Karg-Elert, which raised a storm of applause. The most beautiful floral gifts rewarded the favourite Cologne artist for his masterly performance.

The performance of J.S. Bach's cantata No. 56, by Julius Gless, of the Cologne Opera, was very well rendered. The sweetness and power of his voice was noticed in the cantata and even more so in the Arie from Serse by Händel, which is mostly known under the name "Largo." Rheinberger's "Ave Maria" also scored a great succes.

THE PEARL CHASE.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.— In your to-day's issue there are a few paragraphs relating to my Concert Party, the "Robin Hoods."

I should like to point out that in the last paragraph mention is made of my producing a revue called "The Pearl Chase." The writer of this paragraph is apparently under a misapprehension. He was merely informed in his interview that we were reproducing the "Pearl Chase," which is the original performance of the "Robin Hoods," staged and produced by Pte. Leonnard of the Cyclist Battalion prior to my taking over the Concert Party.

Any credit due for the success of the original "Pearl Chase" revue or the reproduction of the same revue, should go to Pte. Leonnard and his able supporters. CAPTAIN PAYNE.

MORE LONG DAYS.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—With reference to R.E.R.'s letter in yesterday's issue of The Cologne Post, may I make a plea for another branch of the Armies of Occupation.

I refer to the Field Artillery. Reveille in our units is at 06 00 hours and parades last from that time until 17 00 hours with an hour each for breakfast and dinner. This would appear to be a full day's work, but it does not fill our day, for at 19 30 hours we have to water and feed 130 odd horses, which takes up the best part of an hour. Half holidays make no difference, for the animals have to be fed and someone has to feed them.

We should indeed count ourselves fortunate if we were free at 16.00 hours and R.E.R. would do well to take a leaf from the Artillerymen's book. We don't crib. P.

CYCLING FOR PLEASURE.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.— As many of the members of the Army of Occupation are keen exponents of the above mentioned art I think it would be beneficial to the aforesaid if you could bring to the notice of readers of your valuable paper the advisability of starting a Cycling Club.

Cycles could no doubt be procured from England if the proper authority were approached on the matter. A. CYCLIST.

CANTEEN PRICES.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir, — I was reading a few weeks back an article in The Cologne Post by a writer who protested against the high prices charged by German shop-people. On Saturday June 7th, I attended the races, and at the canteen on the grounds was charged 4½ marks for one packet of biscuits and 1 packet of chocolate. Chocolate of the same make is 1½ marks at Bornheim and biscuits 1 mark. "FAIR DEALINGS."

FIFTY-SECOND COMPANY OF CROSSBOWMEN.

THE PARABLE OF THE HIDDEN TREASURE

(The following relates to a very successful "Hunt for Hidden Treasure," organised recently by the Officer Commanding 52nd Battn. the Rifle Brigade.

The event was keenly entered into by the Battalion, and in addition to an excellent morning's outing, proved most interesting and instructive.

The winner was Rifleman Crofts, of "B" Company, who profited by the intelligent manner in which he had read the "Scripture" to the extent of the goodly treasure concealed within the chest in the cleft of a tree.)

And they turned their left shoulders to the grinders and went forward along a way where few men passed by, and the Ruler spake saying "Take heed to my words, these be my commandments:

1.—Thou shalt not suffer thy pockets to be full to overflowing when thou goest forth to guard the city.

2.—Thou shalt not suffer thy hair to grow long even as them of the Ayesse.

3.—Thou shalt not go sick on the day appointed for route marches.

4.—Thou shalt not lounge with thy hands in thy pockets.

5.—Thou shalt not look upon the Hunesses for they be fair, albeit they be venomous even as the sting of an asp.

6.—Thou shalt not use thy sling as a razor strop.

7.—Thou shalt not shirk games, lest thy strength fail thee.

8.—Thou shalt not walk over the enemy crops.

9.—Remember the top button of thy overcoat — it is but a small one.

10.—Strive ever to be the cleanest man on guard.

11.—Strive ever to write to thy parents each week that passeth.

12.—Thou shalt get a move on when thou are commanded.

13.—When thou espiest an officer thou shalt salute with thy hand and not come to attention only.

These are my commandments and he that faileth to keep them shall surely perform many jankers.

And they came to a place where the path divided to the left hand and to the right hand, and they spurned that which went to the left, and so proceeded, and the path was like to the eel which lived in the waters, for it twisted hither and thither. And they came to even another pillar of divers colours which divided the land of the tribes of the Walleons from the armies of the Britons, and they passed it by and continued straight on till they came to the bottom of a small valley where they turned their faces towards the synagogue of Gustorf. And the Ruler spake again saying "Knowest thou the manner of the discharging of the crossbow?" and the Kleenman made answer "of a verity." And the Governor commanded "Unsling." And he unslung, and the Governor spake, "Draw back the knob of thy bolt, yea so slowly as may be compared with him that ariseth from his bed at Rouse" and the Governor spake again "What hearest thou?" and he answered and said "mine ears have heard three clicks", and the Governor spake "what mean these sounds"? and the Kleenman was sorrowful, for he had not heeded the councils of the captain of the Crossbowmen when he spake the traditions which had been written aforetimes in para. XXXV M.R. by one R.H.Brade, a chief of the War scribes of the King. And they passed by the side of a little hill where was a grove of poplar trees and on the left side within close bow shot was the habitation of a rich husbandman (withal a fair place), and they turned their backs upon it and journeyed on.

BELGIAN ARMY RACE MEETING POSTPONED.

WOMEN MOTOR DRIVER'S "TURN."

NOVEL DISPLAY AT ROYAL NAVAL, MILITARY AND AIR FORCE TOURNAMENT.

The women who have done so much to produce peace and victory will have a part allotted to them in the Tournament at Olympia. Representatives of all the well-known corps and formations will be included, embracing the Q.M.A.A.C., W.R.A.F., W.R.N.S., Women's Legion, and others. A special "turn" will be given by expert women motor drivers, who will drive their cars between posts very much after the fashion of the artillery driving displays. In competition they will dismantle wheels and refit at express speed, thus showing what many of them had to do in France when shell fragments or bad roads broke the wheels or other parts.

The Womens' Corps will also give a Physical Drill Display throughout the run, each of the three Corps belonging to the three Services taking it in turn. These items will be novel and are of course the first appearance of ladies in the arena for team work. Apart from the arena, women of these excellent corps will be at work helping the administration of the Tournament.

The Dress Rehearsal is fixed for 25th June, and will be given before wounded men of the three Services, some of whom took part in the displays in 1914, and to school children. The opening performance for the public is fixed for the afternoon of 26th June. The Box Office has opened at 66, Victoria Street, and the telephone is 4,348 Victoria. A large number of seats have already been booked and Royal dates fixed, and the Tournament is evidently to be one of the popular social events of the season.

FOOTBALL.

IN A SWELTERING HEAT.

51st MAINTAIN RECORD AGAINST 5th GORDONS.

In a sweltering heat, teams from the 51st and the 5th Gordons engaged in a football encounter on aturday night at Düren. The play in the early stages favoured the 5th and some exciting incidents took place in front of the 51st goal, Gray having to dispose of difficult shots. The sting of the 5th Gordons attack lay in the left wing, where Lieut. Henderson showed remarkable cleverness, but the support he received was poor.

In the keenness of the struggle both sets of forwards had mighty tussles with the opposing backs. Not until with in a few minutes of the interval did one of the latter give way, Mallis scoring a good goal, after the 51st had applied an earnest pressure on the 5th's goal. Half time 51st, 1; 5th nil.

The opening play in the second period favoured the 5th's, but their forwards displayed a poor ability to shoot. The 51st only got into their proper stride when Mallis, assumed his regular position at outside right. By sheer speed and force he broke through Middleton's defence and scored the 51st's second goal. Outstanding for the 51st were Mallis, McGuire, Russell, Kidd and Gray, and for the 5th, Wilson, Middleton, Mitchell, Lieut. Henderson and Moir. Result:—51st Gordons 2; 5th Gordons 0.

KALK FOOTBALL.

4,000 Spectators Watch 57th S.B., R.G.A. v 23rd Royal Fusiliers.

On the 93rd Brigade ground on Saturday. Play proved fast and exciting from the start. Clissold was a tower of strength for 57. Play ruled up to half time slightly in favour of the Fusiliers, but ineffective forward play marred their scoring chance. Half time no scores.

The crowd had now risen to quite 4,000. The play was excellent, in fact it was quite the best final seen out here this season. Once the R.A goal had a marvellous escape, the Fusiliers forward having three attempts at goal blocked. Walton got away on the left and forced a corner. This was splendidly placed right on to Jones' head and he made no mistake. The Infantry played harder than ever and Beaver handled close on the goal mouth, and Marables scored from the penalty kick. With eight minutes to go it looked odds on a draw. But it was not to be. Another goal was scored. The Gunners managed to keep their goal intact until the finish and proved winners by 2 to 1, a splendid performance for a unit 200 strong, seeing they were meeting battalions in the competition.

/12th LOYAL NORTH LANCS. v. A. COY 53rd MANCHESTERS.

On Friday another exciting game took place at Menden when the Detachment of the 1/12th Loyal North Lancs played A Coy of the 53rd Manchesters. At half time the score was 2—0 for A. Coy.

A Coy again scored at the start of the second half, then the unexpected happened. The North Lancs by sheer perseverance scored 4 goals and the whistle blew with the score 4—3.

RICHMOND HORSE SHOW.

A RECORD MEETING ASSURED.

Preparations for the great Peace and Victory Horse Show at Richmond on July 4 and 5 are rapidly progressing. This will be no ordinary Royal Horse Show, but a great reunion of sportsmen and Society. Already an army of workmen is preparing the ground for the crowd of Royal and other visitors. The great range of stables is being erected, stands are being overhauled, the Royal and other boxes redecorated. Among outstanding events, the class for troop horses that have seen military service, and for which the King's Cup is the first prize, looks like filling to capacity. In connection with this class, the Dumb Friends' League is to award the equine order of merit in the ring to every horse qualified for the decoration. The driving Marathon for pairs is another event creating widespread interest among owners of harness horses. The costers' Marathon is being well supported. A fine show of hunters and hacks is coming along, while the officers' jumping class is rapidly filling up.

"VICTORY" GOLF TOURNAMENT.

An excellent entry has been received for the Professional "Victory" Tournament promoted by the St. Anne's Old Links Club, which will be played on June 20 and 21. Play each day will be devoted to stroke play, the competition being over 72 holes. Harry Vardon, is drawn to play with Rowland Jones, A. Herd with J. Paxton, A. Massey with George Duncan, James Braid with Abe Mitchell, Edward Ray with A.G. Kirby, J. H. Taylor with C. Johns, and Jack White with Tom Williamson. Play will be begun at 9 a.m. The first pair will be J. A. Steer and A. Kidd, and the last couple, F. Ball and P. E. Taylor, who will begin their first round at 1.5 p.m.

SPORTING ITEMS IN BRIEF.

Athletes' Memorial.

A memorial service for England's athletes who fell in the war is being arranged.

The "First Claim."

A man cannot run in team races for his works' team, if he is "first claim" to a Harriers club, until he has been a member of the works' team fourteen months, or vice versa.

Turf History.

Grand Parade's Derby triumph is largely due to his trainer's personal veterinary skill. For some days before the race the horse's heels were giving trouble, and they had to be poulticed and treated.

"All Alone."

All Alone does not run for the Manchester Cup on Friday. He is in reserve for the Vase at Ascot, in which, however, he must encounter the Duke of Portlands' Silonyx, who is reported to be doing well on a special preparation, and will be hard for the best to beat.

Polytechnic Marathon.

The King has consented to start the Polytechnic Marathon race of 26 miles from the Home Park, Windsor Castle, in connection with the great sports meeting at Stamford Bridge on June 21, organised by the Eccentric Club, the Polytechnic Sports Club, and the London A.A.

Polo Pony Show.

If some of the exhibits were not quite of the pre-war class, the annual show of polo ponies which was revived at the Hurlingham Club on Saturday, after a lapse of four seasons, was on the whole very succesful.

Frank Goddard.

Frank Goddard is some 25 years of age, 6ft 3½ in. tall, round about 14 stone in weight, with a jaw that has been hammered and yet not hurt, a mighty fist, a tremendous reach, and a frame of mahogany.

Tournament at Olympia.

Booking for the Tournament at Olympia, which opens on June 26th, is creating records. About £15,000 worth of seats have been sold since the booking began last week, being at the rate of £2,000 a day.

Rugby v. Liverpool.

Rugby played a two-days' match against Liverpool, and the club batting first on a perfect wicket declared after making 539 for seven. R. A. Lloyd scored 245, an innings, considering its length, remarkably free from fault.

Week-end Yachting.

No fewer than twenty-three boats took part in the Westcliff Yacht Club's all-in handicap at Southend on Saturday. The leaders made an excellent race of it, a little over a minute covering the five placed boats.

On Wednesday last the sports of the above named battalion were held on the playing fields at Meckenheim. Most of the items were keenly contested, the winners of the open tug-of-war especially having a very stiff fight. Lieut. Baldwin of the 52nd Welsh Regt. did a very good performance in winning the open 100 and 220 yards races. The Divisional Orchestra came and discoursed sweet music during the afternoon, and it was greatly appreciated. Brigadier-General T. O. TRIBUTE TO THE 1/4th CHESHIRES.

Shaking hands with the winners in the boxing tournament at Bornheim on Saturday when handing them their prizes, Lieut.-Col. Betts heartily congratulated them on the show they had put up. Speaking on the manifold benefits that are to be derived from participation in this particular line of sport, Lieut.-Col. Betts announced that arrangements are being made to hold a boxing tournament for the whole of the Rhine Army in which each battalion, battery or company would be represented by a team. Continuing, he praised the 1/4th Cheshires as a sporting battalion. The 1/4th alone took six of the ten honours of the tournament.

A SPORTING WHISPER.

It is whispered — but tell it not in Gath — that under the training of R.S.M. Martin, the tug-of-war team of the 1/4th Battalion Cheshire Regiment, is becoming hot stuff, and likely to prove equal, if not superior, to any other tug-of-war team in the Rhine Army.

Great things are expected of it at the Battalion Sports which take place shortly.

LIGHT BRIGADE COMPETITION.

2nd M.G. v. 9th LONDONS (Q.V.R.'s).

The above match was played on the ground of the former on Thursday and resulted in a draw. The 9th Londons batted first and knocked up 99, Rfn. Warner being responsible for a beautiful 47 not out. On going in, the 2nd M.G. Battery had made 79 for 8 wickets when stumps were drawn, Lieut. McMahon carrying his bat for 19, C.Q.M.S. Mitchell scoring 12 and Cpl. Evans 10.

Competition Match Results:

Runs		Runs
483 Field Coy. R.E.	67;	Bde. H.Q. T.T.M.	68;
Bde. H.Q. T.T.M.	72;	9th London	64.

In the last mentioned match Spr. Craddock was the star performer, topping the score with 44. His bowling and fielding were also exceptionally good.

BOXING TOURNAMENT

A boxing tournament is being held at the National Sporting Club on July 4 next in aid of the National Federation of Discharged and Demobilized Sailors and Soldiers. The Prince of Wales has promised to attend and distribute the prizes. Mr. Eugene Corri has consented to referee, Lord Lonsdale has been requested to act as M.C., and the Rev. Everard Digby has been asked to act as timekeeper. The programme will consist of three international contests, two amateur contests open to federation members only, and one open amateur contest (10st 7lb), also some exhibition bouts by the present champions, including Sergeant Johnny Basham and others.

A PROFESSIONAL LAWN-TENNIS TOURNEY.

It is intended to hold a tournament upon handicap terms for lawn tennis professionals at Queen's Club, West Kensington. The dates suggested are June 30, July 1 and 2. The following members of the staff will take part: C. Hierons, C. Read, Read Jun., F. Andre, Cockhill, Jones, and J. Nash, the old Bristol City and Queen's Park footballer, who is showing great aptitude at lawn tennis.

GOVERNMENT HOUSING SCHEME.

SOLDIER'S VIEWS EXPRESSED IN DEBATE.

As a result of the Government's recent appeal for the support and sympathy of the Rhine Army in connection with the proposed schemes to deal with the Housing Problems, a famous Corps School in Cologne arranged a debate on the subject.

Holofernes, speaking as one who had suffered much at the hands of various local authorities, had no difficulty in bringing forward an enormous mass of evidence to support his contention that any scheme depending for its execution on the self-interested, petty-fogging busybodies of such institutions was foredoomed to complete failure. He then detailed methods of procuring the necessary materials, labour and finances.

FOR OR AGAINST?

He received the vociferous applause of the House with a smile of contented indulgence, and settled himself confidently in his seat to await the coming attack.

This was led by Professor Wesley. His eloquence and the convincing logic of his contentions, were so fascinating that it was some time before his audience could realise how completely he was betraying his cause, and not only going over to the side of his opponent, but actually rendering the most valuable assistance in criticizing and exposing every weakness of the Government's scheme.

The Holofernian party immediately launched another attack upon the character and capabilities of all Boards and Councils—nay, rather a violent tirade against all existing forms of Government, and all established traditions of order and authority. But this was merely the introduction to a very practical and well defined constructive policy, containing a complete solution of all difficulties of the Housing Problem. Among other drastic measures were advocated the confiscation of all private property, the using of conscripted labour, and the financing of the whole scheme by imposing a larger indemnity upon the Central Powers.

ECONOMICS AND FINANCE.

Professor Wesley then suggested that a certain measure of dishonesty should be allowed to the members of all committees; and he maintained that only a very sentimental idealist could expect a higher morality than that which was to be found among English politicians at the present time.

He produced further the results of a few simple original researches in economics and finance (these by the way might well be published for the information of some of our popular orators) which showed some of the difficulties of "making Germany pay", both for the cost of the war and also for all the improvements which might have been made had there been no war.

The debate being now declared open, it soon became evident that neither unanswerable statistics, rhetorical power, nor passionate enthusiasm had any effect compared with the exertion of a little personal influence and a certain amount of judicious canvassing.

In fact it was evident that the House had been packed by the supporters of Professor Wesley.

Everything had gone to show that the motion before the House even in its amended form could not but be accepted almost unanimously.

GOVERNMENT ENCOURAGED.

But now from all sides came gentle suggestions that something might be said on behalf of the Government's proposals. An optimist ventured to hope that even the local authorities, "if at first they don't succeed, might try, try again", and perhaps eventually achieve some slight success.

After an admirable summing up of the case on both sides by the leaders of the debate, the chairman read out the original motion, adding thereto various suggested amendments, and a vote was taken.

The resolution, expressing dissatisfaction with the housing proposals of the present Government, was lost by two votes.

This after all was a very satisfactory conclusion, and should encourage the Government to put its housing proposals into execution without further delay.

THE SILVERY RHINE.

BRITISH EMPIRE LEAVE CLUB STEAMER TRIP.

For several days previously, eager groups of men surged round the booking desk at the British Empire Leave Club, anxious to secure tickets for one of the popular Rhine excursions. Unfortunately the morning proved dull and cold, but their ardour could not be damped and 156 men answered to the roll call at the appointed hour of 8.40 a.m.

Rations having been distributed a start was made, and by 9.25 a.m. all were on board the special tram which was to take us to Bonn, where our steamer awaited us. The walk from Bonn Station to the river side was in itself of interest to many of us, as this was our first visit to this famous town, but there was not time to linger, and by 11 a.m. the whole party had embarked.

The Band of the East Surreys, which was kindly lent by Colonel Cameron, greatly added to the enjoyment of the trip. The fine scenery was much enjoyed by the men, some of whom were on leave from France and therefore especially anxious to see the famous river.

SANDWICHES AND LEMONADE.

Luncheon hour was called and the substantial sandwich lunch which the Club provides for men staying there, together with a plentiful supply of lemonade, was heartily enjoyed by everyone. After lunch, the town of Remagen having been reached, we disembarked and a very pleasant half hour was spent in this charming little village. From Remagen to Linz we passed through wonderful scenery, and it was with general regret that we had to turn at this point if Cologne were to be reached by six o' clock.

On the return journey hot tea was served and much appreciated, and the welcome sun made his appearance.

After the Bridge at Bonn was passed the Band struck up delightful dance music and soon everyone was dancing. Then a game of musical chairs was organised, causing much merriment, the band finding it a strenuous accomplishment to laugh and play at the same time!

The party arrived back at the Club at 6 o'clock, every one voting the outing a great success.

These trips take place every 5th day, and are open to all men serving with the British Forces, whether on leave or not; booking closes the day before.

CINEMA NOTES.

Despite the extreme heat and the counter-attraction of the countryside and the open-air, the cinemas are still attracting big houses. The Army Cinema receipts show no appreciable difference from the preceding weeks. The Empire Leave Club Cinema draws equally good audiences daily, while the Y.M.C.A. Cinema has lost none of its old attractiveness. All of which speaks well for the cinema as a popular form of amusement.

* * *

"The Ware Case" which is showing at No. 1 Army Theatre is attracting quite a lot of attention. The leading parts are played by Matheson Lang and Violet Hopson. It would be unwise to divulge the plot, but it is admitted quite one of the best films we have had here for some time.

* * *

Although the popularity of "The Voice on the Wire" film serial is undisputed, we have received quite a number of letters questioning the advisability of running serials at the cinemas here. It does not, contend our correspondents, give the newcomers a chance of enjoying the programme if the serial is drawing to a close. There is much to be said about this, but at the same time the general opinion is that serial pictures are as essential to a cinema as continued stories are to a magazine. Judging by the keeness of the audiences we should imagine the continuance of the serial feature quite satisfactory to the majority.

THE "ORANGE LILIES."

At the Y.M.C.A., Siegburg, on Tuesday, before a large and appreciative audience, the concert party of the 4th Bn. R. Sussex Regt. (by kind permission of Colonel Glasgow, D.S.O.), gave their first performance from the Battalion.

On the musical side, with its pretty concerted items and well-rendered songs, the performance was extremely pleasing, but despite the strenuous efforts of Pte. Hart—who quite excelled himself—it lacks somewhat in the humorous element.

As usual, the Irish songs of Pte. Redmond received great applause, and Pte. Hinkley received his well—answered encore. Mr. Chister in his "Sailor" songs and dance, and his duet with Nellie the fascinating "girl," provided very popular turns; while an extremely amusing sketch well acted by Ptes. Redmond, Hart and Evans, concluded a very creditable performance upon which the whole party deserved much congratulation.

"THE FRAGMENTS" AT HILGEN.

On Thursday last the 51st Devons, at Hilgen were entertained by the "Fragments Concert Party." The performance, which lasted two hours, was of the highest quality. All the numbers rendered were amusing and original and were very much appreciated by the large audience present.

Hearty thanks were accorded the "Fragments" for their musical treat, and they are assured of a sincere welcome from the 51st Devons whenever they visit them again.

"THE TELL TALES."

The recently formed "Tell Tales" Concert Party of the 130 Heavy Battery R.G.A. gave a capital programme on Friday evening at Roitzheim. Lt. Tidcombe, known as Tidely, made a great score with his character songs. Bdr. Roberts as Tabby also did exceedingly well; Bdr. Cunningham as Tommy, caused much amusement with his songs; Bdr. Brinson as Toby, made a capital pianist and entertainer, Sig. Shaw, as Trixie the female impersonate, had a tremendous reception with "her" fine renderings; while much praise is due to Cpl. Orrill, an artist of considerable ability who gained sounds of applause, with his songs patter and monologues, Gunner Pruce as Tony, Baritone and Violinist sang and played in fine style.

BRITISH EMPIRE LEAVE CLUB.

The practice dance was well attended on Monday at the British Empire leave club, in spite of the great heat. A demonstration was given of a Valse invented by Cpl. Heater and dedicated to Miss Decima Moore, called the Decimore, which won instantaneos success and will be repeated at the club dances. There were many spectators who enjoyed the exhibitions, especially the Canadian three step danced by Sergeant Major Felgate and Bombardier Taylor.

"THE LIGHT FANTASTIC."

LONDON D.A.C.'s ENJOYABLE DANCE AT WESTHOVEN.

"There was a sound of revelry by night," not at Belgium's fair Capital, but at Westhoven near Cologne, when on Friday evening the officers of the London D.A.C. held a dance by permission of Lt.-Col. J.P.D. Wheatley, the Commanding Officer.

Miss Decima Moore kindly consented to act as hostess, and played her rôle in a most efficient manner. The guests included ladies from the British Empire Leave Club, and most of the other women's organizations stationed in Cologne, as well as officers of the Royal Navy, and many arms of the junior service.

Elaborate arrangements were made to transport the guests from Cologne, who arrived by special tramcar, motor cars, and tenders to find the front of the house prettily decorated with a large number of flags lent by the Navy.

Dancing took place from 8 p.m. to 12.30 a.m., an excellent programme of music being provided by the Divisional Orchestra under the direction of Lt. Knight.

REFRESHMENT DIFFICULTIES OVERCOME.

During the supper interval many of the guests sat about in the balcony and grounds at the back of the house which were illuminated with Chinese lanterns, the whole scene being of quite a fairylike nature. Mention of the supper interval naturally turns one's thoughts to the question of the provision made for the inner man. Everyone knows the difficulties of special catering in Cologne, but these were succesfully overcome. The effort of Lt. Palmer-Lee the Column Mess Secretary, were as well appreciated as they were deserved.

The whole affair was a big success and now that the London D.A.C. has shown what can be done in this direction many other units will doubtless be encouraged to follow their example.

The unit has several other schemes in hand for the enjoyment of both officers and other ranks.

WHERE WOMEN DO NOT SHINE.

Expressing his wiens on the unsuitability of women for driving in the congested London traffic, a police officer who is stationed at the busiest spot in London said: "We should be glad to see women back on their old jobs, for in pre-war days there were very few women drivers, and from a policeman's point of view they do not shine in that capacity.

"Our records show that women are reckless drivers and occasions a lot of confusion by disregarding our hand-signals. Women seem to have little 'sense' of the road.

"It is notorious that when they are summoned for breaches of the regulations they are let off with much lighter penalties than are inflicted on men.

"It would greatly help us if the many women now driving motor-cars and other vehicles would take up some other occupation."

SOLDIERS' APPEAL TO KING.

The disabled ex-soldiers who are on strike in Leeds to secure better rates of pay during training have sent the following telegram to the King:

"Your Majesty,—In 1914 and onwards we answered the call for King and Country. To-day we ask your gracious help to secure a living allowance for those who have been maimed in their King and Country's service."

The following reply was received:

"The King has received your message, and by his command I am referring the appeal it contains to the responsible authorities of his Majesty's Government.—(Signed) Stamfordham."

FIRE AT PEER'S MANSION.

A disastrous fire occurred on Sunday evening at Hainton Hall, Lincs, the residence of Lord Heneage, one wing of the building being partially destroyed. The hall is situated in the heart of the rural district of North Lincs, and by the time the fire brigade from Grimsby and Lincoln arrived the building was in flames.

SHOT BY A SENTRY.

Mr. Matthew Murphy, a young commercial traveller, belonging to Dundalk, died in that town on Saturday night as the result of a wound in the thigh inflicted by a military sentry who shot at him on Wednesday night, when he failed to answer the sentry's challenge. Mr. Murphy had been out on business, and was driving home in a motor-car, when he was wounded while passing New Inn, about two miles from Dundalk. The driver of the motor-car states that he did not hear the order to halt.

WHERE ARE THE BABIES?

"May I again ask, 'What has become of the babies?' There has not been a baptism in Christ Church now for more than a year," says the Rev. G. E. Wigram, vicar of Lea, Matlock (population 1,320), in the parish magazine.

CANADIAN CARS FOR SALE.

Following on the recent sales of British Army lorries, motor-cars and cycles, the Canadian authorities in England are advertizing big sales in the same classes of Canadian Army equipment. The first of these sales will take place on Wednesday and Thursday next.

S. E. RAILWAY SHOPS GUTTED.

The South Eastern Railway repairing sheds, shops and stores at Tonbridge, situated on the down side of the line, were completely destroyed by fire on Saturday night. The station was saved.

TENTH DIVISION MASCOT.

Owing to the rabies order the mascot of the Tenth Division was unable to land at Dover on Sunday with troops from the East. Going out with the Tenth Division, the dog went through all the fighting in Egypt. He also went through the Serbian retreat in which his master was killed, and although wounded, he was found keeping watch over the grave.

AN ELGAR EVENING.

CONCERT-LECTURE AT LORELEY HALL.

An admirable recital of Elgar's works, preceded by a short sketch of the famous English composer's life and works was given at Loreley Hall on Monday evening last.

In his opening address Mr. A. F. Jones remarked the especial interest attached to the fact that Sir Edward Elgar was President of the Music Library and Corner. He commented upon the truth of he saying that since Purcell, no composer had risen to such heights of musical experience as Elgar, although we must acknowledge our indebtedness to Stanford and Parry. After giving a brief biography of the composer, Mr. Jones introduced Sgt. A.E. Jago, a pianist, who opened the recital with "Pomp and Circumstance.".

Sergt. Jago's execution and technique were good, although perhaps he did not avail himself in the dramatic parts of the march of more zest and physical power. But undoubtedly this reticence will disappear with experience, and it would, moreover, be unfair at this stage to criticise an artist of such promising ability as Sergt. Jago.

In his rendering of two songs from "Fringes of the Fleet,' Mr. Howe did extremely well. The two pieces being admirably suited to his voice and style.

THE VIOLIN SONATA.

For the interpretation of this work Mr. Jones is to be congratulated upon securing the services of Gunner Alfred Barker, who is undoubtedly a genius. His emminence as a violinist is indisputable. His technique and reading were perfect to the last degree; there was individuality and tone about his rendering. It was his individually in fact that endeared us to the consummate brilliance of the composition.

Mr. Jones at the piano rendered "Dream Children," Elgar's charming setting to Lamb's immortal essay, with much gracefulness; Pte. Brichell sang the "Damask Rose" in a very pleasing manner; and Sergt. Jago gave us the delightful "Variations" (Enigma), while Mr. Jones' rather good bass voice was heard to much advantage in "The Sweepers."

"Salut d'Amour," which Barker played as a violin solo had to be repeated before the audience was satisfied.

Dr. Francis in proposing a vote of thanks to Mr. Jones and the artistes, made an appeal to all vocalists in the Rhino Army to join the Choral Society under Mr. Jones, which meets every Tuesday evening in the music room. Thus ended an enjoyable evening.

THE PEDLAR'S RE-APPEARANCE.

SUCCESSFUL OPENING SHOW AT BONN.

On Monday evening, at the Stadt Theatre, Bonn, the "Pedlars" Concert Party (Lancashire Division) re-opened after several weeks non-appearance. The party has been practically re-organised and several new faces were seen, together with a few old favourites. A bright and breezy opening chorus put the large audience in a good humour at once. Bobby Macauley is a good light comedian and a neat dancer. Macauley and Joyce in their boy and girl dancing act were a decided hit. Bert Woring as a comedian is excellent, his drolleries and mannerisms causing roars of laughter and applause. Jack Walker is a fine baritone with a pleasing voice. Herbert Short, the tenor, has a rich quality in his voice which is very rare. In the duet "Down the Vale" the two voices blended gloriously. Norman Kiddie's number was very well received. Harold Roberts sang a very good character number "You can't do that with a woman," and his make-up was really excellent. George Haigh is a very gifted performer on the piano and took a well-deserved encore. Dolly Cole, the "leading lady," captivated the hearts of all "her" admirers and received a great ovation. A comedy sketch entitled "The Burglar and the Girl," featuring Frank Hartley, a most versatile performer, and Dolly Cole, wound up a most enjoyable and well produced entertainment. There is a change of programme on Sunday next.

MUSICAL MOMENTS AT MEINDORF

CONCERT FEVER MANIFESTS ITSELF WITH PLEASING RESULTS.

Although on detachment some few kilometres away from their gay Battalion, the Officers, N.C.O's. and men of "D" Company, 53rd Manchester Regt., are not allowing the grass to grow under their feet.

A few days ago the concert fever manifested itself and although more than half the Company have been detached in various directions, out of the remaining few much talent was discovered.

Under the energetic direction of 2/Lieut. Tucker an excellent concert took place in the dining hall on Wednesday evening, when everything went with a swing from start to finish. The fact of the costumes not arriving in time did not appear to dim the ardour of either audience or performers. Signaller Backhouse proved a most efficient accompanist and the commandeered piano proved to be of the very best. All the concerted items were excellently rendered and showed evidence of careful training. Perhaps the best of these was "Day after Day" in which 2nd Lt. Tucker, Sergt. Reed, and Ptes. Moran and Taylor took part.

Sergt. Reed excelled himself with the well-known songs "When the Great Red Dawn is Shining" and "Friend O' Mine." 2nd Lieut. Tucker was perhaps at his best in "It's Better Late than Never with the Girls."

Corpl. Kershaw, who is new to publicity, nevertheless nobly overcame his initial nervousness and sang his songs with great fervour.

The rather played-out Orderly Room scene was made the best of and Pte. Moran made a most efficient Sergt-Major.

Pte. Cooper and Moran gained well-deserved applause for their rendering of "Down Honolulu Way."

The writer ventures to prophesy that in a few weeks this concert party will be one of the best in the Division.

AMERICAN OPPOSITION.

Washington.— The Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate is investigating the circumstances attending the leakage and unauthorised publication of the complete text of the peace treaty. Leading New York bankers are suspected in this connection. Several others have been subpoenaed and ordered to produce their correspondence with their London and Paris houses. Senator Borah produced in the Senate a copy which it was stated had been brought to the United States by a Chicago journalist.

The Senate by 47 to 24 votes ordered its publication despite President Wilson's earlier cabled disapprobation. Anwering the charge that his copy of the treaty was not authentic Senator Borah started reading the treaty. The Democrats attempted to stop him on a point of order, but the Senate, by 42 votes to 24, voted him permission to continue. Senator Borah read for one hour, at the end of which the opponents to publication capitulated and permitted a vote being taken on a motion to reconsider publication. This was defeated, however, by 41 votes to 26.—Reuter.

Washington.— The Republican leader of the Senate, Senator Knox, has introduced a resolution declaring it impossible for the Senate to concur in the provisions of the League of Nations as drafted and asking for the Covenant to be separated from the actual Peace treaty before it is submitted to the Senate for ratification. The resolution also proposes that the Peace treaty be varied in order to permit any nation to reserve the question of the League of Nations for further consideration. It is understood that the resolution, which will be referred to the Foreign Relations Committee, is intended as an official notice to the Peace Conference that the Senate will oppose American ratification of the Peace Treaty.—Reuter.

At the instance of Senator Lodge, Messrs. Morgan, Schiff and other financiers have been summoned to attend before the Foreign Committee on the 11th June to explain their receipt of copies of the Peace treaty.

Meanwhile all congressmen and newspapers have been supplied with copies.—Reuter.

POISON GAS AND EXPLOSIVE BULLETS.

GERMANS IN ESTHONIA.

Copenhagen. 10th June.—The Esthonian Press bureau records the most violent fighting South of Wendend, where the Germans are using explosive bullets and poison gas, and are diligently destroying bridges, roads and the railway. The Russian Northern corps East of Pskoff has cleared out the Bolshevists from a number of villages, capturing one thousand prisoners and a large quantity of arms.—Reuter.

WOUNDED FROM ARCHANGEL.

A hospital ship arrived at Leith yesterday with 650 sick and wounded from the White Sea. They were mostly walking cases, including numerous frostbites. The vessel has been at Archangel since October and while it was ice-bound during the winter it was used as a hospital.

ENTIRE POLICE FORCE DISMISSED.

Winnipeg. 10th June.—The entire police force has been discharged owing to the policemen refusing to sign a pledge not to participate in sympathetic strikes. The police commission announces that all policemen willing to sign the pledge may apply for positions. A number of ex-soldiers have already applied for engagement as policemen. The general strike in sympathy with the metal workers may be considered as broken, one-third of the sympathisers involved having returned to work.—Reuter.

GREAT TELEPHONE STRIKE.

Cleveland, Ohio. 10th June.—A nation-wide strike of telephone workers has been ordered to begin on the 16th June. A sympathetic strike of commercial telegraph operators is due to begin on the 11th. The telephone workers' demands are similar to those of the telegraph staff, namely, recognition of the principle of collective bargaining and abandonment of discrimination as regards discharged union men.—Reuter.

NAVAL STATION COMMANDS.

The Secretary of the Admiralty announces the following appointments:

Vice-Admiral Sir Alexander L. Duff, K.C.B., to be Commander-in-Chief, China, to date July 24.

Rear-Admiral Sir Hugh H. D. Tothill, K.C.M.G., C.B., to be Commander-in-Chief, East Indies, to date Aug. 1.

Captain Sir Alfred E. M. Chatfield, K.C.M.G., C.B., C.V.O., to be Fourth Sea Lord, to date June 17.

DENIKIN AND KOLTCHAK JOIN FORCES.

BRITISH TANKS AND PLANES.

Reuter learns that Denikin's Army, assisted by British tanks and aeroplanes, has advanced during the past few days a distance of fifty miles in order to link up with Koltchak's left. It is considered that the necessity for the Bolshevists to reinforce other fronts will soon lessen the pressure against Koltchak.

HUNGARIAN ONSLAUGHT NOT SERIOUS.

The offensive against the Czecho Slovaks was only undertaken with five thousand Hungarian regulars. General Pelle, however, has enough troops to meet the emergency, which the French military authorities do not regard seriously.—Reuter.

TURKISH MISSION TO PARIS.

Constantinople, 6th June.—The Turkish mission to Paris sailed to-day. Included in the party are the Grand Vizier, Damadferid Pasha; the Grand Vizier, Tewfik Pasha; President of the Counzil, Rizatewfik; Minister of Finance, Twefik Bay, and the Minister to Switzerland, Reshidhaliss. They are accompanied by military advisers and secretaries.—Reuter.

CANADIAN "KNOCK-OUT" STRIKE.

Winnipeg, 9th June.—Although the Board of Trade announced yesterday that hundreds of men and women would return to work to-day, the Union leaders still assert that the strikers are standing firm. The Citizens Committee has announced that the sympathetic strike phase of the situation will be fought to a "knockout."—Reuter.

SERIOUS AUSTRALIAN STRIKES.

Melbourne, 9th June.—The strike situation has now become most serious. The number of unemployed is increasing daily and additional thousands were thrown out of work on Saturday. It is not unlikely that application will be made for the de-registration of the Seamen's Union, but the president of the Union declares that the seamen will continue to flout the Federal Arbitration Court. Mr. Justice Higgins, President of the Commonwealth Board of Conciliation and Arbitration, attributes the main cause of the present trouble to "the teachings of overseas theorists."—Reuter.

JUGO-SLAVS AND ITALIANS.

Belgrade, 6th June.— It is officially announced that, according to information received from Spalato, the Italians have crossed "the demarcation line" and have occupied the villages of Blimfo, Mitlo, and Vonofao, in the direction of Trau. The statement goes on to dispute the assertions of the Italian newspapers that Zara and Sebenico have opted for Italy. The administrative district of Sebenico, it declares, has 57,000 inhabitants, of whom only 980 are Italians, and that of Zara 83,000, of whom, at the outside, 12,000 are Italians, and these populations have already expressed their wish to be included in the kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes by a plébiscite, the result of which has already been communicated to the Peace Conference.—Reuter.

AMERICAN GOLD FOR EXPORT.

On the recommendation of the Federal Reserve Board, President Wilson has removed the embargo on the importation and exportation of gold between America and all countries except Bolshevik Russia and enemy countries.—Reuter.

UNIONS EXPELLED FROM FEDERATION.

The American Federation of Labour Union has revoked the charters of the Winnipeg and Edmonton Unions of the Brotherhood of railroadmen on the ground of their action in appropriating Union money to organise "one big Union," the movement which led to the strikes in Western Canada, as it was a contravention of the Union Laws.—Reuter.

PRISONERS KILLED IN RAILWAY COLLISION.

Calais, Sunday, — A train conveying German prisoners from Dunkirk which had stopped at St. Pierre Halt was run into from behind by two British engines travelling at full speed. Ten coaches were completely wrecked. Three German prisoners and two British soldiers were killed and twenty-five German prisoners seriously injured. Reuter.

POLICE COMMISSIONER'S DOMESTIC CHAT.

LONDON FORCE SATISFIED.

The conference between the Chief Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police, General McCready, and the members of the police force, at the Queen's Hall yesterday was strictly private. None but policemen in uniform and others bearing authorised passes were admitted. The Press, even, were excluded.

The meeting was in the nature of a purely domestic matter between the Commissioner and the members of the force.

Sir Nevil McCready spoke for nearly an hour and made a great impression. He is understood to have foreshadowed many reforms of an administrative character and assured the men that no spirit of militarism prevailed at Headquarters. He emphasised the impossibility of agreeing to any sort of union that undermined the discipline of the force.

After the meeting the police seemed very well satisfied and the general impression is that they will remain loyal to their Chief.

A member of the Police Union said that in view of what had taken place recently the declaration by the Government that eventually no member of the force would be allowed to belong to a union of the character of the present Police Union came as a great relief to many policemen, including those who were members of the union. The next date on which subscriptions fell due would have a tale to unfold, as this date would disclose accurately the feeling of the men towards the union. Not one-third of the subscriptions would be forthcoming, he declared, and the effect of this would be disastrous both in a moral and an actual way upon the union.

SEQUEL TO TAR AND FEATHER SENSATION.

ASSAILANT UNDER OPEN ARREST.

There was an unexpected sequel to the Cambridge tarring and feathering case yesterday. Lieut. Francis Wright, the injured husband, has been stopping during the week-end in the country. The Cambridge A.P.M. wired to the local police to arrest him, but they disclaimed authority. The A.P.M. thereupon sent an officer escort with whom Lieut. Wright agreed to travel to Cambridge. Lieut. Wright said he was unaware what the charge was going to be and did not consider himself as being under arrest. Nevertheless he said he would welcome a Court Martial.

Later it was ascertained that Lieut. Wright is under open arrest at Cambridge by order of the Eastern Command.

OXFORD ACCEPTS GOVERNMENT GRANTS.

The Vice-Chancellor of Oxford University has been authorised by Convocation to apply for the Government grant or grants on behalf of the University and to accept the same on the conditions as stated in the letter of the President of the Board of Education dated 16th April. This letter stipulates that the University shall co-operate with the Government in an enquiry into the whole resources of the University and the uses to which they are being applied.

HOLIDAY HAPPENINGS.

Several fatalities occurred during the Whitsun holidays. Two men and one woman were drowned in the Thames at Barnes through the capsizing of a single sculler outrigged gig caused by the wash of a passing steamer.

At Newport (Mon) two persons were drowned while bathing and a child was killed by a motor car.

A young woman died at Ilford as the result of a gnat bite on the nose.

Only one person came into conflict with the police at Hampstead on Bank Holiday, although the crowd on the Heath exceeded three-quarters of a million.

MARRIAGE WITH DECEASED HUSBAND'S BROTHER.

At Northampton yesterday two cases were heard in which women were indicted for making false declarations for the purpose of marriage. In each case the woman went through a form of marriage with a brother of her deceased husband, who had been killed in the war.

ANOTHER UNWRITTEN LAW PLEA.

At Chertsey, James Ryan, a recently demobilized soldier, living at Weybridge, was charged with the attempted murder of a New Zealand soldier named Algernon Worger, by stabbing him with a knife. It was stated that prisoner, when arrested, said:

"How is the man? He stole my wife from four babies. He knows where she is. I don't."

Worger was too ill to attend the court, and Ryan was remanded in custody. He informed the Bench that his wife had now been found, and said she had sold up the home while he was away. The police undertook to look into matters.

OBJECTION TO WOODEN CROSS ON SOLDIER'S GRAVE.

The Council of Sandy, a Bedfordshire village, has protested against the erection over a soldier's grave in the local cemetery of the wooden cross as supplied by the Graves Commission. The objectors urge that such a cross is an inadequate expression of public sentiment and out of character with other memorials.

PRINCE OF WALES AND HIS TENANTS.

LABOUR SUGGESTIONS.

The Prince of Wales is personally making sure that there shall be no delay in the carrying out of improvements on his Duchy of Cornwall estate in South London. Schemes are being thought out, and the work will be shortly started of building on the south side of Courtney-square, and Sancroft-street.

Mr. G. W. Heron, of the Lambeth Labour Party, has handed to the Prince of Wales the following as being the minimum requirements of a family for 10s 3d a week rent:

1. Bath-room, fitted with bath and water taps.
2. Parlour or sitting-room, fitted with register stove, with tiled hearth; minimum floor space 12ft by 12ft 6in.
3. Scullery fitted with larder, cupboard with four shelves; size 7ft by 3ft 6in by 8in; water tap and sink, size 2ft by 18in.
4. Provision for gas stove.
5. Bed-room, fitted with wardrobe cupboard (size 7ft by 3ft 6in by 18in), with shelf and hooks inside, register stove; minimum floor space 12ft by 12ft 6in.
6. Kitchen, fitted with larder cupboard with four shelves (size 7ft by 3ft 6in by 18in); dresser, with two cupboards underneath, with shelves inside (size of dresser 7ft by 5ft by 18in); kitchener, closed range, minimum floor space 12ft by 12ft 6in.
7. Small bed-room, fitted with clothes cupboard and small register stove; minimum floor space 12ft by 8ft.
8. Minimum width of passage way and entrance 36in.
9. Minimum floor space for sitting-room, bedroom, and kitchen 12ft by 12ft 6in.
10. Provision for drying and airing clothes.
11. Provision for electric light or gas in every room and passage.
12. Maximum rent, including rates and taxes, 10s 3d a week.
13. Accommodation for the storage of not less than one ton of coal.
14. A sound portable sanitary dustbin to be provided for each household.
15. A side or back entrance; shed for the storage of perambulator or bicycle.

Other suggestions are that there should be gardens for the children, and communal washhouses. All these proposals are being carefully considered.

R. A. F. DECORATIONS FOR CREW OF N. C. 4.

On behalf of the King, Major-General Seely on Monday, at the headquarters of the Royal Air Force, invested Commander Read and the officers of the American seaplane N. C. 4 with the Air Force Cross, and Chief Mechanic Rhodes with the Air Force Medal. General Seely said he had been specially charged by the King to perform that ceremony and to inform them that his Majesty was extremely proud of the fact that they had accomplished the flight. There were only two other recipients of the Air Force Cross—Mr. Hawker and Commander Grieve. The Cross was a new decoration, and at the moment none had been struck, so that all he had to do was to pin the ribbon of the decoration on the tunics of the airmen. As soon as the crosses were struck they would be sent to the officers in America.

In investing Chief Mechanic Rhodes, General Seely said: "The King has asked me especially to congratulate you upon the work which you have done. It was largely due to your work that the expedition was a success." After the ceremony the officers were introduced to General Trenchard, General Smythe Osborn, and General Swinton.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

Rear-Admiral Sir Edward F. Inglefield, K.B.E., Provincial Grand Master of Buckinghamshire, presided at the hundred and twenty-first anniversary festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, at the Connaught Rooms, last night. At present 776 boys are receiving the benefits of the institution, an increase of 456 in the last sixteen years. There are 400 boys in the Bushay schools, 363 out-educated until 10 years old, when they are admitted to Bushey without re-election, thirteen ex-pupils receiving grants for advancement. There have been admitted 813 without a poll within the last nine years, with immediate benefits of the institution, and 181 boys whose fathers have been killed on active service have been received without election, and an unlimited number will follow. The annual expenditure of the institution is £43,500 and the assured income is about £12,500, the balance being made up by voluntary contributions.

TEN SQUARE MILES ABLAZE IN YORKSHIRE.

In consequence of the drought the most serious moorland fires since many years are raging in North Yorkshire between Aysgarth and Masham.

Great crowds throng the hillsides watching the magnificent spectacle. The outbreak started four days ago and already ten square miles of moorland have been devastated. The worst feature hitherto has been the destruction of the herbage and the roasting of sheep and game.

ROUNDING UP SHIPS' MASCOTS.

Lieut. D. Kerr, of the paddle-mine-sweeper Cheltenham, who was fined £1 at Dover for allowing a dog to be on the quays unmuzzled and for not having a licence, disclaimed ownership of the dog, which he stated was the ship's mascot. He acknowledged being in command of the vessel. The chief constable said a representative of the Board of Agriculture had been on a special visit to Dover concerning the necessity for muzzling and licensing mascots kept in ships and in barracks.

NEGROES ANXIOUS TO LEAVE LIVERPOOL.

SIX INCENDIARY FIRES.

There were fresh developments of the bitter racial feeling at Liverpool yesterday. A deputation of coloured men sought to obtain shipping facilities to enable them to repatriate themselves. An official of the Ministry of Shipping stated that recently two hundred berths were offered, but only forty coloured men indicated their willingness to return. There are now two thousand unemployed West Indian and African negroes at Liverpool.

The fire brigade was called out six times during the day to extinguish incendiary fires. Black people are abandoning their homes and furniture and are seeking refuge in the police station. Three hundred have been housed in the main Bridewell.—Reuter.

VICKERS VIMY READY FOR ATLANTIC FLIGHT.

St. John's, 9th June.— The Vickers Vimy machine ascended for its trial flight at 8.17 p.m. Greenwich mean time. It descended after a spin of about forty minutes. The take off and return were most successful, and the plane cruised over the city and the surrounding country and flew about twenty miles out to sea. The airmen report that everything was working satisfactorily, especially the wireless equipment. The machine will now await suitable weather for the Atlantic flight.—Reuter.

KING AND QUEEN VISIT LEICESTER.

"OUR VICTORY IN PEACE."

On the occasion of the visit of the King and Queen to Leicester yesterday practically the whole of the population turned out and gave them a most enthusiastic welcome.

Replying to an address from the Corporation the King said: "By the blessing of God and the united heroic efforts of its people our country is safe and its cause victorious. Our task for the future must be to build upon the foundation of the past a new order for our common life. The difficulties before us are many, but the work is worthy of all the energies of our great nation. Only by unselfish co-operation of all classes can we win victory in peace as we had won victory in war."

The guard of honour was composed of a hundred local demobilized soldiers who were entitled to wear the Mons Star.

SOLDIERS' FEDERATION DECLARES FOR POLITICS.

The National Federation of Discharged and Demobilized Sailors and Soldiers, at their annual conference at Manchester, yesterday, defeated by an overwhelming majority a resolution declaring that: "seeing that we have definitely proclaimed ourselves a political body, we consider the question of allying ourselves to a real and live democratic body be now considered." The conference, also by an overwhelming majority, decided not to admit conscientious objectors to membership, and it was agreed to form a women's section for women who have served in the war.

COLOGNE POSTAL PLANE CRASHES IN BELGIUM.

TWO OFFICERS KILLED.

Brussels.— The Nation Belge states that a British aeroplane, engaged in the postal service between Cologne and Folkestone, and carrying Lieutenant Bannerman (pilot) and Lieutenant Wilson (observer), crashed at Floreffe, near Namur, on Sunday. The newspaper adds that both aviators were killed.

The Soir gives the following version of the accident: The machine crashed down yesterday at Soye, near Floreffe. It first made a spiral dive, and then turned completely over. The pilot, who was not fastened into his machine, was hurled to the ground 250 yards from the observer, who lay crushed beneath the engine. There were no mails on board.—Reuter.

VISCOUNT FRENCH AND SCOUTS.

After spending the week-end with the Archbishop of Armagh, the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland left yesterday for Castle Saunderson, county Cavan. Before his departure Viscount French addressed the Royal School Cadet Corps, Royal Irish Fusiliers, and the Boy Scouts. He said he believed that the splendid bravery, tenacity, and courage and the glorious behaviour of the soldiers in the ranks had been due to influences which had been at work during the last few years. No influence, in his opinion, had been greater than that exercised by the Boy Scouts' organisation. Let them remember that the good work which had been done must be kept up and passed on to those who came after them.

DERBYSHIRE OIL OVERFLOWS.

On Sunday evening the oil in the well at Hardstoft reached the top, and continued to overflow at the rate of about 400 gallons a day. This is from a depth of 3,075ft, and without any further boring since the first discovery was made last Tuesday week, when about 6in of oil sands were penetrated. Valve gates have been placed over the well, and other arrangements made to enable the drilling to be continued a little deeper.

In proportion to its size Clifton holds the public school record for the number of generals it has produced. Both Field Marshal Haig and General Birdwood are Old Cliftonians.

CHARLES KINGSLEY.

To-day our thoughts turn back to the versatile Victorian, Charles Kingsley. One hundred years have passed since he was born and the complexion of England has changed time and again during the century, but the land which he loved so intensely has not yet forgotten him. We are certain that from pulpit, press, and platform centenary tributes will be paid.

If we ask why it is proper that the daily newspaper of the British Army of the Rhine should notice the life-work of Charles Kingsley we are not without a plausible answer. He stood for qualities of mind and soul that are typical of Englishmen. All that he gave to the Church, to letters, to social reform had the marks of honesty, manliness, and chivalry. In a word, he kept alive a tradition and he passed it on embellished with renewed lustre and glowing appeal.

The first twenty years of the nineteenth century were momentous in the literary history of England. The preceding age had added to literature the novel and the essay, but it was conventional if Augustan. Even in days when our country was drawn into the throes of warfare there was a campaign against conventionality, and the spirit of Romance was re-born. Men of letters emerged "out of the library and into the fields and woods." In poetry Wordsworth, Shelley, and Keats took the lead in the new movement; in fiction Sir Walter Scott drew the readers of Waverley—published in the year before Waterloo—to the romance of our national story, and Jane Austen heralded the advent of woman's craftmanship in her delicate delineation of society and her high tones of moral and literary expression; whilst in periodical literature the Edinburgh Review, the Quarterly Review, Blackwood's Magazine, and the London Magazine were founded but a few years after the Morning Post and the Times newspapers.

During these two decades of war and romanticism England produced a galaxy of literary men — Tennyson and the Brownings; Thackeray Dickens, Lytton, and George Eliot; Macaulay, Ruskin, and Kingsley. England, while she struggled with Napoleon, was caring for her sons. There was not one of these who did not in later days leave his country richer in tradition and worthier of its fame.

Charles Kingsley, therefore, did not stand alone, he was but one of a renowned circle. As a poet, a novelist, a teacher, or a reformer he was surpassed by his fellows. His genius was not brilliant, and one cannot wisely place him in the first rank of craftsmen. It is true that in Westward Ho! and Hypatia there are scenes depicted as vividly as a Scott could have written them, and some of his ballads have a charm that will always prevent neglect, but his restless versatility urged him into diverse realms and in none of these did he attain pre-eminence.

Charles Kingsley was too great an Englishman to be the greatest Englishman of his day. He felt as few did the call of social service, and his real life-work was that of reformation. Before he was twenty years old his interest in his fellows was quickened. The People's Charter of 1838 met with little approval, though almost all of its "Six Points" have now been granted, but the story of the labourers' misery which led to unavailing Chartism bore fruit in the unselfish and chivalrous devotion of men like Kingsley—a devotion which meant that the pulpit and the press were unsparingly used by Frederick Maurice, Charles Kingsley, and many a disciple on behalf of the poor and the oppressed. Yeast and even Alton Locke may not be great novels, but they were expressions of a great man's passionate hatred of evil conditions of life.

Charles Kingsley's picture of the typical Englishman portrays a young man of notable physique, direct manners, kindly spirit, and indomitable courage. One looks in vain for traits of the pietist and one has to look narrowly for traits of the ordinary Churchman, but one is always rewarded in a search for plain-dealing and chivalry. England has been happy that in her sore need she has found many of the Kingsley type in her young manhood. They have not been sentimentalists nor have they been wordy champions of national ideals, but they have played their parts and won their battle. Yes, Charles Kingsley has shaped a great tradition, uttered a high ideal, and inspired a true bravery of body and soul. We gladly pay our homage.

FIFTY-SECOND COMPANY OF CROSSBOWMEN.

THE PARABLE OF THE HIDDEN TREASURE

(The following relates to a very successful "Hunt for Hidden Treasure," organised recently by the Officer Commanding 52nd Battn. the Rifle Brigade.

The event was keenly entered into by the Battalion, and in addition to an excellent morning's outing, proved most interesting and instructive.

The winner was Rifleman Crofts, of "B" Company, who profited by the intelligent manner in which he had read the "Scripture" to the extent of the goodly treasure concealed within the chest in the cleft of a tree.)

And they passed over unto a small valley wherein was a road leading to the synagogue aforesaid and the Ruler turned his face thitherwards and they journeyed until they came to the city where were the Gauls clad in a raiment of blue and withal a lusty people and strong. And the Governor turned his face and went towards a city where dwelt many strange folk, the Acac and Oemmag, even the Donaoionoquesses and the Donecree and the Aedonemmaesses, and verily the Donacdonoesses acacac. And they passed by the unlevel crossing of the rails of iron and drew nigh to a small clover field, and the Governor said, "I will even discover the manner of these iron rails for mine eyes are consumed of curiosity concerning them" and lo! a mighty sound, as of the trampling of many horsemen, and a strange caravan came nigh drawn by a leviathan from whose nostrils sprang smoke, and whose voice was like unto the noise of the slaughter of swine which the ungodly do kill for meat, and the Governor spake saying "Of a surety this be Bhemoth, up, let us get hence ere we be rent in twain." And they passed on apace marvelling greatly. And on their left hand was a row of tall poplars.

Now it chanced that they came to a place where was a quagmire wherein they sank to the uppers of their sandals, but not more, so they passed over with dry feet — more or less — being shod with G.S. sandals, and on their left was a thicket, and on their right was a tree and a tree and another tree in rows and in rows, and they presently came to the place where a man ploughed with a yoke of oxen, and there was a brook of water where some might leap across and some even fall in.

Now hard by was a fair highway where walked men and damsels (who tied their hair, and with their eyes they spake "look upon us for we be comely withal." And the Governor thought within his heart of the words of the book which read "Vanity of Vanity, all is vanity saith the preacher".

ERZBERGER WRITES TO FRIENDS.

BUT HIS EPISTLE GOES ASTRAY.

At the end of April last, Herr Erzberger sat down and wrote a letter to his friends. Since he had no idea he was writing for the French newspapers, he allowed his thoughts to run out freely and that makes his letter very interesting. If he continues to write in the same style he will have a chance of becoming a regular correspondent, only he must not write at such length because we are forced from lack of space to curtail even this most edifying epistle.

Herr Erzberger begins by evincing pleasure at the improvement in the position of affairs for Germany since the armistice. He finds that the Entente is not so united or so strong as it was in November 1918, and Wilsonian principles uniting with revolutionary Socialism tend to moderate the terms which are going to be offered to Germany. He proceeds,

All this works in the Armies of the Entente and has great influence. We learn from good and reliable sources that pacifist propaganda will be pushed in every possible way in Entente countries, especially among demobilised soldiers. It is done quite openly. Newspapers spread the ideas in question, pamphlets are printed, speeches made, and at meetings the tendency of the French War Cabinet will be fought. The simple return of Alsace-Lorraine to France will be criticized and a plébiscite set forth as the best solution of this problem. To-day, if the war should be resumed, anti-militarism would play quite a different rôle in Entente countries and Armies than it did before the armistice; this is certain. It may also be affirmed that the Entente is essentially weakened in fighting strength. We have, it is true, a powerful enemy force against us theoretically, but advocates have arisen for us in the heart of this overpowering force.

A FORTUNATE TURN.

There is no doubt that very hard and probably unacceptable peace terms will be given us We will not discuss here what the German people will do if the conditions are too severe. We will rather take the politics of the day, and make a standard by which to measure the worth and possibilities of various possible policies in regard to the future. For a war which has not been won, one must pay and suffer. With what and how? These are the main questions for us. A fortunate turn has come for us. Positive demands for territory have grown less, whereas damage done is taking a more prominent place. Alsace-Lorraine and a part of the province of Posen must be put down as lost, but Germany will not die in consequence. The other frontiers which were in danger are in a different position from that in which they were six months ago. Then the French dreamed of the annexation of the left bank of the Rhine, the Poles already looked upon West Prussia, the Masurian districts in Prussia, and the entire Government of Oppeln as part of their future kingdom. There were Germans, and unfortunately not a few, who considered this a possibility.

But all these horrible pictures have passed into the background. The French look wistfully at the Rhine and recall the old dream of the Western Empire of Charlemagne, but realize it is a dream. Yet there is a danger — a danger that the Entente may want a sure and quick reckoning and seize land by way of judgment instead of waiting for a payment which may never be enforced.

A FEW POSSIBILITIES.

We dare not openly make a difference between the territorial and economic claims of our enemies, or the spirit of the Entente might be influenced against us. Therefore we must consider the economic conditions with the Entente, at the time of signing, as not finally settled. If we to-day have before us an Entente which is so greatly weakened in comparison with last autumn, what will it be in a few years, or in ten years? Will the Entente then be anything more than a historical memory?

But the present war is only an episode in the struggle between the Anglo Saxons and the Germans, which is another Punic war and in which after many bouts the Continental power will once again vanquish the power from overseas. And taking the long view this war has not been all to the disadvantage of the Germans. The blood-letting of France, the bulwark of the Anglo Saxon powers in Europe, has been so complete that she has ceased to be dangerous. The one really dangerous factor is the possibility of the creation of a strong Poland. But against this, Germany has provided by stirring up the animosity of the Czech, Ukrainians and Lithuanians against the Poles. The results of this policy are already seen in the refusal of these countries to join with Poland. "But we must not forget that these young and promising plants must be well cared for and supported if they are to be further developed. Our propaganda must not stop for a single instant." On this last he insists again and again. "Publications of all kinds in various languages in regard to the Lithuanian and Ukrainian questions will through us be spread through neutral and enemy countries." And once more: "The main thing is propaganda for years to come. The signing of peace, which may be formally done, does not of course mean an end to our political aims."

THE QUESTION OF POLAND.

The letter draws to a fitting close with one of these aspirations towards the brotherhood of men and the League of Nations which are not uttered in the market-place:

If we succeed in hindering the building up of a strong Poland, then the future is quite clear for us. Then the Anglo-Saxons cannot close the road to Russia to us. We will undertake the restoration of Russia, and in possession of such support we will be ready, within ten or fifteen years, to bring France, without any difficulty, into our power. The march towards Paris will be easier then than in 1914. The last step but one towards the world dominion will then be reached. The Continent is ours. Afterwards will follow the last stage, the closing struggle, between the Continent and the "Overseas."

Herr Erzberger is a member of the Christliche Volkspartei. He has had a distinguished career. He was in 1897, delegate to the International conference of workmen. As Staatssekretär he went with a deputation to an interview with Marshal Foch and Admiral Wemyss on the 9th November in the Forest of Compiègne. He is now a minister in the German government. He has written a book upon the League of Nations which should be interesting reading, when read in the light of his letter. A still more interesting question is how large a section of German opinion does this sort of men represent, and when and how those Germans whom we know to be sincere in their desires to make a new spirit in Germany are to cut loose from this old gang and dissipate the miasma of falsehood and mis-representation with which they breathe daily.

"MULES AND THEIR WAYS."

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—Apropos of the article in your paper dated 7th inst. under above heading, I have carefully read this article and cannot believe that the R.F.A. drivers referred to could be so ignorant of mules as to dub them as "turbulent pests;" certainly no man who has seen any appreciable amount of active warfare with them could question their great utility, and the magnificent part they have played in this war.

The idea that a mule is bad to handle is all nonsense. The natural shyness and suspicious mind of the mule yields to decent treatment in or out of the stable, and, properly handled, he will go anywhere or do anything.

I have always maintained that the mule is one of the most serviceable and satisfactory animals used in the war. Heavy mules for heavy artillery purposes in Eastern war theatres, light draught for transport purposes or pack mules. Hats off to our American cousins in Missouri, Kansas, Texas, Tennessee and elsewhere for the splendid supply month by month during the war.

The mule is practically immune from many of the diseases inherent in the horse — notably shipping fever. He has, generally speaking, sounder legs. He can certainly stand more hardship, eats less, and is less particular about his water. He thrives on work, and the machinery of his constitution does not run down so rapidly or so often as that of the average horse. He just wants to be understood and treated accordingly.

So of the animal with more eccentricities of character and unendeniable virtues than any other creature on God's earth, I still remain a lover after 23 years experience in handling the "Gallant Mule."

"CONFRÈRE."

AN E.F.C. SUGGESTION.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.—Every day an enormous queue of men wait patiently and orderly outside the E.F.C.

One wonders if there is not something radically wrong with a system that systematically wastes the troops' and the army's time in this way. Certainly it could hardly be allowed to continue were the canteen a private enterprise, and what is bad business for a shop is also necessarily bad business for a canteen.

The solution of the difficulty I think is here. Ninety per cent at least of these waiting men only wish to purchase cigarettes and chocolate. All the same, if one requires a tooth brush, or a tin of fruit, or to enquire if there is any smokable tobacco one must line up and wait just the same. Meanwhile, the toothbrush and tobacco attendants are standing idle waiting for customers to squeeze in.

Why not three, or at least two entrances? There would only be a queue at one — the cigarette door — and the tobacco and sundry men could be served right away.

I go without many things I should like to buy at the E.F.C. because I cannot afford the time to wait in the cigarette queue.

How many more do the same? No doubt on this account, many spend their money in German shops instead of investing it in what we understand is our own benevolent fund.

R.H.

SOLDIERS' WIVES IN RHINELAND.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—In one of your early issues there appeared a letter from an officer suggesting that British officers' wives should be permitted to join their husbands in Germany.

Until peace is actually signed, it would hardly appear desirable for wives to join their husbands on the Rhine, but as the signing of peace is now imminent, may I venture to suggest that this question should receive serious consideration.

If we are to be here for fifteen years the ordinary period of leave is not adequate for married people (officers or other ranks) to spend together. Why should we not have a British colony established out here? It would do a world of good in many ways.

Married people would be more contented, single men would be encouraged to marry, and the presence of British women here would have a refining influence on the Army in general.

Finally, we don't wish to see British soldiers marrying German women. This is perhaps what will happen if our men are not allowed to have the company of our women.

"INTERESTED."

CONCERNING CHEVRONS.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir, — I wonder if the "Young Guard" who wrote about a "chevron" for the "Young Guards" of the Rhine, has any thought for the "Old Guards" who had to fight, and fight hard, to win one little red chevron in the year 1914. If he still thinks they ought to have one I think your paper would soon be full of nothing else but correspondence from men of every unit of the Rhine Army on the same subject. H.C.P.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—In reply to the suggestion of "Young Guard" for a special coloured chevron to be given to men of the Army of Occupation, I beg to appeal for this to be granted to the original Army of Occupation. These men had to endure the hardships of the march from France to Germany, while those who are coming up now get brought by train. A considerable number of the original Army have been demobilized, but there are still many of us left. Surely you will agree that we deserve a chevron.

"ONE WHO MARCHED IT."

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—Re the letter of your correspondent, "Young Guard" in to-day's issue of your valuable paper, suggesting a special chevron, why stop at that? Why not some special coloured plumes for the hat? Further, a special medal might be added, with, of course, some bright coloured ribbon. Why not a new chevron for each month's service in the "Army of Occupation"? Almost any colour could be used (excepting blue and red), though, of course, the brightest hues should be given preference!

AN OLD "DIEHARD."

BOTANICAL REQUISITES.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir, — Might I learn through your columns, or by any other means, whether or no there is a good shop in Cologne for the purchase of botanical and entomological requisites? Being a keen collector myself, and having little time at my disposal when in Cologne, I have been unable to find one so far. W.C.L.S.

THE WAYWARD MULE.

C. COY., 52nd Bn. "THE KING'S" (LIVERPOOL) REGT. SPORTS.

Whether at home or in the Field, Tommy is always able to provide his own amusements. This was amply demonstrated by the very successful sports meeting held by "C" Company, 52nd. Bn. "The Kings" (Liverpool) Regt., on Saturday, at Romlinghoven, Obercassel, under the patronage of Lieut.-Col. C.E.R.G. Alban, D.S.O. A good and varied programme was presented.

A competition which caused much hilarity was the officers' mule race, won by Lieut. Baskett, our respected Sports Officer. Although Lieut. Davenport tried hard he evidently hadn't whispered the correct words of wisdom in the mule's ear as in the first lap he found himself admiring the heavens from a sitting position on Mother Earth.

The 220 yards flat race, which proved to be the tit-bit of the day was won by Sgt. Wood after a hard-run race, Capt. Foss, M.C., being a good second. The high jump was won by Pte. Lightfoot of 9 Platoon, the height being 5ft. 3 ins. Pte. Ashley of 11 Platoon gave us some fine exhibitions of sport by carrying off three events, winning the 100 yards flat race, the long jump, and the 440 yards flat race. The throwing of the cricket ball and the pillow fight etc., all helped to make a very pleasurable day.

Profits "Nicht Fustine."

The improvised canteen run by Cpl. Holmes and L/Cpl. Coolligan was a huge success, chocolates and cigarettes in abundance, profits "nicht fustine." Tea was served on the ground and no little praise is due to 2nd. Lt. Plumb, our Messing Officer, who provided us with some real pre-war cakes. Thanks, Mr. Plumb.

Great credit is reflected on our Company Sports Officer, namely, 2nd. Lt. A. E. Purchase, who, working in conjunction with the Battalion Sports Officer in arranging everything, achieved a notable success. It is also to be mentioned that 2nd. Lt. A. E. Purchase casually walked away with one or two first prizes, and last but not least, our talented comedian, by name Cpl. Wood, who kept up a running flow of mirth from start to finish, helped in no little measure by L/Cpl. Pickering and Pte. Hart.

The prizes at the end of the day were distributed by our Commanding Officer, Lt.-Col. C.E.R.G. Alban, D.S.O., thereby closing a most enjoyable day by a few well chosen words. A.G.E.

SPORT IN RHINELAND.

53rd SOUTH WALES BORDERERS' MEETING AT MUNSTEREIFEL.

For innumerable years past it has always been the custom to hold sports meetings all over the country in England on Whit-Mondays, and this old custom was worthily upheld by the 53rd South Wales Borderers on Monday, though of necessity the meeting had to take place at Münstereifel instead of in England or Wales. Certainly it was one of the finest meetings held by the battalion and reflects great credit on Col. J. D. Williams, C.M.G., D.S.O., and his hard-working band of organizers. So numerous were the entries for the various events that the whole morning was spent in running off heats, and throughout the day, music was dispensed by the brass band of the 52nd South Wales Borderers. Ideal weather conditions prevailed, and two noticeable features were the very large number of German civilians of both sexes that were present, and the small army of camera fiends snapping everybody and everything. Special mention must be made of Major Long, the popular second-in-command of the battalion, who in event after event proved himself an athlete of the very first water.

EVENTS AND WINNERS.

The following were the results of the various events:—

100 yards (under 20)—1, Pte. James; 2, Pte. Allyard; 3, Pte. Thomson.

At the conclusion Brig.-Gen. T. Cubit, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., distributed the prizes, and in a happy little speech congratulated the Battalion on the success of the sports. The meeting ended with cheers for the General, the Colonel and the playing of the National Anthem.

Appended is the list of officials:—Starters, Lieut. F. C. Hull, and 2nd Lieut. H. Barnes, M. M. Judges: the Officers; Officer i/c. Amusements, Lieut. F. L. Rogers; Timekeeper, Lieut. R. Thomas; Scorer, Capt. W. J. Canton.

WHITSUNTIDE SPORTS & PASTIMES.

HOLIDAY CRICKET.

HUGE CROWDS GET GOOD VALUE FOR THEIR MONEY.

There was a plethora of county cricket matches in England on Whit Monday, most of which afforded attractive sport for the thousands of spectators that surrounded the picturesque enclosures. At Old Trafford, where Lancashire and Yorkshire played the first of their two annual meetings, 17,000 holiday-makers watched the cricket, and at the Notts v. Surrey match at Trent Bridge a crowd of 10,000 assembled.

SPORTSMEN "OUT THERE."

At Leyton a touching spectacle was witnessed ere the match between Essex and Kent began. When the Kentish men took the field led by Mr. Troughton, they together with the Rev. F. H. Gillingham and Russell, who had gone out to bat, and the umpires Marlow and Atfield bared their heads and stood at attention so that they might pay tribute to the memory of the cricketers of Kent who have made the great sacrifice (including Colin Blythe and Kenneth Hutchings). Tears trickled down many faces.

LEADING BATSMEN.

The following players topped the century:—

Name	County	Score
J. W. Hearne	Middlesex	218 (not out)

G. Gunn	Notts	169
Major A.T. Sharp	Leicester	139

Among the best bowling performances were Woolley (Kent) 6 for 14; Rhodes (Yorks) 5 for 74; Collins (Australians) 5 for 45; and Stevens Middlesex) 7 for 104.

Sept. 4, 5, 6.—Portsmouth v. Hampshire.

EDUCATION STAFF v. "DOT-DASHERS."

In this match between the Education Staff v. Signallers of the 51st Manchesters played at Stieldorf on Friday there was plenty of amusement provided for the spectators if not much good football.

After some bustling in the first ten minutes Sigs managed, to score. This rather put the wind up the Education staff, and they could not settle down again, and about ten minutes from half time the Sigs. scored their second goal.

The Education Staff worked together much better in the second half; there was someo good passing down the field, and the Sigs goalkeeper was tested several times until he was beaten at last with a long shot from the left wing.

A few minutes after this the Education Staff got going again and after some passing there was a mix up in front of goal ending in the centre forward putting No. 2 to the Education's credit, and so it remained to the finish. Lieut. Heaton and Pte Mercer played a good game for the Signallers, whilst on the Educational side Sergts. Thornton and Holden, and L/Cpl. Hubbard were the pick of the team

1/9 D.L.I. v. 51st D.L.I. (Officers).

Batting first on a very fast wicket the 9th D.L.I., put up the useful score of 83, 46 of which were obtained by Lieut. Penrose (not out). For 51st D.L.I. Major Curton took 5 to 23, and Capt. Good 4 for 27. The Officers of 51st D.L.I. could do nothing against the deadly bowling of Capt. Gibson, whose average was 8 for 27.

The other 2 wickets fell to Sergt. Smith for 17 runs.

Scores:—1/9th D.L.I. 88; 51st. D.L.I. 51.

MANCHESTER SELECTIONS.

BY "JERRY M."

Silver Bullet (Manchester Cup).
Miss Richard (Salford Handicap).

X CORPS CRICKET TOURNAMENT.

EASTERN DIVISION HEADQUARTERS v. 3rd (MANCHESTER) BRIGADE.

In a sweltering heat and on a very unreliable wicket at Hofgarten, Bonn, on Saturday, the 3rd (Manchester) Brigade opened disastrously, four wickets being dismissed for 22. The advent of General Solly Flood, however, stopped the rot, though after a short and spirited innings, characterised by fine judgment and forceful driving, he was unlucky to be dismissed by a fine catch near the boundary. Inspired by his example the tail "wagged" to some tune, and 98 runs were registered before the last wicket fell. Lieut. Alexander is deserving of mention for a steady innings of 21, in which he gave no chance.

The Eastern Division Headquarters commenced well, and quickly reached the half century for the loss of three wickets only, Capt. Groom being largely responsible with a stylish contribution of 22. The next four batsmen, however, failed to withstand the attack of General Solly Flood and Major Tillard and 7 wickets were down for 73, when a timely effort by Privates Walker and Lomas advanced the total to 102, the innings ultimately closing for 117.

DEFICIT WIPED OFF.

Commencing their second innings 19 in arrears the 3rd Manchester Brigade wiped off the deficit for the loss of two wickets, and with the score at 131 for 9, the innings was declared closed. The feature of the Manchester Brigade second knock was a sparkling 49 by Major Tillard, whose driving past cover and point was an object lesson; his innings included one 6 and seven 4's.

Left with 113 to get and 1½ hours in which to get them, the Eastern Division Headquarters not unnaturally forced the pace. Capt. Carro and Pte. James carried the score from 7 to 72 before the former was dismissed by a smart catch at cover after a masterly 34. Pte. James having compiled 36 by bright cricket, was despatched shortly afterwards, and with 6 wickets down for 91, and with a quarter of an hour to play, there was every prospect of an exciting finish. Actually the requisite total was obtained for the loss of 7 wickets, Col. Dobbie making the winning hit in the course of the last over of the match. Eastern Division Headquarters thus won an enjoyable and exciting game by 3 wickets.

A BOXING BOOM.

GOOD MATCHES WITNESSED IN 20th. D.L.I. COMPETITION.

Some very good-boxing matches were witnessed last week by an enthusiastic audience when the 20th D.L.I. held a friendly competition in Riehl Barracks. The referee was Lt.-Col. Beaumon, D.S.O. Judges:— Capt. Waters, M.C., D.C.M., 2nd Lieut. McGuire. Time-keeper:— Lieut. J.H. Dodds, M.C.,:— C.S.M. Mowat.

The light weights final between Pte. Lawton, D. Coy., and Pte. Hickson, B. Coy., caused a great amount of excitement amongst the audience. The opponents were evenly matched and at the end of the third round the judges were unable to give a decision. An extra round was fought and Pte. Lawton was declared the winner, and received a silver medal, Pte. Hickson receiving the "runner's up" medal.

The bantam weights, Pte. Robinson J., B. Coy, and Pte. Ryan, B. Coy, gave a good display, and Pte. Robinson was declared the winner. Of the feather weights, Pte. Healey, C. Coy, and Pte. Bernstein, D. Coy., Pte. Healey won on points. Pte. Bernstein was the lighter man, and Pte. Healey was his third opponent that evening.

Pte. Barras, D. Coy, suffered very much from Pte. Hickson in the first round of the light weights, and received the "loser's" medal for the spirit in which he took his punishment. All through there was evidence of those inherently British qualities:— grit, courage and manliness. The winner of each final winning on points. Boxing threatens to become a serious rival to other forms of sport; the names of six entries were asked from each Coy. and the names of 25 desiring to box were forthcoming from B. Coy.

PLEASANT SATURDAY AFTERNOON

No. 6 FIELD AMBULANCE AT THE CREASE AND THE CARD TABLE.

Kaster, the naturally sleepy hollow inhabited by No 6 Field Ambulance, was on Saturday the scene of two enlivening diversions. In the afternoon there took place what purported to be a cricket match, Officers and N.C.O's v. Privates. The latter proved easy victors, principally "Owen" to the bowling of Humphries and Dean.

At 18.30 hours the attention of the other ranks was diverted from the crease to the card table when a whist drive was indulged in. The weather was such that ere long the room became as heated as the usual after-the-hand arguments, and the prospective winners sweated on the brow as well as on the top-line.

Sergt. Jacobs, by lifting first prize made up in a manner for the Stars and Stripes failure in the afternoon. Rfm. Cook upheld the honour of the attached men by running second, and Pte. Fraer lifted the third in a very "orderly manner." As regards the booby, the winner (or loser) could not have played "Worsely" had he tried. Sport in this unit promises to go strongly, having an excellent backer in the person of the C.O., Lieut.-Col. H.C.D. Rankin.

EXCITING FINISH AT BERGHEIM.

OFFICERS v. OTHER RANKS, AMMN. COL. R.H.A.

A fairly strong officers' team originally got together to play the R.A.F. Duren, was opposed to a team of the men of the Amm. Col. R.H.A. at Bergheim on Sunday.

Batting on a sticky, but drying wicket, the officers had 3 wickets down for 40 at the luncheon interval. On resuming, a rot set in, and they were all out for 59. However, owing to some good bowling by Mr. Niel, the men failed to reach this total, Price alone giving trouble.

The officers fared badly in their second innings, losing 5 for 24, but when Mr. Barsdorf joined Mr. Niel, who was playing faultless cricket, 32 were added in 15 mins. Declaring with 7 wickets down the officers left the men one hour and a quarter to get the necessary 70 runs. This they were unable to do, owing to good bowling by Lieut. Bingham, who took 7 wickets for 22 runs.

The finish was exciting, as there were nine minutes to play, when the last man came in, but the pair managed to play out.

Price took 13 wickets for 45 runs during the day.

2nd ARMY COMMERCIAL COLLEGE v. "C" COY 52nd MANCHESTERS.

Played at Cologne on Saturday. The home team batted first and knocked up 58 runs, thanks to the good fielding of "C" Coy. Maudsley was top scorer with 18 runs. Litt for the visitor's took 5 wickets for 11 runs. For the Manchesters Garner was chief scorer with 16 runs. The visitors knocked up 66 runs all out, thus beating the college by 8 runs.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

Thursday, June 12, 1919.

Surface wind mainly light, southerly. Fine and warm. Perhaps increase in cloud amount. Visibility fair.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

The First Century.

The enthusiasm shown by all units in the Rhine Army has brought to light much talent in the cricketing sphere. I have been looking forward to the first century being scored. It has happened, and the honour lies with Capt. Dickinson, of the 1st King's Brigade. He scored 117, retired; but this is not all, he also achieved a bowling analysis of 8 wickets for 29 runs in the same match—altogether an excellent performance.

Summer Football.

The popularity of "soccer," despite the counter attraction of the recognised summer sports and the extreme heat, is undoubted. I was distinctly surprised to see a crowd of quite 4,000 at the 57 S.B., R.G.A. v. 23 R.F's match last Saturday. But how the contestants managed to keep up the pace in such sweltering weather is absolutely beyond me.

Boxing and Wrestling Tournament.

Next month there is to be held at the British Empire Leave Club, Cologne, a joint boxing and wrestling tournament. The competition is open to all N.C.O's and men of the Rhine Army. There promises to be an excellent entry, and some very keen games should be witnessed. All entries should be adressed:—The Secretary, British Empire Leave Club, A.P.O. 3/30, and marked "Boxing or Wrestling Entry."

Billiards.

Sergt. Gibbs tells me his challenge to play a match of 500 up has been accepted by Pte. Witherall, 1st Herts Regt., c/o D.A.P.M., Mulheim. The match is being fixed for 6 p.m. at the British Empire Leave Club on Wednesday 18th inst. Sergt. Gibbs has had numerous other acceptances, and will play them all as soon as possible.

A FRATERNISING COMEDY.

Dear Maister Editor.

Wi' regaird t' the fraiterneesin' bizness oot here, gin aw can judge b' vaurious conversawshuns in billet an' mess, the Toamies apair t' be dividit intil three distinck clesses, veez:—

(1) Them 'at wid like t' fraiternees' holesale, richt an' left, but an' ben, wi' auld an' yung, bonnie an' plain.

(2) Them 'at dinna wint t' mix wi' the Jairmans on ony accoont, an' welcum the maist Draconick lejislawshun on the p'int.

(3) Them 'at are perfeckly indeeferent, nae carin' gin the rools an' regilawshuns are lax or strick.

In drawin' up this jaineral clessificawshun aw'm only thinkin' o' fraterneesin' wi the Jairman weemen, as that, aw'm inform'd, is the only bane o' contenshun. The majority o's dinna gie a doaken aboot the mennies—fraterneesin' t' the rank an' fyle only mains mixin' wi' the queans.

O' the three kategoaries, maister Editor, aw belang t' the third. Aw'v' never i' the past floon efter a Jairman paittycoat o' the maist entisin' sweesh, the maist captivawtin' freelery, or maist seducktiv' scint; aw dinna flee efter them noo, an' aw never wull. An' fan a Birse wulls a thing ye can nae mair mak' 'im ack t' the kontrary than ye can tak' the breeks aff a Hielandman. So there. But for a' that a relaxin' o' the rools widna fash m' puritawnikal sowl. "Live an' lat live" is the motty abune the front door o' the Printfield manshun-hoose at Kettybrowster; an' fat was gweed enooch for auld Peter 's gweed enooch for me.

A TERRIBLE CATASTROPHE.

Despite this ca' canny, hermless, non-commeetal attityude, handit doon for generawshuns i' the spoatless Birse faimly, a maist terrible catastruffy befel me on Pentycoast Sinda'. The bleesterin' rays o' the troapikal sin induc'd me in an idel meenit t' stap m' bawthin'-drawers intil a coapy o' yer estimawble jurnal, an' mak' for a safe an' secloodit pairt o' the Rhine, far every prospeck plaises an' only man is vile.

There aw strippit rale smert kin' afore a steer micht gaither, an' intil the watter aw plung 'd for some natawtory exersees. Nyod aw wasna lang in fan a corp cam' floatin' in aboot, the corp o' a luv'ly yung umman wi' gowden loaks, bonnie shell-like eers, a poutin' mooth, an' "snawy bosom sunward spread." In ordinar' cirkumstawnces aw tak' nae notis o' feemale blandeeshmen's, but this was a by-ordinar' occawshun an' her byouty was sumbleem. She'd a face 'at Romney wid hae loo'ed t' pint.

Thinks I t' masel', is she livin' or deid? Gin she's livin' aw maun save her, but fat if she's a "Jerry"! Weel, weel, aw cud jist throw her in again. Pit yersel' in m' place, maister Editor, wid you hae lat her alane t' sink like a stane or float like a littlin's bawbee balloon?

"Better than gold is a thinking mind," says the pote, but that depen's on fat yer thinkin'. Aw thocht ae thing an' syne anither in a predeeckamint o' a kin' 'at fortinately comes but aince or twice in oor braif airtly span, but eventwally, blushin' a' ower, tho there was naebody in sicht, aw grippit her gingerly b' the weist an' convoy'd her ashoar.

FIRST AID.

Syne m' sax months i' the Boy Scoots steed me in gweed staid. Tintin' nae time, an' without dryin' masel, aw prosaidit till apply first aid. T' m' delicht her bonnie fite boosum was gently haivin', her mooth begood t' queever, there was obviusly aye life i' the luv'ly carkiss.

In a fylie a crood, nae handy, begood t' gaither, first five stroang, syne fufty, an' laiterly five hunner, feenishin' up wi' a hale bataillyon. As aw fully expeckit, the polis cam' on the seen. That's the warst o' this life here below, as sune as aw begin till enjoy masel the polis interfeer. This airt wid be a haiven as far's aw 'm concern'd, if if wasna for the constaibulrry. That's the warst o' th' Inglish — wi' a' respecks t' yersel' — they only unnerstan' bad langidge an' their ain unairtly tung.

"He's a Jerry" (meanin' masel'), said ae gypit-lookin' craiter i' the Fussileers.

"No, no," spak' up a serjint, "He's a Pork and Beans."

That was the verra leemit. Aw rush'd for m' tyunic, 'at the gapin' steer was makin' a mat o,' an' produc'd m' pey-buik. Ooot o'd, as aw jaloos'd a coarperel extrackit vaurious parteeklars, an' coapied them wi' a weety pinsel intil his noat-buik, infoarmin' th' ill-menner'd onlookers 'at aw was aither Scoatch or Irish. It's deeficult t' tell a man's naishanality fan he's dress'd in Adam's simmer shuit.

FRATERNEESIN' AN' FRATERSNEESIN'.

"Fat's the chairge?" says I, ankshus t' ken m' fate. Thro' the midyum o' a "Jerry" interrupter aw learnt it was fraterneesin'!

"Fratetneesin'," I exclaum'd fite at the moo wi' rage, "aw suppose gin aw snees aw'll be ta'en up for fratersneesin'?" That pairtin' shot

NEWS IN BRIEF.

An explosion occurred on Sunday at Llanelly pit. It blew up the pithead, but all the entombed miners were rescued. One man was badly burnt.

Playing with matches was found to be responsible for the death of Doris Rose Ion, 4, daughter of a labourer, of Cardigan-Street, Islington.

Medals of honour were presented by the Archbishop of Canterbury at the annual meeting of delegates of the Church Benefit Society, at King's College, Strand, yesterday. The proceedings included a memorial service to members who have fallen during the war.

The Earl of Lonsdale, as principal guest, and other prominent sportsmen will be entertained to dinner at the Eccentric Club to-day in anticipation of the sports meeting at Stamford Bridge on Saturday, the 21st. The Marathon race, one of the features of the meeting, has not been run for fire years, and great interest centres in it.

Seventeen horses were endangered by an outbreak of five which occured in Upper Kennington-lane last evening, but they were all rescued, although five were more or less seriously burned.

Sir William Treloar has been invited by the City Council of Sheffield to visit the King Edward VII. Hospital for Crippled Children on June 23, and to give a short address relative to his work for crippled children.

A soldier charged at Bow-street Police-court with drunkenness was said to have been in possession of over £60 when arrested, at which time he was in the company of women of bad character. The accused was discharged, and upon the advice of Sir John Dickinson he agreed to accompany a constable to a post-office and deposit his money in the savings bank.

Charles Perrin, 54, dock labourer, and an old Army pensioner, of Grays, Essex, was crushed between the platform and footboard of a moving train which he was leaving at Emerson Park Halt, on the Midland Railway, and killed. At the inquest at London Hospital a verdict of "accidental death" was returned.

At Bow-street Police-court, Henry Dechamps, 33, a Belgian, was fined £20 and recommended for deportation for failing to register himself as an alien. It was stated that the prisoner was deported in December last, after conviction for keeping a disorderly house, and on Friday he was seen in the West-end by a police officer. He said he returned to this country a month ago to see his wife and child.

MODERN POETRY.

EUSKIRCHEN. Y.M.C.A. READING CIRCLE.

On Monday evening, Miss Aslin, the Librarian of the Y. M. C. A., entertained the Reading Circle with a most delightful half-hour chat on "Twentieth Century Poetry."

She dipped lightly into the history of poetry in general, describing its expansion through the various ages to the present day.

It was shown, by the quotation of a selection of modern poems, how modern poetry had assumed greater freedom of rhyme, metre and rhythm, thus permitting and encouraging the description of the more common scenes of life, and providing greater range in depicting nature generally.

Soldier poems, and an interesting instance of telepathy in poetry, were also touched upon in the course of the evening, to which, in the discussion following the paper, many contributed their views.

A very pleasant evening concluded with a vote of thanks to Miss Aslin, who leaves very shortly for England.

wasna even a magpie as th' interrupter cud mak' naething o'd. Jist at 'at meenit b' some Providenshal arrangemint the bonnie corp begood t' rally. She open'd her steekit een, an' starin' at the crood, saftly fusper'd, "Oh where am I?"

"Merciful' heavens," says I, "she's Breetish! Bring back the polis t' wash oot the chairge. Aw'm ennocen', aw'm eenocen'."

"Are ye a Waac or a Quack, or what are ye?" aw speer'd in m' best Inglish.

"I'm a British civilian clerkess," she fusper'd. "Where's my clothes, where am I, where have I been?"

"Ye've had a Pisgah vyou o' Pailestine m' leddy," aw replied. "Ye'd better nae try sic' like capers agin. If it hadna been for me, as shure's m' name's Peter Birse, ye wid noo be i' the airms o' the deil or in a gowden manshun." The craiter seem'd t' unnerstan' an' thank'd me kin'ly. "Rubbitch," says I, "perfeck styte. Aw was comin' oot o' the watter at ony rate, an' aw jist took ye in m' oxter i' the by-gyaun. It wasna a bad sensawshun, conseederin' the watter was weety kin'."

STRONG LANGUAGE.

LEAGUE OF REFINEMENT TO COMBAT "CURSING HABIT."

Much anxiety is being displayed by certain members of the community in England for fear the "cursing habit," which prevailed in the Services during the war, enters into civilian life.

Such a state of affairs, in the opinion of Mr. F. Phillips, of Ilford, an ex-corporal in the R.A.F., calls for an addition to the already long list of existing Leagues, Societies, Associations, etc. Consequently, he has decided to form a League of Refinement, the aims of which are set out as follows:

This League is an attempt to multiply individual efforts and influence with a view of promoting self-respect and preventing the cursing habit becoming a custom among the men and women now returning to civil life and being further spread by them.

The cursing habit infects the Forces from the highest ranks, the effect on the lower ranks of being cursed at by a superior is debasing and destructive of moral fibre. The effect on the casual hearer is, that the ideas and expressions are semi-consciously absorbed, with the result that they are produced involuntarily. These effects are most apparent with the women who have come forward so splendidly to help in all branches of the Forces as well as the munition workers, the large majority of whom had not previously been in intimate contact with men and women accustomed to the use of profane language.

The League intends to work by public speaking and the distribution of leaflets, as well as by individual influence.

WIRELESS TELEPHONY.

USE IN NIGHT FLYING.

The extraordinary value of wireless telephony for directional purposes in connection with aircraft has been emphasized recently in its relation to night flying. It often happens, of course, that in daylight, intercommunication between planes or between wireless stations and aircraft is unnecessary, but in flying across country at night the use of the wireless 'phone will certainly become more and more efficacious. Some details are now available of a test carried out during a recent night flight from Kenley to to Paris in a Rolls-Royce-engined Handley Page. This in no way constitutes a record, but is nevertheless interesting as indicating what is being done as a matter of routine. Wireless telephony has now been definitely adopted as a means of ground-to-air communication and vice-versa on the London-Paris route, and the test in question was made with one of the first machines on this service fitted for the purpose.

Communication was opened as soon as the Handley Page had obtained height, and after speaking to the ground station the receiver was turned in and speech was very clearly heard from Kenley. The officer conducting the test emphasizes in his report, speech quality and strength, and states that he easily recognized the voice as that of an officer known to him. To a distance of about thirty-five miles the strength of signals was so great that speech from the machine could be clearly heard at Kenley with the receiver laid upon the table. At fifty miles it was still distinct and constant, and was heard until the aeroplane was crossing the Channel and was in touch with Marquise, the first ground station on the French side. On the return journey conversation between the machine and Marquise was again picked up at Kenley, and the latter station itself was in communication with the machine thirty minutes before it landed. One of the recent developments in this connection is the production of an aeroplane set which can be converted within a few moments for transmission of either voice or Morse signals.

U. S. BOMB PLOTS.

IMPORTANT ARREST.

John Johnson, the president of the local branch of the Industrial Workers of the World, who was arrested by the Pittsburg police after a struggle with revolvers, was, they state, the directing genius of the bomb plots which resulted in the explosions at the homes of Mr. W. H. Thompson, the Federal Judge, and of Mr. W. Sibray, the Chief Inspector of the Bureau of Immigration. Superintendent Alderdice, of the Pittsburg police, says that Johnson came to Pittsburg two weeks ago at the instance of "Number 1,001."

According to Superintendent Alderdice, William Haywood, the president of the National Union of the Industrial Workers of the World, bears that pass number. Johnson is said to have named a Cleveland man as the maker of the bombs. This man is believed to be in Chicago and is being sought for there.

It is learned by the Post Office Department officials that a secret meeting of Radicals from many parts of the country was held at Philadelphia on May 24, when it is believed that a nation-wide terrorist conspiracy was hatched.

HUNGARIAN REPLY TO NOTE FROM ALLIES.

RIOTS IN MALTA.

BOLSHEVIST ARMY CUT OFF.

AMERICAN GANG OF ANARCHISTS.

HUNGARY REPLIES TO NOTE FROM ALLIES.

PEACE AND FRIENDSHIP.

A wireless message from Budapest reports that, in reply to the Note received from M. Clemenceau, Bela Kun, the Hungarian Commissary for Foreign Affairs, has instructed the Ambassador of the Hungarian Soviet Republic at Vienna to hand the following Note to the Chief of the French Mission, for transmission to M Clemenceau:

It is with satisfaction that the Government of the Hungarian Soviet Republic takes note of the intentions of the Allied and Associated Governments to invite Hungary to the Paris Peace Conference. The Hungarian Soviet Republic does not entertain any hostile feelings in regard to any nation, and desires to live in peace and friendship with the whole world.

As the Hungarian Soviet Government does not adopt the standpoint of territorial integrity, it had no desire to attack, and as a fact did not attack, the Czecho-Slovak Republic, with which it still desires to live in peace and friendship. It has always respected the demarcation lines fixed by the Allies, whereas the Czecho-Slovaks, in contravention of the Military Convention of Nov. 13, have made an incursion into territory of the Hungarian Soviet Republic, and were already menacing us with entanglement, when, compelled by supreme necessity, we took to arms.

We take note with satisfaction that the Allies have instructed the Czecho-Slovak Republic, as well as the Kingdoms of Jugo-Slavia and Roumania, to cease their attacks against us, but we are obliged to record the fact that the abovementioned States have not obeyed the orders of the Allies, and that their offensive has only been stopped by our counter-offensive; further, that their troops are at present still beyond the demarcation line fixed by the Convention of Nov. 13. In order to avoid the futile shedding of blood, the Government of the Hungarian Soviet Republic again declares its readiness immediately to cease hostilities against all these States.

In order that the Allies may be in a position to induce the Czecho-Slovak Republic and the Kingdoms of Jugo-Slavia and Roumania to comply with their instructions in regard to the cessation of hostilities, the carrying out of the clauses of the Military Convention of November 13, and the settlement of all questions connected therewith, it seems to us necessary that the States concerned should send delegates to Vienna, and that a commission should be appointed to assist in bringing about a just and equitable understanding.

(Signed), Bela Kun, Commissary for Foreign Affairs."—Wireless Press.

REQUIREMENTS OF LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

The League of Nations organisation committee has adopted a resolution stating "that it will be essential for the League to be fully informed at the earliest moment of all political, economic, financial, social and other relevant considerations in all parts of the world. Every State, being a member of the League, should therefore undertake to supply the international secretariat with all appropriate information.—British Wireless

AMERICAN ANARCHIST GANG.

New York, 10th June.—Despatches from Washington declare that the Department of Justice expect to make wholesale arrests within a few hours which will completely solve the mystery of the recent bomb outrages and break up the most desperate gang of anarchists that ever operated in the United States. The department's information leads it to conclude that there is a governing board of the Bolshevik organisation whose members planned a reign of terror, international in character, with representatives in all important countries. It is said that the plotters are men of advanced learning, whose names will cause much surprise. If the arrests are deferred, it will be only because the movements of those suspected are expected to disclose other conspirators.—Wireless Press.

UNEMPLOYMENT TROUBLES IN MALTA.

NEW GOVERNOR ARRIVES.

Reuter learns that there has been some disturbance in Malta arising from unemployment and also owing to the circulation of an unfounded rumour that it was proposed to abolish the university of Malta. The Military were called out and there was some loss of life, but, it is believed that order has now been restored.

General Sir Herbert Plumer, the new Governor, arrived to-day and has taken over the administration of the colony. Latest telegrams dated Tuesday morning indicate that the situation is somewhat better. Marines have been landed to deal with looters. It is believed that four persons were killed and eight injured in the riots.

AMPLE MUNITIONS AND STORES FOR DENIKIN.

Reuter has interviewed a British Naval officer from the Black Sea, who is in closest touch with Denikin's administration. He described the huge quantities of munitions, guns, tanks and aeroplanes, valued at seventeen millions sterling, which have been accumulated at Okaterinodar. The hundreds of British officers there are mostly specialists. They state that Denikin's troops are showing the greatest aptitude for aviation and working the tanks. Several ships loaded with munitions arrive weekly. The greatest importance is attached locally to the efforts to effect a junction between the forces of Denikin and Koltchak, which it is generally believed has been accomplished.—Reuter.

BOLSHEVISTS WILL NOT FACE TANKS.

A few British tanks with Russian crews are now being used against the Bolshevists, four being with General Shuro. Wherever they have appeared the Bolshevists have fled, discarding their rifles and equipment.

The fury of the Don Cossacks at the Bolshevist atrocities in the upper Don region assures General Denikin welcome reserves in future.—Wireless.

BOLSHEVISTS ATTACKED FRONT AND REAR.

General Denikin's Cossack forces continue their successes on all sectors of the Southern front, states a Reuter telegram from Ekaterinodar. General Vinogradoff has retaken Marinpol and is pursuing the Bolshevists across the river Kalmius. General Shuro's force, after recapturing Hughesovka and other centres of the coal region, rode hard fifty miles to the North-West and cut the railway before wheeling North East behind the Bolshevist Thirteenth army, which was thus imperilled.

AFGHAN LACK OF DISCIPLINE.

Peshawur, Tuesday.

Numerous reports from Jelallabad indicate increasing unrest in the Afghan army and want of discipline among the troops. There is a growing lawlessness in some districts, which is certain to react on Kabul, where people are agreed that power rests in the hands of the soldiers. The Kabulis are afraid to discuss events, and it is impossible to discover what is happening at the Royal Palace.—Reuter.

COSSACKS CAPTURE VILLAGE.

The volunteer army and the Don Cossacks have advanced considerably all along the front. The villages of Jutovo, Tsritzin, Popovo, Salavyausk, Bakhmut and Berbansk have been captured.

CZARINA RUMOURED TO BE ALIVE.

Christiania. — A Russian general staff officer recently passed through Bergen on his way to the Murman Coast after having been a prisoner of war in Germany. He informed a Bergen newspaper that during a conversation with the Grand Duke of Hesse, the Czarina's brother, he ascertained that the Czarina is still alive, and a month ago sent a letter to her brother from her place of captivity. — Reuter.

V.C. HERO ASSAULTED BY STRIKERS.

Winnipeg, 11th June. — A demonstration of strike sympathisers against returned soldiers, who are acting as constables, resulted in considerable disorder yesterday.

The strikers assaulted and disarmed individual policemen, among them being Corporal Coppins, V.C., who is a special constable. He was dragged from his horse, kicked and severely beaten. He is not expected to recover from his injuries.

The fighting stopped suddenly on the appearance of 200 special constables.—Reuter.

REVIVAL OF UNIVERSITY OF COLOGNE

NEW EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM.

Yesterday morning in the Gürzenich, which, had been beautifully decorated for the occasion, the old Cologne University, which died 120 years ago, was officially resuscitated. The municipal orchestra, under Herr Abendroth, opened the festival with Wagner's overture to the "Meistersingers of Nurnberg."

Oberbürgermeister Adenauer, in the name of the population of Cologne, wished good luck to the University which is born again in such a dark hour of German history. "Reconciliation," he said, "is the programme of Cologne University. Vivat, crescat floreat alma mater Coloniensis."

Dr. Schulte, of the town council, touched in a humorous manner on the question of the modest finances of the new university, and of the different faculties which will be created in the future.

Professor Becker, in the name of the Prussian Minister for Science and Art, who was unable to attend, declared the University opened.

He read an address of Minister Haenisch which intimated that the new university will enjoy the protection of the Prussian Government and compared Prussia without the Rhineland to a silver fir without a crown.

Cologne, this commercial town, added Professor Becker, has shown by its decision to revive its university in spite of the distress of the present time, that only the spirit can save Germany. May the spirit of the Meistersingers reign over the university.

The orchestra, choir and organ rendered the Hallelujah chorus from the "Messiah."

"His Magnificence" Professor Eckert, the Rector of the new university, outlined the aims and intentions of the professors and students in a program of democratic co-operation. He compared this plan with the pre-war system of German university instruction and pointed out that the new university will not have to accommodate old methods to the new spirit, but merely to avoid the faults committed by her older sisters. He concluded by expressing the wish that Cologne may be a bridge-head in the spiritual sense, a pillar of reconciliation and a guardian of the endangered ideals of humanity.

A speech by Professor Dr. Dietrich of the medical faculty followed, and the festival was brought to a close with a brilliant orchestral rendering of Brahms' Academical Overture.

ARMS AND EDUCATION.

An Educational Conference for the purpose of discussing problems which have arisen in connection with the Imperial Education Scheme was opened at Australia House yesterday morning.

General Sir H. Wilson, who presided, said there were three problems: How to weave education into the life of the soldier, how to bring the profession of arms close up to education, modern thought and science, and how to secure that when the army handed back a man to civil life it would hand back not only a good soldier but a good citizen. Mr. Fisher, Minister of Education, said that although the war had been a war of science he believed the invention of education in the army was the most suprising event of all.

No man had more splendid opportunites of developing the intellectual capacity of his men than the military or naval commander. It was educational training which would forge the link between the Army or Navy and civil life.

THE MAN BEHIND THE COUNTER.

Testimony to the efficiency of men behind the shop counter, as compared with women, is expressed in the quarterly report of the South Suburban Co-operative Society. Referring to the return of the men staff from the forces, the report says: "It is found that in those trades peculiarly fitted for men the sales have shown considerable advance since their reinstatement. This is specially marked in the outfitting department, which has increased during the period under review by 114.5 per cent."

MARCH OF LONDON TROOPS.

About £12,000 has, so far, been received at the Mansion House by the Lord Mayor towards the expenses of the forthcoming march of the London troops and of the memorial to those who have fallen. As the rationing of the troops on the day will cost a considerable sum, and the provision of the certificate of thanks to each man who has served will be expensive, more money will have to be raised if the scheme is to be carried through successfully.

A HUSBAND'S "GIFT."

A woman complained at Tottenham Police-court yesterday that anonymous letters concerning her had been sent to her employers, who were the owners of an hotel at Wood-green.

Mr. Lewin (chairman of the Bench), after reading the letters, inquired of the woman what her husband was doing, and she replied, "He has given me up to another man."

Mr. Lewin: Did you consent?—Yes.

And did he really consent?—Oh, yes.

Is the other man married?—No; but he is an old sweetheart of mine.

The chairman remarked that he had heard of some funny cases, but he had never heard of a man giving up his wife to another man. He wondered what the country was coming to. He told the woman that under the circumstances he could do nothing for her.

BUNGALOWS FOR DISABLED SOLDIERS.

The Corporation of St. Albans contemplates spending £160,000 on a housing scheme which will include the erection of a score of bungalows for permanently disabled soldiers as a war memorial.

PREMIUM BONDS IN NEW VICTORY LOAN.

STATE LOTTERY.

Reuter's Agency states definitely that the conditions of the new victory loan — the "Joy Loan" — will include annual drawings of bonds for redemption and that the holders of the bonds drawn will receive a bonus.

This is a revolutionary departure in the history of British Loans.

Preparations by the money market for the loan are well advanced and the available funds are said to be sufficiently large as to enable the Government to obtain all the new money required.

PRINCE OF WALES' TOUR.

In the course of his motor journey from Princetown to Truro yesterday morning the Prince of Wales stopped at Tavistock and inspected Kelly College, the Officers Training College. Girl guides, boy scouts, and a large crowd of residents enthusiastically cheered the Prince, who was received by the Headmaster of the College. After the inspection the Prince congratulated the corps on its smart appearance, saying they formed a fine training unit for the army.

Over 350 Kellians served in the great war. The names of sixty were inscribed on the roll of honour and upwards of twenty D.S.O.'s and 40 M.C.'s had been won.

At Truro the Prince of Wales was presented with an address by the Mayor and Corporation when he formally opened the new premises of the Royal Institution of Cornwall. There was a record attendance at the Royal Agricultural Show. At luncheon the Prince said that he would be pleased to accept the presidency of the Society next year.

CO-OPERATORS BIG DEMANDS.

The Co-operative Congress at Carlisle yesterday was quite busy with high politics. It declared for Scottish Home Rule, called for the nationalisation of coal mines, and condemned the Government's housing policy because it was designed to provide what should be left to private enterprise to do. A resolution favouring a capital levy, however, was defeated.

BELFAST GIRLS DRUGGED.

Two girls, aged seventeen and nineteen, were found during the night of Tuesday, lying drugged and unconcious by the road-side in West Belfast. It is alleged that they were brought there in a blue motor car. They were still unconscious yesterday and their condition is serious.

RUNAWAY WEDDING OF AMERICAN HEIRESS.

New York.—Miss Allice Cordon Drexel, one of the best known heiresses in America, and a most popular member of the young fashionable set in New York, was secretly married on the 5th June to Capt. William Barrett, of the American Air Force.

Miss Drexel left home at nine o'clock in the morning, saying she would be back to luncheon, but she did not return. Her parents have not yet had the pleasure of meeting their new son-in-law.

UNDER SECTION 40.

Interviewed by a representative of the Evening Standard, Lieut. Wright, of the Cambridge tarring case, said the charge on which he was arrested was "conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline."

LONDON IRISH HOME.

The cadre of the 1/18 Bn. The London Regiment (The London Irish) is to be officially welcomed at the Duke of York's School on the 14th of June by the Mayor of Chelsea.

At the battle of Loos in September 1915 the battalion went over the top with a football, which was kicked right across no-man's land to the German lines. They were among the first British troops to enter Lille on its evacuation by the Germans last October.

STEAM ENGINE INVENTION CENTENARY.

At a representative meeting at Glasgow, convened by the Institution of Engineers and Shipbuilders of Scotland, it was decided that immediate steps will be taken to raise a fund for the purpose of commemorating the centenary of the death of James Watt. This will be done by providing additional facilities for the training of engineers and by further endowing the engineering department of Glasgow University.

Of the fifty thousand sterling required, six thousand have already been subscribed.

CENTENARY OF FAMOUS HYMN.

The centenary of Bishop Heber's notable missionary hymn, "From Greenland's Icy Mountains," was celebrated at Wrexham on Whit Sunday by the singing of it in all the places of worship. The hymn was first sung in Wrexham parish church on Whit Sunday, 1819, having been composed on the previous Saturday by Bishop Heber at Wrexham Vicarage.

WORLD'S HEIGHT RECORD.

Paris, Sunday.—Flight-Lieutenant Cazale, who already holds the world's record for high flying, beat his own record to-day by ascending to a height of 9,500 metres (31,160 ft.).—Reuter.

FAMOUS BANDMASTER RETIRES.

LOSS TO THE SERVICE.

From Cardiff, where the band of the Coldstream Guards is playing, comes the announcement of the impending retirement of Major Mackenzie Rogan, the well-known bandmaster.

Major Rogan belongs to a fighting family. His grandfather served under Marlborough, and his son served in this war. Five generations of the family have been soldiers, and Major Rogan himself fought in the Burmah campaign, from 1885 to 1888.

Major Mackenzie Rogan has played a very conspicuous part in the improvement of military band music. To that end, for the first time in the history of the profession, he gave lectures on military bands and military music at the Royal Academy of Music and at the Royal United Services Institution. His work has been fully appreciated both in military and in musical circles. He was gazetted a captain in 1914, and promoted major in 1917. He is a member of the Royal Victorian Order, he has been given many British and Allied decorations, and the University of Toronto conferred on him the degree of Doctor of Music.

BETTING IN ARMY DEPOT.

Allegations of betting at the Government motor transport depôt at Chippenham was investigated at the police-court at Burnham, near Slough, yesterday, when William Henry Dodd, who was employed at the depôt, was charged with using a mess-room there for the purpose of betting. Dodd pleaded guilty. The Bench imposed a penalty of £10 on each of the four summonses, making a total of £40. Dodd asked the alternative, and was told two months' imprisonment. He paid the fines.

MUSIC HALL BURNT.

The Kingston Empire music hall was partially destroyed by fire yesterday morning, the damage being estimated at four thousand sterling.

POPULAR ACTOR'S CHANCE OF A FORTUNE.

The will of the late Captain Pryce, V.C., of the Grenadier Guards, has just been proved. By the provisions of this document nineteen thousand pounds sterling was to be placed in trust for his wife for life. On her death, if the testator left no children, the money was to go to Mr. Owen Nares, the actor, who was a schoolboy friend.

Capt. Pryce left three daughters.

SETTLING EX-SERVICE MEN.

Delegates from the Federation of discharged and demobilized sailors and soldiers and of the Trade Advisory Boards are to meet Sir Robert Horne to-day. They will discuss with him the question of settling discharged and disabled men in various industries.

LUNATICS LEFT FREE TO ESCAPE.

The Clonmel Asylum Committee, on receiving threats from attendants to strike if full rates of wages were not paid to juniors, said "let them strike." The attendants immediately began to leave. About fifty patients escaped. A few attendants remained to look after sick and suicidal patients. The committee has appealed for military police as they are powerless to prevent further patients trying to escape.

TIPPERARY ON CHURCH BELLS.

The vicar of Wellingborough, Northants, the Rev. R. G. Willes, in his parish magazine, writes:

"It has been suggested that the signing of peace should be acclaimed by the bells of the House of God playing in perpetuity 'It's a long, long way to Tipperary.' Why not also the 'Fox Trot' and 'Tommy make room for your uncle'?

"There is indeed no accounting for taste in music or anything else, but I hasten to assure all and sundry that while I am vicar of Wellingborough 'Tipperary' will never be played on the bells of the parish church".

AEROPLANE ABLAZE ON SANDS.

In the presence of a large number of holiday makers, a large aeroplane of 210 horse-power came down and burst into flames on the sands at Southport on Tuesday. The pilot and two passengers had remarkable escapes. The former sustained an injured shoulder, and the passengers, minor injuries.

RE-ISSUE OF ARMS FOR LONDON MARCH.

Metropolitan volunteers are to assist in the victory march of London fighting men by lining the streets for the procession after the King has taken their salute. There will be a re-issue of rifles and equipment for the occasion.

The Treasury announces that the total applications for National War Bonds (4th Series) up to 7th June amounted to nearly 80,000,000 pounds sterling.

Over five hundred men employed in Firth of Forth trawlers have struck for an increase of wages. Consequently about sixty trawlers are idle.

In consequence of the drought the strawberry season is likely to be extremely short, probably lasting only a fortnight. Raspberries, plums and apples are also suffering through lack of rain, but grain crops are in fine condition.

THE HOUSING QUESTION.

The Prince of Wales has taken up in earnest the tasks that the Duchy of Cornwall has offered to a man of his spirit. Already schemes are being prepared for better housing in the part of South London which looks to him as its landlord, and he has been at pains to obviate any delay in the carrying out of these far-reaching schemes. The Prince's example is an inspiration, and we confidently hope that soon many will vie with him in his patriotic and high-souled enterprise.

The Housing Question demands immediate attention. It was only natural that during war the price of building materials should rise to an almost unprecedented figure and the supply of labour should come far short of ordinary requirements. The consequence was that the private contractor feared to tempt his fate and fortune in the housing of his fellows. Even before the tide of demobilization set in, it was well-nigh impossible for our fellow-citizens to rent new homes. But now that our soldiers have returned to England in large numbers, the shortage of houses has become increasingly manifest and perturbing. Money can buy much, but there are English towns where the possession of money fails to secure a dwelling-place. Once more the war-scarred veteran may exclaim in distraught tones — "A house! a house! My kingdom for a house!"

Such is the state of matters that even were our landlords to turn into philanthropists they could not cope with the situation satisfactorily. There are dangers and evils in governmental interference, but these must be risked; for an adequate solution of housing troubles can only be furnished by the State. Its command of wealth is greater, its control of waywardness is surer, its guarantee of uniformity is safer than those of any private groups of speculators or reformers. The fundamental duty of Government is the worthy habitation of its citizens. There need be no fear of a state scheme, if the state has due regard for beneficent prevision and proper avoidance of spendthrift finance.

Nationalization is the cry of many public-minded men, and it has in many quarters been hailed as an omnipotent panacea. But we argue for no bold scheme that would overturn our social fabric. Nationalization is neither an unmixed good nor an unmixed evil, and we leave to others the problem of its delimitation. The course of English history, whether in the department of politics or that of sociology, teaches us that our national genius is averse to violent changes in the shaping of civic well-being. It may not be heroic, but it is prudent to hasten slowly and to make use of what lies to our hands.

During the war we have learned that the Government in its need can take control of companies and institutions without buying them in the market-place or even without much interference in their economy. Now there are throughout Britain innumerable "building societies" which have served a useful purpose in that they have helped many a worker to secure a real interest and a fixed tenure in his home. Is it not possible and desirable that the state should use the scheme of these building societies? A Government Building Society would mean that the State aided its citizens in finding houses and that it would always have a "value" in the property erected. Men will always pay gladly if they know that they make a sure investment and if they are convinced that the investment will satisfy their clamant wants.

The Housing Question is fundamental, for it concerns the physical, intellectual, and moral improvement of mankind. No part of the evidence taken by the recent Coal Commission so impressed England — if we may judge from the press — as that which bore on the conditions of life in some mining villages. There is no man whose soul is so dead that he does not yearn for the days when Britain's sons and daughters shall have their full birthright of health and happiness. That birthright is denied to all who are born into homes which are unwholesome and degrading. Sturdy physique depends largely on environment.

It is one of the signs of the times that the workers are demanding more leisure. The blessing of leisure is bounded by the conditions of a man's domicile. If it is his lot to live with wife and family in some meagre, overcrowded hovel, then he is apt to spend his leisure far from his dependants. Hearth and home make decreasing call upon him. A worthy house need not be a rich man's house, but it should be so built that some measure of privacy is possible for man, woman, and children. Without privacy there can be no culture.

More must be said. The question of morality is bound up with that of housing. The public conscience must not be satisfied till men and women have homes where it is possible to observe the canons of decency. If conditions are such that children grow up without knowledge of moral propriety, then the time will come when the village, the city, and the State will be reft of their rarest flowers — chivalry, reverence, and purity.

It is, indeed, good news that our public men are bent upon a national policy of housing and that the Prince of Wales is leading the way.

WILLIAM R. PATTERSON, F.R.G.S.

The photographic exhibition in Bonn was quite interesting. There were four autochromes by Major Wyatt, three of which were excellent specimens; one seemed as though the yellow screen had been lacking.

Major Roe (29th C.C.S.) exhibited some beautifully soft nature studies over quarter-plate, and the interior of the 29th C.C.S. chapel at Venusberg. A portrait of a pierrot and a group of children by Ldg. A.C.M. Freeman was very pleasing, also a picture of a canal and another giving charming cloud effects.

For detail Capt. Moore's pictures were among the best. Lieut. Bennett exhibited a splendid photograph of the Hohenzollern bridge and Major Morris M.C., showed a most delightful portrait of a group of schoolboys.

Six excellent photographs, taken from an aeroplane, of General Foch's passage down the Rhine, were lent by the 5th Squadron R.A.F.

It is to be hoped that some of the photographers at Bonn will lend their pictures to our Cologne exhibition later on.

WHAT HAVE YOU SALVED TO-DAY?

By O. WYNOTT.

Salving may be divided—like "all Gaul"—into three parts. One, the removal of that which is actively dangerous: two, the collection for use of that which is already fit for the same, but lies neglected: three, the gathering up of debris, apparent rubbish, from which new and valuable things may be made. That is so, is it not? Right!

Now then, comrades of the Rhine Army, what have we done to-day (and yesterday) about Number One of these? It has most certainly been in our power, unless we have been asleep, to use influence in removing or annulling danger from the paths of our fellows. And we are guilty if we have not done so. No need to specify the dangers. Each is intelligent enough to make out his own list.

Number Two. Endless! But above all, I think, the really extraordinary opportunities offered to us and our pals in the Army today:— the various instructional classes, giving knowledge (and hence power) and capability of being more valuable to one's community, one's family, and one's self; (for the Army will teach you anything, from mending the bath-tap to dealing with the Mexican in his own tongue); the manifold sports, for health, fun and improved physique, (and don't forget the swimming; you may need to save lives some day); the libraries, with their store of other men's concentrated experiences in every age and land; the habit of smartness and of discipline which makes you proud, as you see it, that you also are of the elect; these and many another advantage are there, lying ready for immediate use. Let each help to salve them for the sake of all; and do your own picking up.

Number Three we allotted to odds and ends —the apparently useless bits of time and occasion. "Apparently"; I emphasise the word: for there are no really useless moments. Some of you may have been privileged to see, as I have, the almost miraculous way in which, at the Bases, heads of scraps and fragments, that in civil life would have been consigned to the dust—bin or the ditch, were made to produce astonishing stores of valuable and reconstructed material. This is not the place to enlarge upon that wonderful work: but it was an unforgettable lesson.

The uncountable occasions in every day for a cheering word or smile, for a helping hand, for a directing influence, for the touch of sympathy,— how easily they are overlooked, how golden their outcome may be if they are seized! Their aggregate value, if only we all salved most of these odds and ends, would make our world infinitely wealthier in happiness and in fruitfulness.

And there is another big salvage question to be faced by us all — a task that we must accept if we are men. It is this.

At the present day, surges of unbridled, if sometimes justified, discontent are thundering on the dykes that protect our civilisation, that shield the cultivated fields of achievement and development gained for us by the slow, unbroken work of many generations. The world is waking to the recognition of new, as yet undisciplined forces which, if over hasty or ill-judged, may threaten the very foundations of peace and prosperity. There will be changes; there must be changes; there should be changes — changes in the direction of fairer sharing of both the amenities and the responsibilities of life. But it devolves upon us all for the sake of our own and the succeeding generations, to see and to insist that in passing to the new order of things, we save all that was of use, of beauty, of worth in the old — that we carry with us, saved and secure, in the midst of all the cry and the clamour, that respect for law and order, that sense of "England first and any individual Englishman afterwards," that sanity and playing-the-game which are our pride and have given us our place in the world. It is too late to salve when all is destroyed or flooded. Let us first decide for, hold to, and resolve to salve, against every outcry, all that Time and Trial have proved to be worthy. For destruction is quick and easy: but construction is painful and slow.

Well, what have you salved to-day? What will you salve for the morrow?

FIFTY-SECOND COMPANY OF CROSSBOWMEN.

THE PARABLE OF THE HIDDEN TREASURE

(The following relates to a very successful "Hunt for Hidden Treasure," organised recently by the Officer Commanding 52nd Battn. the Rifle Brigade.

The event was keenly entered into by the Battalion, and in addition to an excellent morning's outing, proved most interesting and instructive.

The winner was Rifleman Crofts, of "B" Company, who profited by the intelligent manner in which he had read the "Scripture" to the extent of the goodly treasure concealed within the chest in the cleft of a tree.)

And there was a certain tumulus and it was guarded all the years by a river to the south and east and by a mount to the north and the west. And they set them down and ate the unconsumed portion of their day's rations. And the Governor saith "Here is a pleasant place; here will I hide my treasure for man may not remove the tumulus from the face of the ground." And the Governor looked and beheld the trees of the field, and beheld a lime towards the place of the going down of the sun, and he searched diligently, and the manner of his search was anticlockwise, and he beheld the fifth tree and beheld it was a goodly tree, and there was a cleft. And the Governor said "Avert thine eyes, Oh thou Kleenman, lest they become astigmatic for ever." So he set his treasure, even the iron chest of cunning workmanship in the cleft of the tree, and it was so.

And he that findeth it shall possess it.

On the twentieth day of the month called May the soldiers, less they that be set aside for other duties, shall assemble on the Battalion meeting place at the time called 0915 hours, and hear the words of the Governor. And they shall set forth each of his own mind, and shall search diligently, and he that hath a single eye shall come first to the place wherein the treasure be hidden.

Signed by he who is chief scribe to the Governor.

And certain centurions shall stand in appointed places to behold them that pass by and mark the manner of their doings that they do play the game, and each that passeth shall surely hand his token to the centurion that none shall sally forth unbeknown and come privately to the treasure.

MUSIC IN COLOGNE.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,— Having discovered a good thing, it is one's duty to make it known. Last Friday evening at the Gurzenich Hall, Cologne, an orchestral concert of very unusual quality was given. The fine selections from Beethoven, Brahms, Strauss, and Wagner were magnificently rendered, and the orchestra merited the enthusiastic applause given by the crowd which filled the spacious hall.

The event, which appealed most, was the playing of the violinist, Frl. Maria Schmitz-Gohr, a young lady of Cologne who is being trained in Berlin. Remembering that this young lady is but half way through her teens, her performance was simply amazing. Her marvellous skill was shown in her interpretation of the Brahm's selection which occupied about 40 minutes. At the conclusion of her masterly playing she was recalled again and again. Great things are expected of his genius. One devotedly hopes that no touch of professionalism will ever spoil its beauty. But the point of my letter is really to make known that these concerts are open to soldiers and that seats cost one mark. Music lovers ought never to miss these opportunities. Another concert is arranged for June 20th.

THREE PIPS.

RATES OF EXCHANGE.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Dear Sir, — The Military rate of exchange is fixed at 61.50 Marks for the pound.

The commercial value of a pound sterling is however, over 68 Marks, and those Englishmen who are fortunate enough to be civilians in Cologne obtain the latter rate of exchange.

There is doubtless some sound reason why we have to pay over 6.50 Marks for every pound spent and if you would give publicity to this letter it is possible that it would elicit some authoritative reply.

At present, however, the Army considers it is suffering under a legitimate grievance, in that a tax of some 10 % is imposed on us, without some adequate reason being given.

"D"

DANCING CLASSES.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir. — Is anything being done about getting dancing teachers out here from England? I mentioned the matter to the Y.M.C.A. in March and since then nothing has been done.

Also why can't music be published in sheet form and distributed among the troops? In Coblenz this is done and they have girls who do nothing but dance with the men and officers every day. At Coblenz you can get a dance every day, but all we get is a Thursday night dance at the A.E.L. Club, where the allotment of tickets for Corps is 20 and G.H.Q. 8.

Jazz Bands are being formed at last and lots more English girls will be coming out soon, and it strikes me that these important subjects should be discussed.

AUGUSTUS.

WRESTLING CHAMPIONSHIP.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,— With reference to Capt. Slim's letter on wrestling of about seven days ago, I should like heartily to endorse all he has to say about the revival of the grand old sport.

And I can't think of any better way than holding an Army of the Rhine Wrestling Championship. Could you do something in the matter? Personally, I would compete, as well as interest myself, if needs be, in the initial movement to bring such a championship meeting about.

Roll up all wrestlers, and see what can be done.

H. C. HARRIS, Lieut.

"SOME" ENGLISH.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

In a recent issue of The Cologne Post, a correspondent quoted some amusing examples of English as "writ" on a razor case. I have just discovered what, I suspect, must have been the authority consulted by the author of the "English" quoted by your correspondent. The discovery cost me a mark and a half, and was advertized as an easy, short, quick, and simple method of saying all that is necessary for soldiers to say in Cologne. A careful study of this publication causes me to regret one deficiency, in particular, namely, the absence of guidance as to the "shortest, quickest, easiest, and simplest" method of convincing the seller of this work, of my desire that he should return me my money.

In Blighty, we rather fancy our capacity to hold our own in a bookseller's shop (if in no other); but what result would follow an enquiry of a German bookseller in these terms:— "Have you a new book of rate?" I can scarcely conjecture. Presumably, this is intended to convey a desire for a book of outstanding merit; but in my present state of doubt, I do not propose to make an enquiry which may elicit a response for information as to whether it is a water-rate or gas-rate book required. Anyway, I don't feel that this particular guide will so aid anyone in the knowledge of German that he will feel quite at home among German literature.

Another enquiry at the booksellers is quoted, and refers apparently to a book, one is inclined to purchase. It runs thus:— "How long does it last?" This presumably, is German-English for "what is its length." I confess that when I read this, I wondered whether it was meant to refer to a visit to the drapers, and that the writer's aim was to help us to express an anxiety as to the durability of some article of lingerie — "How long does it last" being the nearest idiom to "Will it wear well?"

One other phrase puzzles me, "Can you help me to some fire?" We are by no means sure, but it occurs to me, that "Can you oblige me with a light?" is what the writer desired to express. Anyway, I am not disposed to risk asking any German "Can you help me to some fire?" The dish may be too unappetising to render the enquiry a safe one.

Although this Guide for the Soldier may save him from having to rely altogether on "deaf and dumb motions," I feel as I close it, that the only comment appropriate to the occasion is "Thank heaven we have got an Education Scheme." M.

OUR BOOK SHELF.

THE THIRD BOOK OF ARTEMAS.

Published by Messrs Westall and Co. Ltd., 8 Adam St., Adelphi St. W.C.

Opening with a "Song of Triumph", The Third book of Artemas differs slightly from its predecessors in that a more sanguine note prevails. This book is dedicated to "Eve" and largely deals with the female element. The war finishing with the abject capitulation and the flight of Willi, King of the Hu, in the first chapter, the book deals with the workers, Ireland, and other storm centres. For odd moments, when feeling "fed up" and wishing for a gleam of humour, we recommend it to our readers.

G.H.Q. CLERKS' CONCERT.

THE "TABS" PARTY PROVIDE EXCELLENT PROGRAMME.

The G.H.Q. clerks held a very successful and enjoyable concert at the Hotel Baseler Hof on Tuesday evening, when the "Tabs," assisted by several of the G.H.Q. staff, provided the programme.

As an overture, Will Hartley played the "Prelude in C Minor." Alfred E. Hutchings sang "In an Old Fashioned Town" and "Eleanore" in a very pleasing manner. Ernie Roberts, an old favourite, kept the house in particularly good humour with selections from his repertoire. In "Do You Like Me," Maisie and Rex made a big hit. Will Benson, female impersonator, Rob Norrie and Ernest Franklin also appeared.

But the ovation of the evening went to Barnes and Knowles. Both as a double turn and individually those two artistes did extremely well. Huntley and Morgan created roars of laughter with their soldier sketch; Cpl. Perry sang "Take a Pair of Sparkling Eyes"; J. T. Parkinson did well as an illusionist; and Gunner Alfred Barker gave two of his inimitable violin solos. The accompanist was Will Hartley.

THE "ORANGE LILIES" AT WAHN.

A successful concert was given at Wahn on Saturday by the concert party of the 4th Royal Sussex Regt.

Lieut. Chester, in a character sketch and dance, received great applause, and the solos of Pte. Redmond and Pte. Hinckley were, as always, highly appreciated. In the little sketch "Do I snow now," which concluded the first part, the antics of Pte. Hart, the comedian, and L/Cpl. Evans, his assistant, brought down the house.

A feature in part two was the novel concerted item "Wooden Military," and "Ideas of a Perfect Day," both of which caused great amusement; also a little sketch, "Jim's little Joke," in which "Nellie," the charming "girl," and Pte. Redmond quite distinguished themselves. Ptes. Acton, Oborne and McCarthy contributed popular songs, and the whole show went with a swing, which augurs considerable success for the party in the future.

BISCUIT EATING COMPETITION.

DIVERTING SPECTACLE AT BEDBURG Y.M.C.A. SPORTS.

At the Y.M.C.A. Bedburg, on Whit Monday afternoon, a successful programme of sports was carried through. Men from the 51st and 53rd Coys. of the 3rd Brigade, Light Division, turned out in large numbers, and it goes without saying that all thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

The events, which, in spite of the heat, were all keenly contested, were as follows:—

1, Egg and spoon race; 2, puttee race; 3 potato placing race; 4, cigarette lighting competition; 5, cock fighting; 6, blind obstacle race; 7, biscuit eating race; 8, bull board; 9, donkey's tail placing (blind folded); and 10, musical chairs.

Perhaps the most humorous items, from the spectators' point of view, were the biscuit eating and the potato placing competitions, and it did one good to see the smiling and eager faces of the competitors.

A Surprise.

The "Surprise," which was announced on the blackboard at the entrance and which provoked much guessing on the part of the men, took the form of free tea and lemonade ad lib, also biscuits, sandwiches and cigarettes, and these good things were taken full advantage of and much appreciated. The presentation of prizes was made by the lady-workers of the "Y.M.," at the conclusion of the sports. In the evening a cinema show and concert took place in the hall of the Y.M.C.A.

INTER-COMPANY MATCH.

After beating H.Q. team a week ago "C" Coy., 12 L.N.L., met "B" Coy on the Exerzier Platz. After losing 1 wicket for 2 runs, "C" put in some sound work, Cohen making 27 and Faraday 22, the all-out total being 96. "B" Coy were soon disposed of for 58 runs. On present form "C" Coy will be a team to be reckoned with.

SPORT IN ENGLAND.

MANCHESTER MEETING.

A fairly large crowd witnessed the racing at Manchester on Wednesday, when the going was good. The following were the results:—

Stamford Handicap:— Sentry (6—1); 2, Cylgar (5—2); 3, Atrocity (7—1). Nine ran.

Wednesday Handicap:— 1, Indian Feast (11—4 on) beat Staples. Two ran.

Club Plate:— 1, White Simon (8—1); 2, Allan Water (7—2 on); 3, Whitmonday (20—1). Five ran.

Royal Standard Stakes:—1, Polygnotus (11—8); 2, Not much (13—8); Wilson (100—7). Five ran.

Whitsuntide Stakes:— 1, Spiral Spin (6—5 on); 2, Bound Over (4—1); 3, Maoona, filly (3—1). Four ran.

Broughton Handicap:— 1, London Pride (5—2); 2, Cheap Popularity (8—1); 3, Braida Garth (7—1). Eight ran.

Trial Handicap:— 1, Astern (5—4 on); 2, Maeldune (6—1); 3, Minstrel Park (7—1). Five ran.

BATH RACECOURSE SOLD.

Bath Racecourse was sold on Wednesday by auction for 12,750 pounds, the purchasers being the Newbury Race Syndicate.

LAWN TENNIS.

The Beckenham Lawn Tennis Tournament, at which the Kent Championships are decided, is being played this week and the entry includes Norman Brookes, Gerald Patterson, and the other famous Australians; A. W. Gore, A. R. F. Kingscote, M. J. C. Ritchie, C. P. Dixon, P. M. Davson, and Frank Riseley, a coterie of home players in whom, with J. C. Parke and Roper Barrett, the hopes of English lawn tennis are based in this very critical year.

A Great Pair.

Brookes is partnering Gerald Patterson in the doubles. What a pair! They represent the quintessence of brilliance (says "Regent" in The Daily News) and there is just the possibility that brilliance and stolidity would make a better blend, but against any opposition save the very strongest Brookes and Patterson will win very easily.

Davson's entry is particularly interesting. He handed out such a crushing beating to Gerald Patterson on the Queen's Club wood in the covered courts championships that it will be piquantly interesting to see how he plays on grass, and if his matchless steadiness stays with him. A. R. F. Kingscote's play will also be closely watched, for he was showing such extremely good lawn tennis, when he strained his leg in the Queen's tourney.

A Sensational Match.

Men's Singles (third round):—Turnbull beat Gore (retired). The Hon. Sir Fisher beat Clements 6—2, 7—5, 6—1; Ritchie beat Sir George Thomas 6—4, 6—4; Capt. Dash beat Riseley 8—6. The last mentioned was the most sensational match of the tournament. Dash is a young Surbiton player whose defeat of the famous English international shows the unexpected presence of young English talent. The feature of the match was the hard hitting on forehand by Dash preventing Riseley from coming to the net. Another unexpected result was that of Crawford a young Anglo-Indian, beating Donnisthorpe 6—0 4—6, 6—4. Norman Brookes, who partnered Patterson, made his first re-appearance in English Tournaments and defeated the Canadian pair Raymond and Baker, 6—2, 6—0, and English pair 6—0, 6—0. Brookes is at present not showing marked form and will be tested most severely.

HEAVY-WEIGHT BOXING MATCH.

A second heavy-weight match between boxers of note has been fixed up to support the British Heavy-weight Championship Contest at Olympia on June 17 between Joe Beckett, the holder of the title, and Frank Goddard, says "Sporting Life".

The new match is between Arthur Townley of Birkenhead, who was himself in the running—and may be still—for championship honours—and Harold Hardwick, the Australian boxer and champion swimmer, who are to box 15 rounds.

Hardwick won the heavy-weight competition at the Inter-Theatre of War Tournament, held at Aldershot on April 30 and May 1, and besides that, was singled out for unusual distinction in being chosen by ballot among the men themselves as the "ideal sportsman", and therefore the best entitled to a cup specially presented by Brig.-Gen. H. A. Jones, R.A.S.C., for the non-commissioned officer or man who should come nearest to the very stringent definition laid down by Col. R. B. Campbell of what constituted a "real good sportsman." Hardwick displayed capital form at the tournament refered to, and after beating Cpl. Harry Croxon in a bout which was an object lesson upon the way in which men may fight, and fight hard, and yet preserve intact their spirit and sense of fair play and good sportsmanship, there was keen disappointment that Dan Flynn, the Scottish heavy-weight, was unable to meet Hardwick in the final owing to an injury.

Townley was seen in the ring at the Holborn Stadium a few weeks ago, when he defeated that game boxer, Harry Curzon, and all the boxing world now knows the winner to be a really good man and a clean, clever boxer.

SPORTING ITEMS IN BRIEF.

Champion Boxer Beaten.

In a boxing contest of ten three-minute rounds at Brest, Lassala, an American sailor, defeated Badoud, the champion of Europe.—Reuter.

An All-Round Sportsman.

Mr. W. Strutt Cavell, the well-known all-round sportsman, is a first cousin to Nurse Cavell, to whose memory the nation recently did honour.

Prince of Wales and Racing.

The Prince of Wales saw his first Derby race last week, but he will not be able to go to the St. Leger on Sept. 10 because of his forthcoming visit to Canada.

Cross-Channel Swim.

Jabez Wolffe, who has made twenty-one attempts to swim across the English Channel, and is now in his forty-second year, is getting into condition for still another try.

Baseball.

One of the most exciting games played in the Anglo-American League was seen at Stamford Bridge on Tuesday, when the Sunningdale nine defeated the Canadian Pay Office by 3 runs to 2.

The Two-Day Experiment.

There have not been many county cricket championship matches this season, but there is an almost unanimous opinion that, so far as judgment may be formed, the present experiment of limiting them to two days will not last beyond 1919.

Great Oarsman's Estate.

Col. William Alfred Littledale Fletcher, D.S.O., of Allerton House, Allerton, near Liverpool, the Oxford Rowing Blue and coach, one of the finest heavy-weight oarsman the world has produced, who died on February 14, has left property of the value of £113,254 7s 5d.

Braemar Gathering.

The announcement that King George is personally interesting himself in the revival of the Braemar gathering will give great satisfaction in the North of Scotland. Queen Victoria frequently attended the Braemar games, which are a picturesque survival of the old régime of the clans.

West Ham.

West Ham evidently mean to make a splash in the second division of the Football League. They had an excellent time financially last winter, and the directors in their report just to hand announce that they have entered into contracts amounting to £2,000 for ground improvements.

Billiards "Oversight."

A 16,000 up match between Tom Newman and Tom Carpenter, the champion of Wales, was begun at Thurston's this week. Owing to an "oversight," only one set of balls was available, this a practice set. These were not exactly true, and consequently did not respond to the finer touches of the players.

2nd INFANTRY 3DE. BOXING TOURNAMENT.

PROSPECTIVE STAR CONTEST IN COLOGNE.

On Tuesday and Wednesday last, the rustic town of Hennef resounded to the sound of mighty blows, when the 2nd. Infantry Brigade Boxing Tournament was held with great eclat. On Tuesday, the preliminary rounds were fought, and the following qualified for Wednesday's finals:- Welterweights: Cooper and Bevis. Middleweights: Smith and Collins. Lightweights: Lewis and Brady. Featherweights: Fox and Knapp. Bantams: O'Brien, Palmer and Callan. The foregoing were classified "B", that is, those who have never before entered the ring at a Battalion or bigger tournament. Class C, consisting of those who have never before won in a Battalion or bigger tournament, gave the following winners in the preliminary bouts:- Welterweights: Larby and Laurie. Lightweights: Cpl. Laxton and Parsons. Featherweights: Hepworth and Welsh.

The finals were fought off on Wednesday, in addition to a number of special contests. The winners of the finals were:- Class B. Welterweight: Pte. Cooper (1.M.B.). Lightweight, Pte. Brady (53 Beds.). Featherweight: Pte. Knapp (T.M.B.). Bantams. Pte. O'Brien (51st. Beds). Class C. Welterweights: Pte. Laurie (52nd. Beds). Lightweights: Corpl. Laxton (52nd. Beds.). Featherweights: Pte. Welsh (51st. Beds). Special Contests:- Pte. Moor (51st, Beds.), L/Cpl. Adams (52nd. Beds), C.S.M. Seager (51st. Beds), and Drummer Walters (51st. Beds.) There were two entries for the Heavyweights: Ptes. Hardwick and Slometzki, both of the 51st. Bedfords, but owing to the absence on leave of the latter, no contest took place.

Distribution of Medals.

Silver medals were distributed to the winners by Brigadier General F.H. Jackson, C.B., D.S.O. Commanding Bedfordshire Brigade. The Hennef Y.M.C.A. was filled to its utmost capacity on both days, by a large and enthusiastic audience. The boxing was of a quite good-class order, there being no "duds" in the experienced classes, and most of the "novices" proved to have a very useful knowledge of the "noble art."

Among the special contests, Drummer Walters (51st. Beds) and Corpl. Laxton (52nd. Beds.) put up a really scientific exhibition, in which there was practically nothing either way till, in the third round, Corpl. Laxton injured his right hand, which handicapped him so severely as to preclude all chance of his winning. It is understood these two doughty fighters will meet later in Cologne, in a star contest with a gold medal as special prize.

The referee was Lieut.-Colonel Betts, D.S.O., Deputy Inspector of Gymnasia, whose decisions met with the warm appreciation of the audience. The Judges were Major Delaney, M.C., and Captain Brown, both of the Gymnasium Staff. Time Keeper, Captain F.A. Coward, M.C. 51st. Bedford Regt. C.S.M. H. Robins of the Army Gymnastic Staff earned the gratitude of all for his untiring and successful efforts, both in the preparation of the meeting and in the conducting of the exhibition.

269 A.E. COY. v. IX CORPS H.Q.

A cricket match was played at Euskirchen on Tuesday between 269 A.E. Coy., and IX Corps H.Q., which resulted in a narrow victory for the former by 7 runs. Scores:—269 A.E. Coy. 47 (Pte. Moorhouse 16; Pte. Wilson 7 for 20; Pte. Glover 2 for 18). IX Corps H.Q., 40 (Sergt. Crawley 23).

E. C. HORTON BEATEN.

T. Payne (Morpeth) won the Bradford Whitsuntide walk over a 32¾ miles course, his time, 5hr. 9min. 45secs., being a record for this event. E. C. Horton (Surrey Walking Club) was second in 5hr. 17min. 51sec., and J. S. Kershaw (Yorkshire Walking Club) third in 5hr. 30min. 45sec. Payne took the lead at the start, and was never approached.

The R.A.S.C. Bakeries (Ehrenfeld) played R.A.S.C. Bakeries (Kalk) at the Y.M.C.A. Kalk on Wednesday, when the home team once again were the visitors. For the visitors mention should be made of Sergt. BURLESQUE AND FARCE AT THE DEUTSCHES THEATRE.

Undoubtedly one of the biggest attractions that has been staged at the Deutsches Theatre, Cologne, is "The Merry Muffins," the Highland Division concert party who are playing to crowded houses nightly.

The show is something unique, something in a class all on its own; its originality, vivacity and "go" stamp it as one of the best in Rhineland. Much can be said for the excellent producing of Mr. R.C. Matthews, the stage managing of Alex Factor, and the musical direction of E. Layne.

The first half of the progamme is devoted entirely to burlesque and song. The humour is distinctly fresh and extremely clever. Yesterday right from the opening chorus to the finale there was not a dull moment. "Muffin" Coates, late of Moody Manners, contributed "Neptune," his rich bass voice being used to much advantage. "Teddie" and "Davy", by the way, two excellent female impersonators, sang "All of an Ooh!" and "Dream Boat" respectively and were each loudly encored. Three songs, "Adam 'ad 'em" by Ernest Lonsdale, "Girl I left behind", Alex Factor, and "Gay Cavalier," Leslie Wilson, were received with great applause. "The Conductors we have seen," burlesque, by Max and Mr. R.C. Matthews, was quite a new study in silent humour, Max, with the big-drum, creating roars of laughter in conjunction with the finer subtleties of Mr. Matthews. The finale, comprising "Nuts in May," "Carry on the Good Work" and "Simple Melody," was particularly clever in its arrangement.

FAIR AND WARMER.

In "Fair and Warmer," "The Merry Muffins" have scored the biggest success since Leslie Henson's "Gaieties" production at Lille. As Mr. Bartlett (Billy), Mr. R. C. Matthews was inimitable. He has a style, which is entirely his own. "Teddy" as Mrs. Wheeler (Blanney) was so delightfully feminine — not to say risqué — that one wondered if he wasn't a girl. Ernest Lonsdale as Mr. Wheeler, Davy as Mrs. Bartlett, E. Layne Runacres as Tessie, and Bernard Dukes as Phil Evans were excellent in their respective parts.

The staging and production left nothing to be desired.

WAR SAVINGS.

The 1/5th Bn. West Yorkshire Regt. formed a War Savings Association under the chairmanship of Lieut.-Colonel W. Oddie, D.S.O. At the beginning of May, amounts so far invested by the men of the Bn. were 51,000 Marks or 1,058 certificates. In spite of the fact that over one hundred men of the Battalion have been transferred to other units, nearly 400 Officers, N.C.O.'s and men are members. Any man who is a War Saver is allowed to draw his full pay. Each Company has a clock or indication ladder, and great competition exists between them. The men are beginning to realize it is much better to save up their money to spend in England rather than waste it on cheap jewellery in German shops. Can any other Yorkshire Battalion beat this result?

OLD SCOUTS' CORNER.

CONDUCTED BY HAWK EYE.

Last Saturday afternoon, in ideal weather, thirty of us had a delightful ramble to Godesburg, under the able guidance of Mr. Silverwood. Tea was partaken of en route, and we are much indebted to the Y.M.C.A. at Bonn for their hospitality. From the ruins of the old castle, a magnificent view was obtained of the surrounding country, to give a fully descriptive account of which would take at least three columns. It was a field day for the camera fiends, and after a raid had been made on the picture postcard dealers and souvenir shops, we entrained for home, arriving at Cologne about 9.30 p.m. after a thoroughly enjoyable outing.

* * * *

At our last meeting on Wednesday evening, it was unanimously decided to run the Scoutmasters' "refresher" class as a troop on the patrol system, and this will be formed next week.

* * * *

At the "pow-wow" circle a paper was read on "The Future of Scouting," and this was followed by a lively and earnest discussion from which all must undoubtedly have derived considerable benefit.

* * * *

To-morrow (Saturday) we are going for a Rhine trip, by the kindness of the British Empire Leave Club, who are reserving a part of their boat for us. Will all those who intend coming please note that we are meeting by the tram terminus (Hohenzollern Bridge) at 9 a.m., so as to catch the special car which leaves for Bonn at 9.10 a.m. Each man must bring his own dinner rations, but tea will be provided, and the total expenses for the day will be 3.50 marks. We shall arrive back in Cologne at 7 p.m. So rally up, all old scouts, and let us have a good muster.

BRITISH EMPIRE LEAVE CLUB.

Last evening a more than usually enjoyable dance took place at the British Empire Leave Club. Two most important factors led to its great success. The presence of some thirty Members of the W.R.A.F. made the dance go with a swing and the band of the 9th D.L.I. (by kind permission of the C.O.) supplied a most enjoyable programme of music. The non-dancers in the gallery were able to enjoy the music as much as those who took the floor, and it is to be hoped that this dance will be the forerunner of many others, to which members of the W.R.A.F. and other organisations will come in greater and greater numbers.

HORSE SHOW AT HENNEF.

2nd EASTERN INFANTRY BRIGADE

Brilliant summer weather favoured the 2nd Eastern Infantry Brigade's Horse Show, which was held in the beautiful Sieg valley, near Hennef, on Whit Monday. The turf was in excellent condition after the recent rain, and the beauty of the surrounding country lent great picturesqueness to the scene. By two o'clock a large number of the Brigade had assembled, and the special train from Siegburg brought more. Many welcome visitors also arrived in the course of the afternoon, including the Corps Commander, Sir Henry Morland, and daughter, and the Divisional Commander, Major-General Nicholson, the latter driving on to the ground in a very handsome four-in-hand. The Bedfordshire colours fluttered everywhere; floral decorations brightened the ground and enclosures, and even the traditional horse show clown (mounted on a frisky mule) was not wanting. The orchestras of the 51st, 52nd, and 53rd Battalions provided a musical programme, and well stocked refreshment tents catered for the needs of all.

The programme of 17 events began promptly at 2 p. m. The judging was ably performed in Ring 1 by Major Hodgins, R.A.V.C. and Lt. H. Docker, 5th Lancers, and in Ring 2 by Major E. F. Budden, R. A., and Major I. C. Perry-Knox Gore, R. A. The interest grew as the events proceeded, and the horse jumping (both the brigade and the open event) caused special enthusiasm amongst the spectators massed on the bank above. The last two events, a mule scurry and an officers' scurry of three to four furlongs, caused a happy climax of interest. A most delightful day closed with the presentation of prizes by Brigadier-General H. C. Jackson, commanding the Brigade, the Brigadier's cup for the winning Battalion going to the 51st Bedfordshires.

OLD RUGBEIAN DINNER.

On Tuesday evening twenty-eight old Rugby "boys" of the Rhine Army fore-gatnered at dinner at the VI Corps Club, at the instigation of the Rev. M.W. Shewell, C.F., X Corps. The chair was taken by Major FitzRoy Gardner, as the oldest "boy" present.

In proposing the toast of the evening — "The School" — the chairman confessed to having been at Rugby as far back as the headmastership of Dr. Temple. He read out the names of "old Rugs" who had entered the school between 1864 and 1911, and had held commissioned rank in the present war — twenty five in all, one of whom, Col. Muir, had entered in 1865 and in 1915 been appointed A.A. and Q.M.G. The toast was responded to by 2nd Lieut. A.B. Steel, the youngest "old Rug" present, who left the school only last year. Among the Senior officers present were Lt.-Col. T.H. Mousley (10 years junior to the Chairman), Lieut.-Col. E.C. Caldecott, Lieut.-Col. R.K.A. Macaulay, Lieut.-Col. M.N. MacLeod, Lieut.-Col. E. A. Bray, Major H. F. King, Major M.W.M. MacLeod and Major W.G. Michelmore. The arrangements were excellently carried out by the Hon. Secretary, the Rev. M.W. Shewell.

HAGENBECK'S CIRCUS.

To everyone who enjoys good circus turns we heartily recommend a visit to Hagenbeck's show in the Aachenerstrasse.

The weather is a bit warm for a circus, and even in a well ventilated tent the calories make themselves felt, but our feeling was that it was worth it.

Among those items especially enjoyed we would mention some really good jumping by Russian hounds; the Sylphids in a wonderful aerial performance where numerous evolutions are performed while the ladies doing them are literally hanging by their teeth alone, some 15 to 20 feet above the sawdust; the geese that do not do the goose-step but perform simpler military manoeuvres with precision, and some really effective lion-taming feats where Herr Aug. Molker shows that he has his seven feline assistants well in hand.

Very clever trick cycling was performed by the Four Margentas, who were followed by the Lorch Family of acrobats. How hot they must have been! The child members were rarely on their own feet but spent most of their time within the ring passing from one bootsole to another. An older member of the "family" turned somersaults so rapidly that the eye saw a continuous disc of colour instead of an human being. It was a thoroughly good turn and the enjoyment of it was by no means lessened by the wonderful sang froid of the most junior member. Clowns, elephants and ponies brought an enjoyable show to a conclusion.

A member of the audience, an A.S.C. man on half-a-day's leave in Cologne was, we noticed, taking a busman's holiday. The sight of E.A.H. Boswell, who managed the Glasgow H.Q. business of the famous circus, watching a circus performance was too funny for words.

51st Bn. BEDFORDSHIRE REGT. CONCERTS.

On Friday last, Miss Silvas gave her 647th "one-man" concert to the naval and military forces of the Crown—on this occasion to the 51st Bn. Bedfordshire Regiment at the Y.M.C.A., Hennef. The talented artiste was formerly a member of the "Lena Ashwell Concert Party," but was "commandeered" by the Y.M.C.A.

Besides singing old favourites such as "Angus McDonald," she introduced several new songs, among them being "The Stoker of the Lusitania" and the "Resurrection Packet," both of which, rendered with histrionic effect and dramatic charm, entnused a highly appreciative audience. A novel feature of the entertainment was the whistling of popular choruses in which the audience joined heartily. Among the songs which pleased most, "Joan of Arc" deserves special mention.

On Saturday, the "Wasps" repeated their programme of Thursday, and again scored a phenomenal success.

NEWS IN BRIEF.

A mosquito bite was responsible for the death of Miss Ashley, a young lady of Seven Kings, who was buried at Ilford last week. She was bitten on the nose by the insect, and four days afterwards she died. She was 21 years of age, and was an accomplished musician.

At Northants Assizes the judge ordered James Botten, 15 years and nine months, to be detained during the King's pleasure for the murder of George Herbert Watkins, of Gunthorpe, near Peterborough.

Sir Robert Horne, Minister of Labour, has invited both sides concerned in the Lancashire cotton dispute to a joint conference, the date of which remains to be fixed.

The Marquis of Lansdowne is now reported to be making satisfactory progress.

PELMANISM IN THE OCCUPATION ARMY.

AN INVESTIGATION ON THE SPOT.

BY

ROY HARDY.

As a professional advertising man I was naturally very interested in the "propaganda" of Pelmanism, especially during these last few years of both intensive and extensive publicity campaigns. Knowing, as any good advertising man does know, that one of the elementary tenets of the profession, business, science, craft — call it what you will — of advertising is that you cannot advertise boldly in the public press for any considerable length of time with success unless you have, in the first place, a sound proposition, and in the second place, truth, I determined to find out, at the very first opportunity, something more about this contagious scientific brain control.

On referring to my records I found — I must acknowledge, to my surprise — that the Pelman Institute had been carrying on a system of mental training, even as far as I could trace, at least ten years. That decided it. I had come to London from Cologne on leave; I would call and investigate right away.

I immediately secured an interview with a Director of the Pelman Institute. He told me many things, he demonstrated many things, he showed me many irrefutable evidences, he proved many claims — claims of accomplishment and claims of results.

He told me they were greatly interested in the Rhine Army as they had many enthusiastic students there, and they had in fact just received authentic news that a General and his entire staff were Pelmanising for greater efficiency in the Army of Occupation.

MY MISSION.

I was asked if I would investigate the progress of Pelmanism among the troops in the occupation area. This I gladly undertook to do so far as time and opportunity permitted. What I have seen, what I have heard, what I have discovered since, have been to me far more convincing evidence than anything I had been shown in London, far more convincing even than the written evidences and eulogies of such eminent men as Sir John Foster Fraser, Sir Harry Johnston, Sir H. Rider Haggard, Sir Theodore Cook, Sir James Yoxall, Canon Hannay, Lieut.-Gen. Sir R. S. S. Baden-Powell, W. L. George, Max Pemberton, Sir A. Quiller-Couch, Admiral Lord Chas. Beresford, E. F. Benson, E. V. Lucas, Sir Wm. Robertson Nicoll, George R. Sims, Spencer Leigh Hughes, M. P., etc. etc.: all of which I had read in the papers.

I had no need to travel round as a missioner and advertise my main object and interest. On all hands soldiers were discussing "Pelmanism," whilst regularly, so many times a day, one was asked "What is this Pelmanism?" In these circumstances it was quite easy for me to glean all the information I wanted at first hand and without seeking or asking. Many would whisper confidentially and half apologetically in my ear that they thought they might "just out of curiosity" take up the Course .... "It would be interesting and fun anyway. It is difficult to get very much to read here — — it would perhaps while away a few half hours in the Stadtwald or on the banks of the Rhine."

Many spoke quite intelligently of Pelmanism and were obviously student beginners although they would not volunteer the information that they had taken up the study. Not so your finished Pelmanist however. The advanced student and those who had finished the Course had got over this early reticence and came boldly out into the open and were most informative and enthusiastic. I take it the Pelmanised mind must have made all the differences and removed many long-cherished, but entirely erroneous, impressions and preconceptions held by so many people regarding anything they do not understand — especially if it is widely advertised in good honest paid-for advertising space.

Mind you, I have been taking in all these impressions and spying into the whole thing, not as a Pelmanist, for I must confess I am not yet acquainted with the Pelman Course. I have constituted myself, on my own behalf and for the benefit of any who may read my impressions in print, a sort of personal one-man secret service.

I have penetrated into the ranks of Pelmanists in the Occupation Army, have found out to some extent what they are doing, what they are thinking, their theories, their opinions, their progress, their methods and all that is theirs; I imagined myself "up against" Pelmanism, as I might be employed by a Government against, say, Bolshevism, and have gone all out to secure first hand and valuable information from the 'enemy.'

I have succeeded — and I have gone over to the side of the "enemy."

THE SERGEANT WITH LEARNING DIABETES.

I talked to a Sergeant who is in charge of education for his unit, an Infantry Battalion. He is constantly being asked about Pelmanism by his students. He gives his reply by means of blackboard demonstrations and strongly advises all members of his classes, whatever specialistic subject they are studying, to take up the cult of Pelmanism in addition, as a help to a better and quicker learning of whatever they have chosen to learn in the Army classes. He points out that whether it is Languages, Mathematics, Shorthand, Geography, Literature, History, Mechanics, Farming, Art, or what not, the concurrent Pelmanising of the mind makes the brain retentive, more impressionable, more absorbent, whilst one's lessons learned and knowledge gained are so ordered and stored, methodically and systematically placed, that learning becomes a pleasure instead of a drudgery. This Sergeant certainly had what I should describe as learning diabetes. His appetite for learning was insatiable, his capacity for the acquisition of knowledge something to marvel at. He impressed me as a man with a card-indexed mind. He could place almost any fact or line of thought in a moment. The line of thought would seem to be his guide-card and from that he would immediately arrive at his card of "subject" or "branch of subject," thence alighting on his required fact.

Yes, Pelmanism is permeating the active service classes on the new front and is undoubtedly helping to turn what many felt would be wasted years of their life into years usefully spent in educational "finishing" and mental introspection that is resulting in the acquisition of new and brighter outlooks on life. This war has meant for many "going over the top" in more senses than one. They have been, in their pre-war civilian occupations, carrying on a sort of commercial trench warfare. Sitting in a trench however, never won a war, and never gained an objective. Sometimes they realised that, and now and then had made sanguinary raids in the hope of gaining some coveted prize or some better strategical position in the business world wherefrom to operate to a successful career. But the war pulled them out altogether, sent them "over the top." Now they are standing in no-man's land, at the parting of the ways, at a dead-end, and are tempted to say, "Now look how it has left me." If they only realised the position in it's true light they would know that they were really much better off than before and in a fair way to gaining their objective. I have spoken to many of these men, young Officers, N.C.O's, citizen soldiers of every rank, men from trades and professions, men who joined the Army straight from school and university with no clearly defined future at all. Yes, mercilessly out of their ruts, their trenches, standing in a mental no-man's land. I have spoken to men who are like this now and to others who had been in this depressing position. My talks eliminated the interesting fact that Pelmanism had come in many cases as a new arm, though not so much a reinforcement as a kind of necessary intelligence service. Just that 'something' required to point the way, to instruct, to open up a new outlook. It would seem to have provided the intelligence and staff work with[illegible] no campaign could succeed.

OUT OF THE RUT.

These over-the-top Pelmanists now [illegible] that the war, after all, has done a gree[illegible] for them. That whereas, in the ordinary peaceful course of things, they would even now be drudging out their days in some uninteresting and unprofitable capacity simply because they would not of their own strength have had the courage to come out and make a big push for success. The war brought them out in spite of themselves, Pelmanism pointed the way to progress, and gave them the right mentality to "get there." Many such, who, a few months ago, had no object in life, are now anxious to get on with things, and whilst some are looking forward to a brighter, more interesting and intelligent military career, others enjoy pleasant anticipations of the time when they will be demobilised and can go back to their pre-war or some new occupation with a new spirit altogether and a fresh viewpoint.

I read the published letter from a soldier in the A. of O. saying:—"You will be glad to hear that I have just been promoted. I attribute this entirely to the Pelman Course you enrolled me for last Christmas. It's the best present I have ever had. Lots of our fellows are Pelmanising out here. It's the best cure for that "fed-up feeling" we are all apt to get while waiting for the return to good old civvies." I found that was such an ordinary thing out here — that soldier's experience — that I did not trouble to collect individual testimony of that kind. I could quote scores of instances but the eulogistic strain is monotonous.

I notice C. 22094 writes, "I intend to master the German language, and I believe Pelmanism will be a help to that end." If what students of the German language here in Rhineland tell me is true, C. 22094 will master the language in a fraction of the time and much more pleasantly if he Pelmanises his brain at the same time.

And so, I would say, after my expedition into this overseas Pelman domain, that it has been amply and convincingly demonstrated to me that to the soldier, the student, the retained business or professional man, the man in search of a career and the man at a dead-end, Pelmanism has a message and an indefinable something that will effectually bridge the hiatus, whatever his own particular yawning gap may be.

Full particulars of the Pelman course are given in "Mind and Memory," which also contains a complete descriptive Synopsis of the 12 lessons. A copy of this interesting booklet, together with a full reprint of "Truth's" famous Report on the work of the Pelman Institute, and particulars showing how you can secure the complete Course on special terms, may be obtained gratis and post free by any reader of the Cologne Post who applies to The Pelman Institute, 496, Pelman House, Bloomsbury Street, London, W.C. 1.

PRIME MINISTER AND SOUTH AFRICA.

BRITISH SUBMARINE LOST.

GERMAN OPERATIONS IN ESTHONIA.

AERIAL ATTACK ON BOLSHEVIST VESSELS.

SOUTH AFRICA AND INDEPENDENCE.

PREMIER'S REPLY.

Mr. Lloyd George's reply to the Independence Deputation of the National Party of South Africa, which he received in Paris on June 5, is now published.

Mr. Hertzog, who was at the head of the deputation, said that their claim was for the restitution to the former South African Republic and Orange Free State of the national status obtaining before the war of 1899-1902.

Mr. Hertzog said:—

"Their solidarity of national feeling had sometimes been attributed to racial hatred. He said emphatically there was no racial feeling in South Africa, if by racial feeling was meant an antagonism due to race, between Dutch and English. The old population loved South Africa as the Englishman loved England. They felt far nearer akin to an Englishman when they came into contact with him than they did with anyone else, because of their education, their tradition, and those small things which could not be explained but in life went so far."

THE PRIME MINISTER'S REPLY.

In the course of his reply the Prime Minister said:—

"General Botha specially requested me to meet your deputation and to lay before you the point of view of the British Government, and I am very glad to do so.

It is quite clear that you do not claim to speak for the whole people of the Union, nor even for the whole people of the Transvaal and the Orange Free State, nor even for the whole of the Dutch-speaking people of those provinces. You represent the wishes of a party whose adherents are almost entirely drawn from the older Dutch-speaking population of South Africa, and whose policy, as a recent vote in the Union Parliament showed, is supported only by the representatives of the Nationalist Party. Further, as you informed me, the native population of South Africa is definitely against independence, and wishes to remain within the British Empire.

You ask for the restitution of the national status of the Transvaal and Orange Free State as it was before the war of 1899 to 1902. You ask it, so I understand, not because of any interference with South African affairs by the Government, the Parliament, or the people of the United Kingdom. In reply to my questions on this point, you said that there was less interference than ever before.

The case which you make is based purely upon South African considerations. I cannot see how it is possible for the British Government to reopen a great settlement because of political issues which have arisen between different sections of the South African people themselves. If the British Government were to intervene it would, in my judgment, constitute an interference with those rights which we once for all conceded to South Africa when the Imperial Parliament ratified the Act of Union drawn up by a Convention of the South African people and approved by the freely elected Parliaments of the four South African Colonies.

BOTHA AND SMUTS.

You say that some of the South African Ministers have been weak men and too subject to outside influences. I can only say that every soldier I have consulted has told me that General Botha was one of the most formidable opponents against whom he has ever fought, and that Field-Marshal Lord French has publicly said that he never had against him a more skilful general than General Smuts. I can also confirm from my own experience the power and influence exerted by these two Dutchmen, both in the councils of the Empire and in the Peace Conference itself.

The Boer people, loyally supported by South Africans of British origin, have completely justified the confidence and trust so fully put in them by the British Government and people.

Instead of raising any claim which would serve to divide once more the people of South Africa and re-open the ancient quarrel, they took the other alternative and, on a basis of full discussion, free agreement, and unfettered consent, entered into a lasting and indissoluble union with the rest of British South Africa. The constitution of the new Union was the free act of the whole people of South Africa representing both white races and all the Colonies.

The view of the British Government is that the Union of South Africa rests on a fundamental understanding and agreement between the British and Dutch elements of the people of South Africa, in which both made sacrifices and surrenders for the attainment of a great common ideal, and that it cannot be dissolved by the one-sided action of either element without the consent of the other. The people of South Africa exercised a free, deliberate, final choice. The proclaimed principle of self-determination to which you refer has been given effect to by the people of South Africa in the fullest, freest, most solemn and deliberate manner. We could not agree to any action which means the disruption of the Union.

The South African people control their own national destiny in the fullest sense. In the greatest Conference in history South Africa is represented by two statesmen of indubitably Dutch origin who have won for South Africa an extraordinary influence in the affairs of the world. It is futile to believe that South Africa can ever return to that isolation which was possible a century ago. The world has become too knit together. In the future League of Nations South Africa will have the same membership and status as, and far more influence than, any of the other States which are outside the ranks of the few Great Powers.

GERMANY'S ESTHONIAN CAMPAIGN.

RAILWAY HELD.

Stockholm, 10th June.—The Esthonian communiqué issued on Sunday night states:—

In the direction of Porkhoff (on the railway east of Pskoff) we advanced. In the neighbourhood of the village of Saeve we took six machine-guns and 300 prisoners.

In the directions of Ramotskoe (on the Riga-Wolmar railway) violent fighting took place with the German Landwehr. The enemy has destroyed a great part of the railway, and repairs are made difficult by enemy fire preventing the advance of our armoured trains.

Kreutzburg and Jacobstadt (on the southern Dvina, above Riga), which were taken by our troops on June 5, will be defended by Lettish troops under our command.

The communiqué issued on Monday morning states:—

In the direction of Porkhoff a detachment of the Northern Corps occupied the line Vantsova-Lopatova, and continued its advance in the direction of the station of Maramoshava.

In the direction of Ramotskoe violent fights took place with the German Landwehr.

Monday night's communiqué says:—

An aeroplane landed near Narva on Sunday, and two others to-day, bearing German nationality marks. The passengers were German officers and soldiers and Baltic Germans who had flown from Riga, and have been arrested.

On the Ostroff front (South of Pskoff) our scouts near the village of Harpalovka took 63 prisoners and a machine-gun.

On the Ramotskoe front, near Venden (which is on the railway 15 miles south of Wolmar) violent fighting took place on Sunday. As most of our forces were elsewhere fighting against the Bolshevists, we were forced to retire north of Wenden.—Reuter.

APPALLING SITUATION AT RIGA.

STREWN WITH CORPSES.

Stockholm, June 10.—A Swedish engineer named Fränkel, acting on behalf of the Swedish Government and the Swedish Red Cross, recently crossed the Baltic to Riga in a 40ft. motor-boat with provisions for the Swedes there, and returned on the 7th inst., bringing back about a dozen Swedish and Danish subjects from that town. M. Fränkel says:—

The situation at Riga justifies the most lurid descriptions which have been given. The streets offer a terrible appearance. They are strewn with the corpses of murdered inhabitants, and a large number of buildings have been damaged by bombardment. The whole town is in despair. There is a terrible lack of provisions, and the inhabitants are even baking bread from coffee grounds.

Every day the Bolshevists carried out wholesale executions. The Lettish troops took the town by surprise in order to avoid the massacre which had been planned to take place in the Central Prison, but they came 10 minutes too late, for about a hundred of the Riga bourgeois had just been murdered by the Bolshevists.

There is rivalry and even open antagonism between the Ullmann Government, which is supported by the Allies, and the German Baltic barons. The existence of the Government headed by President Needra, who is supported by Germany, aggravates the situation, and justifies the fear that the town may soon be retaken by the Bolshevists.—Reuter.

BOLSHEVIST VESSELS BOMBED AND GUNNED.

Kem, June 8.—Our seaplanes on Lake Onega this morning attacked with bombs four Bolshevist craft. Though no direct hit was secured, the seaplanes raked the decks of the enemy craft with machine-gun fire and succeeded in silencing their anti-aircraft guns.

The Bolshevists fled in a zigzag course and were pursued for a great distance. One seaplane returned to its base, reloaded with bombs, and then rejoined the flight. All our machines returned safely.—Reuter.

FEARED LOSS OF SUBMARINE.

The Board of Admiralty announces that a British submarine, operating in the Baltic, is overdue since the 4th June and is presumed to be lost with all hands.

W. HOHENZOLLERN—ADSUM!

The Vossische Zeitung states that an official placard has been posted at Brussels which runs: General Hoppfer, the ex-commandant of Doornik, ex-Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria (domicile unknown) and Wilhelm von Hohenzollern, now without occupation, residing at Amerongen, are invited to present themselves on the 14th October 1919 at 9.a.m. before the 8th Chamber of the Tribunal of Brussels in the Palace of Justice, Place de Poularde, to justify themselves.

The accusation concerns crimes committed in the name of these persons during the German occupation of Belgium.

THE GREAT VICTORY WAR LOAN.

PHENOMENAL FIGURES.

With the overnight issue of the Government prospectus of the great "Victory" War Loan in readiness for business yesterday morning, Britain puts its hand to the completion of the mightiest monetary effort that any nation has ever undertaken. The financial history of the war demonstrates the fact that Great Britain has been shouldering that tremendous task since 1914 not only on behalf of herself but in the interests of her Allies and the different parts of the Empire scattered throughout the world.

Figures relating to the various British Loans would in themselves have seemed incredible in pre-war days. The following vast sums have been raised in connection with various British War Loans; — The 3½ per cent Loan of 1914 raised £331,738,000: the 4½ per cent Loan of 1915 produced £592,346,000: while the 5 and 4 per cent Loans of 1917 attracted £ 1,000,313,000. In addition to these totals must be considered the enormous amounts borrowed in connection with Treasury Bills, Exchequer Bonds, and by other means. There is also the great sum raised by means of continuous borrowing — a system by means of which the Chancellor of the Exchequer was able to obtain more than £1,120,000,000 of new money for war purposes in twelve months. Mr. Bonar Law asked for £25,000,000 each week and he practically secured it.

When the final figures of War Bond sales between October 1917, and January, 1919, were announced they were found to aggregate £ 1,645,337,734, which gave a weekly average over the entire period of sixty-eight weeks of £ 24,196,143. The recent completion of the fourth series of War Bond sales shows a total of £ 79,842,571. On top of these amounts the sales of War Savings Certificates have to be recorded. At the end of last month the aggregate stood at £ 325,144,419. By that means a steady income is assured to the Government and a good investment to the public.

No limit has been given to the amount to be raised by the Victory Loan during the ensuing month. The Chancellor of the Exchequer has stated frankly the obligations of the nation and in some quarters £ 1,500,000,000 is regarded as the amount the nation should receive.

BIG GERMAN SOCIALIST CONGRESS.

LEGITIMATE PEACE CONDITIONS.

Some very pretty ideals were unfolded by the German Prime Minister, Scheidemann, at the opening of the Socialist Congress at Weimar. He said: "I do not want to exaggerate the danger, but I warn you, be on your guard if the reaction dares to touch the rights of the people. We do not want to go back, but forward, towards liberty."

After considering questions of German interior policy he concluded with a few remarks on foreign policy. "Force is a passing thing," he said, "right remains. Even if our adversaries did not retain one soldier we would rebuild France and Belgium. We are ready to conclude a holy contract, which shall, as the first sincere Peace Covenant in history, put an end to the last war of the world. Down with the weapons. No more war! Equal rights to the nations and to the individual. All with one another: all for one another. So from the chaos will come the new world. We are beaten indeed. Well, now let us go upward and forward—forward to victory!"

Herr Bernstein also spoke about foreign policy. He described Count Brockdorff-Rantzau as being quite a sensible man but not an international socialist and therefore not the proper man. Bernstein disapproved strongly the policy of the 4th of August. He declares that in France there was in August 1914 a government of peace; Poincaré sent to the King of England a letter which made for peace; but this letter was not published in Germany. Bernstein declared that nine tenths of the Peace conditions are legitimate. He asserted that the French socialists would have prevented war if the Germans had not crossed the frontier. He claimed always to have advocated the policy of the Entente in the East and said that Poland has a historical right to reconstitution, and to the position it held before the first partition.

For the future he urged that the German republic should still alter her spirit and demanded that Germany should candidly admit that she alone is responsible for the war.

ABOUT THOSE 50-MARK NOTES.

"ALL CLEAR" SOUNDED.

Since we advised our readers to get rid of the 50 mark notes dated 20th October 1918, Field Cashiers and others have been inundated with inquiries.

The statement that these notes would shortly be recalled emanated from Berlin but has now been officially contradicted.

The notes, therefore, are perfectly legal tender.

EXTENDING CONGO RAILWAY.

A Brussels dispatch to the African World states that the railway from Cape Town to Katanga is to be extended northwards from Bukama to Kibombo along the Lualaba (Upper Congo), and that the construction of the Congo-Nile railway is expected to start shortly.

Yesterday a family of eight persons was admitted to hospital at Glasgow with smallpox.

The Board of Trade returns for May show an increase of 9,749,767 pounds sterling in imports and 19,377,321 in exports.

Thirty fighting tanks at Wool (Dorset) training centre are for sale and will be disposed of by tender.

GERMAN CLERK IN AIR MINISTRY.

SENT TO PRISON.

At the Westminster Police Court, yesterday, Elvin Blumenfeld, 38, a German subject, insurance agent, of Wandon-road, Fulham, was charged, as an alien, with failing to have in his possession on June 2 an identity book duly filled in and attested. He was also charged with failing to notify to the police his change of place of business and with assuming a surname other than that by which he was known before the war.

The defendant, it was stated, was registered in the name of Herman. Rather than be interned he undertook work in a quarry in Wales, returning to London in December. In January he obtained a situation as a clerk at the Air Ministry in the name of Bloomfield, and when asked where he was born he answered "Brighton." He gave up this appointment at the end of May. The police found that he had entered nothing in the identity book issued to him when he registered.

The defendant told the magistrate that Bloomfield was the English for Blumenfeld. He had been in this country 35 years, and his father was a Russian, but he himself was born in Germany. He had used the name of Herman because that was his late father's professional name.

Mr. Francis, the magistrate, sentenced the defendant to six months' imprisonment with hard labour and recommended him for deportation.

OLD SOLDIERS FOR CIVIL SERVICE.

LABOUR MINISTER'S PROMISE.

The letter from Sir Robert Horne, the Minister of Labour, which was read at the annual conference of Discharged and Demobilized Sailors and Soldiers, in which he indicated that a scrutiny of Government offices is being undertaken with a view to ensuring that as large a number as possible of suitable places shall be occupied by demobilized men, has caused a flutter in Whitehall. It has not, however, been taken too seriously by the heads of Government offices, who have heard so much in recent years of comb-outs, and who know that it is possible for them to make the teeth of the comb very wide.

The promised comb-out mentioned by the Minister of Labour is at present at a very early stage, and no immediate results are expected from the scrutiny. It is understood that the Government are still considering what would be the best procedure for combing out the Departments, and it has not yet been decided whether the Minister of Labour or some other Minister should undertake the work or whether each Department should be called upon to indicate the cases in which substitution can be carried out.

The policy indicated by the Minister of Labour, that priority should be given to ex Service men in connection with employment in Government offices, was established before the war, when, owing to the persistent pressure of outside organizations interested in the welfare of ex-Service men, the Government gave them a preference for posts of doorkeepers and messengers. The extension of that preference to the clerical staff, which it is understood the Government now propose, opens a much wider door, for there are a large number of temporary clerks, both male and female, still employed in Government offices, for whom efficient substitutes could no doubt be found among the men who have been and are being demobilized.

DEMOBILIZING IMMOBILE "W.R.A.F.'S."

WOMEN SERVING ABROAD.

A certain number of the immobile members of the Women's Royal Air Force are being demobilized. These women are less useful to the force than the mobile section; if one station closes they cannot be transferred to another, as they live in their own homes. Some of them are married women whose husbands have been demobilized; others are returning to their civilian occupations.

About a month ago a number of "Wrafs" were sent to France for the first time. There are also some with the Army of Occupation in Germany, these being mainly clerks, cooks, and mess orderlies. There are very few "Waacs" (Queen Mary's Army Auxiliary Corps) in Germany. There are no "Wrens" (Women's Royal Naval Service) officially in that country, though two have been lent to the British Leave Club.

LIVERPOOL NEGROES TO BE INTERNED.

A representative of the Ministry of Labour arrived at Liverpool yesterday to deal with the situation created through the racial riots. The military authorities have undertaken to look after the demobilized blacks in the city. Efforts are being made to remove the remainder of the blacks who sought refuge in the Bridewell to an internment camp pending their repatriation.

BIGAMY ON THE INCREASE.

Seventeen bigamy cases were down for hearing at the Devon Assizes, which opened yesterday. Mr. Justice Lush said that notwithstanding the severity of the penalties inflicted the number of charges of bigamy showed a continual increase.

BOYCOTTING GERMAN SEAMEN.

A mass meeting of Cardiff seamen yesterday reaffirmed their former resolution not to sail with German seamen and to boycott Germans till they show repentance for the horrible crimes committed by the German military and naval forces against non-combatants on land and seafaring men following their lawful avocations.

THEFT OF ARMY PAY DRAFTS.

FURTHER REMAND.

Cecil Hall, the demobilized Army Pay Office clerk charged with stealing 50 Army postal drafts of the negotiable value of £700 from the Pay Department huts at Bucklands, Dover, was again remanded in custody at Tower Bridge yesterday. The drafts are alleged to form part of 5,000 missing from the huts.

At a former hearing it was stated that four blank drafts were left by Hall in a taxicab at Waterloo, and he was traced and arrested.

Major Cartwright, of the Army Pay Department at Dover, said each draft was negotiable at any post office on production of a demobilized soldier's protection certificate. Two of the five drafts received from the General Post Office as having been cashed in April were marked with a rubber stamp, "Special grant in lieu of gratuity." There was no such stamp in use at Dover pay office, and its effect might be to make drafts negotiable without the production of protection certificates. The four drafts found in the cab were stamped in the same way.

In January and February there was an extraordinary rush of work. Over 3,000 men were being demobilized daily, and a night staff had to be employed. The 5,000 drafts were handed to the office on January 21. Hall only acted as night watchman for two nights—January 26 and 27—and after he was demobilized on January 23, it was found that a cupboard had been forced open and the drafts and date stamp were missing.

FRENCH HONOURS FOR CHESHIRE BATTALION.

CROIX DE GUERRE WITH PALM

On Sunday, March 2, the General Officer Commanding-in-Chief, British Salonika Force, on behalf of General Franchet d'Esperey, the G.O.C. in Command Allied Armies in the Orient, presented the 12th (Ser.) Battalion Cheshire Regiment with the Croix de Guerre with Palm, recognition of their gallant conduct and magnificent attack on September 18, 1918. The battalion was mentioned in a French Army Order as "a marvellous battalion, which has shown the finest qualities of courage, enthusiasm, and endurance."

The order continues:—"On September 18, 1918, gallantly led by Lieut.-Col. A.R.C. Legg-Hill in person, it rushed to the assault of a strongly fortified position, showing a magnificent spirit of self-sacrifice. In spite of a cross fire from artillery, trench mortar, and machine guns, and of the loss of its commanding officer, who fell mortally wounded, the battalion continued to advance, making light of its heavy casualties, and thereby giving a glorious example of heroism, and maintaining the loftiest traditions of the British Army."

In the December dispatch of General Sir G. Milne, G.O.C. in Command, British Salonika Force, the battalion is again mentioned for its attack on the "P" Ridge in September. "After severe fighting the 12th Battalion Cheshire Regiment successed in reaching the third line of trenches. At this point they came under a devastating machine gun fire, and, unable to make further progress, were eventually compelled to fall back to their original position. In their heroic attempt they had lost about 65 per cent. of their strength, including Lieut.-Col. the Hon. A.R.C. Legg-Hill, D.S.O., who fell at the head of the battalion."

GREAT LEAGUE OF NATIONS DEMONSTRATION.

THE BRITISH UNION.

Elaborate arrangements have been completed for the great demonstration on the League of Nations at the Albert Hall to-day.

Viscount Grey is to preside and Lord Robert Cecil is to make an important announcement in connection with the Peace Conference. Among those who will support the Chairman are the American and Spanish ambassadors, the Danish, Greek, Swiss, Norwegian, Colombian and Chilean ministers.

In connection with the meeting, President Wilson has sent the following letter to the League of Nations' Union. "The signing of the League of Nations' Covenant is the first formal step toward the establishment of an effective League of Nations.

It is obvious that both the present and future generations should understand and support it in the spirit even more than in the letter. Uninformed opinion among the nations signatory to the Covenant might be a standing menace to the peace of the world. The task of regenerating the minds and wills of associated peoples needs to be taken in hand and pursued without respite so that all may see how great is the potentiality of the League for the promotion of international concord, co-operation and progress. The present opportunity is without parallel in human history. I understand that the British League of Nations' union is striving to use it to the full among the people of the British Isles and Overseas Dominions. I trust that its labours may be fruitful in the desire to stimulate the zeal of sister states in all associated countries. Peace can only be ensured by constant work and constant support of righteous covenants freely entered into. No work is nobler and none more urgent.

HEARTH AND HOME.

His Majesty, King George V, does not take lightly his role of sovereignty. Time and again during the war he has encouraged and inspired his subjects, and now that war seems to be over he is bent on paying ceremonial visits to his loyal lieges. This week he has honoured Leicester. It is almost three hundred years since a reigning monarch visited this Midland town, and there is a vast difference in the nature of the royal excursions. Charles I in days of civil war journeyed to Leicester to chide disloyalty, but George V in days of peace travelled to Leicester to bless allegiance.

We quote a notable sentence from our King's speech. He reminded the townsmen that "the character of English life is moulded in the home." That is a truth which every citizen of our Empire needs to learn, and it is meet that it should be uttered by our sovereign. England has always been a country which reverenced its homes, and throughout the world Englishmen have been guided and guarded by their devotion to the ideals which a happy home inspires.

It is now a truism that Britain's colonies rallied around her in the days of her sore need. We know full well the dangers of any particular inferences from this glorious pact of kinship, and we do not for a moment pretend that our colonial brothers-in-arms are so wedded to Britain that they see in her no failings. Indeed, they are often outspoken in their criticism of our national backwardness and narrow visions. Such criticism is all to the good, for it is the criticism of those who would win us for worthier enterprise. But what we do know is that most of our colonials use a metaphor that gladdens our hearts. To them England is "home." Even those who have never seen our country usually speak and write of it as Home.

It will be a sad day for Britain when her sons forget the lesson that King George has proclaimed. It is a lesson — and it is a warning. There are some signs that the authority, the kindly influences, and the ideals of home are not what they were. Even before the war youth became clamant for larger liberty, intensely opposed to any kind of repression, anxiously willing to pay its own price for life's experience. The home meant discipline, and discipline was irksome. And the years of war have not lessened the strivings and demands of youth.

There need be no room for pessimism. Youth is more terrible in its philosophy than in its practice. Freedom and joy have always been the attributes of youth, and most ages have been viewed as "very Heaven." In healthy youth there must be a spirit of rebellion rather than a cloak of stoicism. It is idle to expect that none will rapturously set out on the voyage of life with "Youth on the prow and Pleasure at the helm." The years bring their healing to the storm-tossed. If young men and women lost the sense of adventure the world would be poorer. Enthusiasm, idealism, independence are gifts of the gods, and the misuse of them should not make us belittle their worth.

But youth is not always to blame for the alleged decadence of English home-life. Many parents have forgotten their responsibilities, and have failed to make their homes attractive to their children. They have fluctuated between austerity and laxity, and have not bound to them the interests, pleasures, yearnings of their sons and daughters. These have soon discovered a lack of sympathy, and have gone from their homes to seek a more congenial atmosphere.

Further, the country's need has broken up many a home, and young women have had to nourish a spirit of independence whilst they engaged in the work of nursing, clerking, motoring, or munition-making. The times have been abnormal, and perhaps the very strangeness of the times will bring its own remedy. There must be many who miss the old pleasures of home and will gladly join the forsaken family-circle. Even in the British armies we hear of some who after years of service would not be averse to demobilization.

There is no reason why in the near future England should not recapture the privileges and inspiration of its old home-life. Many of us have gained a new outlook and have recovered a lost ideal. There comes a time when we do not weep with Alexander the Great that we have no more worlds to conquer, but are well content with the sights we have seen and the battles we have won. Our eyes turn homewards — "Mid pleasures and palaces though we may roam, Be it ever so humble there's no place like home."

In The Cologne Post of yesterday the question of housing was discussed, and it is a vital question. But the housing problem might be solved, and yet we might be far from perfect in our national culture. A State can build houses for its citizens, but it can not build homes. Stone walls may make a prison in a sense other than that of Richard Lovelace. A man might be the proud possessor of a mansion and yet be homeless. The Housing Question is intimately allied with matters that are sentimental and spiritual.

In olden days the colonists who left England for the New World could find no better names for their adopted lands than the names that reminded them of the homes they had left. New Plymouth, New Hampshire, Nova Scotia are a tribute to the Englishman's love of his English home. The old spirit is not dead; it awaits a quickening.

MY RISE TO GREATNESS.

BY "ALPHA."

I, a full private, had been appointed by our discriminating Adjutant to the dizzy height of the returns clerk of the Umpth Bn., Chesfordshire Regt.

As soon as this greatness was thrust upon me, visions of my people addressing my letters to "Battalion Headquarters Staff" floated before my eyes and the prospect literally made me dance with ecstacy. The envy of my fellows was as nectar to me, for does not an Orderly Room genius escape the wrath of the gods and does not he leave fatigues, guards and all their miserable accompaniments behind him when he takes his seat in the House of Justice? What a sweet vista the future held forth! I pictured permanent late passes in abundance, "buckshee" days on leave, and, last but not least, erstwhile tyrants cringing before me for items of exclusive news, like beggars waiting for the unconsumed portions of the days rations to fall off the rich man's table.

I sallied forth to the Orderly Room on my first day, at the respectable hour of 09.00 hours, with dreams of the Colonel, second in Command, Adjutant and all their lesser satellites drawn up under the verandah awaiting my coming and the sentry presenting arms to me when I came into the offing.

Were these Lords of Creation there and did the sentry pay me tribute? No! My welcome was of the stony variety. At first when I was approaching I was quite pleased to see the sentry turn the guard out, I was also quite pleased at his good taste and was just preparing to acknowledge the compliment when looking round I discovered that the object of his kind attention was the Colonel who had majestically emerged from the Mess, over the way.

I was rather melancholy over this when at last I entered the busy hive and reported, in the same state, to the Orderly Room Sergeant, an asthmatical looking personage who refused to return my "Good morning" and who also ignored my felicitations as to the state of his health. He was like unto a Sphinx and disposed of me merely by beckoning to another individual, who was in all the glory of "staff" buttons and two stripes.

This autocrat conducted me to a seedy looking desk and curtly bade me carefully to study the list of returns. I commenced doing so but after wrestling with it for fully half-an-hour I murmured something uncomplimentary and gave it up. I wildly thought of wiring Datas and requesting his help but dismissed the idea as unbecoming to a soldier. I commenced counting them but lost count after passing 200. What could I do? I was in the throes of dispair and was beginning to think of a river near-by where one could die a nice, comfortable death, when the situation was saved by a bright "second pipper."

He discerned on my countenance signs of the intelligence, sadly lacking in those of the other denizens of the office. He rushed across and wildly beseeched me for an O. 1771. The other clerks looked round and pricked up their ears for a declaration of ignorance from their latest confrère. This, however, was not forthcoming for, happily, I possessed a cousin thrice removed, who was a "Lootie" in some third rate regiment and who had thoroughly primed me in the difficulties of these awesome forms, as he was fully convinced that I should be promoted to commissioned rank on the initial day of Army life.

I gave the agitated "second" half a dozen and also gave him minute instructions on how to fill them in. He departed in high glee, murmuring about life long gratitude etc.

The sequel to this came in two days time when his account was credited with the amount claimed. This marvellous happening was, needless to say, due to my teaching and upon the Colonel being notified of the circumstances, I was at once appointed Orderly Room Sergeant and awarded the Meritorious Service Medal.

There my lightning-like career ends for the present, but who knows, I may become R.S.M. and the fruits of victory will be most sweet to my jaded palate.

A MONUMENT OF SHAME.

PROPOSED MONUMENT TO GERMANY'S LOSSES.

The Vossische Zeitung, while realising its impracticaibility, publishes an interesting suggestion from a correspondent in Upper Silesia. It is to the effect that Germany should erect a huge monument as a reminder to coming generations that the effects of war are not necessarily of a beneficial character. He adds, "Had we won the war, we would have held great festivals and erected a huge monument. But we have lost the war: ought we not to gather together for a festival of mourning and leave a tangible warning sign to all who shall come after us?"

He proposes to "erect" a huge heap of stones, easily obtainable near the capital, in the form of a pyramid and suggests that everyone who naturally speaks the German tongue; all who have suffered the privations and who mourn the loss of relatives and friends should add a few stones. Three stone tablets would commemorate the killed, the wounded, and the hungry respectively while a fourth might bear the word "Shame."

No architects would be necessary and if everyone did his bit it would take years—10 or 15—to complete the scheme thus keeping green in German minds the terrible possibilities of war.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

The Editor, in publishing letters from Correspondents, will use his own discretion, and if necessary limit the publishing of correspondence on any subject whatever. It must be understood, however that he is not responsible for the views stated.

All communications for this column should be brief and to the point, and preference will be given to those which bear the writers' signatures for publication. No letter will be published unless accompanied by rank name, and unit of sender, which are needed for the purpose of reference.

Many letters of a perverse nature have reached the office, and the Editor wishes to point out that these only cause waste of time both to the writer and the Editor himself. Letters of this nature will not be published.

INTERNATIONAL LANGUAGES.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—If English should become the international language as your contributor "A. M." thinks it will, we shall feel greatly gratified and complimented; but if we wait till such is achieved, a good many generations will pass away. Meanwhile we have a perfect instrument ready to our hand in what your correspondent calls the "artificial" language of Zamenhof.

"Artificial" is not a fair term to apply to Esperanto, it is not more artificial than any other language. The human race has in the course of the ages devised articulate speech to communicate, as well as to formulate, its ideas, and this has become, by a process of local and racial development, sub-classified into a number of languages and families of languages. This has been done by the working of intelligence. Zamenhof examined these languages and, eliminating the non-essential parts, extracted from them all the precious essence of human speech and presented it to the world in a form so pure and simple that all persons, no matter how little learned, an use it, if they will, for world-wide intercommunication. This does not deserve to be called artificial. It is the stroke of genius, accomplishing in one lifetime what countless generations with slow steps had gradually been evolving. If the one is artificial, so is the other.

But, artificial or not, Esperanto, the "Language of Hope" for the world, enables us to do with the greatest ease what no language beside can enable us even to attempt. I have myself, for example, corresponded at length with an intelligent Russian, with not one word of whose language I am acquainted, and freely exchanged ideas. You can write Esperanto practically at once, with hardly any preparations. Speaking — like pianoforte playing — needs practice.

Beside this, the International Language is by far the best means of imparting the elements of language to young children, who, as the late Prof. John Mayer said, should begin with it at five years of age. This I cannot labour now. But the need of a common medium of intercourse so well put by your contributor, calls for our immediate attention; and here, unless some strange misconception or childish prejudice prevents us, we have the highest product of genius, the ore of human speech purified of accretions, refined in the melting-pot, and capable of employment by the man in the street, as well as by the philosopher, for brotherly intercourse, without delay and without difficulty, with those from whom the curse of Babel has hitherto shut him off.

A. C. DOWNER.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.—Re your article "Wanted—an International Language," in June 10th issue, A.M. writes: "Whether it (Esperanto) is as easy as its advocates claim, may be doubted." The two enclosed booklets may convince him of its easiness. I have letters occasionally from a Belgian lad (to whom I only gave two lessons) which are written in good Esperanto. He studied one of these red booklets (10 centimes). Will you please forward these to A.M. with compliments from.

THE SCIENCE OF WEALTH.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.— Many years ago, Adam Smith wrote a book, on the subject of political economy which he called "The Wealth of Nations." But, since that book was written, people have made a political economy of their own; they refuse to conform to the precepts set forth by Adam Smith. Workmen say among themselves: "We shall take care that we will not work hard enough to make the nation wealthy, and, we shall also take very good care that we will not make our employer wealthy; for the highest wages we shall do the least amount of work, and thus we make ourselves wealthy." This has been the condition of England for many years.

Knowing this to be the case, John Ruskin, the famous author of "Modern Painters," devoted the last years of his life to the study of political economy, the principles of which he gave to the world in the form of a volume of essays "Unto this Last."

To-day it seems that political economy is a dead science. People do not realise that it is only by a close study of the science that Nations can become prosperous.

I believe that all the discontent and unrest in the labour world is caused by ignorance of the true principles of political economy. In order to make ourselves happy and our nation prosperous we must make a close study of one of the most interesting of sciences, political economy, the science of wealth.

CANTEEN PRICES.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.—A rather interesting letter appears in today's issue of your excellent paper re Canteen prices.

It is about time, Sir, that those in authority took steps to prevent the overcharging in canteens—chiefly regimental.

A printed list of prices should be placed in every canteen—great or small—and this list should be the one approved and passed by the Officer i/c Rhine Army Canteens.

GERMANY AND THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.—If I were a wealthy man with nothing to do, I would spend every halfpenny of my money, every moment of my time, endeavouring to obtain signatures throughout the length and breadth of the British Empire, against Germany being admitted to the League of Nations. The very idea makes my blood boil with indignation when I think of what such an admission to this country means. One of the many things it means is this: that the lives of our gallant sailors and soldiers, Imperials, Auxiliaries, Colonials—officers and men, which have been sacrificed in the past awful five years, will have been more or less sacrificed for nothing. Those boys did not die for that.

EXCITING CRICKET AT ALTENRATH.

MATCH ENDS IN A "TIE."

A most successful friendly match took place at Altenrath last week between Lieut. Horst's team from "B." Company, 10th Royal West Kent, and an XI from "W." and "X." Companies of the 51st Royal Sussex Regt. The Royal Sussex led by 17 runs on the first innings, and were set to get 78 to win in the second innings. The 9th wicket fell with 14 still required for victory. Thirteen of these were obtained, when a catch in the slips disposed of the last man, as he made a great attempt to knock the cover of the ball. Thus another was added to the list of matches resulting in a "Tie" (Wisden's Almanack, please note!)

The R. West Kent team was very nearly disqualified at one period of the game through fielding twelve men, Charlie Chaplin having taken post beside R.S.M. Judge. The R. West Kent XI arrived overnight, which may account for the poor scoring in the first innings especially in the case of some well-known members. The refreshment arrangements on the ground were most capably carried out by "The Old Firm." Umpires:—Lieut. Collett and Pte. Chart. Scores:— 10th R.W. Kent Regt. 1st Innings 37. 2nd Innings 94. (Pte. Palmer 35.) 51st R. Sussex Regt. 1st. Innings 54 (Pte. Edden 24.) 2nd Innings 77. (C.S.M. Bell 21.) Bowling:— For 10th R.W. Kent Regt. L/Cpl. Wratten 5 for 23 and 2 for 28. Pte. Palmer 5 for 31 and 3 for 34.

For 51st R. Sussex Regt. Lieut. Lushington 6 for 23 and 5 for 29; C.S.M. Bell 3 for 18; Pte. Edden 4 for 14.

51st BATTN. MANCHESTER REGT.

OFFICERS v. REST OF THE BATTALION.

1st Innings: Rest of the Battalion 78. Officers 96. 2nd Innings: Rest of the Battalion 85. Officers 105 for 4 wickets. Played at Stieldorf on Whit Monday, this match was very interesting especially in the first innings, as the officers were only 59 when their last batsman Lieut.-Col. Watson C.M.G., D.S.O. went in, but he and his partner played well together and brought the score up to 96 and then declared.

In the second innings Lieut. Mulholland 35 and Lieut. Hunt 34 not out were the chief scorers, whilst Sergt. Thornton contributed 34 for the rest. Lieut. Thwaites was the most successful bowler taking 4 wickets for 15 runs.

UNRULY SPECTATORS.

"C" COY, 53rd MANCHESTERS v. L. N. LANCS.

The above teams played a football match on Tuesday. Great interest was aroused owing to the L.N.L. having beaten "A" and "B" Coys. of the Manchesters's; and at 6.15 p.m. the game commenced. The L.N.L. had plenty of supporters with them. After 20 minutes play the L.N.L. centre scored the first goal with a fine shot from fully 25 yards out. Five minutes from the interval the L.N.L. registered another point, again through their capable centre.

The second half opened in a spirited style, the "City" doing everything but score. From a free kick the lead was reduced through Sergt. Donley, who beat the L.N.L. custodian in fine fashion. The "Lancs" rallied and got the ball into the net, but not before the referee blew for offside. This caused the L.N.L. supporters to get unruly, and their attitude to some of the players was hardly sportsmanlike. The hard-fought game ended with L.N.L. the winners by 2 goals to 1.

13th v. 51st KINGS (LIVERPOOL) REGT. OFFICERS.

The above teams met on the former's ground at Beuel on Whit Monday. The 51st batted first, but owing to the deadly bowling of Lieuts. Baidley and Whittaker, only managed to compile 23 runs. The former took four wickets for 6 runs and the latter 6 wickets for 17 runs. In the second innings they showed better form, knocking up 68 before the last wicket fell. Result:—

13th Kings:— 1st innings, 65; 2nd innings, 51 (for 2 wickets).

51st Kings:— 1st innings, 23; 2nd innings, 68.

1/12th LOYAL N. LANCS DETACH. v. "C" COY., 53rd MANCHESTERS.

The North Lancs again kept up their record against the 53rd Manchesters by defeating "C" Coy. on Tuesday by 2—1.

At half time the N. Lancs led by 2—0, but "C" Coy monaged to score in the second half.

O'Dowd on Jimmy Wilde.

O'Dowd, in speaking of his European experiences to a New York interviewer, was full of praise for Jimmy Wilde, whom he described as "the greatest fighting machine he had ever seen."

RHINELAND "JESSOPIANS."

Century Exceeded By "Cologne Post" Cup Competitors.

Some notable achievements are recorded in today's reports of recent matches in "The Cologne Post" Cricket Competition; notably the brilliant batting performances of Pioneer House, Lancs Div. R. E. Co., and Gnr. Weight, 93rd Bde R. G. A. Pioneer House, in compiling 140, has made the highest score in the competition so far, while Gnr. Weight in scoring 138 (not out) comes second. Gnr Willan, 488th Siege Battery R. G. A., whose bowling analysis against the 269 A. E. Coy., reads 7 for 1 is another gifted cricketer.

FOR SECRETARIES TO NOTE.

"COLOGNE POST" LEAGUE TABLES ABOUT TO BE PUBLISHED.

Now that the various leagues are well started the publication of The Cologne Post League tables will be looked torward to with some interest. The tables cannot appear for a few days yet as a number of clubs have not yet played a match. In some instances secretaries have written explaining why the matches could not be played, but in other cases we have heard nothing, and this rather hampers the organisation of the competition. It is obvious that if arrears are allowed to pile up, there will be complications later on and secretaries are asked to make every endeavour to get and keep fixtures up to date.

As has been previously intimated the dates announced for fixtures are intended as a guide, not as a hard and fast rule, and matches can be played before the date given, just as happens to be most convenient. Nor does the first mentioned team necessarily indicate the home team. All clubs have not grounds and many who have made pitches have not informed us, and clubs are left to arrange between themselves where the matches shall take place.

The secretaries of the following clubs are requested to notify us of the location of their Units:— 52nd Manchester, 21st Bde. R.G.A. 15th K.O.S.B., 90th Field Coy., 10th A. & S. Highlanders, No. 1. Light Rly. Sig. Co., 24th Vet. Hospital, 13th M.A.C., 51st R. Warwick. "B" Corps Sig. Coy., and 31st Labour Group.

488 SIEGE BATTERY R.G.A. (68) v. 269 A.E. COY (12). The company batted first and made 12 runs, the low scoring being largely due to the good bowling of Gunner Willan, who accounted for 7 wickets for 1 run, his performance including the hat trick. The third wicket fell for 147, but afterwards wickets fell rather rapidly. For the 1/5 West Yorks, Pte. Illingworth batted exceedingly well and before being dismissed made 82. The second wicket well for 43. Pte. Gasgoine joining Pte. Illingworth, they soon passed the 100, but shortly afterwards Pte. Gasgoine was dismissed for 19. The remaining batsmen did not stand for long against the bowling of Beebee and Jacobs. Lieut Riley made a well-hit 17, the last wicket falling for 176.

13th M.A.C. (48) v. 420 S.B., R.G.A. (87) on the former's ground at Mulheim on Wednesday. For the winners Metcalf scored 23, Hubbard 13, and Barker 13. Against this the Medical Drivers could only raise 48, Pte. Hills with 17 runs being the only one to show serious opposition to the excellent bowling. Hubbard (3 for 18) Sulley (3 for 5). Greenhalgh (2 for 5), and Metcalf (2 for 13) made rungetting difficult.

CAVALRY DIVISION H.Q. met 51st AUX. BUS. COY. at Quadrath, and suceeded in securing their third successive victory in our Competition. The Bus. Fox batted splendidly and made 47 before being out. The innings was declared closed at 119 runs for 8 wickets. The Bus. Coy. batted a second time, but could only muster 27. DRUMS, BUGLES, AND RATTLES.

52nd LEICESTER REGT. v. 1/5th SOUTH STAFFS REGT.

The above teams met in the final for the 2nd Midland Brigade Inter-Company Cup Competition on Saturday at Ober Gartzen. Both battalions had made every effort to give moral support to their representatives by turning up in force armed with drums, bugles, rattles, jazz apparatus and other weapons whereby their lusty voices could be assisted. Many of the supporters were bedecked with ribbon displaying the colours of their champions. The paddock was filled with vehicles of every description, many having a very ancient appearance, and none of them being very "G.S." However, they had brought many people of note from Generals down to drummers. The G.O.C. 2nd Midland Brigade, Brig, General Craufurd, Col. Becher Commanding 52nd Leicesters, Col. Morgane, Commanding 1/5th South Staffs, together with the brigade staff and many officers from both regiments were present.

The game started promptly at 18.00 with the S. Staffs facing the sun. End to end was followed by a good effort by the B.E.F.'s right wing which resulted in Brooks scoring. This advantage was not long enjoyed by the Staffords, for an extremely clever goal was scored by Corpl. Sheard. About ten minutes from the interval a "scrum" near the Leicesters, goal enabled Taylor to put the Staffonds one up. The score therefore stood at half time at Staffords 2, Leicesters 1.

Pace Decidedly Slower.

Upon the opening of the second half it was obvious that the heat and the pace had told its tale on the players; for though it was severely contested and brimful of excitement yet the pace was decidedly slower.

The Leicester boys were playing a very persistent game and clever withal. The Staffords, though "groggy", were "triers" and put up a fine "ding dong" battle. The Staffords' goal was frequently in danger, but their backs and goalkeeper frustrated many onslaughts. The "youngsters", however, were finally rewarded, for an accurately centred ball from the right was headed out of the reach of the Staffords' goalkeeper about three minutes from time. This placed both teams with 2 goals each to their credit.

A draw represented the game, for on the one hand—Leicesters—there was cleverness, vim, and nippiness; whilst on the other—Staffords—solidarity, experience and weight.

BRIGHT SPORTS AT RIEHL ON WHIT MONDAY.

"B" COY. 52nd DURHAM L. I.

The sun shone on a hard-baked ground as the competitors, looking cool and fit in their running garb, streamed on to the field. The splendid running of Pte. N. S. Johnson is deserving of special mention and we are looking forward to his doing well in the near future. The one mile flat race was much more exciting than is usual for this distance and we compliment Sgt. Riley and Pte. Pheasant on the magificent race they gave us.

An excellent tea was provided on the field and as a grand finale the whole Coy. lined up for a sprint and as nearly everyone claimed a place the judges had their work set to spot the rightful winners. Everyone agreed that "B" Coy had kept up its reputation of being the leading Coy. at sports in the Battalion.

EVENTS AND WINNERS.

CAV. DIV. H.Q. SUCCESSES.

GOOD BOWLING BRINGS THREE VICTORIES IN THREE DAYS.

The Cavalry Divisional H.Q. cricket club have had a most successful holiday, especially from a playing standpoint. On Saturday last they met the Cav. Div. Aux. H.T. Coy. and won by 91 to 29, the match being played on the latter's ground.

On Whit Sunday they were at home in their return game with the Cav. Div. Anmunition Column (R.H.A.). The latter made 44, and although the H.Q. lost 5 wickets for 17 runs, Cpl. Harvey and Spr. Bennett took the score to 49 before being parted for the sixth wicket. The final score was 69 for 7 wickets, the thunderstorm putting the closure on the game.

On Whit Monday the Cav. Div. H.Q. entertained the R.A.S.C. from Horrem, and the latter were easily defeated, losing by an innings and 120 runs, so the H.Qrs. thus won their third successive victory in three days. The outstanding feature in these games was the bowling, as will be seen from the following figures:— Cpl. Adams, 11 wickets for 23 runs; Spr. Evans, 11 for 24; Sergt. Keevil, 13 for 47; Lieut. Neil, 5 for 8.

Against the above bowlers the R.A.S.C. on Whit Monday were only able to make 23 runs in the first innings and 22 in the second. On the other hand, the Cav. Div. H.Q. batted in merry style, rattling up 163 for 9 wickets. Spr. Dearnley (28), Spr. Bennett (25), Lieut. Neill (25), and Lieut. Jennings (24) being the top scorers.

EXCITING TUG-OF-WAR CONTEST

"A" COMPANY 16th BN. HIGHLAND LIGHT INFANTRY.

"A" Company 16th Bn. H.L.I. held a very successful sports meeting at Landwehr last week with the kind permission of their Commander, Lieut.-Col. Kyle, C.M.G., D.S.O.

A cross country race, of about two and a half miles, was the first event of the day, and as the track lay through the most thickly populated part of Landwehr, the harriers acted as a splendid advertisement to those who had not been warned of the sports. The first man home was Pte. McLean, who came in well ahead of the others.

The tug-of-war was a hard-fought battle, causing great excitement among the spectators.

The best dressed soldier was Pte. Bulloch, but Lieut.-Col. Kyle, who judged this, admitted having had an extremely difficult job, and had to call in the assistance of a neutral Company Commander.

After tea, Lieut.-Col. Kyle, C.M.G., D.S.O., very graciously presented the prizes to the victorious competitors, and kept all present in the best of humour by his witty stories and kindly remarks. After a speech by the Commanding Officer and one by our Padre, the Rev. Captain McHardie, M.C., the gathering dispersed to clear the hall for a "Jazz Concert." It was a very contented crowd which turned in that night.

GLASGOW BATTALION ENTERTAINED.

A Glasgow contemporary states that a gathering of about 450 officers and men who have served with the 16th Highland Light Infantry (the Boys' Brigade Battalion) was held in the Trades House, Glassford Street, last week, when an entertainment was provided by the ladies of the Comforts Committee. In the course of the evening it was decided to form an association with a view to the promotion of social intercourse and the maintenance of the esprit de corps of the battalion. Lord Provost Stewart presented the medal ribbons to two members of the battalion who have been awarded the Distinguished Conduct Medal and to six who have been awarded the Meritorious Service Medal. It may be mentioned that on the return of the cadre of the battalion from Germany, the Corporation propose giving the men a civic reception. Major W. D. Scott, D.S.O., M.C., second in command of the battalion, occupied the chair, and on the platform were other officers of the battalion, representatives of the Magistrates and Town Council, and Mrs. Kyle, wife of Colonel Kyle, C.M.G., D.S.O., colonel of the battalion. The Chairman, in his opening remarks, said that no doubt it had been noticed that Colonel Kyle had been honoured in the Kings' Birthday List by being awarded the C.M.G.

THE BATTALION'S HONOURS.

The Lord Provost recalled that the battalion was formed by the Corporation in September, 1914, the nucleus being ex-members of the Boys, Brigade. The battalion proceeded to France on November 23, 1915, and had taken part in some of the most important engagements. It was now stationed in the Cologne district as part of the British Army of the Rhine. The citizens had followed with keen interest and the greatest pride the battalion's victorious history in the field. They would endeavour as early as possible to find work for every man who required employment. The officers who had served in the battalion numbered 200, and of these there had been killed in action no fewer than 33. Three thousand men had served, and of these 838 had fallen in action. They rejoiced at the honours which had been bestowed on the battalion. In all there had been 5 Distinguished Service Orders, 16 Military Crosses, 11 Distinguished Conduct Medals, 13 Meritorious Service Medals, 100 Military Medals for bravery, and 6 foreign decorations. (Applause.) That was a record of which any battalion might be proud. The citizens were proud of the battalion, and the welcome they would get would be of the heartiest description.

Major Scott acknowledged the congratulations of the Lord Provost. In the course of the evening Major Hunter moved a resolution thanking Mrs. Kyle and the ladies of the Comforts Committee for the work they had done for the battalion during the war. Ex-Treasurer M'Millan replied for the ladies.

THE NORTHERN LIGHTS.

This significant and suggestive title is not meant to describe the celestial phenomenon known as the "Aurora Borealis," but it is the nomenclature which the brilliant and well-equipped Northern D.A.C. Concert Party have willingly appropriated. The party under the experienced and versatile leadership of Lieut. S.R. Markham appeared for the first time at Brauweiler on Saturday, and followed up a very successful evening with a concert at Klein-Königsdorf on Thursday. On both occasions they proved beyond doubt an A to Z troupe.

The programme included an opening chorus, "Marching with the Band", which went at the double; a song "Honolulu" by Bombardier Grey, which was funny; Comedy Quartete (Lieut. Markham, Bombardier Barry, Drivers Maynick and Smith): enjoyable dances by Gunner Hart; a sketch "See How the Snow Falls" — Lieut. S.R. Markham, Bombardier Barry and Gunner Hart, which was other than chilly; song "Nirvana," by Corporal Dykes, a rich baritone of great promise; and enjoyable violin solos by Bombardier Barry.

Lieut. H.B. Reid made a charming female impersonator and might be aptly described as a "model Parisienne" or a well veiled "Kirchner." The programme ended with a concerted piece "The Military Representative."

SUCCESS OF BRITISH TRADE IN COLOGNE.

We are pleased to learn from the representatives of Mr. Bernard Weatherill, the Conduit St. tailor, that success has attended their enterprise in coming to Cologne in order to get into direct touch with their past and prospective clients. They expect to have to return to London burdened with orders, in a few days, but will return here as soon as possible. Many would like to see more British firms trading directly with the Rhine Army. There is much business to be done and much profit to be made.

PHOTOGRAPHY AND ART.

X CORPS' SUCCESSFUL EXHIBITION AT BONN.

The Exhibition, although a speculative enterprise, has proved a great success.

It has been the means of discovering much talent hidden away in remote corners of the 10th Corps, and has been an opportunity for the exhibitors to be ambitious to do their best work.

The Photographic Section contained 142 photos and the Art Section 130 pictures.

The Corps Commander, under whose patronage the Exhibition was organized, very kindly paid a visit of inspection on Sunday morning, and expressed his appreciation in a substantial manner.

The chef-d'oeuvre of the Exhibition was unquestionably the black and white study by Captain Robinson, 168th Brigade, R.F.A. It depicts a file of Tommies coming out of the line. It is full of that life and vigour, bold decision and sureness of purpose which characterize the master hand. It is worthy of a place among the best war pictures created.

Capt. Robinson also carries away the laurels in the water colour section, with his study of German prisoners of war in their cage. Though using a most delicate medium, he contrives to convey his ideas forcefully, each figure in the group being a delightful character study. It is scant praise to prophecy that Capt. Robinson will go very far in the world of Art.

The award in the Oil Painting Class of the Art Section has been given to Sapper Duffy, 219th Field Company, R. E., for his excellent landscape. He displays great skill in his work, and with a more striking subject should eventually make a name for himself.

Pictures which are highly commended by the judges are the two delightful studies of Dead Horse Corner and Zillebeke Lake, in the late lamented Ypres Salient. These two pictures are remarkable for their wealth of accurate detail and delicacy of outline. They are the contribution of Pte. C. H. Green, M.T., A.S.C.

The clever drawing of General Sir Herbert Plumer by Pte. G. B. Haslam, 13th King's Liverpools, has also been commended.

Cpl. Harris, 10th Corps Wireless Section, exhibited a picture of "Still Life" which earned much praise.

In the water colour section is an excellent group of landscapes and cartoons, also a couple of figure studies by Lieut. H. C. Williams, 4th Royal Sussex. His best is certainly "Silver Morn" which, with several other of his pictures, only just falls short of being very striking. His workmanship is excellent, and his cartoons, particularly his D.A.P.M., Cologne, are distinctly clever.

L/Cpl. Norman, 16th Lancs Fusrs., contributed an excellent landscape target, and L/Cpl. Davies, of the 10th Corps Topo Section, is highly commended for his wash and line drawing "Bruges."

Capt. Johnston, Xth Corps Cyclist Battalion, exhibited a very interesting collection of Army, Corps and Divisional signs. The series contains 100, and is redolent of that capacity for taking infinite pains, which is the sure sign of genius.

Capt. Willis has painted a very pretty "Kolam Rhein," which is reminiscent of the old fashioned blue Dutch tiles.

Pte. A. Thorn, of the 69th Siege Battery, shows his "Track thro' Lunnesdorf." This work is sound, but the subject matter is inconsequential.

ART OF THE ILLUSTRATOR.

A very interesting addition to the Exhibition was provided by Mr. Percy Bradshaw, of the Press Art School, Tudor Hall, Forest Hill, London, who very kindly sent six folios of his work the "Art of the Illustrator," showing the methods each in six stages, with an explanatory booklet, of Harry Rowntree, Bert Thomas, Warwick Reynolds, Bernard Partridge, Lawson Wood and F. H. Townsend, all men from whose method the embryo artist can learn much.

Much gratitude is due to the judges, Major Turner, M. C., R.A.M.C. The Rev. Hugh Farrie, C. F., Lieut. Morris, Royal Berks, and Lieut. Holmes, R.A.S.C. They very ably performed the difficult work of judging.

Also to Major Turner, M.C., R.A.M.C., Capt. Nevitt, M.C., King's Own, and to Lieut. Holmes, R.A.S.C., who represented the Eastern Division, Lancashire Division, and Corps Troops on the Executive Committee.

The Committee desire to thank all those who helped to make the enterprise a success, especially the 10th Corps Topo Section, who were responsible for a good deal of the advertising matter used, and also all those who so kindly sold tickets in advance. And they also wish to thank all the exhibitors, who by their work gave pleasure to the many visitors who came to see the pictures, and who expressed unbounded satisfaction.

Appropriate music was rendered throughout the afternoons by musicians kindly provided by Colonel Barron.

The prizes, in the form of silver and bronze medals, will be awarded in due course, as soon as the medals are completed.

Sapper Duffy, the winner of the Oil Painting Section has very kindly presented his picture to be sold for the benefit of the Red Cross. It is proposed to effect the sale by means of a raffle, and anyone willing to dispose of tickets should apply for a book to the Hon. Sec., Art and Photographic Exhibiton, Xth Corps, Bonn.

As soon as the balance sheet is completed, it is hoped to be able to hand over a substantial sum to the British Red Cross.

AMUSEMENTS NOTES.

Following the continued success of the Rhine Army Dramatic Company it is announced that they will present Bernard Shaw's "Candida" on Monday next, June 16th at the Deutsches Theatre. It will be doubtlessly acclaimed with delight and our sense of humour tickled at the answer to the puerile criticisms of the English Press.

Sergt. Ernest Franklin, better known in the theatrical world as Billy Barnes, is now with the "Tabs" (G.H.Q.) Concert Party at the Apollo Theatre. He is very versatile comedian, playing light and heavy comedy parts with equal success, and has considerable dramatic ability. For a time, before the war, Franklin was with Hepworth's the cinema people, but his real position is on the legitimate stage. He has played in "Peter Pan," "Girl behind the Counter," "Mid-summer Night's Dream," etc. Before leaving France for Cologne, Franklin completed his 738th performance, and has played with such companies as the A.B.C.'s, Yellow Birds, Washouts etc. on all parts of the Western Front. Incidentally he has the Military Medal, but doesn't know what he got it for—so he says. His chief recreation is going out with the hounds—to Cologne Cabarets!

* * *

A man in his time plays many parts. Before the war Mr. R. C. Matthews, the principal comedian of "The Merry Muffins," the Highland Division Concert Party, was a mathematics master at Bath. As the army held no special scope for mathematicians, and also by way of a change, Mr. Matthews turned comedian. He has been a huge success ever since. After appearing at the Queen's Hall before Prince Albert on March 26th 1919 with "The Merry Muffins," Mr. Matthews was approached by Mr. Kingsley for concert party work, but although the offer was generous, he refused. Farce is undoubtedly his sphere, and one would imagine a similar proposal from another direction would not be answered in the negative. His success as 'Billy' in 'Fair and Warmer' augurs well for a future on the London stage.

* * *

The "Oddities" (1/5 West York Regt.) concert party are, we notice, announced to appear at the Bürgergesellschaft, Cologne, next week. The performance begins at 6 p.m. each evening, commencing Monday.

* * *

The fascinating leading lady of the "Tabs" concert Party, Clifford Mayston, popularly known as "Maysie" has had quite a versatile career. He has played the female parts in the "Merry What Nots" in England, and "The Gold Flakes," "Chocolate Creams" and "Stunts" in France. Before joing the "Tabs" he was with "The Game Cocks." (40th Division Concert Party). The biggest sketch successes were in "Man in the Street" and "Boatsman's Mate," but his crowning achievement was with Julian D'Albie in the love scene from "Romeo and Juliet." As "Maysie" in the "Tabs" he is a huge success and many will look forward to his performance in the forthcoming revue "Tankysnun and Bitashun."

* * *

Owing to a printer's error we announced in our yesterday's report of "The Merry Muffins" performance at the Deutsches Theatre that E. Layne was musical director. The musical director is E. Layne Runacres.

* * *

Rob Norrie, one of the oldest and most versatile members of the "Tabs", was a society entertainer before the war. He was with the 'Zeniths," the "Nobodies" and the "Imps" — all first rate parties. Apart from his concert party work he has had eighteen months in the line and has been wounded and gassed. He joined the original 'Tabs" in August 1918 and has shared in their successes ever since. As Mepnistopheles in the Deutsches Theatre pantomime he did exceedingly well.

INFLUENZA EPIDEMIC ON GERMAN STEAMER.

An outbreak of virulent influenza occured during the voyage of the transport Igoma, which arrived at Plymouth on Wednesday from South Africa. Several hundred repatriated German men and women were aboard. There were over 220 cases. Eleven deaths were reported and nineteen cases were removed to the military hospital at Plymouth.

BRITISH EMPIRE LEAVE CLUB.

WHIST DRIVE.

Owing to the rain, the whist drive which was to have been held in the garden, had to be hurriedly arranged for indoors. It was impossible at such short notice to accommodate all the men who wished to compete and unfortunately a great many were disappointed.

Twenty-six tables were arranged, however, and the evening proved quite a successful one.

The first ladies' prize was won by Pte. Hardman with a score of 149. The 2nd and 3rd by Cpl. Tramontine and Pte. Walmsley. The 1st Gentlemen's Prize was won by Pte Eley with a score of 156 and the 2nd and 3rd by Pte. Cooper and Pte. Haslam.

Lieut. Halley was again kind enough to help with the whist drive and Pte. Price once more proved a most able M.C.

AUSTRIA AND SERBIA ARMISTICE.

RANTZAU'S LATEST DENUNCIATION.

GERMANS ARREST BRITISH OFFICERS.

DENIKIN'S ADVANCE CONTINUES.

GERMANS ARREST BRITISH OFFICERS.

FOCH DEMANDS APOLOGY.

Copenhagen. 12th June.— The Germans arrested five British naval officers at Libau on the 24th May and detained them five hours. Marshal Foch demanded on behalf of the Allies that an apology be offered to the British.

The Germans also mounted guns at Libau harbour and pointed them at a British destroyer. The Allies demanded the immediate removal of the guns and suspended all shipping to and from Libau until this order was carried out.—Reuter.

RANTZAU'S REPUTED ULTIMATUM.

NOBODY WILL RETREAT.

Berlin.—Interviewed by a correspondent of the Vienna newspaper, Neue Freie Presse, Count Brockdorff-Rantzau said, in reply to a question about the present situation in the peace negotiations:

"No oral discussions are taking place, either secret or open; I believe, however, that pure common sense and justice will lead the course of affairs into the channel of our proposals, and I may hope that our enemies will recognise this and enter into them. At the same time I am prepared in case my hope should not be fulfilled. A peace treaty such as was handed to me on May 7 I shall never sign. Small concessions I do not look upon as essential changes. We will neither sign our own death sentence nor a deprivation of our rights or our honour. Our national self-esteem will never permit us to abandon the German nation and its country for the sake of the material advantages of our enemies. On that point we are all agreed, both the delegation in Versailles and the Government in Berlin. Nobody will retreat. What will happen if our enemies do not show any understanding of our attitude I do not know. But one thing is certain: the decision will be taken by the delegation and the Government unanimously, and the German nation will stand behind them."— Wireless Press.

SEVERE DISTRESS IN INDIA.

The following telegram has been received at the India Office from the Viceroy:

"Distress spreading in Bankura district, Bengal, owing to high prices and contraction of credit and charity. Still acute in affected tracts of Etawah district, United Provinces, and fairly severe in Kallikota and Atagada estates in Ganjam district, Madras Presidency. Water becoming deficient in upland tracts of Mirzapur and Banda districts of United Provinces, and is insufficient in some districts of Berar and Nerbudda divisions of Central Provinces. The last month has seen a sharp rise in prices in Bengal and Bihar."

SIMLA, Tuesday.

It is officially forecasted that the monsoon will probably be unsteady in June and July, with the result that the total rainfall in India is expected to be below the normal. At the same time there is no indication of the probability of anything approaching a serious situation.—Reuter.

DENIKIN'S GOOD PROGRESS CONTINUES.

MANY CAPTURES.

Last night the War Office issued the following:

A report just received from Ekaterinodar, dated May 20, gives encouraging news of the progress of Denikin's troops.

On the Manitch front all the cavalry has been placed under the command of General Wrangel. He has crossed the Manitch River on a wide front, and is pressing forward on a broad front. At Grabbevskaya the 4th Bolshevist Cavalry Division was defeated. On the right flank a Bolshevist cavalry charge gained a temporary success, but the Volunteer Army pressed on undaunted.

Up to May 29 the Volunteer Army had captured 15,000 prisoners and sixty guns, and had inflicted other casualties on the Bolskevist 10th Army, thus reducing to skeletons two cavalry divisions (9th and 16th) and three infantry divisions (32nd, 37th, and 38th). As a result it is estimated that the Bolshevist 10th Army is reduced to 10,000 men. Many of the captured machine-guns are in very poor condition.

On the Donetz front the Don Guard Cavalry Division crossed the river and advanced north-eastwards to join hands with the Cossack forces who have risen against the Bolshevists in the Upper Don basin at Makyeevka.

Later news shows a considerable advance by the Volunteer Army and Don Cossacks all along the front. Jutovo (sixty miles south-west of Tsaritzin), Popova (forty miles north-east of Millerovo), Slavyansk, Bakhmut, and Berdiansk, have all been captured by Denikin.

Twenty-four working men were summoned at Leeds yesterday for non-payment of income tax. One went to goal rather than pay.

HOW AMERICA GOT TREATY TEXT.

SENATE INQUIRY.

Washington, 11th June. Senator Elihu Root, former Secretary of State, appearing before the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, which is investigating the manner in which the Peace Treaty fell into the hands of private interests in New York, testified that for several weeks past he had had a copy, which was given to him by a Mr. Davison, of the Morgan firm. Senator Lodge then declared that the copy he had seen was shown him by Mr. Root, who defended Mr. Davison's being in possession of the treaty on the ground of the latter's official connection with the Red Cross, adding that since the German Government had published the text, it had become public property in any case.

Mr. Davison, who followed Mr. Root, admitted that he brought a copy of the treaty to America, but said it had never been read by anyone but himself and Mr. Root. At the beginning of the hearing a telegram from Mr. Schiff was read, in which he disclaimed any knowledge of the treaty. Mr. Morgan and Mr. Vanderlip followed Mr Davison, and both testified that they had not seen the treaty.—Reuter.

Senator Root said he considered President Wilson was within his constitutional rights in withholding the Treaty from the Senate, but on the other hand it was perfectly legitimate for the Senate to ask for it after it had been published by the German Government. On the conclusion of Mr. Morgan's examination, the Committee went into secret session.—Reuter.

AUSTRIA AND SERBIA.

ARMISTICE SIGNED.

Belgrade, 7th June. The following official communiqué was issued to-day by Serbian Army Headquarters:

"The Austrians not having accepted our conditions within the appointed time, our victorious troops entered Klagenfurth yesterday morning to re-establish order in the town, which the enemy had previously evacuated. Later in the day, however, the Austrian delegates signed the armistice, under the terms of which our zone comprises Klagenfurth, Voelkermarkt, Gospe-Sveta, and Sveti Pavje. To the north of our zone a neutral zone will be established. Hostilities ceased at seven o'clock on the evening of June 6. The Austrians are obliged to repair the damage caused by their offensive in the month of May last."—Reuter.

EX-CROWN PRINCE'S HOPES AND FEARS.

"ONE HAS ONE'S HONOUR."

The ex-Crown Prince has been interviewed by a correspondent of the New York Times. Among other opinions he delivered himself of the following:—

"Under present conditions there will be nothing but trouble and another big war inside ten years. The people of Eastern Prussia and Silesia will never agree with the Polish Government, Russia, Serbia, Czecho-Slovakia, Italy, Belgium, and Japan will all be furious over the settlement and the only countries that will be content are France, England, and America, which does not want much for herself out of the war."

When asked about the report that his father was returning to Germany, he said:

"I do not think that is correct; he will remain in Holland, where he is now, with Count Bentinck. As to the report that he would have to face a tribunal for bringing on the war, I am sure my father would never submit to such a proceeding; he would sooner die first; one has one's honour, you know. He has grown very white and old with all this worry, and I have been very anxious about his health; but he is better now, I hear. My mother has been suffering too, very much from heart disease, from the same cause. I was pleased to meet her the other day at Amersfoort and have a long talk."

"All I wish to do," the Crown Prince concluded, is to return to Germany. I have been treated very nicely in Holland, but I prefer Germany, naturally, as it is my country. I am fond of culture; I like good concerts, opera, theatres, the society of cultured people. All I can do here on this island is ride about on my motor-cycle, read, sketch, play tennis against my will in the garden and avoid visitors who come on Sundays and holidays to try to see me. I receive papers and occasionally have friends to stay with me, like the aide to my father who came to-day. It is slow living at Weeringen but the people are all kind, and the children like me. I am free to go where I like, and I prefer it to being shut up in a castle, as my father is at Amerongen."

GREAT MANCHESTER FIRE.

Enormous damage was done by fire on Friday night to warehouses at Trafford Park, Manchester, containing general merchandise, chemicals and timber. By nine o'clock ten warehouses had been destroyed and eleven seriously damaged. The losses amount to several hundred thousand pounds sterling.

INAUGURATING THE MONEY CAMPAIGN.

JOY BELLS FOR THE JOY LOAN.

The prospectus of the new British Loan was issued on Friday morning.

Remarkable scenes in the City followed the opening of the banks. Counters were piled high with prospectuses of the great Victory Loan and messengers staggered out of the buildings under huge bundles of loan documents.

Prospectuses are issued of two loans, both of unlimited amount, bearing four per cent. interest and exempt from all taxation if owned by persons not domiciled or not ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom.

One issue consists of Victory Bonds at eighty-five sterling redeemable through annual drawings beginning on the 1st September 1920. The other is a Funding loan at eighty. The right is reserved of total redemption at par after 1st May 1960.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has been informed by the Prime Minister that he fears he will be prevented by pressure of business at Paris from attending Monday's meeting at the Guildhall to inaugurate the Victory Loan. In that event Mr. Bonar Law will address the meeting on his behalf.

Sir Robert Kindersley, of the War Savings Association, said the amount required is practically unlimited. Short date war debts to the amount of fifteen hundred million pounds will have to be paid off and the new loan will be used primarily for this purpose.

The general opinion in the City is that the loan is "too generous," which will not worry general investors.

POPULARISING THE LOAN.

London church bells will peal at noon on Monday to herald the inauguration of the Victory Loan campaign. At the Guildhall the meeting will be addressed by Mr. Bonar Law and Mr. Austen Chamberlain. A house-to-house canvass will be undertaken. All investors will be entitled to place cards in their windows showing that they have subscribed. Cabinet Ministers will tour the country in decorated trains and will speak in numerous towns. Airships will drop leaflets advertising the loan. A golden ladder to the top of the Nelson Monument in Trafalgar Square and similar ladders in other cities will indicate the daily progress of the loan.

ODDFELLOWS' WAR MEMORIAL SCHEME.

AN ORPHAN FUND.

The Manchester Unity of Oddfellows Conference, which is being held in the Isle of Man, adopted the proposals for establishing an orphan gift fund as a permanent memorial of the service of 250,000 Oddfellows in the war, and decided to maintain it on the dual basis of a small annual payment by each member, supplemented by voluntary subscriptions.

The South London District raised an important question affecting industrial districts by seeking to delete the rule which compels new members to pay separate contribution for sickness benefit in cases of industrial accidents, but the conference refused to make any change.

Mr. Joseph Smith, Leamington, was unanimously elected Grand Master for the coming year, and will preside at the Leamington conference of 1920. This will be the first occasion for fifty years that a Grand Master will preside over a conference held in his own town. The incoming Grand Master is secretary of his district, a member of the Leamington Borough Council, and is actively associated with the Young Men's Christian Association movement. Mr. George L. Lingstrom, North London district, was unanimously elected Deputy Grand Master of the Order.

HEROIC CONDUCT NO EXCUSE.

ADVENTUROUS AIRMAN.

When Alfred Victor Blenkiron, aged 22, was charged at the Devon Assizes yesterday with obtaining credit while an undischarged bankrupt, his career during the war was mentioned. When war broke out he was travelling to Australia for the benefit of his health. In Australia he immediately joined the Australian Service, obtained a commission, and came to England at his own expense. Being ambitious, instead of taking a commission, he joined the Royal Air Force, and had won the Military Medal for repairing his bombing apparatus in mid-air while attacked by a German fighting squadron and anti-aircraft guns. He had been wounded three times, and once when severely wounded while flying he was attacked and brought his opponent down. Later, while flying, his machine was struck by lightning, and he fell into the sea near Cape Grisnez, and was much damaged by being dashed about the rocks. He had been neurotic all his life, and was invalided out of the Army. He got into the hands of gamblers, borrowed from moneylenders, and was declared bankrupt. The money he had obtained would be repaid.

Mr. Justice Lush said the country and the whole world owed much to such men, but it could not go forth that because a man had been heroic during the war he could commit wrong. This was an exceptional case, and he bound prisoner over for six months on promising to go back to a nursing home or obtaining proper medical advice.

TAR AND FEATHER CASE.

Lieutenant Francis Wright, who was concerned in the Cambridge tarring and feathering incident, was released from open arrest by the military authorities yesterday, but was told to remain in Cambridge pending further orders. He told a Press representative that he took this to mean that an inquiry will be held, either by the Army or Navy, and that he is to remain in England until a decision has been arrived at. There has been no notice as to the holding of a Court Martial up to the present.

FATAL RACIAL RIOTS AT CARDIFF.

SEVERAL KILLED.

On Thursday night the racial riots at Cardiff were even more serious than on Wednesday. The disorders culminated in an attack on a house in the quarter inhabited chiefly by Somalis. The crowd chased to his house a coloured man whom it was alleged had threatened a woman. The panic-stricken inmates started shooting and the mob retaliated by throwing stones and bottles. John Donovan, a discharged soldier who wore the Mons ribbon, was shot through the heart and killed. As the police entered the house one was shot through his helmet and another through his cape. They arrested all the occupants, one of whom is lying precariously injured in hospital.

A large force of police were employed in keeping order in the affected area. Crowds gathered in the evening and numerous windows in houses inhabited by Arabs and negroes were broken. Black men were chased off the streets whenever they appeared. A magistrate was present in case it became necessary to read the Riot Act, but the police were successful in quelling the disturbances and dispersing the crowds. At a late hour, however, affrays occurred in which two men, one white and one Arab, were killed, and several injured.

Another black and white affray occurred in the Docks region in the course of which a young Englishman had his throat cut and died. Afterwards fifteen casualties were treated at the Infirmary, one black man being detained with a knife wound in the abdomen, and a white man with stabs in the back.

The district in which the Arab and negro seamen's boarding houses are centred was in a state of riot and reinforcements of police had to be rushed up in motor-cars before quiet could be restored.

INTERNMENT FOR LIVERPOOL BLACKS.

As the result of a conference between the official of the Ministry of Labour, the Lord Mayor and Head Constable of Liverpool, it has been decided to intern demobilized blacks at Liverpool pending their repatriation.

MUNITION FACTORY CONVERTED INTO DWELLINGS.

Through the pressing demand for housing accommodation at Hammersmith, especially on the part of demobilized men, and pending the erection of houses, under the housing and reconstruction schemes, the Borough Council has resolved to accept the offer of Blake's Explosive Loading Company Ltd., to sell to the council the whole of the buildings comprising the company's factory in Wood-lane, to the north of the White City grounds, together with the heating, lighting, sanitary, and other fittings, drainage, gas mains, etc., at the price of £8,500. It is estimated that temporary accommodation will be found for 250 persons.

Upwards of one hundred applications for temporary houses have already been received from demobilized men, living in, or who prior to the war resided in the borough, and in accepting tenants preference is to be given to returned soldiers. Each of the filling huts is to be adapted for three residences or quarters, and by effecting alterations in existing buildings it will be possible to secure approximately fifty residences. Each residence will provide one large living room and two or three bed rooms, together with a scullery and larder. It is proposed to provide a central bath house and wash house. It is estimated that there will be a net annual loss on the scheme of £2,244.

WOMEN VOTERS IN GERMAN ELECTIONS.

Details showing how the votes were cast in the January elections for the German National Assembly reveal the interesting fact that the women were much keener on recording their votes than were the men.

It is also worth recording that this election provided the first occasion on which, in religious orders where vows of seclusion are compulsory, the rule was relaxed in order to allow nuns to exercise their vote.

In the Cologne-Mülheim district the Centre Party vote was distinctly feminine 6091 women giving their vote to the Centre, while only 3,556 men voted for this party.

At Hagen (Westphalia) 47,550 electors voted out of a register of 56,097. Of 27,100 men on the list 22,950 voted, but 24,800 women out of 28,607 exercised their privilege, a much higher percentage.

The votes were divided in the following manner: German party of the people, 7981 votes: (3,185 men, 4,796 women); Centre, 9,053 votes: (4,267 men, 4,796 women); Democrats, 10,068 votes: (4,788 men, 5,280 women); Majority Socialists, 9,876 votes: (5,377 men, 4,439 women); Independent Socialists 9,688 votes: (5,333 men, 4,355 women).

MESS COOK'S DISTINCTION.

THE FALL OF JERUSALEM.

The cadre of the 2nd 20th Battalion County of London Regiment, consisting of four officers and thirty men, returned home yesterday at Blackheath, and were welcomed by the Mayor of Lewisham at Catford Bridge Station. At a luncheon at the Town Hall, Lieut.-Colonel W. St. A. Warde-Aldam, D.S.O., said a company of the battalion took part in a charge which captured Jerusalem. To a mess cook, Private Church, belonged the distinction of being the first man in the Holy City. Church lost his way with his (the Colonel's) dinner, and landed about four a.m. at the gates of Jerusalem, to find there the mayor of the city with a white flag looking for a General to whom he could surrender.

IN TOUCH ALL THE WAY.

The trial trip of the Handley-Page Atlantic machine on Tuesday was completely successful, and Major Herbert George Brackley, the first pilot, has decided to start at the first favourable moment. The giant Handley-Page machine is less likely to be influenced by adverse weather conditions than some of the smaller machines, and London is expecting to hear at any moment that a start has been made.

Mr. L. Cogni, one of the firm's managers, stated that Major Brackley proposes to fly direct from Newfoundland to the Handley-Page aerodrome at Cricklewood, where elaborate preparations are now being completed for keeping in close touch with the machine from the moment it starts, and to welcome it on its arrival. At the request of Mr. Handley-Page the Marconi Company are installing their latest and most powerful wireless set on the aerodrome. This will enable London to be notified of the start within a few seconds of the time which the machine leaves the ground at its jumping-off place in Newfoundland, and will make it possible for Cricklewood to learn direct from the crew full details of the progress of the flight, the position of the machine, the state of the engine, the weather met with, and the feelings of pilot and crew. Should the flight prove successful, as the Handley-Page people confidently expect it will be, other machines will leave Cricklewood as soon as the English coast is reached to meet the conqueror of the Atlantic and escort it home. Once the great adventure has commenced announcements as to its progress will be made hourly through a megaphone from stands in the aerodrome.

A Reuter message from St. John's timed nine o'clock on Friday morning stated that the weather was clear and bright and that the Vickers-Vimy machine would start on the trans-Atlantic flight in the afternoon.

A report has reached us that Captain Alcock has actually started but up to the time of going to press no confirmation has been received.

RATIONS FOR R. 34'S TRIP.

An interesting example of the calculations of the weight to be carried before a long airship flight is embarked upon is to be found in the estimate of the food which must be taken for each member of the party going to America in the R.34. Assuming that the average weight of a man in flying clothes is 180lb, it is found necessary, to guard against any shortage of supplies resulting from the flight being prolonged, to increase this estimate to 300lb per head, when food for the voyage is included. This means an aggregate increase of 1½ ton, which is no small item, when 29 tons only is available over and above the weight of the structure.

BRITAINS' NEXT CORN HARVEST.

MOST COSTLY ON RECORD.

The 1919 corn harvest will be the most costly in the history of British farming.

This is due to the great increase in wages and limitation of hours. Maximum wages vary in different counties, the highest being in the Oxfordshire area, where it is 73s. for a sixty hour week for men, with 1s. 8d. per hour overtime on weekdays and 2s. per hour on Sundays.

Cider and beer have in the past been provided as part payment of wages, but that is now illegal. It is still common for farmers to supply such beverages to their labourers as an allowance or perquisite. The question has arisen as to the farmers' position if they were to sell liquor to their men. To the Wages Board the Board of Customs and Excise has declared that there is no objection to the sale of cider by a farmer to the labourers subject to payment by him of the duty on all cider so sold.

YORKSHIRE SHOOTINGS RUINED.

Fires on the moorlands between Masham and Aysgath are raging with unabated fierceness. In twenty-four hours five thousand acres, consisting chiefly of shootings belonging to the Duke of Devonshire, over which King George has frequently shot, were utterly burnt and ruined. Other valuable shooting moors near Masham are burning furiously.

Adjacent to the centre of the fire is Colsterdale camp, where some thousand German officers are interned. A change in the direction of the wind might mean that the camp will have to be evacuated. All efforts to check the progress of the flames have proved unavailing and it is already certain that for some years to come shooting on the Yorkshire moors will be almost negligible.

AIRMAN'S ESCAPADE.

An air pilot's remarkable escapade was related yesterday at a general court-martial at Upton-by-Chester, when Lieutenant Edwin Arnold Clear, M.C., R.A.F., pleaded not guilty to a charge of low flying at Chester, and guilty to a charge of escaping while under arrest at Shotwick Aerodrome. With regard to the accused's escape it was stated that he got into a machine and flew to the Isle of Man.

Accused told the Court that the officer commanding the station had told several pilots that they had "got the wind up." "This got my goat," added accused, "so I went up."

The findings of the Court will be promulgated.

The Daily Mail offers a slipper of eighteen carat gold for the actress with the smallest foot in London or the provinces.

The disabled soldiers who went on strike at Leeds to secure more pension allowances while undergoing technical training have been given until Tuesday to resume their studies. After that date their places will be filled by others waiting to take up training.

SUNDAY.

Of late there has been a wide-spread interest in our Sundays. We do not wish to suggest that the men and women of England are flocking to Church in imposing and unprecedented numbers or that soldiers have found a new joy in Church parades. The interest is born of a popular movement not a religious revival. Ecclesiastics, social reformers, and journalists are canvassing the question of a "continental Sunday." The Rhine army has its view on the matter, for military duties have ensured that many of us have now a knowledge of Sunday at home and Sunday abroad.

There are, naturally, diverse classes of people who propound their views. Some are quite frank in their admiration of the spirit of freedom and abandon that is associated with Sunday in most European countries. They believe that we who have lived in the area of occupied Germany or in Belgium or in some of the happier places of France will help them in what they deem to be a movement of emancipation. Others feel that some change must be made in the English observance of Sunday, and hope that a golden mean is possible between the old English Sunday and that of the continent. Others, again, hold that the gaiety that is freely encouraged by our neighbours despoils all that is good and reverent in the Sunday of our fathers.

But even in Britain there is considerable difference of opinion regarding the meaning and even the propriety of our English Sunday. To a Scot of some Highland glen—and the Scots have been blamed for keeping the Sabbath and most other things—the Sunday of South England is in very truth a "continental Sunday," and there are probably others in the more out-lying parts of England and Wales who would share his opinion. Yet it is true that the great mass of our countrymen have long since ceased to regard Sunday as did the Puritans of the seventeenth century. It is probable that many make a bogy of the dull, dismal Sabbath, and fail to see how the times have changed. In most parts of Britain a considerable amount of happiness is derived from our Sundays. The confusion of the Jewish Sabbath and the Christian Sunday, the somewhat morbid reverence for a particular day, the exaggerated asceticism of men who looked askance at joyfulness—these are largely things of the past.

It is not easy to evolve a sane policy of Sunday observance, and all we can do is to offer some general principles. To coerce the conscience of our fellow men is as futile as it is pharisaic. The arguments that might appeal to a Churchman are not those that can carry weight with a man who places little store upon Christianity. But whatever may be the opinions of any man he must in justice remind himself that Sunday has a tradition of almost nineteen hundred years, that its gifts come from Christianity, that it commemorates the lifework of a great man. Sunday has little meaning if one forgets it is a Christian festival.

The principles we lay down are two. Our English Sunday should be as far as possible a day of rest. It is a truism that each week has seven days, but if each day is to be a working day then physical endurance is taxed beyond measure. Recreation may be rest or it may be labour. Any recreations which involve labour either to ourselves or to others—for in some pastimes our fellows must work if we must play—should be narrowly scrutinized, for they ask too much from human physique. The leaders of English democracy have already agitated for more leisure from laborious toil, and in many ways they are wise in their policy. Few can view with equanimity any measures that will increase the working hours of our people.

The second principle is that Sunday should be a day of happiness, a full-orbed happiness in which physical, intellectual, social, and religious activities can find their best. Sunday must not be a day of gloom and sombre clothing. It is a commemoration of victory over evil. Opportunities should be given to men and women to cultivate their minds in leisured enjoyment of the best that art and letters and music can give. And what of games? Many find their greatest happiness in these, and they help in promoting comradeship, self control, and a sense of fair-play—graces that mould a people and prepare it for idealism. The test of a recreation that can be fittingly indulged in is its harmony with the spirit of Sunday, the spirit of worship, worthy aspiration, and kindly brotherhood.

"THE GLORIOUS SIXTEENTH."

BY MOORLANDER.

To the man who angles for coarse fish, the "Glorious Sixteenth" of June is an occasion that denotes a good time to come.

On Monday, in Blighty, the close season will have ended; roach, dace, chub, perch, tench, carp, and other so-called coarse fish may again be caught on rod and line. And, although thus early in the season the fish have hardly attained prime condition, the angler rejoices in the freedom to revisit his old haunts beside the winding river and looks forward to many pleasant days and heavy baskets in the near future.

The report echoes across the Channel that prospects for the opening day are "splendid." And, at the end of last month, the Thames Valley was a gem of silver and gold amid a setting of vivid green. The piscatorial horizon is decidedly roseate. During the war, rivers have been less fished, poaching has fallen off considerably, the various Preservation Societies have continued their good work, and now signs are present that, before long, unnecessary pollution will be stopped. News is also to hand that, a fortnight ago, the fish were seen very busily cleansing themselves on the shallows after spawning, seemingly eager, as it were, to give record sport on this "Victory" opening day.

On the "sixteenth" many anglers will be wandering beside sedgy waters, enjoying the incomparable beauties of an English June day. Wild roses will be blooming in the lanes and the hayfields will be gay with flowering grasses. Many of the "boys" will don their old fishing jackets and hurry to the river, for hundreds of soldier anglers have already returned to Blighty.

This year will witness a great boom in angling. And it speaks well for the popularity of Walton's recreation that the Road Board is seeking aid and advice from angling authorities before embarking upon its gigantic scheme to improve the highways of Britain. It wishes to avoid damage to fish-life through poisonous road-washings entering the rivers.

To-morrow in the various districts and on the different types of waters, the "Nottingham," "Sheffield," "roach-pole" and suchlike experts will be specialising in their own particular styles of angling. And, during these sunny hours, the fly-fisherman should also meet with notable success. Dace, chub, and roach rise well to the fly, especially in the forenoon and after sundown, so that during the brilliant summer days the fly-fisherman is often rewarded with better sport than the bottom-angler.

This is the first opening day since hostilities ceased in the great war, so anglers who are able to celebrate the "Glorious Sixteenth" should spare a thought for the men who gave their all that the beautiful river-valleys of Britain might escape devastation.

A WORD TO CONCERT PARTIES.

BY AN AMUSEMENTS OFFICER.

It is a wholesome axiom, which—at this day in the history of the Army—no one will think of disputing, that the Corps, Divisional, Brigade, and Battalion concert party is a most necessary adjunct of military life. For the part played by such during the last five years we are all most deeply grateful. Many a man coming down from the line severely "rattled," has found aquipoise again through the kindly ministrations of the entertainment parties, who helped him, for the time, to forget. They "played" for him in any old place; barn, hut, tent, or in the open field, and notwithstanding the difficulties of the situation, they generally succeeded in giving a jolly good show.

So it is with many of the concert parties now catering for the entertainment of the Army of the Rhine. The writer has reason to be grateful for the very ready help he has received from many excellent troupes in his task of trying to relieve something of the monotony experienced by the men who are situated in the isolated villages of the occupied area. It is not, perhaps, too much to say that these villages, so full of our boys, who are out of reach of the opera, concerts, and cinemas of Cologne, Bonn, and other fairly large centres, are the very places where the work of the concert party is most urgently needed. After a good day's work there is nothing more heartily appreciated than the visit of a good entertainment.

Unfortunately, however, the Amusements Officer has sometimes had experience of troupes of another "ilk" altogether. Parties with "ambitions" and suffering over-much from enlarged heads, who are out simply to "out-do" other concert parties and whose purpose is to appear in the larger towns where there are well equipped halls and theatres. In place of a wise alternation of town and isolated village they confine their efforts entirely to places where—more often than not—they are least needed by reason of the competition of many such shows. One such party came along the other day. Let us for convenience sake call them "The Growlers." When they saw the hall in which they were asked to play—a place capable of seating some 500 persons, where first-class concert parties had shown with conspicuous success—they very disdainfully "turned it down" and declared that the show would be "off."

If parties are to fulfil the function for which they are organised, they must be ready and willing to help in the villages even more than in the towns. If they are not out for this end, then the sooner they are sent back to "duty," which has been largely excused them, the better. If their show is too elaborately staged for the smaller places then they must be told to simplify it until it can be presented everywhere it is wanted.

It is a fact, too, that troupes have refused to visit Y.M.C.A. and Church Army Huts, where men congregate largely, because they were not able to secure a good proportion of the takings, or were asked to give their entertainment free of charge. Now these things ought not to be. Ye of the "Amusement Fraternity" are not intended to be "out" for yourselves. Your job is not to please yourselves by "showing" in pleasant places where you can be much in the limelight.

DANCING CLASS.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.—Your Correspondent "Augustus" is evidently unaware of the fact that three dances a week are given at the British Empire Leave Club for the men from 6.30 to 9 on Mondays, Wednesdays and Saturdays and that they are the most popular of all the Club's amusements. There are also two dancing classes arranged a week, on Tuesday and Friday afternoons from 5 to 6, and if Augustus would call at the Club the Controller of Entertainments would be very happy to show him the hall when the dances are in full swing.

About the allotment of tickets for the Thursday Dances Augustus has also been misinformed.

FAITH AND MYSTERY.

COMMONSENSE IN RELIGION.

(BY A CORRESPONDENT.)

Many attempts have been made, during the war and since, by chaplains and others who cared about religion, to estimate the effect which the war has had on religion as a whole. Such reports naturally vary according to the viewpoint and experience of each writer; but there appears to be a general agreement that the war has not drawn the great body of our soldiers to a fuller appreciation of the value of the Christian religion. It was discovered that every man had religion of a sort which he found difficult to explain. The great Christian doctrines — of God the Father Almighty, the Incarnation and Atonement of our Lord Jesus Christ, the gift of the Holy Spirit - appeared to be meaningless to him. What he had learnt by heart seemed to fail him in the test of experience.

During the war religious faith has undergone a severe trial. The simple believer, whose faith was merely a legacy to him from his parents, was forced to doubt the soundness of the doctrines which he had so automatically accepted. "If there is a God Who is Omnipotent why does He not stop the war?" "If He is a God of Love, why does He not put an end to this ghastly slaughter?" So he argued when faced with a hard and cruel fact that challenged his second-hand faith. The doubter was convinced in his doubt and the unbeliever confirmed in his unbelief. The most serious of believers, whose faith was based upon conviction and knowledge from actual experience, was even forced to be silent in the face of what appeared to him for the moment to be the complete collapse of his most cherished hopes. There is a growing demand for reality in every department of life. "Out here" wrote one man, "we have been up against serious things, real things, and commonsense" and for that reason, men will grow less and less content with an interpretation of religious doctrines, clouded in mysterious asssumptions, which they can never hope to understand. They rebel against the practice of accepting doctrines by the exercise of "faith" without understanding. It is a very hopeful sign to find men unwilling to live a life, built as it were upon the sands of untested assumptions. "Give us a practical commonsense religion" appealed a man recently, and he was merely endeavouring to give expression to a common thought amongst men to-day.

Now we do maintain, that in the Christian Gospel men can discover all that their religious instincts yearn for. The doctrines taught in that Christian Gospel are not only highly agreeable to commonsense, and easily understood, but are of absolutely vital practical importance. They have been handed down from the earliest days, not as mere arbitrary and mysterious revelation to be accepted with an irrational and incomprehending assent, but doctrines pregnant with vital meaning for life, and destined to revolutionize the whole outlook and character of the man who tries to understand and believe and apply them.

Jesus Christ does not shrink from a commonsense demonstration. We are not called on to believe in a God whom nobody has ever seen. Jesus Christ came and was incarnate in order that men might know not only that there was an invisible God, but that He could make Himself visible when He chose. Men say it is hard to believe there is a God. It is a great deal harder to believe there is no God. We cannot take the alphabet and just throw it down, and it makes a "Paradise Lost" Why? There must be a brain behind it. Do men think the universe came just by chance? Consider the working man's definition of God and compare it with the subtle vagueness of the theologian's. He said "God is He who made everything and keeps everything going." It is hard, some say, to believe in the existence of Incarnate God in Christ. It is infinitely harder to believe that God can exist without communicating with His people. It is harder not to believe in Christ than to believe in Him. Men say it is hard to believe in the forgiveness of sins. It is infinitely harder to believe that poor sinful man is going to be left to work out to all eternity to pay the price of all that he has ever done. It is hard to believe in a God and Father. It is harder to believe in a God Who is less than a Father. So we might proceed in dealing with the vital religious truths of Christianity and discover how agreeable they are to commonsense, though still retaining the fascinating element of mystery.

COLOGNE OPERA HOUSE.

LE NOZZE DI FIGARO.

Before we speak of the opera, we would like first to ask why unauthorized persons consider it necessary to alter the text of Mozart's wonderful work. Such "corrections" certainly give no pleasure to the followers of the great master. Mozart's works are international and the old text is universally beloved; there is no need for any change.

Thursday's performance took place under a lucky star; on the stage reigned an atmosphere really attuned to the spirit of the composer, an atmosphere which quickly pervaded a delighted and grateful public. The artistes, both in the chief and smaller roles, proved themselves worthy of their tasks, but we do not see why we should have been denied any of the overture in the first act; or the aria of Bartolo "Susse Racne"; and in the second act the aria of Graf Almarira. We would prefer Cherubin, during the rendering of the aria "Neue Freuden, Neue Schmerzen" to concentrate on the limitless musical possibilities of the melody, instead of adopting rather a restless stage attitude. The orchestra was worthy of the greatest praise. Perhaps the two Cherubin arien might have been played a little more sotto voce to allow the full value of the melody from the stage to be appreciated.

SPORTS AT WAHN.

1st EASTERN BRIGADE'S SUCCESSFUL MEETING AT WAHN.

The 1st Eastern Brigade held a most successful athletic meeting at Wahn on Wednesday. Favoured by ideal weather, the contest for the challenge cup presented by Brig.-General H. M. Tudor, C.B., C.M.G., aroused the greatest interest and not until the last flat race had been run at 6.30 p.m. was the issue definitely decided. The cup went to the 10th Bn (Queen's Own) Royal West Kent Regt. (33½ points). The 6th Battalion of the same Regt. came second with 32½ points and the 4th Battalion Royal Sussex Regt. third with 17 points.

The attendance included the Divisional Commander (Major-General Chas. L. Nicholson, C.B., C.M.G.,) and his staff. The warrant officers and sergeants of the 10th Royal West Kent Regt. caused much amusement by their jazz band, the instrumentalists being in fancy costume, mostly of a grotesque type. The massed bands of the Brigade (under Lieut. H. Lewis) played throughout the afternoon. At the prize-giving which followed the events, Brig.-General H.M. Tudor, C.B., C.M.G., congratulated the winners, and thanked all who had contributed to the success of the meeting. He particularly referred to the work of Sergt. Dale (of the 10th West Kent Regt.) in preparing the course. The Brigadier also took the opportunity of saying farewell to the Brigade in view of his impending departure to command a division. The proceedings terminated with three cheers for the Divisional Commander and the Brigade Commander.

NOT SO "BALMY."

An inmate of Sunderland Lunatic Asylum tipped the first, second, and third horses in the Derby, and also won a large prize offered by a weekly newspaper.

"I tipped Grand Parade," he said to the medical superintendent, "because it was of good stock, Buchan because it had a good trainer, and Paper Money because it had the best jockey."

AMERICAN OPEN GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP.

A Reuter's New York telegram states that Walter Hagen of Rochester and M. J. Brady of Oakridge who tied with a score of 301 each from the American open Championship, replayed 18 holes on Thursday. Hagen with a score of 77 defeated Brady (78), thus securing the Championship a second time. His previous success was in 1914.

NOTABLE LAST WICKET STAND.

19th v. 23rd MIDDLESEX AT UNTER-ESCHBACH.

An interesting cricket match was played at Unter-Eschbach on Wednesday between the 19th and the 23rd Middlesex. Lieut. Potter, of the 23rd, made some brilliant hits, getting a total of 31 after being bowled by Sig. Taylor. It was largely due to the effective bowling of Lieut. Griffin and Signaller Tayler that the 23rd were dismissed for the total of 89 runs.

For the home team Cpl. Crisp and Lieut. Luchoff batted well, and the most exciting part of the match was when the 19th wanted 21 to win for the last wicket. Signaller Laythorpe and Sergt. Boston made a good last-wicket stand, the latter being finally bowled by Major Spence with the score at 87. The scores were:—

19th Middlesex	87
23rd Middlesex	89

LIGHT DIV. SIGNAL COY. v. 157 FIELD COY.

Played at Frimmersdorf on Thursday. Scorers:—Light Division Signals 127 (Lieut. Gow, 50; Gnr. Foster, 22 not out; Major Cobb, 15). 157 Field Coy. 73 (Tate 26, not out; Lake, 16).

L/Cpl. Harrison took 4 wickets for 9 runs, and Major Cobb 5 for 17. Evans and Smith bowled well for 157 Field Coy.

16th H.L.I's FAVOURITE GAME.

Despite the warm weather, "footer" is still the prevalent and most favoured game in the 16th Bn. H.L.I., and when "A" and "B" Coys met on the former's ground at Landwehr on Wednesday some very fine play was witnessed. From the start "B" Coy. forced the pace and Mason did some clever work, narrowly missing goal several times. Half-time came with no scoring.

On resuming, "B" Coy again took up the resuming, and as a result of a foul by Porter, they were awarded a "free" which Hirds made sure work of, giving the "goalie" no chance.

Play continued very fast and "B" Coy ran out winners of a good game. Result:—"B" Coy 1 goal; "A" Coy nil.

POLO MATCHES.

In the Ranelagh Open Polo Cup Semi-Final the Freebooters beat the Lambkins by 9 goals to 1.

At Roehampton the 2nd Life Guards beat the Fox Hunters by 6 goals to 3.

SPORTING ITEMS IN BRIEF.

His Only Resource.

Boy, fined at Willesden for street gambling: "Father's just dead, and mother's gone to a wedding."

The Eton Eight.

The Eton eight for Henley is being coached by E. W. Powell, who was captain of Eton boats in 1905. The crew were out in a new boat for the first time this week.

Sale of M.P.'s Hunter.

The sale last week of a large portion of noted hunter stud of Major David Davies, M.P., M.F.H., aroused keen interest, it being the first important stud sale since the armistice.

Goddard's Hands.

Destructiveness is the keynote of Goddard's activities. His great hands, almost six inches in width, with long, strong-jointed fingers, seem to be made for tearing things apart.

Oxford v. Cambridge.

Somewhat contrary to expectations, the Dark Blues won the singles by 6 matches to 3 at Cambridge on Wednesday. The Oxford captain, J. N. Radcliffe, was the only player to win all his matches.

A Calcutta Sweep Winner.

Private Read, in the Warwick Records Office, was lucky enough to draw Paper Money in the Calcutta Club Derby sweepstakes. Paper Money finished third. The prize is expected to run into several thousands of pounds.

Woman's 700 Betting Clients.

The statement that 700 persons visited a room hired by her for betting purposes in six days was made at the Thames Court, when Maude Drake, aged twenty-two, married, was fined £75 for keeping a betting house at Bygrove-street, Poplar.

Bookmakers' Ups and Downs.

"Bookmakers are rich one week and poor the next," said Supt. Pearce at Burnham (Bucks) Police Court, when Henry Dodd, of Herschel-street, Slough, was fined £40 for using a mess-room at the Mounted Transport Depot, Cippenham, for betting purposes.

1st Class Gunnery.

When Notts went in this week George Gunn and John Gunn just laughed at the Surrey bowlers. John got 111 before finding the wrong 'un, and George secured the trifle of 185 not out. His aggregate for the match was 354 for once out. Notts had one wicket down for 338.

Football Storm Brewing.

There is a storm brewing between the Football League and the Southern League that will have a tremendous effect on next season's football unless a calm follows within the next few weeks. The immediate cause of the trouble (says the Daily Express) is the expressed intention of the Southern League to claim all transfer fees paid in respect of players who are transferred by the West Ham United, Stoke, and Coventry City clubs.

HURRICANE HITTING AT DUISDORF.

52nd WELSH REGT. (169 FOR 6) v. No. 3 COY. WESTERN DIVISION R.A.S.C. (20) ON THE DUISDORF GROUND.

Batting first, the homesters suffered an immediate set back as they lost one of their "stars" (Sgt. Kay) with the first ball, but Mr. Hughes and Lieut. Yeedhorn took the score to 60 before the former was bowled. Lieut. Yeedhorn at this time was playing beautiful exhilarating cricket and two successive balls he lifted out of the ground for 6: caught behind the wicket with his score at 78, his innings included three 6s and eight 4s, his score being obtained in under 30 minutes. Lieut. Parry and Cpl. Wallwork also batted well, their respective scores being 23 and 28 (not out). The R.A.S.C. could not stand up to the bowling of Cpl. Wallwork and Pte. Lawton, who had the whole side out for 20, the former capturing 5 wickets for 14 and the latter 4 for 5. These two bowlers have remarkable averages in the C.P.C. competition Cpl. Wallwork having taken 16 wickets for 48 and Pte. Lawton 12 wickets for 47.

"D" SIEGE PARK (102) v. 10th ARGYLL AND SUTHERLAND HIGHLANDERS (33), at Düren on Wednesday. For the S.P. Sergts. Dickinson and Mumford commenced to score freely, until, with the score at 29, the former was caught. Lee (25), Williams (14), and Mumford (11) also contributed useful scores. The Highlanders opened their innings in disastrous style, and the whole side was dismissed for 33 runs. Mumford took 4 wickets for 8 runs, Lee 3 for 8, and Lieut. Thain 1 for 6.

51st HANTS (83) v. LOWLAND M.T. COY. (30), on the former's ground. The latter batted first, but were dismissed in just under an hour. Quite a feature of the innings was that only two men were bowled, while seven were caught, and one "run out." For the 51st Hants, Pte. Fulford took 5 wickets for 10 runs. The 51st Hants then batted with little interest until the excellent display of batting at the fourth wicket by Sergt. Sledge and Cpl. Leaman, who made 16 and 29 runs, respectively.

51st Bn. BEDFORDS REGT. (45) v. 51st Bn. R. SUSSEX REGT. (56) at Hennef on Wednesday. For the winners Sergt. Evans scored 18. Lieut. Thompson bowled exceedingly well and took 6 wickets for 24 runs. Lieut. Plum took 3 for 19. The 51st Bedfords started batting against what seemed to be a comparatively low total, but owing to excellent fielding and consistent bowling by Pte. Edden and 2nd Lieut. Cheeseman, they were dismissed for 45. Pte. Edden took 4 wickets for 16 runs and 2nd Lieut. Cheeseman 4 for 23.

15th HUSSARS (84 for 4 wickets) v. No. 1 LIGHT RLY. SIG. COY. (38) at Duren. Light Rly. Sigs. batted first and owing to the bowling of Lieut. Clerk (7 for 15) and Sergt. Durrant (2 for 9) were soon dismissed. 15th Hussars, by the free hitting of Mr. Straker (35, including 3 four, 7 threes) and Mr. Clerk 23 (not out) totalled 84 for 4 wickets when play was stopped by rain.

174 SIEGE BATTERY R.G.A. (77) v. 9th CORPS H.Q.M.T. COY. R.A.S.C. (57) at Flamersheim on Wednesday. For 174 Siege Battery Sergt. Street scored 17 and Hill and Whittingham 14. The Mechanics, after a useful first wicket partnership, were dismissed for 51 (Frewin 12, Miles and White 10 each). For the Artillery, Darley took 5 wickets for 20, and Saunders 5 for 19, both keeping a beautiful length throughout. For the R.A.S.C., Leach, who bowled throughout the innings, continually puzzled the batsmen, and took 7 wickets for 33.

16th LANCS. FUS. (115) v. 1st T.M.B. (WEST DIV.) (44). At Bonn on Wednesday. The 16th Lancs. Fus. who were put in to bat by the visitors fared badly, 7 wickets being down for 51 runs, until 2/Lt. Mitchell and Pte. Bray became associated. While 2/Lt. Mitchell were down the bowling of Lomos (who bowled very well throughout and took 7 for 32), Pte. Bray went merrily along until he was beautifully taken — c. and b. by Lomos. Pte. Bray hit eleven fours in a stylish innings of 64. Lt. Mitchell's 29 was no less valuable.

Other leading scorers were Ptes. Camp and Broadshaw with 18 and 16 respectively. 1st T.M.B. could do nothing against bowling of Pte. Camp (who took 9 for 17). Pte. Moore, who made 16, was the only batsman who showed anything like style.

51st. D.L.I. (74) v. FIELD BAKERIES, Kalk (50) at Riehl. For the winners Major Kirton was top scorer with 15, and for the losers S. Sergt. Strickland with 25.

OTHER RESULTS.

AGAIN IN SCORING MOOD.

93rd. BRIGADE R.G.A. v. 4th. FIELD SURVEY BATTALION R.E.

At Kalk on Thursday. The R.G.A. batted first and made the good score of 217. Following 256 for four the previous day, this is splendid scoring. Cpl. Henchen made top score with 49, obtained in 18 minutes. He hit nine fours and one six, a beautiful drive of over 100 yards. Gr. Pallister included seven fours in his 43, and Bmdr. Ellis 24.

The Field Survey replied with 62, Spr. Cloxton making 16 not out.

WESTERN DIVISION ORCHESTRA.

SUCCESSFUL AND VARIED PROGRAMME AT MUNSTEREIFEL.

Conducted by one who ranks amongst the foremost of his profession, The Western Division Orchestra showed in their concert at Munstereifel on Friday evening that they may well lay claim to be one of the finest Divisional Orchestras in the Rhine Army. Lt. J. Ainslie Murray, R.F.A., A.R.A.M., the conductor, possesses a, free, easy style, devoid of any suggestion of stiffness or forcing, and yet gets the very best out of those under him, as was demonstrated in the fascinating "Valse Trist" by Sibelius.

The entertainment opened with Coleridge Taylor's "Petit Suite de Concert." This was beautifully executed throughout, and a striking contrast was provided between the slow rhythm of the "Sonnet d'Amour" movement and the more sparkling music of the "Tarantella." This was followed by the singing of the "Kashmiri" song, from the Indian Love Lyrics, by Pte. F. Shaw, 53rd S.W.B., a light baritone of considerable power and range, and in response to unanimous demands for an encore, he rendered the time, honoured "Rosary." Three dances from "Nell Gwynne" evoked a considerable amount of applause, the light string passages from the "Pastoral Dance" being particularly brilliant.

Driver Young, 85th Brigade R.F.A., delighted the audience with his violin solo, "Berceuse," his exquisite tonal colouring and faultless technique surprising those who heard him for the first time. After Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" and Finke's "Gavette" by the Orchestra, Pte. Shaw was again heard to advantage in "When you come home" and "Roses of Picardy." As a change from the old masters the audience were then treated to a vigorous rendering of the modern Fox Trot, "Top Hole" (Hickey), and a most enjoyable evening concluded with a selection from Oscar Asche's musical tale of the East, "Chu Chin Chow."

Units desirous of hearing for themselves this talented orchestra should apply without delay to the conductor at Western Division Headquarters.

FORTHCOMING EVENTS.

BRITISH EMPIRE LEAVE CLUB.

Another programme of attractive events has been arranged by the ever-active officials of the British Empire Leave Club for the next seven days.

To-day, the Rev. Gower Rees will conduct one of his happy little chats, while to-morrow evening is to be devoted to dancing. A practice dance will commence at 6.30 in the theatre, in the course of which there will be demonstrations, including the new "Decimore" waltz. Practice dancing will again occupy the theatre on Tuesday evening from 5 to 6 and will be followed at 7 p. m. by a concert by the band of the 12th Lancers, interspersed by piano solos by Miss Barnard, Q.M.A.A.C., and songs by Lieut. Barley.

For Wednesday there is announced a dance at which the band of the 9th East Surrey's will attend, and on Thursday a whist drive and selections by the 11th Royal Scots Pipers should attract many. From 5 to 6 on Friday evening, there will be a beginners dancing class while Saturday evening will be devoted to a dance commencing at 6.30.

FRATERNIZATION.

TOC-EMMA DEBATE AND WHIST DRIVE.

The 3rd (Eastern) L.T.M.B. held a successful evening last Wednesday when a debate on the topical subject "Should fraternization be permitted" was argued at great length and with considerable force. The "Anti-fraternizers" won by an almost unanimous vote. Afterwards a sing-song rent the (otherwise) peaceful night air. On Thursday, the adherents of the green baize table held their weekly Whist-Drive.

Team Event.

The team event, which was won by the 51st Bedfords, consisted of 1 Officer's Charger, 1 Pack Mule, 1 Limbered G. S. Wagon, 1 Field Cooker, 1 Water Cart, and 1 Maltese Cart.

Brig. Gen. Jackson, with "Napoleon," again triumphed in the jumping, Capt. Macalevey's "Teddy" ridden by Lieut. Conning (51st) being a good second.

In the Mule Scurry, the 51st Bedfords were again to the fore, with Corporal Starling's "Derby" first and Lce. Cpl. Brims' "Daily" second. The final event was the Officers' Scurry—a distance of from 3 to 4 furlongs, for which there were 15 entries. Lieut. Clay, after an exciting race, rode Lieut.-Col. Allason's "Jack Straw" to victory for the 51st Bedfords, beating Major Shearman's "King William" (53rd Bedfords) by 1½ lengths. Capt. Willet (51st) was third on "Bess," three lengths behind "King William," and leading from Major Rowe's "Ginger" (53rd) by a head.

The winners of first and second places in each event will compete in the Divisional Horse Show.

HOME FROM THE ARCHANGEL FRONT.

THE PRICE OF WHISKY.

When the former P. and O. liner Kalyan, now a hospital ship, arrived in Leith Docks yesterday with 650 soldiers and sailors from the Russian front, Red Cross motor-cars were waiting on the quay for the conveyance to hospitals in the district of about one-third of the soldiers, the remainder travelling south in two special trains.

Among the soldiers were about 50 members of the 2/10th Royal Scots, besides representatives of the R.A.M.C., R.A.S.C., Liverpool and Yorks Regiments, and a large number of Americans. There were both wounded and sick on board, but most of the cases were of men able to walk, and they looked well and in good spirits.

The weather in Russia was the chief cause of complaint and was responsible for most of the sickness, there being numerous cases of frostbite. The men said snow fell continually and lay deep, but they were well provided with suitable clothing.

Most of the men considered the Bolshevists nothing more than a rabble of thieves and cut-throats, and one British company, they claimed, could hold 1,000 of them. When anything like evenly matched they fled in disorder. They were well supplied with artillery and machine guns. There was no trench system, but the British built blockhouses, mostly of wood from the forests. The British soldier was now well received everywhere. Owing to the nature of the country, a great deal of wood fighting had to be carried on—a kind of operation in which the Bolshevist was especially at home.

In Archangel there were various sports and there were places of amusement and restaurants open. Prices were a great drawback, heavy demands being made upon the pockets of the soldiers. A bottle of whisky cost £6. Food was dear and lacked variety.

93rd BRIGADE R.G.A. SPORTS.

SUCCESSFUL TWO DAYS' MEETING AT KALK.

Perfect weather, a big crowd, and much enthusiasm attended the two day's sports meeting, organised by the 93rd Bde. R.G.A., which were held on the London Division Sports ground at Kalk, terminating yesterday.

From the actual competitor's point of view the weather was all that could be desired. It was not too warm, and the slight breeze was distinctly refreshing. Some excellent sport was witnessed. The band of the East Surrey Regt. (by kind permission of Lieut.-Col. E. A. Cameron, C.M.G., D.S.O.) played throughout the meeting. There were refreshments on the ground.

The officials were:—Referee: Capt. G. G. Ziegler, M.C., Sports Officer, London Division. Judges: Brig.-Gen. J.G. Rotton, C.B., C.M.G.; Brig.-Gen. A. Ellershaw, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O.; Lieut.-Col. H.C. Dressing room stewards: Sergt. Ivory and Gunner Kenyon. Recorder: Capt. and Adjutant W. D. Spicer. Judge's orderly: Bdr. Edwards. Blackboard Stewards: Lieut. C. K. Parker, R.A.S.C., and Sergt. Major, and two other ranks from each battery and R.A.S.C

DANCING CLASS.

The dancing class held on Friday at the British Empire Leave Club seemed larger than ever, nd there are signs of its popularity increasing. Applications for instruction are daily being received. It was wonderful how Cpl. Heather managed to instruct so many, and the fact that every one went away feeling satisfied that they really were making progress in the terpsicorian art was largely due to the tremendous keenness and aptness in picking up the steps which was shown by all the pupils, who entered into friendly rivalry for the honour of being the quickest to master the intricacies of the different dances.

Cpl. Heather was most ably assisted by Sergt. Major Felgate and Pte. Price while Pte. E. Collins played the violin and helped greathly to the success.

REPLY TO COUNTER PROPOSALS TO-DAY.

GERMAN CABINET MEETS.

ANTI-JAPANESE TROUBLE IN CHINA.

MORE RAIDS ON NORTH WEST FRONTIER.

ANTI-JAPANESE OUTBREAKS IN CHINA.

RIGOROUS BOYCOTT.

A serious situation has arisen in China out of the decision of the Peace Conference that Japan shall take over all the rights formerly possessed by Germany in the province of Shantung. As soon as the decision became known a violent agitation arose, rioting occurred in Pekin, and the Chinese Government sent orders to its delegates in Paris not to sign the Peace Treaty. The troubles have now became acute, and are assuming an anti-Japanese and, to some extent also, anti-foreign movement. One of the features is a general and rigorous boycott of Japanese goods, etc., which is spreading to most parts of the Chinese Republic.

Reuter's Agency learns from an authoritative Japanese source that telegrams from the Tokio Foreign Office indicate that the Japanese Government does not consider the situation in China as serious. It is known, of course, that during the past few weeks, since the decision of the Paris Conference regarding Shantung was published in China, sporadic and isolated disturbances of an anti-Japanese, and, in a measure, anti-foreign character, have taken place in a number of towns in Central and Southern China. These are, however, the work of uninformed people, which the Chinese Government has taken vigorous measures to suppress. The real fact is that the Chinese and Japanese Governments are working in complete unison, and the exchange of views regarding the return of Kiao-Chau has already commenced. The Chinese Government has been informed that the moment peace is signed Japan will return to China all the territory formerly leased to Germany and taken by Japan during the war. The present disturbances are not only due to the decision of the Paris Conference, but largely result from the differences between North and South China.

INTERNAL CHINESE TROUBLE.

It should be observed that the present Japanese Government, under Mr. Hara, has throughout carefully abstained from assisting either the Northern or the Southern Chinese. This policy has already been carefully explained, not only to China, but to all the Allies. During the late Terauchi Cabinet and the Okuma Government, Japan was quite openly espousing the cause of these parties, the North in the case of the Terauchi Government, which regarded that portion of China as being the only strong Government, while the Okuma Government helped the South because they regarded the Constitutional movement there as rational and democratic. Up to the beginning of this year munitions and money were being supplied by Japan to the Northern cause.

GOVERNMENTS CO-OPERATING.

A new policy, however, was inaugurated by the present Government, which decided to cease absolutely from rendering help to either party. That is the position to-day, but still there is a certain amount of irritation in Northern China against the cessation of help from Japan, and also in the South against the new policy not to assist either side. This will explain the popular view in China, but, so far as the two Governments are concerned, there is a perfect understanding and closer co-operation than at any previous time, and the Japanese Government is quite convinced that these disturbances will cease with the signature of peace. Until peace is actually signed, however, Japan cannot return territory which, although she occupies it as a victor, is still in German possession.

The despatch of Japanese warships to Chinese ports must in no case be regarded as an action against China, but simply as a measure of precaution for the protection of the Japanese nationals. It is a fact that certain Chinese are dissatisfied with the decision of the Council of Four at Paris, inasmuch as Shantung is not handed back immediately to China instead of viâ Japan; but in regard to this it is to be observed that it was only the expenditure of Japanese blood and treasure that drove the Germans out of Kiao-Chau, and that China although one of the Allies did not enter the war until a late stage, and has not taken any active part in it. At the same time, it is repeated that Chino-Japanese relations are most cordial, and that Japan will carry out all her pledges the moment peace is signed.

MOLTKE'S WAR MEMOIRS SUPPRESSED.

The late Count Helmuth von Moltke, Germany's first Chief of the General Staff in the war, wrote during the war his reflections and recollections, which had been announced to appear very shortly. According to the Buchhändler Börsenblatt, they contain an absolute condemnation of German policy at the beginning of the war, a condemnation that could not be sharper, and which, the paper says, "points to quite other things than those generally supposed by friend and foe." Now, however, the paper announces that publication is impossible for urgent reasons.

The Zwölfuhrblatt learns from a diplomat who has seen part of Count Moltke's memoirs that these reasons are much the same as those which up to the present have prevented the publication of the result of Herr Kautsky's investigations at the Foreign Office, namely, that the Foreign Office archives, like the Count's memoirs, contain matter bearing on the question of responsibility for the war which are calculated to have an effect unfavourable to Germany. Herr Kautsky's report will, however, it is said, appear after the signature of the preliminary peace.—Reuter.

GERMAN CABINET AND THE ALLIES' REPLY.

FATEFUL MEETING.

Count Bernstorff and all the other members of the Berlin Cabinet left to-day for Weimar where the fateful decision is to be taken regarding the signing of the Peace Treaty. In Paris the Council of Four have appointed a committee of one representative of each power for the revision of the text of the Allies' reply to the German counter proposals. The reply is a document of nearly five thousand words.

As soon as the German delegates receive the reply, which will probably be to-day, they will leave Versailles for Weimar to take part in joint deliberations with the German Cabinet. According to a Zurich report, German Government circles consider the concessions made by the Allies as sufficient to permit the German delegates to sign the treaty, and refusal to sign "can no longer be thought of."—Wireless.

AMIR CONSIDERING TERMS OF ARMISTICE.

ANCIENT AFGHAN ARTILLERY.

Peshawar. 12th June.—According to latest advices the Amir is conferring with his generals regarding the best course to pursue in connection with the viceroy's letter detailing the terms on which an armistice will be granted.—Reuter

Peshawar. 14th June.—Arrivals from Kabul state that the Amir greatly favours peace, though a strong anti-British party exists. There is strong evidence that the Afghan regulars are unwilling to continue the war. They are greatly disappointed at the failure of their guns. They have 300 pieces, most of which are at least thirty years old.—Reuter.

RAIDS ON NORTH WEST FRONTIER.

Simla. 13th June.—Fifteen hundred Mohmands crossed the Kabul river on the 11th June and proceeded towards Bosewal with the intention of sniping and molesting our foraging parties. Raids are still reported in the Peshawar district which otherwise is quiet. Our aeroplanes have effectively bombed a number of points.—Reuter.

FOCH ORDERS GERMANS TO LEAVE ESTHONIA.

It was stated in an official quarter last night that the Germans are attacking the Esthonians, and, from the fact that they are concentrating armoured-cars and other war material on that front, they evidently intend to occupy all the Esthonian Baltic provinces.

Marshal Foch has issued a direction to the Germans, supplemented by an order from General Gough, instructing them to withdraw immediately to the south of the line already laid down.

ANGLO-AMERICAN PROTEST.

Pekin. 6th. June.—The influential Anglo-American Association to-day adopted a resolution declaring that while appreciating the lofty aim of establishing a new order in which the settlement of international disputes by war will not have a place, the association learns with the keenest disappointment of the decision of the Peace Conference to transfer the former German rights in Shantung to Japan. The resolution continues:

"We express the solemn conviction that this decision will create conditions which must inevitably bring about extreme discord between the Chinese and Japan, and raise serious hindrances to the development of the economic interests of China and other countries. The settlement which perpetuates the conditions created by German aggression in Shantung in 1898, conditions that led to similar action by other States, contributed to the disorders in North China in 1900, and made inevitable the Russo-Japanese war, cannot contribute to the peace of the Far East, the political stability of China, nor the development of trade and commerce equally open to all. Further, the evil consequences which will be not only subsubversive of the principle of national self-determination, but a denial of the policy of the open door, will be greatly accentuated if Japan, a near neighbour, is substituted for Germany, whose political and economic activities lay on the other side of the globe. We therefore resolve to make representations to the British and American Governments urging that the States taking part in the Peace Conference should devise and carry through a just settlement which will not endanger the safety of China and the peace of the world.—Reuter.

KURDISTAN BRITISH SAFE.

The War Office announces that a communication dated 7th June has been received from the British prisoners in South Kurdistan whose capture was reported on 30th May. The telegram states that while the officers and men are still in confinement they were all safe at the time of its despatch.

THE KING APPEALS TO HIS SUBJECTS.

SUPPORT THE VICTORY LOAN.

His Majesty the King has issued an appeal to the nation in connection with the Victory Loan. It runs as follows:

"Whereas throughout the war I appealed to my people to unite for victory, I now urge them to make another common effort in order to set peace upon a basis sure and sound. I ask them to co-operate in making the Victory Loan a national success. After years of conflict, peace is now, by the blessing of God, in prospect. The time of transition bears with it, problems calling for the same patriotic endeavour as before and a like spirit of sacrifice. The security of my realm and the prosperity of my people can only be maintained if the fabric of both rests upon solid financial foundations. To establish these foundations a great Victory Loan is now being launched and once again I call upon my people to give their unstinted support. It is thus that we who live may fitly meet the debt due to those who gave their lives in the cause of freedom, and it is thus, too, that we may render ourselves the faithful trustees of that future of peace and safety for which I earnestly pray."

According to Sir Robert Kindersley, Chairman of the War Savings Association, the Victory Loan is creating greater interest among the public than any previous loan. Postmasters and bank managers all over the country are being inundated with applications for prospectuses. Every effort is being made to secure publicity. Thirty thousand posters are already on view in London and by to-day a quarter of a million will be exhibited in all the provincial towns. Propaganda balloons will drop circulars in every town and village in the country.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

OWING to the general German cessation of work on Thursday THERE WILL BE NO ISSUE OF THE COLOGNE POST ON FRIDAY NEXT, JUNE 19.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

The meeting at the Guildhall yesterday was followed by a luncheon to the organisers of the loan. This function took place in the parlour of the Bank of England and was the first occasion on which anybody but officials of the bank have been entertained there.

The Primitive Methodist Conference yesterday discussed a motion to invest in the Victory Loan a gift of ten thousand sterling made by Alderman Clapham, of Yarm (Yorkshire), to reduce the deficit on the Ministers' Friendly Society. Objections were raised to the investment of the money in premium bonds, which were denounced as a species of gambling. On the announcement that the donor wished the money to be invested in the Victory Loan the objections were not pressed. A resolution was adopted condemning the "growing practice" of gambling on football and horse-races.

SUICIDE BY IMPULSE.

At the inquest on James Bebbington, a well-known Mid-Cheshire confectioner and ex-Guardsman, who served in the Boer War, and was gassed in France, his wife stated that since demobilization he had brutally assaulted her and taunted her because she was a German's daughter. She fled, and obtained a summons. After its service, said the police, the deceased locked himself in an empty house, wrote a note, wrecked with a cleaver all the furniture and pictures except King Edward's portrait, wrapped himself in a quilt, placed his head on a pillow inside a gas oven, and asphyxiated himself.

The Coroner attributed the death to impulsive suicide, induced by gassing in France.

HUGE CATCHES OF HERRINGS.

Vast quantities of herrings were landed at Lerwick on Saturday. Average catches all the week have been abnormally high, but all records were eclipsed Saturday when fifty-two steam motor and sailing craft delivered nearly 5,000,0000 fish. Each boat averaged 90,000 to 100,000 herrings, but several had as many as 180,000 fish each. Prices dropped to 4s per 1,000 herrings, and a number of heavy catches were unsaleable.

GERMANY AND THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

"A CERTAIN NOVITIATE."

Viscount Grey occupied the chair at the Albert Hall meeting of the League of Nations Union. The object of this Union is to impress upon the country that the League is a working reality.

In the course of his speech, Lord Robert Cecil, who is one of the chief protagonists of the League, was interrupted several times when dealing with the question of Germany's admission to the League.

Lord Robert Cecil said:—

"I see a great deal of discussion about the admission of Germany into the League. I have never concealed my opinion that if the League of Nations is to be a reality, Germany, not less than Russia, must be included in it. I quite admit that we must in mere prudence insist on some guarantee that Germany comes into the League as a genuine friend of the League idea. We cannot forget that the whole basis of Prussian militarism was the very antithesis of international co-operation. We must be quite sure that the recent professions of Germany are sincere. We have a right to ask that the new Germany—if new it be—shall go through a certain novitiate; but, for my part, the shorter that novitiate can safely be made the better I shall be pleased, and as soon as we can feel reasonably secure that the German Government is a real thing and not a passing phantasm, and it has shown by its actions that Germany has done with her bad past—and I see no reason why that should take longer than a few months—then Germany should be admitted to the League."

Several women in the top tier here caused some diversion by shouting, "League of Nations is a League of Capitalists," and they unfolded a banner on which was inscribed, "Warships Fight Socialist Republics Flying League of Nations Flag." There were repeated interruptions from a man in khaki when Lord Robert referred to the admission of Germany into the League. "Do you mean before she has reformed?" asked the interrupter.

Lord Robert Cecil: If you would be kind enough to listen you would not ast such a silly question.

Later on there were cries of "Shame!" and "Rot!" A man from the upper tier shouted in a voice which could be heard all over the hall, "Lord Robert Cecil, you are a —— traitor!" There were angry cries of "Turn him out!" and for some minutes Lord Robert was unable to continue. The interrupter was eventually got out of the hall, struggling violently. The disturbance showed no signs of abating, and Lord Robert exclaimed. "Oh, be quiet!" The women with their banner disappeared almost at the same time as the man was ejected.

Continuing his speech, Lord R. Cecil said: "Though the circumstances are, of course, quite different, I would apply the same broad tests to Russia as well. The League of Nations, while conferring great advantages on its members, will also impose upon them certain obligations. The chief of these is that each member will be required to live peaceably with his fellows. (Laughter and "Hear, hear.") To exclude for any length of time a powerful nation, or group of nations, would be to drive them into intrigues against the League, to split up the world again into diverse, hostile camps, and to destroy the foundation upon which the League itself must rest." It must be a league of nations and no of Governments. That is a vital truth, and if it is to be of any significance it means this, that upon the peoples of the world is imposed a great responsibility. They will no longer have the right to dismiss from their minds international affairs; they will no longer have the right to treat foreign policy as the business of the Government; it was in truth the business of every one of us. Depend upon it, if we leave the League merely to the Governments, however well-meaning and however able they may be, it will very soon degenerate into the old diplomacy. If the League is to mean something more than that, and is to be the beginning of a new era, then it lies with the people, and particularly the British people, to make it a reality. (Cheers.)

ANTI-NEGRO RIOTS.

LONDON AGAIN.

Another anti-negro riot broke out in Cable-street in the East end of London on Saturday night, a hostile crowd storming a negro coffee shop and maltreating a coloured man whom the police rescued and conveyed to the police station.

The police afterwards rescued several other coloured men in the building. It took over an hour to restore order.

SUNDAY AT THE STRANDBAD.

To bathe or bask, mixed or otherwise, is a question which up to last week only concerned the frequenters of the Strandbad at Rodenkirchen. On Sunday, however, several thousand people made up their minds, ostensibly to bathe or bask, but more probably to watch sundry anticipated developments.

The municipal authorities had forbidden mixed bathing, but the "mixers" had broken down the partition a week earlier. On Sunday neither wooden boards nor wire entanglements could uphold the decision of authority.

After the barriers of convention had been demolished four thousand would be a rough estimate of the number of persons in the ladies' enclosure, the majority being men, while the men's enclosure was almost empty.

Some ladies returned to their homes. They considered that three enclosures should be provided: one for ladies, one for gentlemen and one for others. But then, these ladies were probably genuine bathers.

The Southampton-Cowes steamship service was resumed on Sunday.

The port of Zeebrugge was ceremoniously re-opened on Saturday.

During its second trial flight over the Firth of Forth last night the airship R 34 established wireless communication with the Azores.

ATLANTIC OCEAN ACTUALLY CONQUERED.

ALCOCK AND BROWN WIN.

Capt. Alcock (Pilot) and Lieut. Brown (Navigator) landed at Clifden, County Galway, Ireland, at 9.40 a.m. on Sunday morning, Britisa summer time. They landed in a bog with the result that the fuselage was buried at the nose and the machine slightly damaged. Captain Alcock was temporarily rendered rather deaf from the force of the landing. Lieut. Brown was somewhat dazed but both were in good spirits. While en route they were constantly in thick fog, mist and drizzling rain. At times they found themselves flying at a height of eleven thousand feet and at times upside down only about ten feet from the water. Their wireless propeller blew off soon after leaving Newfoundland.

At the start the Vickers machine climbed slowly owing to the heavy load. It left the coast at a height of a thousand feet and with a following breeze was out of sight in seven minutes. The airmen before leaving said they expected to make one hundred and forty miles an hour while the breeze lasted and hoped to land on the British coast in eighteen hours. No wireless message had been received from the aeroplane up to six hours after the start. The steamer Digby arrived during the evening and reported that nothing had been seen or heard of the aeroplane although the keenest look-out was kept.—Reuter.

The flight across the Atlantic occupied sixteen and a half hours.

Captain Alcock is a familiar figure in flying circles. He was an instructor and passenger carrier at Brooklands as far back as 1912. Never a showy pilot he inspired confidence rather than enthusiasm, being a man of the sturdy enduring type. He is a thoroughly expert mechanic. In the course of the war he was captured by the Turks while on a bombing expedition, engine failure compelling him to land in enemy territory.

TERRITORIAL NEW COMMANDS.

The following officers have been appointed to the command of divisions of the new Territorial Force:

Second London Division.— Major-General N. M. Smyth, V.C., K.C.M.G., formerly of the 6th Dragoon Guards.

South Midland Division.— Major-General H. B. Walker, K.C.B., D.S.O., K.C.M.G., formerly of the Border Regiment.

Major-General Smyth, who won his V.C. at the Battle of Khartoum, 1899, where he was severely wounded, held the following commands in the present war: 1st Australian Infantry Brigade in the Dardanelles, 1915-16; 2nd Australian Division, 1916-18; 58th Division, France, 1918; and 59th Division, France, 1918-19.

Major-General Walker was with the Burma Division, India, in 1914; served as brigadier-general on the Staff, Anzac Corps, 1914-15, and commanded the 1st Australian Division (Mediterranean Expeditionary Force), 1915; commanded the 1st Australian Division in France, 1916-18, the 48th Division, Italy, 1918-19, and is now commanding in Italy.

SHIP SAVED FROM GOODWINS.

A Nova Scotia schooner, the Innovation, while on her maiden voyage with syrup and sugar for London went ashore on the North Goodwin sands. The vessel was eventually saved by the lifeboatmen. The captain said that when he found himself on the Goodwins after previously getting into and out of a minefield, he burned a bowl of vaseline as a distress signal. The lifeboat men had to force their boats over the roughest part of the Goodwins in order to reach the Innovation, over which heavy seas were breaking. The lifeboats filled with water but they and a tug succeeded in towing the vessel off by daylight.

LIVERPOOL SHIPPING STRIKE.

Owing to the strike of flatmen in Liverpool great difficulty is being experienced in coaling Atlantic liners. The sailings of the Baltic, Belgic and Vedic of the White Star line, and Scandinavian and Canadian-Pacific boats have been indefinitely postponed. The shipowners offered to arbitrate but it was refused.

MOORLAND FIRES UNABATED.

Despite the rain which has fallen, the moorland fires in Yorkshire continue to spread. In many places the peat underneath the herbage is burning and a heavy rainfall is necessary to extinguish it. Braithwaite, Coldberg, Grafton and Colsterdale moors are practically all laid waste, while Conmire and Masham moors are now threatened.

BANK ROBBER SHOT.

A man entered the Belvedere (Kent) branch of the Capital and Counties Bank on Friday and presented a revolver at the manager, Mr. Robert Leslie. That gentleman at once closed with him, and the man struck him on the head with a parcel and made his escape.

Information was given to the Belvedere and Erith police, and a search was made of the locality. The man was found shortly afterwards in some woods, and on seeing the police he fired at them with a revolver. A bullet passed through the helmet of Police-constable Darke, 453 R, who, fortunately, was not himself injured. The police seized the man, and in the course of the struggle the revolver was again discharged, a bullet passing through the man's own wrist.

Two firemen and an electrician were gassed by the fumes of burning sulphur stored in one of the warehouses gutted in the great Manchester fire.

The steam collier Monarch from Ayr for Belfast foundered in the gale but her crew, who took to the boats, were saved.

THE KING'S APPEAL.

In her long history England has been blessed with many a wise and patriotic sovereign. There have been some, like Henry V, who captured the imagination of their subjects by indomitable courage; there have been some, like Elizabeth, who won respect by their strength of statecraft; there have been some, like William III, who drew from unwilling subjects admiration for their sturdy defiance of foreign power. But no king in British history has stood by his people more devotedly and whole-heartedly than George the Fifth.

His reign has been sorrowfully marked by almost five tragic years of bitter warfare. Throughout the campaign he has never spared himself, but has given time, energy, enthusiasm, and the spirit of hopefulness to the cause in which his country and Empire have been engaged. When days were dark and sore, he issued Royal appeals that quickened and illumined our national aspirations. His unselfishness and loyalty have been rewarded, and at last he is leading his people to peace as triumphantly as he led them in the travail of war.

Once more our sovereign has issued an appeal. He asks his people to make its Victory Loan a national success. The security of our realm and the prosperity of our citizens can only be maintained if "the fabric of both rests upon solid financial foundation." For this cause the new loan has been launched, and it calls insistently for the spirit of patriotic endeavour and the spirit of sacrifice that were so freely offered in the dark days of warfare. Only by a great contribution of national wealth can our country's debts be honourably paid—debts that are due to the kinspeople of those who gave their lives in the cause of freedom, debts that are due before we can be "faithful trustees of that future of peace and safety" for which our monarch prays.

It is a worthy and noble appeal and it will meet with a worthy and noble response. "The king's name is a tower of strength," and in the king's name we are asked to give all we can spare that victory shall be crowned with an honourable and enduring peace. Once more "England expects every man to do his duty." Our thanks-giving may fittingly be expressed in gifts to the country that has reared us and for which many have fallen. Let us see to it that we do not fail in performance of a plain and bounden duty.

THE ATLANTIC FLIGHT.

On Sunday last the Atlantic Ocean was defied by British aircraft. Captain Alcock and Lieutenant Brown, the pilot and the navigator of a Vickers "Vimy" Rolls Royce aeroplane, started from Newfoundland and in sixteen and a half hours they had landed on the Galway coast of Ireland. They have, therefore, the honour of first place amongst the brave band of trans-Atlantic airmen. They enjoyed no favours from Fortune, for they were "constantly in thick fog, mist, and drizzling rain." At times their craft was flying eleven thousand feet in height and at other times it was flying only a few feet above sea-level. An enterprise such as theirs must have been charged with hourly and deadly hazards, yet it was triumphantly accomplished. In one flight these heroic men encompassed an ocean,

"As if an angel dropp'd down from the clouds,
To turn and wind a fiery Pegasus,
And witch the world with noble horsemanship."

We pay our tribute to a gallant exploit. Alcock and Brown were undaunted by the magnificent failure of Hawker and Grieve. They have carried on a long and noble tradition of national daring. It is fitting that this triumph of the air should be won by England. Francis Drake and Martin Frobisher, "in the spacious times of Great Elizabeth," fearlessly set sail for the New World and prepared the way for England's proud mastery of the seas. Their spirit is not dead; it is alive in men like our intrepid voyagers. Britannia still rules the waves.

We are neither skilled scientists nor venturesome prophets, and we know not what the future holds for long-distance flights. It may be long before the passage of aeroplanes across the Atlantic can be safely and profitably exploited even for peaceful purposes, but we are proud that the pioneers are men of our race. The omens are auspicious, and we know that the miracles of the present are the commonplaces of the future.

COLOGNE OPERA HOUSE.

THE WALKYRIE.

Of all the "Ring" operas the Walkyrie, which was given on Saturday, contains some of the finest musical and dramatic episodes. It also includes many pages of score which require considerable patience duly to appreciate, but it is doubtful whether, without these long drawn-out conversations, Wagner would have been able to enlist our sympathy for Siegmund and Sieglinde in the way that he undoubtedly does by his consummate art. There is not really a single unsympathetic character in the whole drama, and Wagner's musical and dramatic expression of the divinely human mental sufferings of Wotan and Brünhilde is perhaps the finest example of the kind in all his works, with the exeption of "Isolde's Liebestod".

The opera was extremely well produced. The ensemble of orchestra and singers was excellent, the wonderful orchestral climaxes were well rendered, but some of the beautiful word passages in the last act were not done justice to, and the intonation was not entirely faultless. The "Ride of the Walkyries" had not enough fire in it, and the singers rather vulgarised their "ho—ja—to—ho's."

In listening to the music of this wonderful opening scene, one is especially struck by the extremely skilful way in which the intense vigour of the "Ride" is gradually vignetted off into the quiet music which follows. As to the individual interpreters, Herr Schorr made a convincing Wotan, and Herr Gless as Hunding was, as usual, delightful. His fight with Siegmund on the rocks was rather mechanical in its precision, but the acting throughout is extremely difficult to accomplish in anything but a conventional manner, and as such was very good. Frau Werhard-Poensgen made a very sympathetic Brünhilde, and gave a delightful rendering of the beautiful appeal to Wotan in the third act. The end of this act is indeed a masterpiece of sheer beauty. The scenery throughout was good, but Brünhilde's rocks in the last act might have been fashioned a little less like tanks negotiating a steep bank.

GET RICH QUICK.

WORDS OF ADVICE TO AMATEUR FINANCIERS.

I think a word of warning to amateur financiers on the Rhine at the present time would not be misplaced. Several people have spoken to me lately as to the advisability of buying up marks at their present price of about fourpence and holding on to them until they return to their pre-war value thus netting a handsome return of 200 per cent on their outlay.

The popular idea seems to be that soon after peace is signed the mark will return to its former value. Now it is possible that when peace is signed there may be a fractional rise in the mark, on the assumption that Germany is going to settle down in earnest to work off her obligations, but I doubt even that. The main factor which decides the value of a country's currency is its foreign debt, that is, the difference between what it owes and what it is owed by foreign countries.

By the terms of the peace Germany will have to pay anything between five and ten thousand million pounds. Each year she will have to buy pounds or francs to pay off the instalments until it is finished.

The law of supply and demand holds good in buying currency as in buying anything else. The Germans will have to buy enormous drafts on London and Paris each year, while drafts on Germany will only be required by people importing goods from Germany, a mere drop in the ocean compared with the indemnity. Therefore, the mark cannot rise in value untill that is paid.

Another point. Before Germany can export manufactured goods to any extent, she must import large quantities of raw materials, thus still further increasing her foreign debt.

We will suppose Germany, by intense industry succeeds in paying off the indemnity, and building up a large export trade in 20 years, a most improbable supposition. The financier, who had invested a hundred pounds in marks now, would then sell and realise possibly two hundred and fifty pounds. If he had invested 100 pounds in a safe 6 per cent investment in England, and re-invested the interest each year, his capital would in 20 years amount to about 320 pounds.

Another remark which one very often hears is, "Of course the mark is the same as a shilling to the Germans." This, so far as it means anything at all, must mean that the German can buy the same amount of goods for a mark, as an Englishman can at home for a shilling. One has only to look at the prices in the shopwindows to see the fallacy of this. The purchasing value of a mark is the same to the Germans as it is to us.

All this is very elementary, but it may interest many who have had but little experience of financial matters.

DUREN BARRACKS.

A DREAM.

Two or three times since the Regiment came to the German cavalry barracks on the hill overlooking this town I have thought of the wonder and marvel of it all. With that thought has come a curiosity, a desire, for a sight of those barracks a year, or two years ago; a foolish curiosity you may say, for it can never be satisfied. Yet I like to try to picture it as it must have been, when, instead of our own men, wagons, and horses, the buildings and stables sheltered their rightful owners, the German soldiers. It is not difficult, if one allows the imagination free vein and unlimited scope to alter facts and figures, colours, things, time—and all that. About the two rooms, where my own troops live, I let myself dream a little as I walked past their doors yesterday. I sat on the window-sill in the passage and looked out over the square, where the limbers of a Scotch battalion are drawn up in a long line, wheel to wheel all the way round. Sounds of voices came from the room nearest me—voices unmistakably English, and I let my mind twist the sounds and words and I seemed to hear the clear tones become more guttural, heavy, ugly . . . German. Someone opened the door and I glanced up to see who would come out, and I knew, almost before he appeared, that it was no English soldier; no khaki figure that I should behold. No. Quite calmly I saw the German come out, field-grey tunic, short black field-boots, round cap and bullet-like head. No mistake about it. I must have slipped down the stairs of time a year or so! He said something over his shoulder and another man came out and they walked on down the passage. They did not notice me. And then it came suddenly to my eyes that all the figures in the passage had changed. Where five minutes before 3 sturdy cavalrymen had stood, reading the notices on the board at the other end of the passage, a fat German infantryman had appeared, hands in his pockets and with large round spectacles on. I glanced out of the window. Limber gone! Only a squad of young German soldiers practising the goosestep under a smart policeman like officer, and from the riding-school came the harsh commands of the instructor in German. I could see the heads of the recruits pass by the swing door as they went round the school. Germans everywhere—coming out of the cookhouses, going into the canteen, in and out of the long troop-stables everywhere—everywhere. The two lorries below me in front of the building had changed their white "W. D." for the imperial eagle, and the old R.A.S.C. driver had taken on an obviously Teutonic appearance.

The walls of the passages were decorated with patriotic German mottoes and just in front of me was a picture of the Crown Prince and the word "Hartmannsweilerkopf" within a laurel wreath painted underneath. Two men came down the passage with pails of water and mops, and they started to wash the walls. As the mop passed over the face of the Crown Prince, one man made a remark to the other and then both laughed.

The strains of a band caught my ear, coming from the square. I turned and gazed towards the open space and sure enough a band was playing some merry air from musical comedies. I watched them for some time when my eyes got blurred a little, and the figures became less clear, the arm of the conductor less quick and sharp and then — why they were not Germans at all! I looked again. No Germans there. What I saw was 20 small boys, English soldiers in miniature and some five or six men, playing a selection from "Chu Chin Chow!" It was our own band. And everything else became suddenly as it really was; I heard someone say in a loud voice in the room "Another fatigue again Jimmy" — as English as you like. The lorries were never more "W.D." than now — the limbers shone in the sun. From the riding-school a troop of chestnuts came out to water . . . and the band was now playing "God save the King." I got up just in time and stood to attention, dreaming again!

MORE OPERA HOUSE COMPLAINTS.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.—Some allowance must be made for an exotic people who do not understand the customs of the aboriginals, so I was wondering if you could use your terrific influence to get a class of instruction started for the benefit of members of the Army of Occupation who would go to the opera.

As you are well aware there is a certain ritual to be observed by the true devotee of opera; a certain code of ethics which forbids, or at least discourages, the employment of nuts and oranges, the wearing of bonnets, the energetic use of the tongue, and late arrival. The accepted attitude is a dumb admiration, a mute devotion to the Goddess of Harmony—an attitude which the natives themselves strictly observe.

Our people don't seem to be wise to this or else I have been particularly unfortunate in my visits. I am generally surrounded by a light-hearted, gossipy mixture of Church Army workers, W.R.A.F.'s and our splendid Young Guards. On my last visit I had a Sgt.-Major and a Q.M.S. of Artillery on my right, who, between taking drinks from a bottle, were making audible and presumably funny comments on the people on the stage; eight W.R.A.F.s. sat in front of me who were eating buns and chatting and giggling all through the piece. My timid request to them to be silent was strongly resented as an attempt to undermine the freedom of the subject, and the barrage was increased. Behind me were two of our young soldiers who declared loudly through three acts that they couldn't see anything in the show and that the leading singer—who was really in excellent voice—was "rotten." Perhaps they ought to have been at a cinema or a gramophone concert.

INTERNATIONAL LANGUAGES.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—I fully agree with your contributor "A. G. Downer", in advocating "Esperanto" as the best international medium.

In the past all languages have suffered corruption and distortionate usage, but in the main, only down to a certain period, viz., the world-wide adoption of the printing-press. The advent of this instrument, coupled with the expansion of trading relationships generally, have served to fix the development of language within very narrow limits. Therefore any pure language like Esperanto that might be adopted now, would not go the way of its predecessors. If an International language can be introduced, by all means have a pure one, since one is ready to hand, and all, modern languages are distorted and clumsy.

As to the best means of imparting the new language for general use in all countries, is not this a very suitable subject for the League of Nations to take up, after the more urgent matters have been dealt with? If through its instrumentality, the teaching of Esperanto could be made compulsory in the national schools of all countries, in the space of a generation, or less,—nous verrons—the International Language would be an accomplished fact.

Could the League of Nations be induced to consider this subject?

THE YOUNG GUARDS!

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—"H.C.P." appears to be very indignant about "Young Guard's" letter suggesting a chevron for the Army of Occupation.

I am not going to champion "Young Guard's" cause as I think that 5/6th of the boys are not keen on any special distinction, but "H.C.P." might remember that it is not our fault we weren't fighting in 1914 or any other period of the war. It wasn't quite the thing, even in the anxious days of 1914-15, to ask a chap of 15 years and 3 months why he wasn't fighting for his King and Country.

If there is any "scrapping" to be done whilst we are here (and there is no guarantee yet that there won't be) I think we'll be able to give a good account of ourselves even if we haven't the 1914 experience of "H.C.P."

"ANOTHER YOUNG GUARD."

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—May I venture to say, that, "One who marched it" is hardly fair to some of those men who did not march into Germany. Does our friend forget that hundreds of men who have endured the hardships of war, as probably he has himself, have had to remain in devastated Belgium to do repairs, especially railway repairs. Now, while our friend has had to do the long weary march to Germany, other men have had to work equally hard in repairing the railways, to enable food trains to go from the base depot to Germany with food for them. After doing this, most of the men have had to go on the Rhine, but did not have to endure a march there as "One who marched it" puts it. I think, however, he will agree that in this case, "The men who did not march to the Rhine" are worthy of receiving the suggested "special chevron."

TRAM CAR ETIQUETTE.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—I was sitting opposite to two young German "bloods" in a car this morning, when two German women entered, and, the car being full, a Tommy, by no means young, and myself gave up our seats to them. Several other women entered, but still these young "gentlemen" preferred that the English stand rather than themselves. If they had won, would they have offered their seats to English women in London? However, we were right, were we not?

LONDONER.

ARMY EDUCATION.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—A doubt which exists amongst many of us. We did our education before the war started, our ages being from 30 upwards, and we think it rather too late to start again. Would it not be better to teach us a trade or profession, so that if ever we do get "demobbed", we will have something to our credit.

We want to earn our own livings and support our families.

J. M. AND OTHERS.

"PUT A STAMP ON IT."

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—I have just cleared the mail box at the E.F.C. Officers Rest House and Mess and find that there have been about twenty copies of The Cologne Post put in which do not bear a stamp. Will you please mention in your paper that they must be paid for so as to save disappointment to those who wish to send the papers.

1st (KING'S) BRIGADE RIFLE MEETING.

1,585 COMPETITORS FOR INDIVIDUAL EVENTS.

1st (King's) Infantry Brigade, Lancashire Division held a rifle meeting at the Ramersdorf Range on 12th and 13th June.

The meeting from beginning to end was a great success, which was enhanced by excellent weather on both days.

The competitions, consisting of team and individual events, were as follows:—

Team Events.

(a) Battalion Competition 5 rounds application 15 rapid — teams of 8. Won by 52nd King's. — Three teams competed. Highest individual score winning team C.Q.M.S. Caddick — 64.

(b) Company Competition — Conditions as above — won by "C" Coy. 52nd King's, 14 teams competed.

(c) Company Competition Falling Plates — won by "D" Coy. 52nd. Kings, 14 teams competed.

(d) Officers Revolver — teams of 4 — won by Brigade H.Q. — 6 teams competed.

(e) Officers Rifle — teams of 4 — conditions as for Battalion competition — won by 52nd King's — 6 teams competed.

(f) Figure No. 3 Company competition — teams of 8. Won by "B" Coy. 51st King's — 12 teams competed.

(g) Lewis Gun platoon competition. Won by No. 15 platoon 13th King's — 24 teams competed.

Individual Competitions.

Rapid (time 1 minute, rounds unlimited), pool shooting 200 yards at 4 inch invisible bull, grouping at 100 yards and revolver pool shooting were carried out during the competition. In all 1,585 competitors fired.

An amusing incident, which should encourage young soldiers, occurred during the second day's grouping, when the last man to fire, L/Cpl. G. Williams, 51st King's, scored a 2 inch group, thereby cutting out a large number of competitors with 4 inch groups who had been calculating what their share of the pool would amount to. His group was, in point of fact, nearly within 1 inch, and fully deserved to give him, as it did, a prize over 270 marks.

The meeting was brought to a close by the presentation of prizes by Brigadier General T.S. Lambert, C.B., C.M.G. who was in the unique position of having to present himself with one or two of them.

CAMERON HIGHLANDERS' SPORTS MEETING.

C. COY., 51st CAMERON HIGHLANDERS held a very successful Sports Meeting at Hausen last week under ideal weather conditions. During the afternoon music was provided by the regimental band. Great credit is due to our Company sports officer who, working in conjunction with the Battalion sports officer left nothing undone.

The winners of the various events were Capt. Grindall, 2nd Lieut. Wallace, L/Cpl. Donn, Pte. Calder, Pte. Machie, and Pte. McLennan. No. 10 Platoon won the 5-aside football, No. 12 Platoon the tug-of-war, and No. 10 Platoon the relay race.

At the conclusion, prizes were presented by the commanding Officer Lieut.-Col. R. Campbell, D.S.O., who congratulated the prize winners on their performances in a few, well-chosen words.

NO. 1 MESS AND AN A 1 TRIP.

Enthusiasm, very practical organization and brilliant weather form an unassailable triple alliance and this triumvirate ensured the success of a river trip to Coblenz of Headquarters No. 1 Sergeants Mess on Sunday. More than fifty W.R.A.F.'s braved the ordeal of a very early morning start, but by the time the steamer was boarded at Bonn everybody was properly at ease and the pleasure of the day was flowing full tide.

Ordinarily a prolonged steamer trip is a tedious affair, but this one was a notable exception. Making up parties for luncheon or tea: listening to the splendid band of the 9th East Surreys: a hand at cards: a dance or two: admiration of the scenery—all these helped to beguile the time, although we suspect that the presence of the ladies was the real making of the day.

To the President and Mess Committee, aided by a score of willing helpers, who did everything from washing up to weighing the anchor or splicing the main brace, belong the credit of a supremely successful day, brought to a happy ending, as regards the ladies, by an impromptu dance in the Hauptbahnhof, and as regards the Mess, by a hot supper eaten amid a chorus of appreciation of the day's delights.

THE LAST LOOK ROUND.

Polo Open Cup, Final. Thornby beat Freebooters by 8 goals to 5. At Ranelagh the 1st Life Guards beat the Coldstream Guards by 7 goals to 4. The Roehampton Junior Championship Tournament was won by Cowdray, who beat the 2nd Life Guards by 7—2.

Kent Lawn Tennis, Championship Finals, Beckenham (singles). Col. Kingscote beat the Hon Mr. Fisher 4—6; 6—4; 9—7; 3—6; 6—2. Miss Ryan beat Mrs. Lambert Chambers 2—6; 7—5; 6—4.

Richard Croker, otherwise "Boss" Croker, arrived at Liverpool from America on Saturday and said he was devoting himself to horse-racing.

Bernard Darwin won "The Golf Illustrated" Gold Vase on the Mid Surrey Course on Saturday with a score of 153. F.W.H. Scott was Second 154 and R. Harris third with 155.

NO. 2 SECTION v. S.A.A. SECTION, MIDLAND D.A.C.

The S.A.A. had their revenge in the return match with No. 2 Section on Saturday. Batting first, on a bowlers' wicket, they compiled a useful score of 45. No. 2 Section fared disastrously and broke down completely to the fine bowling of Crossley and Darvell, who dismissed them for 20. Now for the rubber!

ASCOT AND MANCHESTER MEETINGS.

TURF TOPICS.

ROYAL ASCOT SELECTIONS.

BY "JERRY M."

Ascot, under pre-war conditions, will bring huge crowds this week. Each day has its big race.

On Tuesday the Ascot Stakes engages attention. I am going for the nicely weighted "GRANCHESTER" here.

On Wednesday that popular sprint, the Royal Hunt Cup is down for decision.

FORM AND HINTS.

IRISH ELEGANCE, I understand, will not run.
DANSELLON is well and again fancied.
ZINOVIA is a doubtful runner.
GRAND FLEET is spoken well of, but I fancy he has quite enough weight.
NOT MUCH is in tip-top condition and will, I feel sure, go very close.
ROIDEUR. I am told on no account to leave this one out, but my best intelligence is for JUTLAND. This son of Marcovil-Princess Dagmar has been specially prepared for the race. He has given every satisfaction in his home gallops and will, I hope, carry the Royal colours to victory. What an ovation there would be! Donoghue will, I hear, have the mount.

Of the others, GIPSY LAD and CHURCH HISTORY appear best. But I take JUTLAND to win, and NOT MUCH and ROIDEUR may follow him home.

OTHER SELECTIONS.

My selections for the latter end of the week unless altered by wire are:—

Thursday, Gold Cup — GAINSBOROUGH, if absent, AIR RAID.

Friday:— Wokingham Stakes — GOLLY EYES, each way.

RACING CHAT.

The "Bookies" must have had a rare good time at Epsom this year. But I saw some very glum faces amongst the "pencillers" after "Ardova" had won on Saturday at Sandow. In a field of three, odds of 1 to 5 were asked on "Furious," with "Mameni" and "Ardova" freely on offer at 5 and 6 to 1. Many of the punters preferred to take a chance on the outsiders than "buy money" over "Furious." In fact, the majority of the smaller books did no business with the favourite at all, and so received a nasty jar when "Ardova" romped home an easy winner. One well-known man told me that this race quite spoiled an otherwise good week. But no one pleads poverty quite so eloquently as the Bookie!!!

* * *

Look out for "Grey Abbey" when next running in a T.Y.O. seller. With a stronger jockey up he would undoubtedly have beaten "Law Divine" last week. It was the essence of bad luck for Mr. McElroy when he not only lost the race and his wagers, but his filly as well, the good looking grey being "claimed" by the owner of the third — Mr. Naughton. Mr. McElroy purchased the winner, but had to go to 500 guineas before the hammer fell.

* * *

The Ascot executive are preparing to receive record crowds this week. But unless rain falls in the interval the meeting will lose half its interest. For many valuable horses will not be sent to compete on going that resembles a urnpike road.

* * *

The French horse "Durbar II" won the last peace Derby at Epsom. It would be an appropriate "revenge" if "Manifardo" makes amends for the defeat of our horses by winning this year's French Derby. The Manton colt is being specially prepared to contest this, the most valuable race in the world, and it would be a grand consolation to his new owner for being unable to run him at Epsom.

* * *

"Dick Wooton," the erstwhile Epsom trainer, has decided to return to Australia. He has booked his passage and leaves at the first opportunity. He and his family are immensely popular here, and a multitude of friends will wish him "Bon Voyage!"

* * *

Although in nearly everything the arrangements at Epsom are about 50 years behind the times, they are now up to date in one thing. The brake that used to convey jockeys from the weighing room to the paddock was supplanted this year by taxi-cabs!!!

* * *

"Mapledurham" in the popular Lord Roseberry's colours ran really well when finishing third in the Oaks. She stays well and was going "great guns" at the finish. Be well assured "Mapledurham" will be returned a winner in the very near future, and probably at a long price, too.

TENNIS CHAMPION OF PRUSSIA.

The Whitsuntide Tennis Tournament held by the Tennis Club of Grunewald ended on Thursday. In the Prussian Championship match between Froitzheim and Lüdtke, Froitzheim won by 6—2, 6—0, 6—2.

"MOST DISGRACEFUL COURSE I HAVE EVER SEEN."

LORD LONSDALE CRITICISES EPSOM.

Lord Lonsdale was the principal guest at a dinner given at the Eccentric Club on Thursday evening. He said the most disgraceful racecourse he had ever seen was Epsom. Unless something definite was done, the Stewards of the Jockey Club would not hesitate to withdraw licenses for the Derby. He was speaking as a Steward at Epsom and not of the Jockey Club. For horses to run the risks they now did was entirely wrong. Epsom course should be taken over by a company in order to make Epsom the finest course in the world.

LECTURE TOUR BY FAMOUS CORRESPONDENT.

Mr. Frederic William Wile, ex-Berlin correspondent of The Daily Mail, is delivering a series of 100 lectures throughout the summer on "John Bull and Uncle Sam."

Mr. Wile's theme is that the days of American political isolation have gone for ever. "Now we (the United States) have taken unto ourselves, thanks to the war, something like three-quarters of all the gold in existence," he said, "we cannot snugly hug it to our bosoms and say the affairs of other peoples are no concern of ours. We have to think and act internationally. We have to assume our full share of the bitters as well as the sweets of the universe. The English-speaking race have a special mandate to act together in order that the world shall be kept safe for democracy."

"Among the people of Britain there is the sincerest, most eager desire to that end. I have come here to assure you of that and to remind you of Britain's mighty contribution to the Allied victory. A man in New York said to me last week that the U.S. had a bigger army in the field than Britain when the armistice was signed. "Yes," I said, "but Britain had bigger cemeteries.' I have come here to remind you that long before we made up our minds to do liberty's work the British were doing it uncomplainingly and unreservedly. Remember that before we had 1,000,000 men in France, Britain had 1,000,000 men and women in their graves."

"It was British sea-power first and last, all the time, that ensured the Allied victory and without it German tyranny might have been to-day established on this very soil of ours."

HEARTS OF OAK.

STATE HELP ASKED.

Mr. G. H. Elkington, of Penarth, the new president, said, in his opening address at the annual delegate conference of the Hearts of Oak Benefit Society, 20,000 of their members were killed in the war. The executive council were trying to obtain from the Government some assistance towards meeting the heavy liabilities forced on the society by the war—liabilities which the society's scale of contributions was not framed to meet. Funeral benefits, he thought, they should reasonably expect to be met from the National Exchequer.

Old age pensions should be increased, and there should be legislation prohibiting sick pay received from a friendly society from being accounted as income for the purposes of the Act. No fewer than 19,987 adult members and 12,858 junior members had been admitted, the president said, while £178,711 had been added to the reserve fund, making the total reserve over 5¼ millions.

The delegates having attended a memorial service at St. Pancras Church for members who fell in the war, Mr. T. Lewis, chairman of the executive council, presented the annual statement, which showed that during the year sicknses claims from men averaged 305 a day and women 53 a day. Maternity claims paid numbered 28,408. There was a loss of 63,000 members, many of whom had passed the insurance limit and had not been disposed to become voluntary emmbers.

SELLING OFF WAR STORES.

The progress made in the sale of surplus Government property under the direction of the Disposal Board, Ministry of Munitions, is indicated by the fact that the value of the stores sold up to date amount to upwards of £107,000,000. Among the interesting figures gleaned from official sources, the following items are noteworthy:

Horses and animals, £3,701,654 in the United Kingdom, and £10,451,719 abroad.

Ferrous metals, £2,118,806, and non-ferrous £8,557,218.

Chemicals and explosives, £13,949,051.

Sales to contractors, £3,220,711.

A feature of the sales of mechanical transport, including agricultural machinery, in various parts of the country is that the prices obtained rule uniformly high, that at Winchester realising £2,000 more than the inventory value of the machinery.

It is interesting to note that the Controller of Telephones, Telegraphs, and Electrical Instruments has visited Belgium, with the result that sales will be considerably accelerated. Of the several sales authorised by him, one includes that of 150,000 lamps.

BRITISH OLD HEIDELBERGERS' ASSOCIATION.

"Little did the boys of Heidelberg College think that the German language which they learnt on the banks of the Neckar would be spoken by them in British occupied Germany". Such was the remark passed by one of them at an enjoyable little reunion dinner which took place at the Officers' Club on the 12th inst. A short notice in the "Cologne Post" recently has been the means of eight "old boys" of Heidelberg College being found in Cologne — "Intelligence", "Topography", "Circulation", Inter-Allied Railway Commission, Rhine Navigation were strongly represented. A civilian "old boy" also materialised and as he has had the misfortune to have been interned in Ruhleben Camp for four years he had plenty of questions to answer. The evening was so enjoyable that arrangements are being made for fortnightly gatherings. If this catches the eye of any other "Alt Heidelberger" in the neighbourhood, will he please communicate with Capt. C.H. Montgomery, R.E. Inter-Allied Railway Sub Commission when he will hear of "something to his advantage". By the way the old rowing prowess begun on the Neckar is now going strong on the Rhine, and the Old Heidelbergers Association "four" is hot stuff and willing to challenge any other four that will take them on. Any offers?

CHURCH IN WALES.

PROPOSED NEW PROVINCE.

A proposal for the creation of a new Province of Wales came before a special meeting of the governing body of the Church in Wales at Llandrindod Wells, and a letter was read from the Archbishop of Canterbury, who expressed himself in favour of such a step if, unhappily, Welsh Disestablishment was, as now semed to be the case, to be regarded as a fait accompli. A resolution in favour of the proposal was carried with one dissentient.

DANGER OF CONFUSION.

The Bishop of St. Asaph, who presided, said he had received a letter from the Archbishop of Canterbury in response to a Welsh Province. The Archbishop wrote testifying to the value of the presence of the bishops of the Welsh diocese in Convocation, and proceeded:

"If, as seems now to be the case, the disestablishment of the four dioceses must unhappily be regarded as a fait accompli, to take effect after the war, we have to consider what ought in future to be the position of your four dioceses. I have taken counsel on the subject with most of our English bishops, as well as with all the Welsh bishops, and I am prepared to say that I have the support of, at the very least, the great majority of them in expressing my deliberate opinion that it will conduce to the happy and orderly working of the whole Church in England and Wales if, by our own joint action, a separate province be formed for Wales. Indeed I cannot help fearing that unless this be done there is some danger of confusion, and even chaos, in the arrangements for the future. We shall hope in eveny possible way to retain the close friendship in thought and action wh ch has subsisted between the bishops in the English and Welsh dioceses, but constitutionally the formation of a new province will, as I believe, be essential to the orderliness and smoothness of working."

Chancellor Joyce Lampeter moved that the governing body should respectfully request the president to invite the Archbishop of Canterbury so take such steps as might be necessary to constitute the four dioceses of Wales into an Ecclesiastical Province.

The resolution was supported by the Bishop of Llandaff, of St. Davids, and St. Asaph, and was adopted.

On the proposition of Lord Justice Atkin the matter was referred to the constitutional committee to deal with.

GOVERNMENT MEETS AT WEIMAR.

GERMANY'S OBSERVATION ON THE PEACE TERMS.

ALLIES ULTIMATUM.

A summary of Germany's observations on the Peace Treaty was issued on Sunday. It should be clearly understood that the German delegation alone is responsible for the facts which it cites. Many of these are disputable if not absolutely mis-stated. The following are the chief points taken from the summary:

Germany states that as the basis of peace she expressly accepted Wilson's fourteen points and nothing else. Alleged contradictions between the draft treaty and this basis are pointed out and then follow the German proposals.

Germany agrees to the basic idea of reduction of armaments, but requires a period of transition.

Germany will surrender not only her surface warships but all ships of the line. Oral negotiations are proposed to settle the details.

The terms regarding Luxemburg are declared to be one-sided and inadmissible.

Regarding the Saar district Germany asserts that she cannot even admit to discussion of the question of the mining district.

Germany admits that injustice was done in Alsace in 1871 but, instead of complete restoration, requires that a vote be taken allowing Alsace and Lorraine a choice between union with France, union with Germany, or remaining as a free state with complete independence.

As concerns her Colonies the German delegates maintain that the seizure contradicts the fourteen points, and although such seizure was justified, demands their restoration. Germany expresses her readiness to administer them according to the principles of the League of Nations if she can enter the League at once with equal rights and privileges.

Germany accepts the obligation to pay damages to the civilian population in occupied Belgium and France, but is opposed to payment of reparation to other occupied territories.

Germany agrees to issue, a week after the peace is signed, bonds for twenty billion marks in gold payable without interest, beginning on May 1st 1927, the total not to exceed one hundred billion marks, including all concessions.

Germany refuses ton for ton replacement of shipping, but will construct an even greater tonnage and over longer period than stipulated

Surrender of the fishing fleet is refused, also the whole of the merchant over-sea fleet.

Germany agrees to export coal to France of a maximum of twenty million tons for the first five years and five million tons annually thereafter, but she asks permission to expedite the reconstruction of the French mines.

Germany insists on immediate admission to the League of nations and the mutual benefit of the most favored Nation treatment for a term of years as well as full freedom as to tariffs for all nations.

She cannot admit of Germans being placed before a foreign tribunal, but is prepared to see that all violations of international law are punshed with full severity. She suggests an international tribunal of neutrals, in the formation of which she will have a share.

Germany demands that territory occupied under the armistice be evacuated not later than six months after the signing of peace.

THE ALLIES' REJOINDER.

The Allies' reply to the German counter-proposals was presented to Count Brockdorff-Rantzau on Monday afternoon.

The document includes a notice conditionally denouncing the armistice and giving Germany five days in which to sign the treaty as revised.

Failing compliance, Saturday next will see a resumption of hostilities.

The following is a brief summary of the terms of the reply.

War criminals. The Allies cannot permit those who planned the war and committed barbarities being tried by their own accomplices. The trial of the ex-Kaiser by an Allied tribunal would represent the deliberate judgment of the greater part of the civilised world. He is arraigned as a matter of high international policy.

League of Nations. The Allies see no reasons, provided the acts of Germany give promise of fulfilling the necessary conditions, why Germany should not become a member at an early date.

Saar valley. The Allies stand by the decision as laid down in the treaty.

Alsace and Lorraine. The Allies cannot accept a plebiscite for these provinces.

Eastern frontier. Some changes in detail have been made to eliminate any possible injustice. In particular the historical frontier between Pomerania and Western Prussia has been respected, and no part of Germany outside the former Kingdom of Poland is included in restored Poland. East Prussia is not original German land. Dantzig is to be a free city. A plebescite under Allies control will be taken in upper Silesia.

Colonies. The loss of the German colonies need not hinder her normal development.

Reduction of Army. Germany will be allowed to reduce her army more gradually than at present stipulated.

Reparation. The Allies welcome the proposal for a German Commission to co-operate with the Entente commission, and to submit proposals. Any such proposals to be submitted within four months. Within two months later the Allies will reply to any proposals made.

Commercial facilities. These will be granted to Germany.

Meanwhile the draft treaty must be accepted as definit and it must be signed.

The covering letter presented with the Allies reply to the German note forms a reasoned defence of the terms as now finally presented:

The concluding portion of the letter states "The Allied and Associated Powers must make it clear that this letter and the memorandum attached constitute their last word. They have examined the German observations and counter-proposals and have in consequence made important modifications in the draft of the treaty, but in its fundamental outlines they stand by the treaty. It represents a sincere and deliberate attempt to establish a reign of law based upon consent of the governed and sustained by the organised opinion of mankind, which was the agreed basis of peace.

As such the treaty in its present form must be accepted or rejected.

The Allied and Associated Powers therefore require a declaration from the German delegation within five days that they are prepared to sign the treaty as now amended. If they declare within that period that they are prepared to sign arrangements will be made for the immediate signature of peace at Versailles. In default of such declaration this communication constitutes the notification provided for by the convention of February 1919, prolonging the armistice signed on November 11th 1918. The said armistice will at once terminate and the Allies will take such steps as they think needful to enforce the terms

GERMAN GOVERNMENT DISAPPOINTED.

A telegram from Weimar states that the expectations of the German Goverment are not fulfilled in the least. The contents and the tone of the Allies' reply is not at all in accordance with what was considered as possible. The final decision cannot be taken before the arrival of Count Brockdorff-Rantzau, who was due last night. The decisive cabinet sitting will take place this (Wednesday) morning.

Count Brockdorff-Rantzau and his suite passed through Cologne yesterday at 11.30 a. m.

SIGNATURE—5 TO 3 ON (T AND O)

In Paris the belief is daily growing stronger that the Germans will sign the treaty. Optimism is such that wagers of three to two and five to three are being made that peace will be signed next week. It is thought, however, that Brockdorff-Rantzau will decline to accept personal responsibility for signing, but that he will request the Weimar Government to pass a resolution directing signature.

Mr. Lloyd George has decided not to return to England this week. He left last night for Verdun to revisit the scenes of the fighting. He is expected back at Paris to-morrow.

THE CAMPAIGN IN NORTH RUSSIA.

RELIEF ALMOST COMPLETE.

The Times correspondent, telegraphing from Archangel, states that before July opens all our old troops will have been relieved by new troops, who will then be in a position to co-operate with the loyal Russian army. Bolshevism in North Russia may be dealt a blow which may determine its existence. The intention is to evacuate the country as soon as Koltchak is able to hold his own, but we cannot recede without being satisfied that our opponents are unable to follow. General Ironside, by means of propaganda and discriminate selection, has collected roughly 23,000 Russians under his command. It should therefore be possible for him not only to evacuate his troops but to relinquish Archangel as a base.

FOOD RELIEF TO POLAND WITHHELD.

Copenhagen.—The railway authorities at Dahzig have stopped the transport of American Relief Food Supplies to Poland in consequence of the Poles not keeping to the agreement for the return of the railway wagons which carry the supplies.

ITALY OCCUPIES STRATEGIC RAILWAY.

Rome.—Following on an agreement among the Allies the Italian Government has ordered the occupation of the railway between Villach and Saint Veit on the right bank of the Drave and of St. Ratigiz, a town of strategic importance on the frontier.

FIUME CREATES ITS OWN ARMY.

Rome.—According to the Agenzia Nationale the National Council at Fiume has promulgated a law creating a national army for which the sum of one hundred million lire has been voted. The new army already consists of 40,000 men.

MARSHAL JOFFRE FOR ENGLAND.

Marshal Joffre leaves Paris for England on June 23 to take the honorary degree of D.C.L. at Oxford on June 25. His last visit to England was in 1916, when he was still Commander-in-Chief of the French Armies.

SERIOUS CANADIAN RIOT AT WITLEY CAMP.

TOWN SET ON FIRE.

Rioting took place among Canadian troops at Witley Camp, Surrey, late on Saturday night. The trouble grew from a small disturbance in one part of the camp until at 10 p.m. 3,000 men were out of control. Great damage was done to Government and civilian property. The garrison theatre, a Salvation Army hut, a local branch bank, and 15 small shops were destroyed by fire.

As in the case of the Strand riot, the game of Crown and Anchor, a popular but forbidden form of Army gambling, was the immediate, though not the principal, cause of the riot. The camp has a floating strength of 10,000 Canadian troops awaiting demobilization. The labour trouble at Liverpool temporarily stopped demobilization. This created a bitter feeling among the men, and also caused the camp to be uncomfortably overcrowded.

On Saturday morning several men were arrested for playing Crown and Anchor. At 8 p.m., when the social side of camp life was in full swing, some aggrieved men held an indignation meeting in regard to the arrests. Some one shouted, "Let's get them out of 'clink'." This shout was taken up all round.

PRISONERS RELEASED.

The original band, now largely reinforced, overpowered the guard and the prisoners were freed. From there, the mob, gaining in strength every minute, proceeded from guard-room to guard-room until all the prisoners in the camp had been liberated. The camp pickets were turned out and all available officers summoned, but this had little effect.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

OWING TO THURSDAY being a general holiday THERE WILL BE NO ISSUE OF THE COLOGNE POST ON FRIDAY NEXT JUNE 19.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

As soon as the disturbances were ended by persuasion in one part of the camp they broke out in another. At 10 p.m. the rioters, now numbering 3,000, collected outside Tin Town, the part of the camp on the main road from Witley to Godalming, where are such Army institutions as the Garrison Theatre, the Y.M.C.A. and Salvation Army huts and a few shops.

A fancy goods shop was first wrecked. The men broke in through the windows, scattered the contents of the shop on the road, and then set fire to them. All Tin Town, built of corrugated iron on wood frames, was soon in flames. The blazing articles from the fancy goods shop were thrown into the Garrison Theatre, and the stage and scenery caught fire. The fire brigades from Godalming and Guildford were called by telephone and the local camp fire brigade turned out, but owing to lack of water, little headway could be made.

The big blaze appeared to calm the rioters. Once the fire had started they made frantic efforts to put it out. Some men, with a shot from a rifle, blew the lock from the door of a garage near the theatre, and many gave a hand in pushing six motor-cars out of the garage and down the road to safety. By three o'clock yesterday morning the fire was well in hand and the camp quiet.

PRISONER EARNS REMISSION.

Soldiers who had been released from the guard-rooms took part in putting out the fire. One did such excellent work that an officer who saw it has recommended him for remission of sentence. Nearly all the men set free reported themselves voluntarily yesterday.

The military authorities are taking steps to deal with the ringleaders.

Yesterday General Sir E. Turner addressed the men in the camp. He said they were all anxious to go back to Canada, but they must exercise a little patience. There was sufficient shipping to take them all back in a fortnight, but other things had to be considered. Strikes at Southampton had held up shipping, and this, the authorities could not help.

To go round the camp and see the destruction which had taken place was almost heartbreaking. Around him were men who had won fame in France, but disgrace was being brought on the name of Canada by the conduct of a few among them.

The rioting was renewed last night although it was less serious than on the previous evening. A conflict took place between the rioters and an armed guard. A number of men were injured and taken in ambulances to Bramshott hospital.

LAUNCHING THE GREAT JOY LOAN.

FACTS—NOT TREATIES.

The great "Joy Loan" campaign was launched at the Guildhall, London, yesterday, when a monster meeting was addressed by Mr. Austin Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Mr. Bonar Law, Leader of the House of Commons, representing the Prime Minister, who was unavoidably detained in Paris.

In his speech Mr. Bonar Law said that the lesson to be drawn from the events of the last five years was that we must make sure of the reward for our sacrifices. There is too much inclination in Paris and elsewhere, he said, to think and act as if the war were all over. We must be on our guard. There is not much change of heart in Germany. There is a different Government in Germany to-day, but it is a change of Government which did not come without compulsion from inside. What guarantee have we, if pressure is removed, that there will not be a return to the former Government which has been the scourge of the world? Therefore unless we are to lose the very object for which we entered the war there must be a just peace. A just peace must be a stern peace: a peace which makes sure, not by words and treaties but by facts, that the crime which was committed five years ago can never again be committed in the world.

"DRUMMED OUT" OF HER HOME.

VILLAGE VENGEANCE.

The military authorities have opened an enquiry at Standon, Herts, into the events leading up to the "tin kettling" of a woman and her family. It had been ascertained by the villagers that she had been on friendly terms with a German prisoner in the lower parts of the house while her husband, a discharged soldier and an invalid, was ill in bed upstairs. On discovering this, the villagers made a demonstration outside her house by beating pots and pans, pails, kettles,—a vindictive jazz band in front. As the result of this "drumming" the family left the village. The result of the investigation will probably determine what action the police take regarding the woman.

SOCIETY DIVORCE CASES PENDING.

Amongst the matrimonial suits down for hearing during the sittings which recommence to-day is one by the Duchess of Westminster, who is petitioning for a divorce from the Duke of Westminster. The Marchioness of Conyngham has entered a suit for restitution of conjugal rights against the Marquis of Conyngham; Baroness Kenyon is bringing a similar action against Baron Kenyon; Lady Clifton is suing for divorce against Lord Clifton, and Miss Madge Titheradge, the actress, is asking for a decree nisi against her husband, Mr. Charles George Quartermaine.

S.L.I. COLONEL'S REGIMENTAL BEQUESTS.

Lieut.-Col. Hugh Carey Dickinson, Somerset Light Infantry, Kingwestern, Taunton, died December 18, in East Africa, whose estate has just been proved at twenty thousand pounds, left £63 to buy three silver bugles for the 1st Somerset Light Infantry. He also directed that should he be killed in action or die from wounds in German East Africa, then he gave £100 to each officer commanding a company in the battalion on the day he was killed or fatally wounded, and £100 to the adjutant for the day.

ECHO OF CORNISH TRAGEDY.

Captain E. F. Wilton Schiff, of the Grey House, Carbis Bay, Cornwall, who died on March 24, left £ 5,404.

Capt. E. F. W. Schiff, was the officer who died from injuries received in a fight with the father of a young Cornish village girl. The father, a miner, was charged with manslaughter and acquitted. One of the witnesses at the trial was Miss Selina Moxon, who acted as Capt. Schiff's housekeeper at Carbis Bay. To her he has bequeathed all his property and estate, which has been admitted for Probate at £ 5,404.

WHY PEOPLE SWEAR.

Addressing the members of the Civic and Moral Education League on Saturday afternoon, Professor Gilbert Murray said that tobacco was a slight narcotic poison. The use of bad language he took to be due to the slight nervous convulsion momentarily destroying self-control and releasing sub-conscious interests which are normally suppressed.

FOOD MINISTRY ACTIVITIES.

A Government White Paper issued on Saturday gives a review of the activities of the Food Ministry for the year ending 31st March 1918, that period coinciding with the successful launching of the national system of rationing and the fixing of food prices. On the trading account there was a gross profit of 1,543,027 pounds sterling on the total turnover of 46,278,571 pounds sterling. Administrative expenses totalled 1,415,664 pounds sterling.

It is expected that the figures for the year ending 31st March last will show a large increase in the turnover. By the middle of 1918 eighty-five per cent. of the total food of the country was bought and sold according to Government prices.

Since the inauguration of the Board of Agriculture scheme for placing ex-officers on farms in various parts of the country to "try their luck," five hundred have been so placed, of which only three have left their farms.

HOW ALCOCK AND BROWN WON THROUGH.

SUPERB ACHIEVEMENT.

Breaking records all the way and all the time, the sixteen hours Atlantic passage of Capt. J. Alcock D.S.C., and Lieut. A. W. Brown stands out as a phenomenal performance. The marvellous skill of the navigator, who set so straight a course that he reached within ten miles of a pre-determined spot was matched by the intrepid daring and coolness of the pilot who safely snatched the Vickers Vimy-Rolls-Royce aeroplane from an inverted position only ten feet above the sea.

The world will acclaim the cool courage and flying skill of Alcock and the wonderful navigation of Brown, which alone could bring the machine to its landing on the west coast of Ireland after such a perilous passage of the trackless waste.

The landing was made in a bog close to the great Marconi wireless station at Clifden, in Galway. At this point the airmen were only 10 miles out of the course they had planned and some 60 miles from the town of Galway, where they had intended to alight. Lieut. Brown's first words were: "That's the best way to cross the Atlantic."

THE KING'S MESSAGE.

The King received the news as he was leaving church service at Windsor, and through General Sykes, Controller of Civil Aviation, he at once sent the following message of congratulation to Capt. Alcock and Lieut. Brown:—

"The King was delighted to receive your welcome announcement that Capt. Alcock and Lieut. Brown have safely landed in Ireland after their trans-Atlantic flight. His Majesty wishes you to communicate at once with these officers and to convey to them the King's warmest congratulations on the success of their splendid achievement."

OFFICIAL CERTIFICATE.

Major Mayo, representing the Royal Aero Club, accompanied by the Irish correspondent of The Daily Mail, arrived in Galway by aeroplane from Dublin on Sunday evening and proceeded to Clifden by motor car.

Major Mayo inspected the Vickers "Vimy" machine and found the seals and marked parts in order. He also received a letter from the official starter at St. John's.

CAPT. ALCOCK'S STORY.

To the representative of the Daily Mail Capt. Alcock said:

"We have had a terrible journey.

"The wonder is we are here at all. We scarcely saw the sun or the moon or the stars. For hours we saw none of them. The fog was very dense, and at times we had to descend to within 300 feet of the sea.

"For four hours the machine was covered in a sheet of ice caused by frozen sleet; at another time the sleet was so dense that my speed indicator did not work, and for a few seconds it was very alarming.

We looped the loop, I do believe, and did a very steep spiral. We did some very comic "stunts" for I have had no sense of horizon.

"The winds were favourable all the way:

"We encountered no unforeseen conditions. We did not suffer from cold or exhaustion except when looking over the side; then the sleet chewed bits out of our faces. We drank coffee and ale and ate sandwiches and chocolate.

"The flight has shown that the Atlantic flight is practicable, but I think it should be done not with an aeroplane or seaplane, but with a flying boat. We had plenty of reserve fuel left, using only two thirds of our supply.

"The only thing that upset me was to see the machine at the end get damaged. From above, the bog looked like a lovely field, but the machine sank into it up to the axle and fell over on to her nose."

On landing Lieut. Brown said to Capt. Alcock: "What do you think of that for fancy navigating?"

"Very good," was the reply, and they both shook hands.

Certain other facts concerning the flight are well worth remembering.

Alcock and Brown eclipsed all the records made by Hawker and Grieve and by Commander Read.

The £10,000 prize given by the Daily Mail brings the aggregate amount given by our great contemporary in encouragement of aviation up to £33,970, of which £6,305 was awarded as consolations for gallant but unsuccessful attempts at stipulated tasks.

Two other prizes go to the winners: 2,000 guineas from Mr. Albert Levy, Ardath Tobacco Co., and £1,000 from Mr. Laurence R. Phillips, brother of Lord St. Davids, for the first British subjects to fly the Atlantic.

U.S. PLANS FOR TRANS-PACIFIC FLIGHT.

NewYork.—Mr. Joseph Daniels, Secretary to the Navy, has indicated that the Navy Department is considering plans for a trans-Pacific flight. The Navy Department announces that when the R.34 crosses the Atlantic it will land at Long Island, and that arrangements are being made whereby American crews will prepare the airship for its return journey.

INDEPENDENT AIR FORCE

Prince Albert attended the dinner of the Independent Air Force, of which he is a member. Major General Trenchard gave the following interesting statistics of the achievements of the Independent Force subsequent to its formation on 11th October 1917, his figures being additional to what had been done prior to that date by the Eighth Brigade, R.A.F., which was the nucleus of the Independent Force.

The latter dropped over 12,000 bombs, totalling 553 tons, in the course of 205 day and 373 night raids. Of these raids 325 were over fifty miles, 142 over a hundred, 70 over one hundred and fifty, and nine of 200. He said it was intended that eventually the Air Force should be controlled by Air Force officers taught from the earliest age in the Air Force Colleges. He was of opinion that officers would be able to live on their pay in the new Air Force. As soon as circumstances permitted permanent stations would be established.

WATERLOO.

The 18th of June 1815 is one of the memorable days of English history. It was then that Wellington won victory over Napoleon Bonaparte and delivered our country from the fear of military despotism.

Students of history have a way of selecting particular battles and labelling them "decisive." It is many years since Creasy, for example, declared that there are fifteen battles that merit this prominence. One may quarrel with all who are too dogmatic in their historical generalizations, and within some limits battle-lists may vary considerably; but it is undoubted that there are some campaigns which have altered the world's story in a manner that other and more picturesque campaigns have failed to do. The battle of Hastings in 1066, the failure of the Armada in 1588, the victory of Marlborough at Blenheim in 1704 — these have been decisive in our annals. And Waterloo is admitted by all to a place amongst the great battles. No man of any vision can fail to see that in 1815 England was on its trial — and she was not found wanting.

We need not pause to go over once more the great campaign of the Hundred Days, though it will always be interesting to recall the personalities and the tactics of those memorable times. There was Wellington with his "countenance strongly patrician, and an appearance remarkable and distinguished, with something penetrating in his clear light eye;" there was "the Little Corporal," the greatest military genius of the modern world, restless, daring, romantic; there was Blücher, the impetuous cavalry officer who loved to cry Forward; and there was Gneisenau, the strategist who knew all that military science could teach. The feats of the British infantry, formed into squares and "rooted to the earth," and the gallantry of Marshal Ney and his cavalry are immortal. Bonaparte's tactics were magnificent, but he failed when all seemed in his favour. Yes, Waterloo was a famous victory.

No one who has read the story of the Napoleonic war can forget how England was stirred to its very soul by the spectre of a menacing dominion. In Lockhart's Life of Sir Walter Scott we see how even in the north of Britain invasion of our coasts was regarded as imminent and every precaution was taken that patriotism could devise. Those were the days of "volunteers" who pictured the coming of the hated French, and vowed that never should they land on our country's soil. Yet what a difference from the campaign that is almost over! Wellington had not more than about 67,000 men, and Napoleon's soldiers numbered only five thousand more. Such numbers tempt us to belittle the significance of a world-stirring battle, for they seem feeble and mean in the light of Ypres and the Somme.

Yet there is a comparison between 1815 and 1914. In each year there has been a deliberate bid for world dominion; in each case there has been reliance on the "big battalion"; in each century there has been a betrayal of Right in favour of Might. Napoleon Bonaparte failed, and Kaiser Wilhelm has failed. Providence has not favoured the enterprise of domination. In the ancient world empire after empire rose, declined, and fell, until the mind of man could build up a theory of dominion's evolution and decay. Providence may be as nothing to the being who is content with materialism, it may be ignored or scoffed at; but there is some guiding Fate in this world which so arranges the destinies of men and nations that the people who rely on the sword shall perish by the sword.

War has come to an end. It is good to pay heed to its lesson. If our Empire is diverted from the path of liberty and righteousness, then our empire will totter and fall. We need not imagine that ancient tradition and indomitable bravery will save us if we are lured to the gospel of hate and materialism. Peace and good-will have glorified the pages of our island story, and as a people we do not love dominion over our fellows. Never in our history have we bred a Napoleon or a Wilhelm, and not even in victory shall we tempt the Fate that frowns upon the arrogant.

GERMANY AND WAR INDEMNITIES.

Now that the Germans are raising so much outcry about the impossibility of paying the war indemnities exacted by the Allies, it is instructive to turn up past records of claims adduced by the Germans themselves in case they won the war. This is all the more instructive as the Germans are apt to assert, (1) that the terms imposed upon them are impossible and (2) that never, never would they have dreamed of imposing such terms upon their foes.

So that it is all the more interesting to read a scheme of terms to be imposed on the Allies which was drawn up on Sept. 2, 1914. It ran as follows:

"The capacity to pay, of each of our adversaries must not be taken as the only standard for the amount of the indemnity to be exacted. To the main and immediate payments must be added tributes to extend over a long term of years. The money saved on their armies and navies will enable the vanquished to pay heavy indemnities to Germany over an extended period. In estimating the amount of these indemnities we must take into considertaion the following necessities.

(1) The payment of all damage caused by the war, especially in E. Prussia, which can only be estimated approximately.

The payment of all our State debts, more than 80% of which are due to expenditure on our army, fleet and colonial enterprises: by this means we shall accumulate a reserve in our Treasury of 250 millions, to be employed in the relief of taxation and in the development of industry.

(3) The creation of a pension fund of 5,000 millions.

(4) The creation of a fund for new cables, new wireless stations, and of an imperial fund for rewarding victorious generals."

Of course it will be protested that Erzberger and the Majority Socialists have altered their views on their own Peace terms considerably since September 1914. Nevertheless—litera scripta manit. Those who enunciated such views must not complain now that the tables are turned.

Germany had ample money for making war not only on her adversaries but also on neutrals. Even now she has vast assets. Her territories are intact, whilst those of Belgium and France are devastated. Her factories continue working, whilst those of the invaded territories are ruined. Nevertheless, she insists, in face of the treaty with its just indemnities, on her poverty, misery and ruin.

THE QUESTION OF TONGUES.
(VII)
BY WILLIAM R. PATTERSON
F.R.G.S., M.R.A.S., etc.

We have read much recently in The Cologne Post with reference to the subject of an international language. I believe it to be inadvisable that we should concern ourselves for a long time yet with such a problem, especially those of us who trade with foreign lands, for we are, I presume, first and foremost a business nation.

We must acquire as good a knowledge as possible of the language of the land whence comes our raw material and to which we export our manufactured goods, for the reason that we have no time to lose if we are to compete with other nations.

That an international tongue might be adopted by the world would need that it be taught in all schools in every land. I hardly think that scientists or politicians or artists or writers will ever advocate the adoption of such a medium of intercommunication because those of them who have most intercourse with other countries are usually well-educated men and therefore possess already a good knowledge of one or more foreign idioms. Speaking of the British, I suggest that they would be the last to agree to such a proposition.

For my own part I prefer that the progress of our land should be slow and sure rather than that Great Britain should become an example of the maxim "more haste, less speed." I believe that our greatness is due to an appreciation of this condition. In war, our enemies have, in their reasonable moments, said of us that we are "slow in most things." Let us also be slow, then, in the adoption of an international tongue for many years to come. Indeed, the present generation ought not to concern itself with the idea, if it will continue the constructive work of our forebears. We must learn either French, German, Spanish, or Russian, or even two of these important idioms if we are to cope with the rivalry in trade that is already making itself manifest. Those who learn languages are the pioneers of Britain's trade. The choice of another language depends upon the trade in which one is engaged. Each trader, each merchant, each traveller, each representative,—all must use their own discretion they themselves should know best which tongue would prove most useful.

ANSWERS TO LANGUAGE QUERIES.

Capt. A. Campbell. — Yours is a difficult question to answer. In the south of the country you may find mostly the Persian tongue. In the north you will find Greek, Turkish and Armenian. In certain spots you will find a bastard Arabic. For the purpose you need, I strongly advise you to study modern Greek and Persian. Messrs. Kegan Paul, Trench, Trubner and Co. will send you any book on almost any language by return. Their address is 63—74 Carter Lane, London E.C. 4.

Sig. S.A.V. Hawkins. — Yes, by all means, continue with Russian. But why not spend some time also over French and German, by way of practice. If you are ambitious you will find time to do this. Note that some Civil Service aspirants have often a dozen subjects to study.

A.K. (Cologne). — (1) In your case, certainly concentrate on Spanish. (2) Yes, Portuguese would be necessary for Brazil. (3) The firm is Messrs. Kegan Paul, Trench, Trubner and Co. 68—74 Carter Lane, London E.C. 4.

"BY FAIRY FICTION DRESS."

"Do you believe in fairies? If you do clap your hands as loudly as ever you can."

Nobody who has been to the immortal "Peter Pan" will ever forget those words and the perfect storm of clapping that followed them. Big hands, little hands, fat hands—all going fast and furious to restore poor Tinker-Bell to health. I remember, when I saw the play at the Duke of York's Theatre in London, thinking how splendid it was that all those "grown-ups" believed in fairies. And now—I have my doubts. I don't think that fat man in the box there really cared very much about fairies; he did not look the sort of man who would, somehow. He was large and florid and his little boy was pasty faced and full of ice cream and chocolates and he was only clapping to get the stickiness off his hands; I am sure of it.

But the little girl in the front row of the stalls—she was a fairy-worshipper, if ever there was one. She was quite small and had a neat round head and a pretty little face. Her dark hair fell straightly down her back and a band of brown ribbon ran across her forehead. You know the sort of little girl I mean—like Shepperson draws in "Punch." I never saw her standing up but I feel sure she had long thin legs, in black stockings, and small feet with a little silver buckle on each black shoe.

* * * *

How she clapped! To watch her you might think that the fate of Empires hung on the amount of applause she gave. Her whole being, her very soul, went into each clap. Her face was a study. Eyes wide with excitement, mouth slightly open and her breath coming in quick short gasps. Anxiety for the fairy so near death was expressed in every blink of those long-lashed eyes, every backward toss of that trim little head.

And her look of complete radiant joy when the victory was won, would have been reward enough for Sir James Barrie, had he been watching her.

Yes, that theatre is witness to many thousands of love for and belief in fairies, and yet I don't suppose anybody will answer "yes" if you ask them, "Do you believe in fairies"?

Only children are supposed to believe in them, and some of the present day children don't believe at all.

Have you ever sat down in a wood carpeted with bluebells, with the sun breaking through the trees overhead? Have you ever stood under a pergola in a rose-garden, on a quiet summer evening? Have you ever sat inside a big old-fashioned fire place, with the wind outside, and the wood fire crackling away on the iron "dogs," and watched the flames dance up the side of the blackened brick chimney?

Haven't you seen those bluebells nod their heads to you and heard one rose whisper softly to another "I love you," or seen that little brown devil, just where the flame turns into smoke? Aren't those fairies?

Perhaps they are, perhaps not. There is something odd about them don't you think so?

THE C.O. AND THE SUB.

A C.O., who rather fancies himself with the revolver, was practicing last week in the neighbourhood of Solingen, when one of his subs. was inclined to make very commendatory remarks about his fine shooting. On getting a perfectly central hit on the 1st. class miniature target, the Sub., exclaimed, "Well done, Sir, you could not have done better although you had tried."

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.— May I be allowed a few lines of your excellent paper to reply to one who signs himself "A Volunteer of 1914," on the subject of Germany and the "League of Nations." To say I read with disgust his outburst against Germany entering the League would be to put it mildly and I believe I am right in saying that the vast majority of those who have served or are still doing so, will endorese my view. We were led to believe that we fought the war to crush military domination and establish freedom and government according to the wish of the peoples. If your correspondent thinks any good can come of keeping the German people under the heel he is mistaken. Having killed the power of militarism would it not be better to support the German people now against the reactionary bodies seeking to re-establish militarism in Germany? By keeping the people down and out we shall inevitably drive them back against their wishes into the toils of the militarist party. War will never be done away with by trying to keep a nation in subjection. Let your correspondent draw his line between the German people and and German militarist party and I will be with him. Keep out the militarist certainly but unless we unite with the people of all nations, both enemy and friendly, in doing so we shall fail in our object. If war is to be prevented in the future it must be by the co-operation of the peoples and not boycott of one country by another. The splendid lads we have lost died freely to establish freedom and free civilization from the curse of war. Let us then have a clean, peoples Peace and not betray our honoured dead by preparing for a deadlier conflict a generation hence.

E.E.R.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.— In to-day's issue of The Cologne Post I noticed a letter from a "Volunteer of 1914," re Germany and the League of Nations," on which I should like to comment. To my way of thinking, your correspondent does not take a right view of the case. Our comrades have sacrificed their lives in this war to crush militarism, and all its attendant evils for ever and if we were to do as he suggests we should only be carrying the spirit of hatred against one nation by another, which is an outstanding feature of militarism, to a useless end. Make Germany pay the penalty of her crime against civilisation by all means, but do not let us foster the same spirit that inspired the author of the "Hymn of Hate," or we shall only be sowing the seeds of future strife, and then our comrades blood will have been shed in vain.

RATES OF EXCHANGE.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Dear Sir.— With reference to the letter concerning the military and civil rates of exchange, from "D" published in your issue of the 13th instant, I would like to draw the attention of "D" to one or two points, which it would appear, have not occurred to him.

With the majority of soldiers in the Army of the Rhine, when they have occasion to change money, it is usually a case of changing marks into sterling, and, as your correspondent states, they have to pay 61.50 marks (at present) for each pound sterling.

Now supposing that we had the civilian rate, according to "D", £1 equals 68.00 marks, then the soldier would have to pay an extra 6.50 marks for each pound he wished to purchase.

Again, as each soldier's account at the various fixed centre pay offices is debited with his payments, converted into sterling at the rate of exchange in force at the time of the payment, I cannot see exactly what difference it would make whether the equivalent value in marks of the £1 sterling is fixed at 61.50 marks, or 68.00 marks.

In any case we cannot have the benefit of the rate of exchange both ways.

H. S. PEACOCK.

EGOTISTICAL ENTERTAINERS.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—Speaking for a unit, one of many in this division, situated miles away from anywhere in a country village, may I point out that some concert parties, having rightly or wrongly in their own opinion reached such a pitch of excellence, are not content with performing to such as to us, and are becoming more and more inclined to cater for larger audiences in larger places, e.g., Cologne, instead of being content with smaller audiences in out of the way places. Every unit cannot furnish them with grand concert halls, complete with all the latest shades of light and diversities of colour.

A certain well-known concert party left this village in a huff the other day after their first performance (two being previously arranged for). The reasons given were they did not consider their reception (the very best I can swear we could manage) good enough. In fact I may say their brusqueness still smarts as we enjoyed their first performance immensely.

A FIELD GUNNER.

CANTEEN REFORMS.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—You will be doing great service to the troops on the Rhine, if you can rouse the responsible authorities to the crying need for reforms in the sales department of the Expeditionary Force Canteen. There is a serious shortage of all necessary comforts, especially cigarettes, tinned-fruits, summer drinks, etc. and the supplies issued to Divisional canteens are absurdly inadequate to the needs of the men. The Sports Department is badly equipped and such items as cricket bats and balls, tennis balls and rackets are unobtainable. Those who urgently require these things are obliged to go to German shops and pay inflated prices for inferior articles. Tennis balls at 14 marks 50 each is an example. I would suggest that it is time that units, through their division, should be allowed an opportunity of controlling the great shopping interests of their men.

E.G.

BEST INTELLECTUAL GAME.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.— The men of the Rhine Army have at the present time a splendid opportunity for learning more about that best of all intellectual games—Chess. Why not devote half a column to Chess say once a week through which games, tournaments, and problems could be arranged. I am sure it would be appreciated by many. L.A.

(We would be glad to have the views of other readers. Ed.)

DATE OF PEACE.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,— In a very amusing article which recently appeared in The Cologne Post, the probable date for the signing of "Peace" was given as 1936.

I protest against this fatuous optimism.

53rd GORDONS.

SUCCESSFUL SPORTS AT MERODE.

The encouragement given to sport in the Army of the Rhine is appreciated by none, more than by the young soldiers of the Highland Division, and the enthusiasm which characterizes their interest in athletics has been manifested recently at numerous sports meetings within the divisional area. Further evidence of the fact was forthcoming on Saturday afternoon on the occasion of the regimental sports of the 53rd Battalion Gordon Highlanders held under happy auspices at Merode, near Duren. Amongst the visitors were: Lieut.-General Sir A. T. Godley, K.C.B., and Brig.-General A. B. Ritchie, C.B., C.M.G. In the course of the afternoon music was pleasingly discoursed by the brass, band of the 52nd Battalion Gordon Highlanders (by kind permission of Lieut.-Col. A. B. Robertson, C.M.G. D.S.O.), and by the pipe band of the 1/4th Battalion Gordon Highlanders (through the kindness of Lieut.-Col. P. W. Brown, C.M.G., D.S.O.)

3rd. BATTN. M.G.C. CRICKET AT RIEHL.

A good game was witnessed when the Battalion team played "The Rest" of the Battalion. The former winning the toss, elected to put in their opponents first, and managed to dismiss them all for the poor total of 39. Eade took 5 wickets for 9 runs, and Falkingham 4 for 12, whilst they were ably assisted by L/Cpl. Wilkinson behind the stumps.

The Battalion team then went in to bat, and passed their opponents' total with only one wicket down. Four wickets were down for 70 — and the innings eventually realized 145 — Major Hodgson quickly knocking up 20 (including 4 fours) before the last wicket fell.

B. COY. v. C. COY.

These two companies met in the inter-coy. competition on Thursday afternoon. "B" Coy. won the toss and decided to bat. Owing chiefly to an excellent contribution of 32 (including 5 and 3 fours) by Major Hodgson, and a very useful 22 (not out) by Pte Greenhalgh, 87 runs were knocked up for 7 wickets. At this point "B" Coy. made a very sporting declaration, as stumps were to be drawn at 4.15, so "C" Coy. then went in, and after scoring 54 for 5 wickets, Lieut. Beaumont and Cpl. Connely collared the bowling, and advanced the total to 102 without further loss — thus terminating a very exciting and sporting match.

BILLIARD MATCH.

The visitors to the R.A.S.C. Bakeries Billiard Club (Kalk) in their latest match were the No. 1 Light Railway Signal Coy (Duren). At the close the scores were Bakeries 540; No. 1 Light Railway Signal Coy 456. Cpl. Handley and Cpl. Durnford, for the visitors, won their game for the home team. Cpl. Chamberlain and Pte. Hunsell, for the home team, also won their games.

"COLOGNE POST" CUP MATCHES.

Excellent Progress Made In Various Leagues.

Excellent progress is now being made in the various "Cologne Post" Leagues, and the League Tables will be published at the end of the week. Some clubs are still in arrear with matches, due to various difficulties, but club Secretaries are showing a desire to get up to date, and there is every reason to anticipate that the bulk of the arrears will be wiped off in the near future. In the few cases where this will not be possible, opportunities will occur later in the season to play off the outstanding games.

MACHINE GUNNERS' EXCELLENT BATTING.

41st BN. M.G.C. (230) v. 3rd NORTHERN BDE. (99) at Heumar on Saturday. The former made a poor start, but thanks to some excellent batting by Major A. G. Barry (62), Lieut. T. E. Andrews (20), Dvr. Gorrard (48), and Lieut. M. J. Hanson (30 not out) the good score of 230 was reached. Lieut. Brown (5 wickets for 68), was the most successful bowler. The 3rd Northern Brigade, thanks to Col. Beaumont (19) and Pte. Ashworth (29), had 52 runs on the board before the second wicket fell, but the remainder, with the exception of Capt. Palethorpe (18), could do little against Dvr. Gorrard (6 wickets for 46), who kept a fine length, and were all out for 99.

ADVANCED SUPPLY DEPOT R.A.S.C. (129) v. FRENCH MORTAR BATTERY (35) at Eifel on Saturday. Batting first on a good wicket the Supply boys score had reached 129 when the last wicket fell. To this total the "Mortars" replied rather feebly, for against Captain Hinsley they collapsed, his swerve no doubt accounting for his many victims. The fielding on both sides was of a high standard, while the work of Sergt. Coombs behind the sticks left nothing to be desired. Captain Hinsley's analysis, — nine "Mortars" for 11 runs. For the winners the leading batsmen were Cpl. Stephens (22), S.S.M. Boutall (23), Capt. Hinsley (17), Pte. Taylor (13), Sergt. Hartley (13) and Sub. Lieut. Jones (11).

52nd BN. NORTHUMBERLAND FUSILIERS (58) v. AMM. COLUMN R.H.A. (49) on the former's ground at Sulz on Saturday. The visitors batted first and were evidently handicapped by the state of the pitch, and their wickets fell very quickly. Lieut. Bower and Gnr. Whiddet, made a stand, however, and succeeded in raising the total to 49, before the former was caught out. The home team opened badly, but a brilliant last wicket stand was made. Well-earned applause was given when Sgt. Heap, and Pte. Goldie, who scored 18 and 15 respectively, succeeded in passing the visitors' total. For the Fusiliers, L C Wilsher took 7 wickets for 10 runs, and for the R.H.A. Saddler Price took 6 wickets for 23 runs.

MIDLAND DIV. M. T. DEPOT (96) v. "F" A. A. BATTERY (117) on Monday at Bruhl. For the winners, Lieut. D. J. Smith made 38, Gunner Chapman 16, and Gunner Ryder 14. Cpl. Oscroft scored 53 for the losers. Gunner Ryder and Saint both bowled well for the Gunners, taking 5 for 33, and 4 for 32 respectively.

93rd BRIGADE R.G.A. (116 for 2), v. 52nd BEDFORDS (58) at Kalk on Sunday. The Bedfords opened with 21 for the first wicket, but the total only reached 58. For the R.A. Major McLeod took 4 for 15, Sergt. Barker 3 for 11, and Gnr. Weight 3 for 21. Wright opened, for the 93rd, with Ellis, and was early caught with nine on the board, for 5. However, on Rushton joining Ellis the runs were obtained without further loss. Stumps were drawn with the score 116 for 2. (Bmdr. Ellis 61; Bmdr. Rushton 45 not out).

51st BN. R. SUSSEX R GT. (92) v. X. CORPS SIGNALS (41) at Altenrath on Saturday. The X. Corps Signals batted first and lost 8 of their wickets for 24 runs, but a useful innings of 14 by Mortimer brought the total up to 41 before the side were dismissed. Pte. Edden took 5 wickets for 17 runs. The 51st R. Sussex passed their opponents, total for the loss of 4 wickets and compiled a total of 92 (C.S.M. Wills 19). The visitors were entertained to tea after the game.

D/190 BRIGADE R.F.A. (105) v. VI CORPS HEADQUARTERS 86 at Lindenthal on Saturday. The homesters went in first, Gnr. Woodmansee batting well for 24. Captain Makinson made a good stand compiling 21 runs. For the winners Captain Fenn batted in fine style, making a score of 34 (not out). Lieut. Turner and Gnr. Barlow also batted well making a score of 13 each. S.S.M. Airey bowled well for the Corps taking 8 wickets for 40 runs, whilst Dvr. Bingham took 4 wickets for 32 runs for the visitors.

103rd FIELD AMBULANCE (51) v. 91st FIELD AMBULANCE (64) on Cölner Strasse, Bonn, on Saturday. For the winners Sergt. Laoand bowled in deadly fashion, capturing 7 wickets for 12 runs, and also scored 19 without being beaten

2nd CORPS H.Q. (64) v. 75th BDE. R.F.A. (75) at 2nd Corps H.Q.'s Ground on Saturday. For the former Pte. Needham scored 27, and for the latter Gunner Drake contributed 21, Driver Evans 19, and Bombdr. Griffiths (not out) 10. Mitchell, Drake and Durbar bowled well for the 75th, and Major Yates and Capt. Mitchell for the 2nd Corps.

In a friendly match at Lindenthal on Sunday between the 6th Corps and the 2nd Corps, the former ran up a total of 225 to 130 secured by the 2nd Corps. The chief scorers were:— 6th Corps, Lieut. Twenlow (46), Lieut.-Col. Montgomery (44), "Mr. Extras" (41), Lieut. Carter (36), Lieut. Arkwright (27), and Pte. Gracomelli (14). For the 2nd Corps:— Major Fargus (38), Lieut.-Col. Lamour (22), Major Yates (20) Q.M.S. Bowley (not out 16) and Pte. Needham (14).

BIG SCORING AT ALFTER.

53rd WELSH FUSILIERS 150 v. 4th SUFFOLK REGT. (152 for 6 wickets) at Alfter on Saturday. For the 53rd Welsh Capt. Price carried his bat for a well played 74 (not out). They had every reason to anticipate victory, but after the early fall of the first Suffolk wicket the second wicket made a good stand, contributing 118, putting the side well on the way to victory, which was obtained for the loss of 6 wickets. Lieut. Hoyland and Lieut. Kinley batted remarkably well for 64 and 59 respectively.

1/9 D.L.I. (93 for 8 wickets) v. 3rd. CAV. FIELD AMB. (31) at Riehl on Saturday. On a very poor pitch the Durhams batted very well. Cpl. Rand scored 19, Cpl. Gustard 16, Pte. Archer 16 (not out), and Lieut. Parson 16. For 3rd Field Amb. Pte. Lloyd scored 12. For the Durhams Cpl. Ramsden bowled very well indeed, taking 6 wickets for 12 runs. Cpl. Mourry took 4 wickets for 16 runs.

51st D.L.I. v. R.A.S.C., BAKERIES on the former's ground at Riehl on Thursday. The D.L.I. batted first and scored 74, Major Kirton (15) and 2nd Lieut. Colbeck (11) being best scorers. The Bakeries made a bid, but fell short by 20 runs. Staff Sergt. Stricknine making 25. For the D.L.I. L/Cpl. Kirk (6 for 16) and Pte. Powell (4 for 7) were the best bowlers. Cpl. Andrews for the visitors took 6 for 29.

51st BEDFORDS (46) v. 51st SUSSEX (56) at Hennef on Wednesday. 51st. R. Sussex batted first and were dismissed for 56, Lieut. Thomson 6 for 24. 51st Bedfords were very unfortunate in having two men run out by misunderstanding and failed to win, being dismissed for 46.

Powell (19), were the chief scorers. The homesters best scorers were:— Pte. Garlick (12) and Pte. Gray (11). The D.L.I. bowlers were Major Kirton (5 for 25) and Pte. Powell (4 for 17).

A.S.C., M.T. (32) v. 180th LABOUR COY. (81) on the latter's ground on Saturday. For the Labour Coy., Pte. Smart scored 23, and Pte. Fennell 27 For 23rd Bde., Hynd took 5 wickets for 11 runs and for the Labour Coy., Smart took 6 wickets for 14 runs, including the hat trick, and Mair 4 for 11.

1/1st N.M. BTY. v. 3rd HUSSARS on Saturday at Gressenich. The North Midland's batted first and succeeded in compiling the respectable total of 168. Chief honours went to Lieut. Simonds who played a sound and forceful innings of 75 and to Cpl. P. W. Mayston who obtained 62 mainly by powerful strokes to leg side. The visitors, being all out for 20 runs, batted a second time against the other bowlers with slightly better success, but were all out for 33, in several cases no score being made, the N. Midlands winning by an innings and 112 runs.

D/190 BDE. (105) v. VI CORPS H.Q. (86) on the Lindenthal ground. H.Q. batted first, Woodmassey compiling 24 before being caught. A stand was then made by Burton (13) and Makinson (21), the side being all out for 86. "D" commenced rather disastrously, six wickets falling, to S.M. Airey chiefly, for 36 runs. Owing to the steady play of Capt. Fenn, however, who scored 34 not out, and the desperate efforts of the "tail", of which Lieut. Turner and Bmdr. Barlow were the livelier portions, the opposing score was passed. S. M. Airy bowled very well for the losing side, taking 8 wickets. For the winners, Lieut Baines took 4 for 41, and Dvr. Bingham 4 for 30.

Westropp, who possesses a wonderful punch in both hands, kept his left going at regular intervals to his opponent's chin, with one or two powerful right hooks to the face and body, and in the fourth round a powerful right hook to the chin put Cpl. Trott to the boards for the full count.

FOOTBALL THE FAVOURITE GAME.

LOWLAND D.H.Q. v. C.Coy., 9th Batt. M.G.C.

This game on Sunday opened fast and mostly in favour of C. Coy but fine work by Wilson and Doyle baffled the C. Coy forwards. Once the spectators held their breath when Wren was presented with an open goal, but Reid saved the situation by dashing up and relieving him of the ball. Later Wren scored and half-time arrived with C.Coy leading by 1 goal to nil.

On resuming C.Coy were soon in the offensive, but continual offside spoiled their play. Good runs by their winger were a source of danger to the Mess defence, and from one of his centres Wilson had the misfortune to put through his own goal. Directly afterwards they added another, the goalie having no chance whatever. Just on time C. Coy broke away again and Snandler scored the fourth. This ended the scoring and the final whistle blew with the result.

C. Coy. 4; Lowland D.H.Q., 0.

A DING-DONG STRUGGLE.

A. COY. 16th H.L.I. v. 6th K.O.S.B.

The above match was played at Landwehr on Sunday and was a hard contested game fought out in regular cup-tie fashion. The Highlanders were two goals up 15 minutes after the kick off, L/Cpl. Murphy and Lieut. Malnee being the scorers. Before the interval the Borderers got on level terms through Poole, the centre half.

The second half started in ding-dong fashion, but the H.L.I. got through twice in succession, Lieut. Young and L/Cpl. Murphy being the scorers.

Determined efforts by the K.O.S.B. were beaten off by Gallagher, Porter and Bain. A break away by the H.L.I. resulted in a foul inside the final area, and Cpl. Porter made no mistake with the resultant kick. An excellent contest finished with the following results:—"A" Company 16th H.L.I. 5 goals. 6th K.O.S.B. 3 goals.

HOCKEY MATCH.

The 4th Suffolk Regt. played the 15th Lancashire Fus. at Hockey at Troisdorf on Friday. The Suffolks continued their sequence of victories by defeating the Lancs 6—1. Capt. Redding played a dashing game at inside right, scoring three of the goals. He was ably supported by the C.O., Lieut.-Col. Stubbs D.S.O., at centre forward. Other goalgetters were Lieut. Kirby (2) and Lieut. Mason (1).

A "PUKKA" VICTORY.

"G" Battery, R.H.A. sustained a nasty defeat on their own ground at Cologne on Sunday at the hands of Headquarters, 5th Brigade, R.H.A., the game finishing in a victory for the latter by 6 wickets and 77 runs. Headquarters batted first and scored 119 for 4 wickets, Lt. Pridham (30), Lt. Fowlie (24) and Gunner Harris (23), upholding the reputation of their team. "G" Battery, however, fared badly against the bowling of Gnr. Harris (6 wkts. for 11) and Gnr. Busfield (3 wkts. for 14), only being able to make a total score of 42 runs, their best batsman being Lt. Gordon (9).

443 SIEGE BATTERY v. 2nd CORPS H.A. H.Q.

An interesting match was played at Schlebusch on Saturday between the 443rd Siege Battery R.G.A. and the 2nd Corps Heavy Artillery Headquarters on the former's ground. The Siege Battery were the winners with a score of 83 (highest score 19) whilst the H.A., H.Q. obtained 48 (Major Fry 15).

Early application should be made.

1/5 WEST YORKS ENTERTAINED.

The 1/5th West York Regt. had a rare treat on Friday last when a visit was paid by a Lena Ashwell concert party. It certainly was the best show the boys yet enjoyed, and each artist was encored at least three times. Lieut.-Col. Oddie, D.S.O., in his concluding speech felt compelled to apologise for trespassing so much upon the kindness of the artists.

The concert ended with musical honours and three cheers for the ladies, who afterwards honoured the officers by dining with them. A pleasant evening terminated with a jolly impromptu dance.

CITIZEN ARMY.

The Lord Mayor of Norwich, commenting on Sir Douglas Haig's suggestion for a citizen army, said he thought a strong citizen army on territorial lines was a proposal that should commend itself to all who love their country and are anxious that it should never again pass through the terrible ordeal of the last few years. "We do not," he said, "want England to be a second Germany; but we want trained citizens to help our country in time of danger."

LIFETIME'S SAVINGS STOLEN.

Chiefly in notes, £1,000 was stolen in broad daylight from a cash-box in the bed-room of Harry Tipper, of 44, Park-road, Hockley, Birmingham. Tipper and his wife were out on Friday morning, and when Mrs. Tipper returned the door had been forced and the lock on a trunk containing the cash-box broken with a poker. Mr. Tipper said the money was a lifetime's savings. He had intended to take it to the bank this week.

E.M.:—The county known as "The garden of England" is Kent.

Cymro:—It matters not what unit you go to. In case this has been overlooked it would be wise to ask your Quartermaster-Sergeant to make enquiries.

FETE AT BENRATH.

3rd LOWLAND BRIGADE'S ENJOYABLE TWO-DAY FUNCTION.

A garden fete was given by the 3rd Lowland Infantry Brigade (Brigadier General E. S. Girdwood, C. B., C.M.G.) in the schloss gardens, Benrath, on Saturday and Sunday. The band of the 17th Lancers, by kind permission of Major M. G. Nicholls and officers, the American jazz band of 41 performers, by kind permission of the C-in-C. American Army of the Rhine, and a string orchestra, played during the afternoon and evening. An open-air Concert was given by Miss Lena Ashwell's concert party in the schloss garden. Sports, games, competitions, mule races, and tennis tournaments were arranged. Teas and dinners were served to officers on one of the lawns at the side of the schloss, and the marquee of the 8th. Scottish Rifles adjoining also entertained many of the brigade's guests. Refreshments were served under the trees to all ranks, at popular prices.

The weather, which had been somewhat threatening, turned out to be fine, and the whole scene in the gardens of the schloss was one of beauty, and seemed to inspire the vast numbers attending with a spirit of cheerfulness.

It was interesting to reflect that the rendezvous had been visited by Napoleon the First and the late German Kaiser.

A Distinguished Gathering.

Amongst those present were Major-Gen. Butler, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., Lowland Division, who is about to take over the 1st. Division at Aldershot; Major-Gen. Tudor, C.B., C.M.G., who is to take over the Lowland Division; Brig.Gen. Girdwood, C.B., C.M.G., Brig.-Gen. Loch, C.M.G., D.S.O.; Col. Findlay and officers of 8th. Scottish Rifles, Col. Lumsden and officers of 9th. Scottish Rifles; officers of 14th. R.S.F.; Col. Thackeray, Col. Thorburn and Officers of H.L.I.; Col. Connel and officers of K.O.S.B.; Col. Nash and officers of Royal Scots; Col. MacKenzie, G.S.O. 1, of the Lowland Division; Col. Bingham, Tanks corps; Major Black, G.S.O. 2; the Rev. W. White Anderson, S.C.F.; and the chaplains of the battalions; the Rev. Dr. Wallace Williamson, of St. Giles Cathedral, Edinburgh, Dean of the Chapel Royal and of the Order of the Thistle, Rev. Dr. A. C. Downer, Rector of Selham, and Miss Mathieson, of the Scottish churches huts.

Captain Stavers, R.S.F., was organizer of the arrangements of the day, in which he showed great ability and energy.

The Sports Programme was as follows:—"Ascot Gold Cup," unit team mule race; "Lincoln Handicap," open mule race; Tug-of-war competition; 100 yards race (open); "Grand National" mule race; "Benrath Derby" mule race.

The day was concluded by a concert given by Miss Lena Ashwell's concert party. The music was first rate, and the humour elicited loud laughter. During the last violin solo a nightingale, which had perched on the highest point of the schloss, attracted by the music, added some beautiful strains to those of the performer. At the close of the concert Brig.-Gen. Girdwood proposed a vote of thanks to the able performers, and this was unanimously accorded. The proceedings terminated with the singing of the national anthem.

STONES AND KILOGRAMS.

We have received several communications pointing out that while weights for racing, boxing etc. are always published in avoirdupois, the available scales are graduated in kilograms only. To circumvent this difficulty we give below a comprehensive table of weights showing the equivalent in both British and continental systems.

"THE ROBIN HOODS."

SUCCESSFUL OPENING OF THREE WEEKS TOUR AT WERMELSKIRCHEN.

The above party commenced a three week's tour of the Southern Division with a most successful show before a crowded house at Wermelskirchen.

It was an excellent programme and was most enthusiastically received. Two of the artistes, Bert Lennard and Fred Cannon, were quite a show on their own, the former being a light comedian of much talent, and Cannon a natural comedian (a rarity nowadays), who kept the audience convulsed all the time he occupied the stage. In burlesque these two artistes were extremely clever; their dramatic skit, "East Lynne," being screamingly funny.

Jack Walker, a baritone of richness and power, was loudly applauded for his songs. R. Dommett in his duet with "Cynthia" (Victor Burr), the clever female impersonator, did very well, his pleasing voice being used to great advantage. Cpl. Davis (Dora), another charming "girl," is an exceptionally neat dancer and excelled in his double-turns with Lennard.

Cynthia, who wears some gorgeous gowns, sang "Look in her eyes" in a very dainty manner. Aubrey Ford, the conductor of an excellent orchestra, rendered one of his inimitable violin solos, while Dick Olver sang "Absent" with great charm.

Great credit is due to Bert S. Lennard, the producer, who, by the way, is about to introduce a second edition of "The Pearl Chase." Capt. Payne, the officer in charge of the party, has just acquired some new costumes and properties which together with the extensive wardrobe the "Robin Hoods" already possess, should make "some" show when it comes to Cologne.

CINEMA NOTES.

An Innovation.

The "Q" Film Company have produced a serial comedy entitled "Till our Ship Comes In," by Mr. Kenelm Foss. In form it is a series of one-reel comedies, which in contrast to the melodramic serials now being exhibited, is something entirely new. Many will welcome the inclusion of these novel films in the programmes of the Army of the Rhine Cinemas.

New Cinema Club.

Apropos the Cinema as an educational factor a club, known as the Quality Cinema Club, has been formed in England, its object being the promulgation of educational or instructional films for children. It is to provide special matinées in co-operation with schoolmasters and educational authorities. Surely, by arrangement with the Army Educational authorities, the Club could extend its activities to Rhineland. The pictures would certainly form a fascinating supplement to books and lectures.

Flickerless Screens.

The three Army Cinemas in Cologne have inaugurated quite a new idea—the aluminium screen. The aluminium screen, so we are told, does away with flickering, besides giving a delightful effect of light and shade that cannot be reproduced on the old-style screen. The other evening, when the new screens were introduced the audiences were amazed, so perfect were the pictures, but few knew the real reason of the excellence. Obviously, these screens fulfil all the functions that are claimed for them.

Some New Releases.

"Less than the Dust," a Famous Players' production, featuring Mary Pickford, is one of the principal among the latest. The famous film actress plays the part of a little Indian girl, who proves to be the daughter of an Englishman and eventually marries a British officer who has befriended her. Comedy and tragedy are skilfully mingled, and the play provides Mary Pickford with another chance of showing her remarkable versatility. Constance Talmadge is featured in "Good Night, Paul," released by Gaumont's, and Peggy Hyland appears in a Fox picture called "Bonnie Annie Laurie." It deals with an old superstition supposed to have been prevalent on the British coast that, sooner or later, a traveller rescued from the sea will bring disaster to his rescuers. The Triangle drama, "The Love Brokers," concerns American crooks in a quasi-Bohemian setting. Alma Rubens is the "star." "A nine o'clock town," including Charles Ray, recounts the amusing experiences of a breezy youth, who returns to his birthplace with modern ideas and gives the dormant little town an entirely new conception of commercial enterprise. All these pictures will shortly in their turn, be coming to the cinemas here in the Occupied Area.

GERMANY ALLOWED A FURTHER TWO DAYS.

TROUBLE BREWING IN BERLIN.

BOLSHEVIST FLEET SAILS TO SURRENDER.

COMMUNISTS MOWN DOWN IN VIENNA.

FURTHER DELAY GRANTED TO GERMANY.

DECISION BY MONDAY.

Paris. An additional forty-eight hours delay has been granted to the Germans to decide whether or no they will sign the Treaty. The time of expiry is now seven o'clock on Monday evening.

TO SIGN IN THE HALL OF MIRRORS.

If the Germans signify their intention of signing the peace terms the ceremony will take place in the Hall of Mirrors, Versailles, in the presence of all the plenipotentiaries of Allied and Associated Powers.

GERMANS CEASE HOSTILITIES IN ESTHONIA.

The Esthonian Press agency says it is reported from Weimar that the German Government has ordered the German Commander in Livonia to cease hostilities against the Esthonians. This report is confirmed by an official telegram from Reval.

SUPPRESSION OF VIENNA REVOLT.

MACHINE GUN PERSUASION.

A Copenhagen telegram from Vienna states that many persons were killed and wounded on Sunday as a sequel to a demonstration by Communists, who demanded the release of certain political prisoners. The police attempted to disperse the crowd, which made some show of resistance. Upon this a murderous fire was opened from machine guns which had been placed on the roofs of surrounding buildings by the Public Defence Force. The demonstrators fled panic-stricken. Quiet was restored by midday when, according to the authorities, the Communists' attempt to obtain the power to establish a Soviet Republic had been frustrated.

EAST PRUSSIA OBDURATE.

The State Commissioner at Königsberg has published a proclamation in which it is stated that the population may rely upon the Government signing no peace treaty which decrees the loss of the Eastern provinces. Any Polish advance will be prevented by force.

OMINOUS SIGNS IN BERLIN.

A telegram from Berlin via Copenhagen states that no newspapers appeared in the capital on Monday and the Communists, as in the case of former revolts, evidently wish to prevent public learning of their plans through the medium of the Press. Those who have witnessed previous disturbances say that the present signs are unmistakable. The Government, however, is fully prepared for developments at any time and Noske's troops are ready to meet all eventualities.

MORE TROUBLE BREWING IN MUNICH.

According to Munich messages a new Spartacist movement has started, aiming at the downfall of the Government and the establishment of an independent republic in West Germany. The formation of Red Guards is in progress. The general commanding at Munich has issued a proclamation announcing strong military measures and defending his own action in the matter.

LONDON SPECIAL CONSTABLES DISBANDED.

The Metropolitan Special Constabulary ceased to exist on Monday. The order which released the force was issued by Sir Edward Ward some days ago in the following terms: "By authority and direction of the Chief Commissioner of Police, all ranks of the Metropolitan Special Constabulary are released from continuous service from twelve noon on Monday, June 16."

In connection with the parade of the Special Constabulary of London last Saturday, Colonel Vickers Dunfee, Commandant of the City of London Police Reserve, has received the following letter:

"Windsor Castle, June 15, 1919.

"Dear Colonel Dunfee—The King desires me to assure you how glad his Majesty was to be able to inspect the City of London Police Reserve yesterday, and thus to show his appreciation of their valuable and public-spirited services.

"His Majesty was greatly pleased with the excellence of all the arrangements connected with this inspection, and I am to thank you and your officers for the success that attended the day's ceremonial.—Yours sincerely, CROMER.

BOLSHEVIST FLEET HOISTS WHITE FLAG.

CRONSTADT BURNING.

The Helsingfors correspondent of the Times, telegraphing on the 15th June, says that Cronstadt is burning. The news came via Reval direct from the general staff of the North Russia Corps operating towards Petrograd.

Seven Bolshevist war ships, having hoisted the white flag, have left the island fortress and are steaming west towards a British squadron. Several of the forts have also hoisted the white flag. The surrender of fort Krasnaya Gorka on the coast nearly opposite Cronstadt yesterday made it possible for the Russian Northern Corps to strike rapidly towards Peterhof on the coast between Krasnaya Gorka and Petrograd. The advance is developing with complete success on a big front.

Bolshevist troops near Krasnoe Selo, fifteen miles south-west of Petrograd, have mutinied and joined the attacking army. Up till yesterday the Russian Northern Corps had captured 22,000 prisoners, 327 machine guns, 87 guns and six armoured trains, besides the booty taken at Krasnaya Gorka, which has not yet been counted.

OPERATIONS IN NORTH RUSSIA.

BRITISH ATTACK.

The War Office announces:

A wire from Murmansk states that on June 13 British and Russian troops carried out a minor operation eight miles south of Medvega Gora in order to improve our line. The attack was entirely successful, and the situation has been greatly improved.

KOLTCHAK'S ARMY STEADILY INCREASING.

ADVANCE DIFFICULT.

Copenhagen. It is reported from Omsk that Koltchak's Army is steadily growing in numbers. The mobilisation of five yearly classes from among the population nearest the front has supplied 60,000 men, all of whom are fitted out with uniforms and equipment. Mobilisation at Perm has similarly given satisfactory results, the men called up being mainly trained soldiers. Koltchak's Forces are meeting with great difficulties in the advance, the Bolshevists having destroyed the railway line and roads.

SHIP LOADS OF FUGITIVES.

A Copenhagen telegram from Helsingfors says that at least five ships loaded with fugitives left Cronstadt for Petrograd on Friday night. The white flag was repeatedly hoisted at Cronstadt on Saturday but after flying for a little time was always hauled down. The Bolshevist paper, the Krasnaya Gazeta, states that Bolshevist troops on the Gatchina front are deserting in great numbers and Moscow and Petrograd papers now admit that the situation is hopeless.

KOLTCHAK'S PROGRESS.

According to telegrams from Omsk up to June 9, General Headquarters report that in the Viatka direction, Admiral Koltchak's offensive continues. North of the Perm railway his troops have wiped out several Red battalions. Skirmishes have taken place on the Belaya River. On June 9 there were no great modifications in the general situation. In the Sarapul direction a victory was obtained near the station of Aoryz over twelve Red regiments, 500 prisoners being taken. The Ural Cossacks have had a victory over the Reds, of whom about 1,000 were captured.—Reuter.

AMIR'S REPLY TO VICEROY.

Peshawur, 15. June:—A senior Afghan official, escorted by a couple of troopers, entered our lines at Dakka yesterday with the Amir's reply to the recent British ultimatum. The contents of the Afghan reply have, however, not yet been announced.—Reuter.

FOREIGN AGITATORS INCITE SWISS WORKMEN.

Geneva.—A meeting of workers at Zurich on Friday organised for an expression of sympathy with Rosa Luxemburg, was incited to violence by foreign influence. When the workers learned that the secretary of the Workers Union had been arrested at the frontier for having in his possession a mass of Bolshevist propaganda the prison was stormed. The police opened fire, killing two and wounding twenty, but eventually the secretary was released.

The Local Government Board weekly return shows that the total number of housing schemes submitted is now 2,088, of which 579 have been approved, covering over ten thousand acres.

DUCHESS OF WESTMINSTER OBTAINS DIVORCE.

NAME WITHHELD.

Great public interest was shown in the Duchess of Westminster's petition for divorce from her husband which was heard before Mr. Justice Coleridge yesterday.

The suit was undefended and a decree nisi granted to the Duchess.

Sir Ellis Hume Williams appeared for the Duchess and in opening the case said there were three children of the marriage, which took place in 1902. The estrangement commenced in 1909 and in January 1913 the Duke wrote enclosing a deed of separation and offering to make the Duchess an allowance of £11,500 a year. He stated that he was determined not to live with her again.

The Duchess replied through her solicitors refusing the offer and declining to do anything which would derogate from her position as the Duke's wife and the mother of his children.

In February the Duke's solicitors forbade the Duchess to occupy either Eaton Hall or Grosvenor House. In April 1913 a deed of separation was signed. In June 1917 the Duke met a lady at Brighton station, took her to his hotel and stayed there with her.

The Duchess went in to the witness box and told how the estrangement arose in her married life out of the Duke's habitual absence from her. She also described her visit to Egypt and her vain search for her husband, who left when she arrived.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

OWING TO TO-DAY being a general holiday THERE WILL BE NO ISSUE OF THE COLOGNE POST TOMORROW JUNE 20.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

A letter was read from the Duke in which he stated that their mode of living was impossible and that he would no longer make any pretence of living in the same house with her.

Evidence was given by the manager of the Grand Hotel, Brighton, to the effect that on the 4th June 1917 the Duke took a suite of rooms at the hotel. He arrived about 10 o'clock at night, went out and returned about 1.30 in the morning with a lady, with whom he remained at the hotel for the night. He signed the usual registration forms.

The name of the lady was handed to counsel in court but was not disclosed to the public.

THREE NEW V.C.'s.

The King held an open-air investiture at Buckingham Palace on Saturday and personally bestowed 320 decorations. Among these were three Victoria Crosses. Lieut.-Colonel Dudley Johnson, South Wales Borderers, received the V.C., a bar to the D.S.O., and the M.C. The other two V.C.'s were Lieut. Robert Gurls, R.F.A., and 2nd Lieut. James Johnson, Northumberland Fusiliers.

Major General Geoffrey Feilding, Commanding the London District, was knighted and invested with the K.C.B., Military Division.

FUTURE OF ROYAL AIR FORCE.

Presiding at the Royal Air Force dinner at the Savoy Hotel on Saturday, Major-General Trenchard said that new conditions of service of officers and men are necessary. The number of officers holding permanent commissions must be limited and they should be offered a permanent and paying career. Officers given temporary commissions will be drawn from civil life to serve three and four years, inclusive of training, and on completion of service they will pass to reserve.

COMMISSIONAIRES' CORPS FULL.

The report of the Corps of Commissionaires states that up to the 1st January 1919 over three thousand candidates for the corps had applied in London alone. Scarcely three hundred of these could be taken as so many members of the corps had returned from service. Fortunately the revival of race meetings has provided a great deal of temporary work. The total strength of the corps is 4,800, of whom seven hundred are still with the colours. The Duke of Connaught inspected the corps yesterday.

CANADIAN RIOTS AT WITLEY CAMP.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

With reference to the disturbance among the Canadian troops at Witley, Headquarters of the Overseas Military Forces of Canada issued last night the following statement:

"Conditions at Witley Camp were entirely normal throughout the day. The statements that there had been shooting on the Sunday night and that a number of men had been wounded by bayonets and conveyed to hospital at Brumshott are quite untrue. Throughout the entire incident only three men have required hospital treatment. The first case has already been reported, the second sustained a fractured wrist, and the third a lacerated lip."

The total amount of damage done at the camp is very great. Thousands of men assembled at Tin Town, but only a few hundreds were actually concerned in the riotous proceedings, and the crowds were eventually broken up by an armed motor-lorry. Many ringleaders have been arrested.

LONDON'S OPEN SPACES SCANDAL.

BOGUS NURSES.

The Bishop of London, speaking at a meeting of the Diocesan Preventive Council, at Church House, Westminster, said the war had awakened us to what the Bible called "the corruption that is in the world, through lust." About the middle of the war he was rather ashamed to preside at a London meeting at which the head of the police and the General Officer Commanding the London District were present, because that meeting took a very "whitewashing" view of this question. But even at that very "whitewashing" meeting, they all admitted that the state of our open spaces in London was a scandal. A verified list of actual things which had been seen in the parks and open spaces was now before the London County Council. An official was recently scandalized to see women in the uniform of nurses lying about with soldiers in one of our open spaces. It was unfortunately true that it was one of the commonest pretences for women to assume nurses' uniform. The reason they had failed to deal effectively with the whole evil, up to the present, was the double responsibility between the police and the County Council.

The Diocesan Preventive Council was ceaselessly at work, and people must not imagine that they did not realise that the state of our open spaces and our want of control over them was a disgrace to London. The great spectre they had to face was the belief that regulation of vice was the only cure, and that the best thing was just to fight disease as disease, quite apart from the moral aspect of the question. He agreed with one of the greatest statesmen who said that if once we went in for regulation this nation was doomed.

LONDON CHINA TOWN RIOT.

A serious disturbance occurred on Monday in Northumberland-street, Poplar, which forms a part of the district known as China Town, as the outcome of the resentment displayed by the people living in the street when it became known that a Chinaman named Lucksing was moving into a house at No. 56. The people allowed the furniture to be taken in and then, in the absence of Lucksing, assailed the premises. The wife of Lucksing, an Englishwoman, and a friend were badly mauled by the infuriated crowd, and the few police who were able to collect had to send for strong reinforcements in order to remove them to a place of safety.

The mob threw all the furniture out of the house, and wrecked the building in which the terrified women had been hiding. In the street the furniture was piled in a heap and set on fire, and this caused an alarm to be sent to the brigade, and from several of the East-end stations firemen proceeded to the scene. They were allowed to set to work without hindrance by the crowd, and with one hydrant in use the fire was got under. Excited multitudes gathered in the neighbourhood, and the police authorities drafted in additional men to cope with any recurrence of the trouble.

RACIAL RIOT CHARGES.

A special court was held at Liverpool to deal with cases arising out of the racial riots. There were altogether sixty-five persons in custody charged with various offences. Fourteen blacks charged with attempting to murder three policemen and with rioting were remanded. Joseph Ankru, a coloured man, who, it was alleged, stood in front of a large crowd wielding an iron bar and shouting, "Down with the white race," was fined £2. James Coffey, another coloured man, was fined £2 for insulting behaviour, and sentenced to three months for attempting to stab a policeman. George Lawson, another coloured man, was sentenced to three months for assaulting the police, and Charlie Brown, also a negro, to a month for a similar offence. A fine was imposed in the other cases.

29th DIVISION FIRST REUNION.

At the Piccadilly Hotel on Monday night the first reunion dinner of officers of the 29th Division took place.

General Hunter Weston presided and suggested that at future reunions other officers who had succeeded him in the command of the division should preside. Each should then deal with a particular incident with which he was personally acquainted.

He set the example himself by dealing with the division's baptismal fire at Gallipoli, which he watched from the deck of the Euryalus. Before it was attempted, the enterprise of landing, would have been deemed as impossible, but after it was actually done, could only be described as magnificent.

The total wastage of the division was nearly 90,000. Over 34,000 casualties occurred in Gallipoli and over 55,000 in France.

ATLANTIC FLIERS REACH LONDON.

GREAT RECEPTION.

Captain Alcock and Lieut. Brown arrived in London yesterday evening and were given a tremendous reception. The journey from Ireland was marked by enthusiastic scenes wherever the train stopped. Miss Kennedy, Lieut. Brown's fiancee, met the train at Rugby. From a point outside London the train was escorted by aeroplanes piloted by Capt. Chamberlayne, Major Carr and Major Prodger.

An enthusiastic crowd of several thousands gathered outside Euston station but elaborate police arrangements prevented a repetition of the disorganization which marked Hawker's recent reception. On alighting from the train the airmen were greeted by the Mayor and Corporation of St. Pancras. Brigadier-General Sir Capel Holden welcomed them on behalf of the Royal Aero Club and General Seely and Major-General Trenchard.

On emerging from the station the aviators were greeted with deafening cheers from the crowd, which were taken up and re-echoed all along the route to the Aero Club, where the first congratulator of Alcock was Hawker, who shook him warmly by the hand and asked him how he enjoyed the trip.

Alcock replied that he didn't enjoy it all, to which Hawker observed "You had better luck than I did."

Capt. Alcock and Lieut. Brown are being well-nigh overwhelmed with congratulations on the success of their wonderful flight. Among the many messages they have received are the following:

From President Wilson:— "Please accept for yourself and Brown my warmest congratulations on your splendid feat."

From Mr. Lloyd George:— "Heartiest congratulations to you and Brown on your auspicious and successful flight. It is a splendid achievement. I am especially delighted that two British officers who fought in the war should have been the first to link Europe and America in a single non-stop flight."

From Commander Towers:— "Heartiest congratulations from N.K. aeroplane division."

A resolution is before the U.S. Congress to award the Congressional medal of honour to the aviators.—British Wireless.

The Rolls-Royce factory at Derby was closed for a day in recognition of the part which the workers took in making these now historical engines.

It has been calculated that if the Atlantic crossing were completed in twenty hours by one Rolls-Royce engine running at an average of 1,800 revolutions per minute, its performances would be as follows (in a two-engined plane such as the Vickers' Vimy the operations would naturally be doubled). Each engine will make 2,160,000 revolutions, and each piston will travel up and down the interior of its cyclinder a total distance of 440 miles. As the Rolls-Royce engine has twelve pistons, they will in all travel 5,280 miles. The valves will be operated some 25,920,000 times in each engine, the magnetos and sparking plugs having to deliver the same number of sparks for the ignition of each engine.

Recent history of the Rolls-Royce aero engines discloses one or two astonishing facts—thus:

On Nov. 11. 1918, when the armistice was declared, there were in possession of the Royal Air Force, Rolls-Royce aero engines of a total horse-power of over 1,000,000, which far exceeded that of any other make of aero engine in use.

Previous to Armistice Day (Nov. 11. 1918) there had been constructed 122 Handley-Page bombers, of which no less than 113 were fitted with Rolls-Royce engines. Prior to the same date 1,524 complete "Bristol Fighters" had been delivered, of which number 1,304 were also equipped with Rolls-Royce engines.

GREAT DOCK FIRE AT LIVERPOOL.

MILLION POUNDS DAMAGE.

One of the most serious fires that have occurred in Liverpool for some years broke out on Monday night at the Alexandra Dock. It is estimated that over one million sterling damage has been done by the conflagration, which originated among some hundreds of barrels of turpentine that had been landed on the Hartley Dock Estate.

A breeze from the river caused the flames to spread to two huge warehouse sheds, each about 400ft. long. In these were stored timber, cotton oil, and general merchandize, and the efforts of the fire brigade to stem the advance of the flames were hopeless from the outset.

Fortunately the efforts of the firemen prevented the outbreak extending to a neighbouring shed, which belongs to the Cunard Company, but it will be some time before the fire is completely subdued.

Even if the fire does not spread, it may burn for days. Burning oil and bursting casks poured into the river, throwing off great flames until they burnt themselves out.

HIGH SKIRTS AND HIGH WAGES.

A largely-attended meeting of women civil servants was held at Central Hall, Westminster, when resolutions were carried condemning the recommendation of the Gladstone Committee's report, and supporting the principles of equal pay and equal work, and of equal opportunities of advancement for women and men in the service.

"You still believe in high skirts and high wages," said Mr. Jack Jones, M.P., who supported the resolution. "Evidently the Government have taken you at your own valuation, and fixed the salaries in direct relation to the length of the skirts." It was the pin-money people, he said, who helped to keep salaries down.

It is announced that, at the personal request of the Prime Minister, Lord Ernle, the President of the Board of Agriculture, has agreed to continue in office until the Prime Minister returns to London.

THE EVOLUTION OF STATECRAFT.

Viscount Bolingbroke, that brilliant and unpractical man of letters and affairs, rescued from the past a notable saying which like many another illumines his treatise On the Study and Use of History. History, he recalls, is Philosophy teaching by examples. Despite the excellent educational facilities in our Rhine Army we cannot pretend that "philosophy" is a popular subject, and it is notorious that "example" has seldom played the part expected of it; but it is fitting at times to seek help from the pages of our world-story. Any aid that we can bring from by-gone policy and episodes is welcome in these critical hours. The peace of Europe is trembling on the scales, and every consideration is worth while which can in any manner weigh against the strife and turmoil of earthly passions.

History has its lesson and it is drawn from the evolution of statecraft. In the Middle Ages of Europe, states had this curious anomaly that while they were linked together as parts of Christendom and paid homage to one Emperor or one Pope they were politically detached the one from the other. Their unity was apparent, not real. When one went to war against another it did so because of an alleged travesty of its rights, and the ordeal of battle was the means by which a state sought the judgment of God upon its claims. There was a profound mediaeval faith that war tested the value of a kingdom's ideals. But Christendom was secularized in the sixteenth century, and the spirit of nationality grew apace. States became independent and cast off the swaddling clothes of a Holy Roman Empire. The system of rights gave way, and the issues between states became a matter of diplomacy.

When diplomacy became the inspiration of foreign politics it was only a short time before the modern conception of a "balance of power" was evolved. It is the custom in our text-books of history to give to Cardinal Wolsey the credit of this conception. In our opinion it is wise to note that diplomatic balancing of powers savours of later days than those of the astute statesman of the first Tudor, but it is undoubted that in a vague manner he anticipated foreign policy. In the end of the fifteenth century royal power was manifest in the kingdoms of Western Europe. Louis XI of France, Henry VII of England, Ferdinand and Isabella in Spain, the Emperor Maximilian — these were monarchs who raised their countries to greatness. Naturally leagues were formed which weakened the power of any one country that was a menace to its neighbours. A good example of the machinations of diplomacy based on a balance of power may be found in the Grand Alliance by which William III saved not merely England and the United Provinces but Western Europe from the domination of Louis XIV. It is little wonder, then, that Ranke believed that the idea of a balance of power was necessary to the existence of the States of Europe.

Now this conception of foreign diplomacy has its merits as well as its failings. It is built on the assumption that no state can live unto itself, that the ties between states are so interwoven that what affects one affects all. The consequence has always been that in face of attempted dominance a league of interested kingdoms has striven to curb unworthy aspiration. In other words, when Might raises its head it is met with the combined Might of the less mighty. That may not be a lofty ideal of diplomacy, but it serves a useful purpose; and, after all, it is not very unlike the machinery of party government in England.

But the balance of power has two grave disadvantages. In the first place it is a creature of opposing forces. Were there a unity of interest and ideal amongst the nations of Europe, there would be no place for delicate balancing and intricate manoeuvre. The second disadvantage is that even the most perfect equilibrium can never be long maintained; and, when it fails, war is the inevitable resort of nations.

It would not be fair to say that the conception of a balance of power fully defines British foreign policy. Britain at her best has used that conception as a means to an end and not an end in itself. Along with it our country has placed other principles—regard for the liberty of the smaller nations, regard for the honour of Britain. But the student of history as he turns back its pages sees most clearly a definite policy of "balance" from the days of the Reformation to these of the Draft Treaty of Peace.

The evolution of statecraft has not ceased. In the Draft Treaty there is a nobler principle of diplomacy than that of balance of power—there is the conception of a League of Nations. No longer are the nations of the world to be viewed as units that can be arrayed against each other in adjusted leagues. They are to be viewed as one family inspired with a common interest and ideal. The hope of Europe and the hope of the whole world are bound up in that League. Only in it can there be peace and good will on earth.

May we say this word to the people of Germany? The Treaty that lies before their delegates for signature is a Treaty which has in its forefront a glorious emblem of Peace. The Covenant is the biggest matter of all. Germany has now been assured that before long, if she finds her soul, she shall have her place in the League. Refusal to sign the terms of peace will bring sorrow and shame to a country that has had a notable past, and will make her an outcast amongst the nations of the world. The League of Nations is not a bauble, not an accidental item of peace, not a machination of diplomacy. It is a saving grace and a herald of a worthier morrow. Nations to whom honour means much are pledged in allegiance to its faith.

THE ENCIRCLEMENT BOGEY.

A tombstone in an American graveyard is said to bear the following inscription:— "To the memory of Y. Abel Watson supposed to be buried here. No one knew him living."

The geographical position of Germany, with Russia on one side of her and France on the other, has often presented to German minds the thought of what would happen if both of them fell on her at the same time. The policy of Bismarck was directed to keeping in with Russia since France was then naturally irreconcilable. The fall of Bismarck was followed by a Franco-Russian alliance, and the possibility of their making a concertina of Germany reappeared. It was, however, a remote contingency, because France was democratic and Russia was ruled by a peaceful Czar. The Russo-Japanese War rendered even the possibility problematical. Germany, with Austria and Italy, was strong enough to make France and Russia think many times, even if they had been inclined for war, before they provoked it. Under the circumstances a straightforward and unprovocative policy which would maintain the balance as it was, appeared to be the line indicated for all the powers concerned. But Germany would not rest satisfied. She could not cease to lick her chops over the fat morsels she had swallowed in 1871. Appetite grew by what it had fed on. Prussia supplanted the old and more kindly feeling of Germany with the rigid materialism of the Empire makers and Marx, and for the old ideals, substituted the heady tipuor of Clausewitz, Treitschke, Bernhardi and hoc genus omne. The German people lived amid the fumes of Weltpolitik and Machtpolitik, and, while pleading necessities of defence, accumulated armaments destined for offence.

There was one power of Europe which stood outside the European groups. She had just been involved in a distant war which had taught her that the policy of "splendid isolation" implied more danger than splendour, and that, as she was, she could not count on friendship from any European power, least of all from Prussia. France was a democratic country, and if not too friendly, had at least substantial causes of difference on which to found subsisting grudges and ultimate agreement. She was more open, more akin, and a closer neighbour. Hence grew up the Entente between Great Britain and France. Through France, Britain was put in touch with Russia, and in a manner reconciled to her. Germany having begun in 1897 a quite moderate naval programme, proceeded, with variations between disclaimers of any hostile intent and "A could an if a would" ejaculations, to accelerate naval construction. When it became apparent that this procedure was only drawing France, Russia and Great Britain together, she began to protest and swear that she was being encircled.

It was all a bogey. King Edward of England was neither by temperament nor by his constitutional position adapted to weave the network which the German publicists feigned to believe was being woven round them, and attributed to that monarch's activities. As far as it was not an utter figment, it was the evident result of the umbrageous policy of the Prussian rulers, distrust of which formed a common ground of understanding.

The powers of the Entente sought peace and pursued it. In 1899, before the Hague Conference, Lord Goschen for the British Admiralty declared: "If other great naval powers are prepared to diminish the programme of shipbuilding we on our side should be prepared to modify ours." At the subsequent conference, Germany of all the powers alone rejected with scorn the idea of limitation of armaments and held this senseless extravagance to be no burden to the German people, but a boon. More than once since then, has Great Britain diminished her expenditure on the fleet with an overt view to influence the Germanic Government in the same direction, only to find that in spite of protestations that Government was increasing theirs. Finally, in 1912 came the incident of Lord Haldane's visit. The Kaiser, in the midst of the controversies arising out of the competition of armaments invited this philo-German minister to visit him in order to discuss misunderstandings between his country and England. Two little days before his visit a proposal for a great increase in the German Navy was submitted to the Reichstag.

Not encirclement, but security, was the object of the Entente. As a matter of fact the encircled one knew well enough that she had only to settle down to a pacific and straightforward policy to form part of the circle. She preferred to suscitate the bogey of encirclement in order to add a grievance to her armoury, and a further inducement to the German people to pay and sweat for the policy of bloated armaments; but it will no more stand the light of facts than will the analogies of an ingenuous Teuton journalist who would write to Mr. Lloyd George imploring "the great lion England" not to swallow "the little rabbit Germany."

The mentality of these people is too curious to be penetrable, but we have thought it worth while to refer to the history of the non-existent deceased since a few days ago a Berlin journal attempted his exhumation. It would be more interesting if some earnest seekers could unearth one genuine effort by Germany towards limitation of armaments in the last twenty years.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

OPERA HOUSE AUDIENCES.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir:— Your correspondent 'A. M. Richmond' suppresses some important facts bearing on his complaint regarding the etiquette of certain sections of the audience at the opera.

Presumably he is one of those fortunate individuals who understand German so thoroughly that he can follow the text as sung from the stage; the majority of us cannot, and go therefore chiefly to hear the music, and to see the acting, which surely does not require absolute silence.

The performance on the night in question was the 'Rosen Kavalier', and I, for one, cannot admit that the attitude of dumb adoration recommended by your critic is any tribute to the excellent acting of this essentially comic opera. Possibly the girls, Young Guards, and I did show our appreciation by a little subdued mirth.

Do you not think, Sir, that fully to appreciate comic opera, a sense of humour is as essential as a sense of music?

Further, it was the first time that I had visited the Opera House, and I had been told that refreshments could not be obtained there. Do you, Sir, blame a girl for taking a sandwich, or a sergeant-major for taking a drink, to sustain them through a performance lasting four or five hours?

With regard to the sneer contained in the last paragraph of his letter, who shall say who is the best judge of a good voice—your correspondent or the Young Guards who have so incurred his displeasure? *MENS CONSCIA RECTI'.

BEST INTELLECTUAL GAME.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—You would, I think, add to the obligations under which you have already laid the Rhine Army if you acted on the suggestion regarding chess made by "L.A." in your issue of to-day.

At the Cologne Central Y.M.C.A., we have weekly Chess Tournaments and as I have been handsomely beaten more than once, I am disposed to consider that there are players in the Army who are not to be despised. It would be a service to our Club, and doubtless to others, if we had the use of your columns for the arrangement of Tournaments and for the other purposes stated by "L.A." ALEX FRANCIS.

THE OPERA HOUSE.

A very fine performance of Gounod's "Faust" took place on Sunday last. The success was specially due to Mademoiselle Angèle Vidron, one of the favourite ex-leading ladies of the Opera House, who is actually engaged at the Chemnitz Theatre, and who played, as a guest, the part of Marguerite. This was the first time she played since she left Cologne, a year ago. We admired above all the refined style of her voice and her acting. We should like to hear Mademoiselle Vidron in an opera hailing from the sunny land of Italy or Spain.

The jewel song, the scene in the church and the jail-scene were really very fine. The public showed itself more grateful than ever, and heaps of flowers and bouquets proved that the opera-lovers of Cologne regret very much to have lost such an artist. We noticed also that the Frenchmen were specially enthusiastic. H. O.

WINGED VOTARIES.

BIRDS OF DIFFERENT FEATHER FLOCK TO THE DOM.

A Times correspondent gives to the world the noteworthy fact that a pair of kestrels have nested in the tower of a London Church. We are sorry not to be there. Meantime let us content ourselves with our little side show at Cologne. The famous Dom has its feathered votaries. But they pay scant respect to the marvel of its architecture, except insomuch as it affords them a refuge and observation.

Let us start at the foot or even in the street. The most obvious birds are the homely pigeons. Though their numbers are small they range in colour from black, through blue rock, almond tumbles, etc., to white. They are the sole domesticated species in our search and have their funkholes amongst the tracery at the head of the lower window.

Now for the wild. The first of these which attracts notice is the blackbird. Digging his toes in, he strains his neck to wrest a receding worm from the lately watered turf. Then the ubiquitous house sparrow. Daring and saucy, he hops leisurely away from the front of the vehicles, or flies to the nearest ledge of the Cathedral. Let us leave him to his gutter.

Looking higher small schools of tireless and erratic swifts claim our attention. Swifts have a weakness for church towers. Hour after hour they circle round uttering their screech of exhilaration, hawking for flies. They have little use for legs. Indeed, left to these ill-endowed members, they exhibit the helplessness of the sea lion out of water. Their feeding, and even courting is done on the wing. Mingled with them here and there is the dainty, silent swallow, flitting in all directions after his evening meal.

These latter disappear as the sun sinks, while the swifts circle higher and higher, vanishing at last in the twilight. It is a debated point where they roost. Higher still up the huge edifice we happen on some very ordinary looking birds amongst the flying buttressess. One whose business it is to climb daily their giddy height says they are crows. Certainly they are not hoodies; and what has carrion to do with Dom spires? Descendants of the famous Rheims jackdaw? It is possible. However, we plump for the common bare-faced rook until someone with good field glasses contradicts us. This little colony fly to and from their feeding grounds in the half lights.

But to the pièce de résistance. Almost any time two pairs of sparrow hawks can be seen twisting and scudding among the pinnacles. The hover of the kestrel has little part in their movements. They are in constant antagonism with the rooks, but the honours of battle appear easy. The spires of the Dom serve the hawks in the office of a cliff or crag. Occasionally their high-pitched rapacious scream calls to mind their dark deeds in country haunts. From their point of vantage it is not a far cry to the forests and hills in the district whither they repair to satisfy their predatory tastes. So we gaze at our winged friends and sigh for easy-going and hospitable London. "RUS IN URBE."

Y.M.C.A. READING CIRCLE, EUSKIRCHEN.

A meeting was held on Monday to hear Lt. Cowper speak on "Shakespeare and France."

The speaker dealt mostly with the similarity in route and the difference in detail between the armies of the earlier kings and those of the great war. He brought out the intimate knowledge which Shakespeare showed concerning France; his acquaintance with French characteristics of life and character in comparison with the German.

An interesting meeting closed with the usual vote of thanks to the speaker.

INTER-WING CRICKET.

COLOGNE v. BONN AIRMEN AT LINDENTHAL.

An interesting cricket match was played at Lindenthal on Monday between the 11th. Wing (Cologne) and 2nd Wing (Bonn) of the 2nd Brigade Royal Air Force. The 2nd Wing lost their first 2 wickets for 20, when Col. Blount and Lt. Wallington brought the score up to 56 for the third wicket, the latter unfortunately being run out. Lt. Deane, joining the Col., played good cricket, the pair putting on 33 for the 4th wicket, when Col. Blount who had played a fine innings was well caught at point. He just missed his half century by 2 runs. After Lt. Deane was dismissed for 21, the team went to rot, being finished off easily for 123, largely owing to the fine bowling of Lieut. Hallett who took 5 wickets for 13.

140 FOR 8 WICKETS.

The 11th Wing team started carefully but had 4 wickets down for 36 before Sergt. H. Spencer and Maj. P. Huskinson made a fine stand, putting on 45 for the fifth wicket, when the latter was caught having scored 33 in good style. Sergt. Welch, joining Sergt. Spencer at the fall of the sixth wicket, played in a forceful style and the pair passed the 2nd Wing's total with 4 wickets in hand. The final score for the 11th Wing was 140 for 8 wickets (innings declared), Sergt. Spencer carrying his bat right through the innings for 50. Other scores:— Sergt. Welch 19, and Lt. Hallet 13. Bowling for the 2nd Wing Lieut. Deane took 3 for 45 and Sergt. Sayers 3 for 46.

A NOTABLE RECORD.

It is interesting to note that 7 players of the 11th Wing team are from No. 70 Squdn. and are at present playing for the 70 Squadron league team for The Cologne Post Competition. This Squadron, it may be added, have played and won three matches in the competition, leading A.C. Bolton having taken 20 wickets for 44 runs — a very fine record.

TRANSPORT SEC. Q.V.R. v. TRENCH MORTARS.

The meeting of these teams caused much excitement and it was not surprising to see a fairly good crowd on Saturday at Niederaussem. Play was somewhat even for the first fifteen minutes when the Mortars opened the scoring but it was not long after, that Hayward, from a fine centre from Grenn, put the home team level, the same player giving them the lead five minutes later.

The Mortars started the second half well and were rather unlucky in not drawing level, Hamley saving a fine shot but try as they did, they could not pass the strong defence of the Transport, Pamsh at centre-half being in fine form. Just before time the Transport made many attacks at their opponents goal, and Howe and Winward were both unlucky in not scoring. The game ended with the Transport good winners by 2 to 1.

85 OUT OF 100,

ROYAL MARINES RIFLE ASSOCIATION MEETING.

Sergt. W. A. Westcott R.M.L.I., Portsmouth, won the Prince of Wales Cup for ten shots each at 300 and 600 yards at the revived Royal Marines Rifle Association Meeting at Gosport on Tuesday. He scored 85 out of a possible 100.

"COLOGNE POST" CUP MATCHES.

'R' BATTERY A.A. (129) v. CAVALRY DIVISION H.Q. (76) on Sunday. Lieut. R.L. Leman contributed a very useful 37, while Bmdr. Whitehouse gave a stylish 27 towards the Battery's total. Bmdr. Chadderton, batting ninth, hit five fours and three singles. For the visitors, Lieut. Jennings (26), Cpl. Adams (13) and Lieut. Fox (11), were the principal scorers. Bmdr. Whitehouse bowled magnificently, taking nine of the Cavalry's wickets for 18 runs.

239 A.E. COY (30) v. 77 SIEGE BATTERY R.G.A. (59). For the winners Cpl. Fenton took 6 wickets for 13 runs, and Sergt. Garmonsay 3 for 12. Wilson took 7 wickets for 26. The only one to reach double figures for the losers was Moorhouse 11, and for the winners Bmdr. Harling (16) and Gnr. Bull (14).

LANCS. DIV. H.Q. (153) v. EASTERN DIV. H.Q. (113). Batting for the former, Lieut. Almond scored 40; Major Rowntree 38; Major Shaughnessy 20; Lieut. Broadbent 11, and Pte. Willoughby (not out) 12. Lieut. J. H. Almond took 5 wickets for 45 runs and L/Cpl. J. J. Edwards 2 for 38. For the Eastern Div., Pte. Walker scored 38; Pte. Lowner 18; Pte. Sanford 18; and Pte. Sanders 14.

52nd R. WARWICK REGT. v. 1/6 W. YORKS REGT.

On Saturday the 1/6th West Yorkshire Regt. had a most enjoyable game against the 52nd Royal Warwicks Regt., at Gladbach resulting in a win for the former team. Pte. Carr and L/Cpl. Gibbons contributed a faultless 52 and 28 respectively; the former also showing excellent bowling form, taking 5 wickets for 7 runs. The score at the end of the play was:—

1/6 W. Yorkshire Regt. 141 for 5 wickets

52nd Royal Warwickshire Regt. 22 all out.

SPORTING REFLECTIONS.

Cricket v. Football.

Acknowledging the popularity of cricket, there are some who acclaim football as their favourite game and even go so far as to pursue the sport all the year round. Cricket is known as the National Game, but football makes a bigger appeal to the masses. Although ideally suited to the summer, cricket is criticised as "slow" by quite a number of sportsmen. Scotsmen, generally, prefer football to cricket even as a summer game. While having much admiration for the shrewdness of the Scot in many things I wouldn't like to regard his predilection in this case as characteristic of the major ty of sportsmen.

R.A.F. Cricket Week.

I see the R.A.F. are holding a cricket week in the form of a knock-out competition commencing on 21st June. The function is to be held daily at 11.00 hours on the Rhine Army Officers' Cricket Ground at Stadtwald, Lindenthal, Cologne. Keen competition is anticipated. The final match takes place on Friday 27th June.

Inhumane Horse Racing.

The other afternoon, while walking along the Rhine bank I saw two officers and two O.R.'s engaging in impromptu horse racing. It was sweltering hot and the horses, streaming and panting, were being urged on to what seemed a never-ending chase. As soon as one objective was reached they would about turn and gallop back, only to repeat the same performance. One horse was terribly broken-winded. Surely this sort of thing should be avoided.

THE RAMBLER.

SPORTING ITEMS IN BRIEF.

Sunderland F.C.

Mordue has been re-engaged by Sunderland for next season, but Holley has not been invited to resign.

Blackheath's fine all-round cricket against the Incogniti at the Rectory Field was reminiscent of old times. Blackheath registered 460 for 6.

Mlle. Suzanne Lengien, the French girl lawn tennis champion, who will compete in the All-England Championships, is now practising at Wimbledon.

Celtic Forward For Chelsea.

Johnnie Browning, the clever outside-left of Celtic F.C., has been signed on by Chelsea. He has been one of the leading lights in the Celtic team for half a dozen years.

Taylor, conforming to Manton traditions, is expected to produce one or two smart youngsters, one talked about being Lady James Douglas's colt Manton in the New Stakes to-day.

South Africans Win.

Lawn tennis is booming at Oxford and Cambridge, and following upon the inter-University contest, the South Africans visited Oxford on Saturday, and won by 8 matches to 3.

"LADY GODIVA" — REVISED VERSION.

"A" BTY. 190 BDE. R.F.A., SPORTS ON POLA WIESEN GROUND.

MUSICAL CHAIRS ON MULES.

The above Battery held a sports meeting under ideal conditions on the Pola-Wiesen sports ground on Saturday.

The 100 yards provided some very close finishes, the final winner being Dvr. S. Loomes with Bmdr. C. Maddy a good second. The 220 yards, a three-legged race, and a sack race were then duly run off, the two last mentioned causing much merriment amongst the spectators.

Arrival of Clown.

About this time a clown arrived leading "Molly" the mule, on which was mounted a rather well developed "Lady Godiva", clothed, we beg to report, in more than her hair. The clown who was exceedingly droll and caused screams of laughter by his antics, especially his fights with Nanny — the Battery's pet goat — was Sergt. Herbert, who was ably assisted by the somewhat boisterous "Lady Godiva" (Dvr. Reeves), and Molly, who was suitably attired in tights for the occasion.

The horse jumping proved of great interest. The competition for W.O. and N.C.O's was easily won by Sergt. Maj. Dale. The drivers showed wonderful keenness in the jumping with lead horses, and the laurels went to Dvr. Clarkston B/190.

MOLLY WITH LADY GODIVA UP.

Perhaps the most amusing event of the day was the musical chairs with the competitors mounted on mules. There were a good dozen and a half entries, and amidst yells of applause the spectators were rewarded by seeing their old favourite "Molly" with "Lady Godiva" up, win the event.

Other events were won by the following:— The mule race Dvr. Muir A/190; Throwing the Cricket Ball, Dvr. Muir A/190; High Jump, Gnr. Veiten, A 190; 100 yards open; 1, Bmdr. Maddy, A/190; 2, Dvr. Racher C/190.

By the kind permission of the Commanding Officer, the Band of the 23rd R.F's rendered an excellent programme of music throughout the afternoon. The Battery Commander, Capt. Kilpatrick, ably assisted by his brother officers, is to be highly congratulated on the unqualified success of his efforts.

BOXING AT ORLOFF.

EXCELLENT DISPLAY IN COMPETITION.

At Arloff on Saturday, the 52nd Batt. S.W.B. held a boxing competition as a prelude to the forthcoming divisional tournament, which, judging by the excellent display on Saturday, they look like winning. This battalion, likewise the whole division, was recruited from the country that gave the world such masters as Jimmy Driscoll, Fred Welsh, and Jimmy Wilde, in view of which a great deal of interest is bound to be centred in the above-mentioned tournament.

The entries in each weight, especially the Lightweight, were so numerous that series were arranged, the results of which are as follow:—

EVENTS AND WINNERS.

Bantam Weight:— The preliminaries of this had been decided previously, and Pte. McDonough, ("C" Coy), and Pte. Williams, ("C" Coy), met in the final. Williams threw up the sponge in the first round after putting up a game show against heavy odds.

Featherweight:— Pte. Horrocks, ("B" Coy), outpointed Pte. Poste, ("A" Coy). Pte. Roach, ("A" Coy), defeated Pte. Wilkinson, ("D" Coy) on points. In the semi-final Horrocks easily outpointed Hull, who had drawn a bye, and he so badly hammered Roach in the final that the latter retired in the first round.

Light Weight:— Pte. Moran, ("C" Coy), defeated Pte. Hewins of the same Coy, by a small margin of points; Cpl. Voce, ("D" Coy), vanquished Pte. Coles, ("D" Coy); Cpl. Edwards ("B" Coy) in a bad punching bout, outpointed Pte. Tennant; Pte. Meake, ("A" Coy), knocked out Pte. Wilson, ("D" Coy) in the second round, and later beat Meake on points. Cpl. Edwards met Moran in the semi-final, and forced him to retire in the second round, and in the final he punished Meake so severely that the referee stopped the fight. Cpl. Edwards is a real fighter, and has a punch worthy of a middle-weight.

Welter-Weight:— Pte. Peake, ("A" Coy), who believes in hard hitting, outpointed Pte. Smart, ("C" Coy); Pte. Walton, ("D" Coy), knocked out Pte. Runmore ("D" Coy) in the second round.

In the semi-final Peake met Fisher, ("C" Coy), and the latter was disqualified for too great a liking for the outside of the ropes. The final saw some spirited fighting between Peake and Walton, but the latter took the count in the first round.

Middle Weight:— Pte. Dennison, ("A" Coy), defeated Cpl. Hampton, ("B" Coy), on points. Hampton was awarded the prize for the best loser. Pte. Evans, ("C" Coy), who had drawn a bye, encountered Dennison in the final, and allowed himself to be knocked out in the first round.

PRESENTATION OF PRIZES.

At the close of the competition, Major-Gen. T. Cubitt, C.M.G., D.S.O., commanding 3rd Bde., awarded the prizes, and in a short address, complimented the contestants for their fighting qualities, and expressed his pleasure at the total absence of holding and clinching. He said that Bmdr. Wells was probably the best boxer of the age, but his failure was due to his inability to fight, and if they (the participants in the competition) desired to be boxers, they must first of all learn how to deliver and take punches—in short, to fight.

Lieut. A. R. P. Cannon, (51st S.W.B.) was an efficient referee. 2nd Lieuts. T. W. Thomas (51st S.W.B.), and D.A. Seddon were the judges, and 2nd Lieut. T. J. Treble, the timekeeper.

R.F.A. SPORTS, 51st BRIGADE.

SUCCESSFUL MEETING AT HAUS HORST NEAR BENRATH.

A very successful sports meeting was held on Sunday at Haus Horst near Benrath by the 51st Bde. R.F.A. Among those present were Brig.-Gen. W. Sandys, C.B., C.M.G.; Lt. Col. G. L. Walker R.F.A.; Major C. R. Rickeard, R.F.A.; Major E. J. Bather, D.S.O., R.F.A.; Major W. Sworder, M.C., R.F.A.; Major D. E. Logan, M.C., R.F.A. Lieut. W. W. Brown, M.C., R.F.A. performed the duties of Hon. Sec. and Recorder.

At the close of sports Brig.-Gen. Sandys kindly presented the prizes and a very enjoyable afternoon was finished by giving three cheers for the General.

MATCH ENDS IN DRAW AT NATIONAL SPORTING CLUB.

Great interest was taken in the 20 round boxing contest at the National Sporting Club on Monday night between Sergeant Johnny Basham, British welter weight champion, and Augie Ratner of America for a purse of £1,200. The contest went the full distance. The referee's verdict was a draw.

Both men started off at a very fast pace and in the early rounds Ratner showed up as a wonderfully strong and crafty boxer, but Basham held him in check throughout until the sixth round, when he was shaken with a hard left hook on the jaw.

Basham scored in the seventh round with several quick leads to the face and, using his left cleverly, Basham won the eighth and ninth by a fair margin. In the tenth Ratner got his left to his opponent's jaw, immediately following with a smashing left hook flush on the jaw. Basham, however, fought him off and the pace never diminished to any extent in the second half of the contest.

Ratner often appeared dangerous but Basham was always too quick in getting clear for the American to follow up his punches. The verdict came as a surprise for the majority were of opinion that Basham had done enough to entitle him to the verdict.

FOLK DANCING.

INTERESTING DEMONSTRATIONS IN COLOGNE.

There has been, recently, a revival of interest in old English Folk Dances in the British Army; and, recently, public demonstrations on a large scale have been given in England. But the largest and most varied display that, up to the present, has ever been given anywhere, was seen in the Great Hall of the Central Y.M.C.A., Cologne, on Tuesday, by a large number of spectators, both officers and men, who were not merely interested in, but fascinated by every item of the long programme.

It was a British Army of the Rhine demonstration, the dancers being the representatives of the several Army Corps. These had been trained by Y.M.C.A. folk dance lady-teachers in their several localities and sent in to Cologne, along with their teachers, by their Corps.

At times a Corps team gave a dance that had not been learnt by the other Corps. At other times, all the Corps united in a common dance with their teachers; and then about 100 dancers were on the floor, wearing costumes appropriate to the dances.

Votes of thanks were enthusiastically accorded to Mr. W. Ashley (the general Secretary of the Y.M.C.A. in the British Occupied Area) for the encouragement and help that he had given to the Corps teachers; to Miss Daking and her capable staff of teachers; to the men, for their splendid exhibition; and especially to the Corps Commanders for their co-operation without which the extraordinary success could not have been achieved.

The teachers and their teams were hospitably entertained by the Cologne Central Y.M.C.A. Folk-Dance Team which also took part in the demonstration.

FAREWELL CONCERT.

73rd ARMY BRIGADE R.G.A.

On Saturday, a farewell concert and party was given to the personnel of the 73rd Army Bde. R.G.A., in consequence of the Bde. being reduced to cadre strength, prior to proceeding to England. After an excellent tea had been partaken of, the staff adjourned to the garden of the St. Joseph's Haus, Brühl, were they are billeted, to participate in a whist drive. L/Cpl. Gibson won the first prize for gentlemen, a handsome cigarette case. Sapper F.Peat successfully carried off the ladies prize, which was a razor. Gunner G. H. Draper was awarded the consolation prize, and Sapper Fletcher, the booby prize.

An adjournment was next made to the spacious hall in the building, where the concert took place. Songs were rendered by L/Cpl. Gibson, Pte. Chapman, Gunners Butterworth, Palmer, and Casey. Bmdr. Hodge gave a fine rendering of "Little Grey Home" and was warmly applauded. Corporal Featherstone recited "Some kid" and "His only hair"; Gunner Butterworth was the able accompanist. A one act sketch entitled "A Wife's Dilemma" was a very popular item. Pioneer Meedham making a very efficient and good-looking "lady."

After the concert, liquid refreshments were served and dancing was indulged in. The singing of "Auld Lang Syne" brought a very enjoyable evening to a close.

The Bde. arrived in France during the latter part of 1916 and has seen service on practically every sector of the western front. The disbanding of the Bde. will sever many happy friendships and associations, especially to the small percentage of men who have seen service with the Bde. since it was first formed.

"THE OWLERS" AT STOTZHEIM.

"The Owlers", the concert party of the 79th Brigade R.G.A., who have been showing at the Casino, Euskirchen, commenced their "tour" round the outlying villages on Saturday night when they went to Stotzheim for the benefit of the men of the 14th and 174th Siege Batteries. An attractive and varied programme, well staged, was given before a crowded and appreciative house.

The "girls" of the party were impersonated by Lt. Palin and Dvr. Fulton and their presence went a long way towards relieving the performance of anything of the "military aspect". The "star" turn of the evening was the ventriloquial act by Bmdr. W. Pawson, which was distinguished by some very smart and witty patter.

Bmdr. Pawson and Dvr. Fulton are both well-known as members of the "Banebooks" the III Corps H.A. concert party which scored such a hit at the "Gaiety" Theatre, Brussels, in February. The other members of the party were Lt. Oxbury, Bmdr. Walker, Bmdr. Bromme, Spr. Corer, Gnr. Thatcher and Spr. Evans.

"The Owlers" are assisting to raise funds for recreational and sports purposes for the 79th Brigade.

BRITISH EMPIRE LEAVE CLUB.

June 18th. 1919.

The concert given by the band of the 12th Lancers on Tuesday at the B.E.L.C. was in everyway excellent, and the audience seemed to find the evening one of the most enjoyable they had experienced. The programme opened with a selection from "The Gondoliers" which can never be heard too often, and which was delightfully played. The second item was the suite "Ballet Egyptien" by Luigini. The familiar Barcarolle from the Tales of Hoffmann was also much enjoyed, the two soloists, A.Stollard and T.Dunnboth, acquitting themselves admirably. The rest of the programme included the "Sicilian Vesper" overture by Verdi, "Two Parisian Sketches" by Fletcher, a "Fantasia" on well-known songs by Douglas and "The Parting" by Smith. The soloists were Lieut. Barley, whose songs "The Little Irish Girl" and "The Great Red Dawn" were both much appreciated and Miss Barnard who also gave much pleasure by her playing of Greig, giving as an encore "Frühlings Rauschen." Major Greenlees thoroughly delighted the audience. He gave "Myself when young" and "Mother o' Mine," and kindly sang two encores "O! Flower of all the World" and "King Charles."

The 5 to 6 dancing class took place as usual and in spite of the great heat. It was more than ever successful.

THE PRETTIEST WOMAN IN COLOGNE.

Dear Maister Editor,

Efter m' last ouk's mortifeein' expairience wi' the mermaid i' the Rhine, aw micht weel hae waush'd m' han's o' weemen for a' time, an' turn'd a reglar Schopenhauer. Accoardin' t' Pope, admeetedly an ill-natter'd kin' o' a vratch, maist weemen hae nae karacters at a', tho' the majoarity o' the kitchie-deems we've had at Printfield, had a' hantle owre mony karacters, in fac' a nayou ane ilka sax month. Some o' them tae are badly adeekit' t' gyaun thro' yer breeks pooches i' the loanly watches o' the nicht, tho here agin aw canna substanshiate the statemint as the result o' m' ain expairience. Aw've worn the kilt this fower eer an' mair.

But be the weemen fat they may—paragoans o' virtyou or moniments o' vice—it ill-shuitet me th' ither nicht in a company o' conveevyal drooths weel oil'd an' soos'd t' sit an' hassen till a discushan on "Fa's the bonniest umman in Coloan?" For an oor an' mair the wirdy battel conteenit, noo this ane extoalin' the byouties o' an Inglish queen, an' noo that ane waxin' eloquint on the luv'ly faityures o' some parteeklar "Jerry." Ane o' the foremist as weel as maist beebulus o' th' orators was m' frien' Chairlie Doddles, fa's a bit o' a gay Lothairio on the quate, an' accordin' t' him, there was an umman near the Monopol hottel in Coloan, fa's byouty was by-ordinar, in fac' the speak o' the toon. As aw'm offen roon' that wye masel', maister Editor, aw naitrally begood t' get interestit. "Lat's hear something aboot her," aw quately remaurk'd.

"Weel, jintlemen," said Chairlie, "she's maist awfu' bonnie; Muggie Ann at the Mains or Maidgie Jean o' Nethermulls is simply noat in it wi' this veeshan o' luvliness, this priceless embodimint o' majeestick grace an' raivishin' byouty." (cheers).

A FAMOUS PARALLEL.

"Some o' ye," conteenit Chairlie, warmin' till is subjeck, "'ll maybe hae haird the jinglin' lines i' the Sassenach tung:—

"Now the Graces are four, and the Venuses two,
And ten is the number of Muses,
For a Grace and a Muse and a Venus are you,
My dear little Molly Trefusis."

(Loud and proloang'd cheers, an' cries o' "Go it, Chairlie" etc.) "Jintlemen," concludit the spaiker, "the first three lines are truly awpplickabel t' the bonniest umman in Coloan." (Renewed cheers, durin' which the spaiker resoom'd his sait on the coonter.) Gyaun hame thegither i' the gloamin', Chairlie promis'd t' meet me fower days later, an' intradyuce me t' this bewitchin' craiter.

On th' appointed day aw was up betimes wi' the laverock, poalishin' m' beets an' buttons, scrubbin' m' gweetikins, an' poshin' up ginerawlly, for it's nae ilka day 'at yer introdyuc'd tae "the bonniest umman in Coloan." True t' time, as the Caley Railwye Company says, Chairlie cam' shaughlin' alang t' the trystin' place, the coarner o' the Hoho Strassy, an' thegither we set oot for th' abode o' this misteeryus byouty 'at had turn'd Chairlie's napper, an' was showin, traijic signs o' turnin mine!

In less nor a meenit we were ackwally landit, an' nyod, aw got the surprise as weel as the disgust o' m' life. It was a musaim he took me till, an' this goaddess o' byouty was oaly a pickter!

"Look here, Doddles," says I, rale het kin', "fat dae ye mean b' haulin' me oot o' m' buid at half-sax i' the mornin, t' look at a daub o' vauruish in a rubbitchy frame? Ye're naething but a gaikit, toom-pated, eeseless, doited, ill-cleckit, feckless, cratty-bram'd, bletherin' galoot."

"Haud a wee," entraitit Doddles, rale sheepishly, "an' fan ye're feenish'd fuffin' an' rantin', ye'll maybe condisend t' tak' a keek at the leddy. Sairiously speakin' noo Peter, isn't she rale pritty?"

A PRUSSIAN QUEEN.

"She's nae sae bad," I admeetit, "but fa is she?"

"The Königin Louise," Chairlie promptly replied, "hae ye ever heard tell o' her i' the coors' o' yer misellanyus an' promeeskus readin'?"

"Aw hev that," said I. "A hunner eer syne, fan her kwintra was in muckle the same predeeckament as it's in i' the noo, she was Queen o' Prooshia. I' the middle o' the negoshiasnuns at Tilsit in auchteen hunner an' seeven she presentit hersel' i' the toon t' gie Nap. the gled-'ee, an' thereby induce 'im t' mak' his terms a hantle aisier. An' mon, he hurried on the signin' o' peace. It's a peety in that sense 'at her marra's nae livin' the day t' wheedle Doc. Wulson an' Maister Lloyd George. A year later at Erfurt, she was at her auld tricks agin, an' this time the man o' destiny sent her an auchteen carrot gowd chaun wi' a gowden hert attach'd, nae a bad tribyute till her bonnie looks an' grayshus chairm.

Accoardin' t' "The Third Book of Artemus" 'at ye review'd th' ither day i' the coalums o' yer estimawbel jurnal, "a beautiful woman is as a thorn in the side of all the world. For her sisters, they are eaten up with envy; and there is great dissension amongst the men because she is but one and not enough. And many do seek her in marriage, but only one is chosen, a little man and bald, having a wonky eye and also many talents of gold." Baith sexes, maister Editor, can took upo' the luvly Königin Louise withoot envy or disseasion. My purtin' wirds t' Chairlie may be repeatit here wi' apoalojies t' Joolius Ceesar — "aw came, aw saw, she conker'd."

AL FRESCO CAMP CONCERT.

"KOYLIES" STRIKE NEW LINE AT WEILERSWIST.

On Saturday evening the 24th Battalion K.O.Y.L.I., by kind permission of Major Brooke M.C. commanding, gave, at the Weilerswist Musketry camp, a concert on original and picturesque lines.

The "setting" was a piece of pasture, land adjoining the Camp and the main road. For a background there was a piece of woodland country which was most effective.

A huge bonfire had been prepared and gave the proceedings that extra spice of novelty which makes and keeps one interested. The stage was a G. S. wagon. Several would-be music hall stars and a real "strum at sight" pianist made up the show.

The band opened up the evening by rendering in good style a popular selection under the able direction of "New Mown Hay" Then followed a real orgy of talent. Baritones vied with light comedians to gain the approbation of the audience. Amongst others who shone must be mentioned Ptes. Watson, Wilkinson, and Bandsman Rickard. In fact every item given was of the best.

It was past eleven o'clock when the concert was concluded with the "King" most heartily sung, and each one hied to his tent feeling happy, contented and ready for "On the Back Down."

ACUTE POLITICAL CRISIS IN GERMANY.

RESIGNATION OF THE PREMIER.

ALLIES PREPARATIONS COMPLETE.

CLEMENCEAU'S REGRETS TO RANTZAU.

SCHEIDEMANN'S CABINET RESIGNS.

CLEARING THE AIR.

The most important development with regard to the question which is on everybody's mind as to whether or no Germany will sign the Peace Treaty next week occurred on Thursday night. Scheidemann, the German premier, and the entire cabinet has resigned.

Viewed in the light of his previous utterances, his action can only be taken to indicate that Germany intends that the treaty shall be signed and that if Scheidemann's Cabinet will not so decide, a Cabinet must be formed that will.

The immediate cause of the resignation was the refusal of the Democrats to accept a proposition made by the Centre party. The members of this section suggested, by a four to one majority, that the Treaty be signed except those articles declaring that Germany is alone responsible for the war, that the ex-Kaiser and others will be tried by Allied tribunals and that Germany will not be allowed to possess colonies.

This provided a pretext for the resignation as it is perfectly well known that such modified acceptance would be refused by the Allies.

The situation is confused as it is not possible to forecast the composition of the new Cabinet. Among the names mentioned are those of Erzberger, (who belongs to the Centre party and is no stranger to the formulation of severe "take them or leave them" peace terms), Noske (Majority Socialist) the present Minister for National Defence, von Richthofen, (Democrat) and Müller, (Majority Socialist).

The Chief of the General Staff, Groener, with the Bavarian and Württemberg premier have been summoned to Weimar to participate in the deliberations.

In any case, the new Cabinet will have a very short life. Its only object is to direct the German plenipotentiaries to go to Versailles, willingly or unwillingly, and sign a document which will save and conserve what Prussian wreckers have left after nearly five years spoliation of their own Fatherland.

There is also a Cabinet crisis in Prussia and the resignation of the Prime Minister, Heine, is considered imminent.

The latest information from Weimar is to the effect that Herman Muller is trying to form a Cabinet without giving undue prominence to his own Party (Majority Socialists).

REVISIONS IN THE TREATY.

The revised official text of the Peace treaty reached London on Thursday by aeroplane from Paris. It appears in French and English and extends to 100,000 words. The most important modifications have already been published in summary form.

The financial clauses provide that up to May 21st, 1921, the German Government shall not export or dispose of, and shall forbid the export and disposal of gold without the previous approval of the Allies.

The Allies publicly arraign the ex-Kaiser for supreme offences against international morality and the sanctity of treaties. A special tribunal will be constituted to try the Kaiser, composed of five judges, one appointed by each Ally, whose duty it will be to fix punishment.

The German Government shall recognise the right of the Allies to bring before military tribunals certain officials whose names are known, who, if found guilty of the alleged offences will be punished.

Compensation may be claimed from Germany in respect of damage to civilians and their dependents, to prisoners of war by maltreatment, to naval and military victims; capitalized cost of pensions and compensation; cost of assistance to prisoners of war and their dependents; allowances to families of mobilized persons; damage in respect of property carried off, seized, injured or destroyed by Germany; damage in form of levies, and fines or exactions imposed on civilian populations.

RHINELAND HIGH COMMISSION.

The text of the draft agreement concerning the future of occupied territory which was handed to the German delegation with the Allied note, has been officially issued.

It sets forth that no German troops, except prisoners of war in course of repatriation will be admitted to occupied territories. Police forces, of a strength to be determined by the Allies, may be maintained in these territories. There shall be constituted a civilian body, styled the "Inter-Allied Rhineland High Commission," which shall be the supreme representatives of the Allies. It will consist of four members representing Great Britain, America, France and Belgium. The ordinances of the High Commission shall have force of Law and its members shall enjoy diplomatic privileges and immunities. The Armies of Occupation are to have the right to requisition the German Government to maintain in a good state of repair all military establishments repuired for troops. Private soldiers and N.C.O.'s are to be accommodated in barracks and not billeted on the inhabitants except in exceptional cases. The High Commission shall have power to declare a state of siege in any part of occupied territory.

DELEGATION'S DENUNCIATION.

The Weimar correspondent of the Temps states that the memorandum addressed to the German Government by the delegation returned from Versailles consists of two parts.

The first deals with political aspects and seeks to show that Germany would be reduced to a state of slavery if she signed the peace terms. The second part deals with the economic side and the delegation maintains that by accepting the terms the situation in Germany would be as terrible as if she refused. The memorandum further stated that the delegation, including the experts, would refuse to adhere to a Government which would sign the treaty.

It is necessary, however, to emphasize the important fact that in the Centre party, on whom the decision depends, a feeling favourable to accepting the terms has assumed considerable proportions. All the leaders of this party are in favour of signing, and even in the Nationalist and Right parties, voices are being raised for acceptance.

INDEPENDENTS MANIFESTO.

A manifesto has been published in Berlin by the Independent Party Committee which, while protesting against the "Imperialistic" peace terms, candidly admits that the German people have now no alternative to taking the consequences of the misdeeds of the old regime which caused the war, and in the end brought about a catastrophe.

"The German people" runs the manifesto, "have got no choice now, for refusal to sign will mean the occupation of our most important industrial districts, the paralysing of industry, stoppage of food imports, unemployment and eventual famine. But still the Government hesitates. It still represents capital and militarism. We warn it not to continue its policy of provocation and force the people to acts of desperation by rejecting the treaty."

AN AMERICAN PROPHECY.

The attitude of Paris to-day is one of calm anticipation. "It was hardly to be expected", said a member of the American delegation, "that the proud and haughty Prussians would accept this bitter pill without making wry faces, but they will swallow it alright, never fear. After all is said and done the punishment which an outraged world is inflicting on criminal Germany is mercy itself compared with the barbarian brutality and ferocity with which Germany sought to impose her will on the world. Any other criminal guilty of half the fearsome crimes proved against Germany would accept the terms gratefully."

FATAL MISCALCULATIONS.

In Peace Conference circles at Paris the conviction grows stronger that Germany will not commit the fatal blunder of refusing to sign the Treaty, thus deliberately bringing upon herself far greater suffering than if she accepts the eminently just punishment imposed by the Allies' conditions.

In the words of a member of the British delegation, "If the Germans are still harbouring the hope of reaping benefits out of the Allies dissensions they are only adding another to the long list of their fatal miscalculations of the past five years. Germany will get no better terms than those handed to her on Monday. If she proves recalcitrant, her fate will be far worse. Nothing could stiffen the back of the world more effectually than Clemenceau's stern and timely reminder of Germany's iniquities."

ALL PRECAUTIONS TAKEN.

The Evening News learns on the best authority that every preparation, both naval and military, necessary to meet any possible situation is absolutely complete.

If the Germans say "No" on Monday, Allied troops will be moving at dawn on Tuesday towards Berlin and if the Germans persist in their refusal to sign it is expected that Berlin will be occupied in a week. The lines to be reached, the towns to be occupied, and the limits of each day's march have been fixed by Marshal Foch. Regulations for the conduct of the troops and instructions in the event of any hostile reception are ready to be issued.

APOLOGIES TO RANTZAU.

It is officially notified that M. Clemenceau has written to Count Brockdorf-Rantzau expressing regret for the incidents at Versailles and Noisy le Roi, when several members ot the departing German delegation were struck by stones thrown by the crowd. It is believed that the incidents were part of a spontaneous demonstration which was only rendered possible by laxity on the part of the French police authorities, some of whom have been dismissed.

OPERATIONS IN NORTH RUSSIA.

The War Office has issued the following communiqués:

A wire from General Ironside (Archangel front), dated June 16 reports that the situation on the Dvina front during the past few days has been quiet, only one small patrol encounter having taken place. As a result of a Bolshevist order mobilizing all men up to 45 years of age in the neutral zone on the Dvina, about eighty men and several women and children entered our lines. On the railway front, Polish troops carried out a small raid successfully, capturing one prisoner.

On the Murmansk side General Maynard reports, in a wire dated June 17, that patrols of the Russian volunteer force have pushed forward on the east side of Lake Onega to the shores of Lake Voldozero (thirty miles east-south-east of Povienetz). In an encounter with the enemy on June 14 they captured thirty-six prisoners and two machine guns. Similar patrols have got in touch with partisans belonging to the Archangel force north-east of Lake Voldozero. On the west of Lake Onega the enemy is being followed up by Russian troops backed by the Allies, along the railway and road running along the side of the lake.

CANADIANS RAID POLICE STATION.

SERGEANT KILLED BY MOB.

Kinmel, Witley, Guildford, Ripon and now Epsom! There seems no end to the disregard for law and order shown by Canadian troops awaiting demobilization in England.

The latest riotous outbreak occurred at Epsom on Tuesday night and culminated in a tragedy, a police sergeant, doing his duty in the face of overwhelming odds, being beaten to death by a horde of infuriated ruffians.

Woodcote Park Camp, less than two miles from the town, contains about 2,000 Canadian soldiers. A large number of these broke camp and went to the Epsom Town police station to release two of their comrades who were under arrest for a civil offence.

The town police station was wrecked, a police-sergeant killed, and a number of constabulary officers seriously injured.

Less than twenty members of the force endeavoured to keep 400 soldiers at bay. They failed against overwhelming numbers. The rioters, after smashing every window in the building facing the main thoroughfare, as well as the front door, gained an entrance to the cells and released one of their comrades. In view of the critical situation, the police allowed another Canadian, who was in custody, to go free. Both would have been handed over to a military escort in the morning, and it was the arrest of them that is considered to be the direct cause of the riot.

The small garrison endeavoured to prevent the soldiers entering the cells. They had their truncheons drawn, but they were powerless to cope with the numbers against them. Inspector Pawley received a blow on the head, and injuries were inflicted on other officers, several of whom were forced to return to the station.

TRAGEDY OF THE FIGHT.

It was at this period of the riot that Station Sergeant Green was so severely beaten that he lost consciousness. He accompanied the inspector, and was knocked down by blows on the head. He was conveyed to a house on the other side of the street, and afterwards in an ambulance to the infirmary hospital, where he died, shortly after seven this morning, without regaining consciousness.

Station-Sergeant Green leaves a widow, who is an invalid, and two daughters. He was an old and popular member of the force, and had put in over 24 years' service. He would have retired in another nine months. His body now lies at the infirmary hospital.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

Canadian Headquarters, Overseas Military Forces of Canada, issued yesterday the following statement in respect to the raid on the police station.

The incident preceding the disturbance at Epsom, which is deeply deplored by the Canadian authorities, appears to have been due to the feeling of hostility which has been steadily growing between the Canadians and demobilized Imperial soldiers, which recently came to a head at Guildford. Since civilians were fined as the consequence of that affair, a number of Canadians have complained at different times that when out alone, or in small parties of two or three, they have been attacked by a gang of civilians. Is has not been possible as yet to ascertain the reason for last night's occurrence, but according to some of the men, a Canadian soldier, who was walking with his wife, was insulted by a gang of civilians. A disturbance ensued, and several Canadians were placed in the police-station.

Several Canadians returned to the camp with this news, and a large number of men, resenting this treatment of their comrades, went down to Epsom with the idea of securing the release of the prisoners. The officer of the day, having failed to prevent the men leaving the camp, went down to the town with them, in the hope of averting a disturbance. This officer entered the police-station to make inquiries, and as he did not appear for some time, the Canadian soldiers, being under the impression that this officer had also been arrested, rushed the police-station. Considerable damage was done to the premises. One policeman was so seriously hurt that he subsequently succumbed. Several other policemen were injured and five or six Canadian soldiers, one of the latter severely. After the affair at the police-station the men returned in groups to camp, and went quietly to bed. Complete order prevails at the camp, but the Canadian authorities have taken the most drastic measures to prevent any recurrence of the disturbance.

All public houses and clubs in the parishes of Epsom and Ewell have been closed until next Monday.

The chairman of the Epsom Urban Council sent the following telegram to the War Office and the Canadian military headquarters:

"Serious riot of Canadian convalescent soldiers stationed at Woodcote Park Camp, Epsom, occurred last night, resulting in murder of police sergeant, injury to several police, and wrecking of police station. Strong action should be taken at once, as inhabitants have no security at night. Owing to its position the camp is difficult to control effectively, except with large guard. All licensed houses and clubs should be at once made out of bounds and the camp evacuated as soon as possible. There are no military police in the district. Immediate action necessary for safety of inhabitants."

Speaking at Epsom on Wednesday afternoon, the Bishop of Winchester deplored the tragic incident. "We shall be far removed," he said "from attributing this to anything like the soldierly conduct or the average character of our Canadian brothers. We know what splendid heroism they have shown, and we regret that their unit in the greater trials of peace should have been led into this affair, no doubt under trying circumstances."

Two Canadians detained in connection with the fatality were brought up at Bow street police station on Thursday evening and remanded. No charge has yet been preferred.

At the inquest which was opened at Epsom on Thursday on Station-Sergeant Green, a letter was read from Mr. Churchill stating that the whole matter will be the subject of a searching investigation and inquiry.

The inquest was adjourned for a week.

47th (LONDON) DIVISION REUNION.

OUTSPOKEN GENERAL.

Recently returned from France, the 47th Division (London Territorials) this week held a commemoration dinner at the Café Monico, Brigadier General Lewis (142nd Brigade) presiding. Among the guests was Lieutenant-General Sir Charles St. L. Barter, who, in the course of his response to the toast of the evening, made a personal statement with reference to his leadership of the Division, which he commanded from 1914 to 1916.

Sir Charles Barter said:—

I was charged with wanton waste of the men entrusted to my command at the battle of the Somme. I repudiate that charge with indignation. (Hear, hear.) The measures taken which led to this loss were either in opposition to my representations, or I was not responsible for them. I was dismissed at an hour's notice with disgrace from my Division; a Division which I had trained, and which I had been so proud to lead in every success. I was dismissed at an hour of the most brilliant achievement of the Division, the capture of High Wood, which several other divisions had made futile attempts to take.

"I think it is unexampled in military history that a military commander should be disgraced in the hour of the success of the troops under his command without any attempt at investigation. The charge of having been responsible for the useless sacrifice of lives of those under me was, I maintain, a cruel and unjust accusation. My immediate appeal for investigation was totally ignored. Successive protests at home have met with the same fate. I have been even refused official information relating to superior orders and material facts connected with the operations in question which are necessary to the prosecution of my case, which it is possible will be brought before the public at an early date. I am determined that my military career shall be vindicated, and that I shall be absolved from the cruel accusation of having squandered the lives of those entrusted to my command. I am very glad that I am able to tell the truth to you all, and especially to the good and trusted comrades of those days, which, notwithstanding the disgrace and ruin to my career which they brought, I look back to with intense and sympathetic pride."

A brief but pointed statement was made to a Press representative by Lieut.-Gen. Sir Charles Barter concerning his sensational speech.

Sir Charles declined to go into further details, concerning the points raised in his speech. "The only thing I will authorise you to say" he stated "is that I regret very much that it should be necessary for me to provoke a public scandal. My case, however, is worthy of official inquiry and I shall leave no stone unturned in order to get an investigation."

UNLAWFUL WEARING OF UNIFORM.

EX-OFFICERS FINED.

Two ex-officers, Sidney Priest and W. W. Lyall, were fined ten pounds each at Kingston yesterday for unlawfully wearing His Majesty's uniform.

Major Cornwallis West, A.P.M., stated that whilst near the members' enclosure at Sandown Park races he saw Priest wearing the uniform of an officer of the Buffs and Lyall that of a Major. Both men had been demobilized for some months.

The right to continue the wearing of uniform except on stated occasions, is contrary to recent regulations.

CIVIC OFFICIAL CHARGED WITH FRAUD.

Thomas Hampson, Deputy Mayor of Southampton was charged on Thursday with fraudulently applying to his own use £22,000 worth of property belonging to the Vulcan Motor Company, of which he was managing director.

Peter Gaskel, David Purvis and John Hamer, three other directors, were charged with aiding and abetting him. It is alleged that Hampson issued instructions that separate invoices were to be kept for the sales of scrap brass and took the proceeds of such sales to himself. It is further alleged that the other defendants agreed to Hampson's suggestion that he should receive a bonus on the proceeds of the sales of gun-metal borings, Purvis reveiving £1000 and Hamer and Geskel £500 each.

The hearing was adjourned.

MAKE A WILL WITHOUT DELAY.

Prebendary Webb Peploe, speaking at the South of England Convention at Hove on Thursday, predicted that the present year will see the end of this world. The great change might be as near as any night or day. The gloomy Prebendary counselled his hearers not to be frightened but to be ready.

WELSH MINERS PURCHASE A BREWERY.

In consequence of shortage in quantity, and poverty in quality of present day beer, South Wales miners have decided to brew their own. With this serious object in view they have devoted £20,000 of their money to the purchase of a local brewery. They are already proceeding to carry out their plan, with the object of supplying their own clubs.

FORTY MILLION YARDS OF LINEN, PLEASE.

Mr. Leonard Martin, a city merchant, has just effected a record one-man deal by purchasing from the Government forty million yards of aeroplane linen. He hopes to dispose of this at a price which will undersell the Belfast manufacturers. The deal was carried through by tender and the purchase price is stated to be about four million sterling.

HOW DEMOBILIZATION IS PROGRESSING.

PROSPECTS OF DERBY MEN.

The War Office has issued an interesting communication explaining the rate at which the demobilization of the British Army is progressing, and indicating the course which will be pursued after Peace has been declared.

"The War Office announces that the present average number of men being demobilized is about 40,000 a week, and if Peace is signed, this number, of course, will gradually be increased.

"It will then be possible, e.g., to reduce almost immediately the Rhine army from ten to six divisions and as soon as there is evidence that Peace is being carried out effectively, this army can be reduced still further. Moreover, the 40,000 to 50,000 men who are guarding German prisoners will be released from this duty when these prisoners have been sent back to their own country, and this will further simplify the problem of demobilization.

"On the assumption that Peace is signed this month, it is still hoped that all men who joined in 1914 and 1915 will be sent home for release by the end of July, except those who are serving in India. The release of these latter cannot be dealt with till the autumn.

"So far as the 300,000 Derby men now serving are concerned, it is hoped to release them according to the month in which they joined up—first those who joined up in January, and next those who joined in February, 1916, and so on. There is no ground whatever for the impression which has gained currency in certain quarters that if men who are demobilizable under Army Order 55 are sent abroad this year they will be retained for two or three years beyond the period for which they enlisted.

"No man who has not rejoined the Army on a normal attestation or for a period of two, three, or four years can be retained for more than three months after the Naval, Military, and Air Force Act comes to an end on April 30, 1920."

HITCHIN MURDER TRIAL.

EX-SOLDIER ACQUITTED.

The ex-Munster Fusilier, John Healy, who was accused at Hertfordshire Assizes of the murder of Mrs. Ridgeley, a widow, at Hitchin, gave an account to Mr. Justice Darling and the Jury of his movements on 25th January, the night of the crime.

He attempted to prove an alibi, explaining his possession of bloodstained clothing by the fact that a man lodging at the same house as himself came home drunk with a cut head. Prisoner put him to bed and in doing so got his clothes spattered with blood.

The Jury, after only a few minutes, absence, returned a verdict of not guilty, and the prisoner was acquitted.

DESTROYING SURPLUS STORES.

A despatch from Lille to Le Matin states that the British military authorities have commenced the destruction of war material which it would be too expensive to convey back to England. Already four thousand motor cars have been burned at a dump near Wissant.

The same journal's correspondent at Chateau Roux telegraphs that the Americans have burned a number of automobiles and a great quantity of tarpaulin and bedding which cannot be taken back to America. Inhabitants of the districts were not allowed to purchase any of the material.

A DEMONSTRATIVE TEST.

The airship R 34, intended for the Atlantic flight, is for the moment diverted from that undertaking. It appeared off Copenhagen last evening steering along the coast and making a series of evolutions which displayed to great advantage its capacity for manoeuvring and proved how perfectly it is under the control of its navigators.

After half an hour of these evolutions the airship turned North and followed the line of the Elsinore coast and eventually proceeded across to the Cattegat. In the course of the day the airship passed right over the country of Denmark. The trip was ordered as a demonstation in more senses than one.

8th EAST SURREYS HOME.

The Cadre of the 8th East Surrey Regiment, the battalion which made a famous football charge into the German trenches at Montaban, was given an enthusiastic public welcome at Kingston on Wednesday night on its return from France. Only twenty-two of the original battalion remain.

ALLEGED MURDERER DECLARED INSANE.

At Lincoln Assizes yesterday, Joseph Woodhall, a miner, was accused of the murder of Sarah Ann Robinson, a lady member of the Cleethorpes Board of Guardians.

Accused was found unfit to plead and was ordered to be detained during His Majesty's pleasure.

NEW TERRITORIAL COMMAND.

The War Office announces that General Sir P. S. Wilkinson, who commanded the Northumbrian Territorial Division in Force from 1915 to 1918, has been appointed to the command of the same Division when it is reconstructed.

FRENCH'S REPLY DEFERRED.

It is understood that Lord French's rejoinder to Mr. Asquith's recent speech will be given in an appendix to his book "1914." This will be published after Sir George Arthur's "Life of Lord Kitchener" has made its appearance.

SURROUNDINGS.

How they influence us.

Much of human life becomes plain when a man takes into account its surroundings. One need not be a Herbert Spencer to see that life is largely a matter of adaptation to its environment. The place in which we settle, the climate which we suffer, the men amongst whom we live are the traditions which our country has moulded for us, the virtues or vices of our ancestry—these have a paramount influence upon the texture of our life's fabric.

It is true that a man's surroundings do not spell a man's fate, but they make very real to him the inspiration of harmony or reaction. Essayists, like Philip G. Hamerton, have often discoursed on the influence of life's circumstances; and even yet we can gather lessons from their tale.

The philosophy of environment is alluring, but we select only a small part of it. There can be no question that the locality of human life is vastly important. It has often been said that the development of genius is most favourably furthered by the stir and excitement of a great city.

Samuel Johnson loved the streets of London so intensely that he felt himself an exile when he travelled in provincial places; and Charles Dickens owed much of his fame to his knowledge of and sympathy with the people of London. Cowper's abhorrence of town-life was in all probability a consequence of his morbid temperament.

What would John Ruskin have been without his Venice or Heinrich Heine without his sorrowful attic in the heart of Paris? A great city cannot fail to influence the interest, ambitions, and artistic ideals of great men.

But the influence of town-life upon genius can easily be exaggerated. The quiet restfulness of the country has often stirred to its depths the soul of the poet. Wordsworth and the Lake School found a new-born joy in Nature, and their sympathy with the simple happiness of country folk and the wondrous beauty of sylvan scenes rescued English letters for a romantic revival which put to shame the measured and prosaic perfections of the eighteenth century.

Thomas Hardy's Wessex stories reveal for us the call of woodland, meadow, and moor upon human strivings and joys and passions. The artist cannot hold his Muse aloof from the appeal of his domicile. A man's abode must largely determine a man's outlook and labour.

"We are" says Philip Hamerton, "like blank paper that takes a tint by reflection from what is nearest, and changes it as its surroundings change." Perhaps this is too drastic in its philosophy, and Hamerton admits that a man with an occupied mind may be largely indifferent to his life's circumstances.

Goethe was present at the bombardment of Verdun—for Verdun has been an oft-bombarded city—and it is curious that he was so untouched by the tragedy of war that in the midst of it he set his mind to scientific observations of colour phenomena. Goethe was less influenced than most men of genius by the events and politics of his day. He never visited either Paris or London.

But there was one place which did influence Goethe, and that was Weimar. In it he had his quiet resting-place, and in it he found true inspiration. The German poet and philosopher was happy in his peaceful habitation. One of his biographers, in speaking of Weimar, gives us a picture of Goethe's home. "The solitude is absolute, broken only by the occasional sound of the church clock, the music from the barracks, and the screaming of the peacocks spreading their superb beauty in the park." It is a delightful picture of peace and tranquility. Who can say how much Goethe was beholden to Weimar?

To-day our eyes are once more turned to Weimar. Is its influence to be for weal or woe? The National Assembly is in session in the city beloved by Goethe. The days are critical, and they are pregnant of a world's future.

Men long for honourable and enduring peace, and they believe that a Treaty which puts in foremost place a League of Nations is a Treaty that should be signed, for it bespeaks an era in which national jealousies and unholy aspirations shall not claim the ordeal of battle but ensure the more auspicious and Christian arbitrament of united counsel.

THE CONSCRIPT.

A Tale of Disappointment.

The other day my Battery Commander called me up and spoke seriously to me on the subject of sport. "I suppose you have seen that order," said he, "saying that all officers should take up some form of sport. What have you done about it?"

I indignantly referred him to my prowess at ping-pong. I could give any member of the mess 10 points in 20 and beat him hollow. In pre-war days my American back-hand service was the talk of Tooting.

"Yes, but what we want," he said, "is something which you can join in with the men, such as . . . ."

I hastily offered to start a chess club, or write home for my Crown and Anchor board, which I still keep as a souvenir of my sojourn in the ranks, but it was of no use.

"What I mean," he continued, "is field sports. Take football, for instance. A fine, healthy game — — do you all the good in the world. Take some of the superfluous fat off you," he added, looking disparagingly at my somewhat well nourished frame.

For the Army on the Rhine irses superior to little things like climate and temperature, and carries on its winter amusements right through the sunniest months of the year.

Protests were unavailing, and the following Saturday I found myself clad in borrowed plumes, an unassuming member of the Left section team versus the Right.

The one bright spot in the outlook was the fact that I had insisted on taking the post of goal-keeper, and as our backs were exceptionally brilliant, I had hopes that my afternoon's exercise would merely consist of a gentle stroll from one goal to the other at half time.

Alas, I was doomed to disappointment. Since their last match the Right Section had been reinforced by a dark horse.

This was a shockheaded individual, who appeared to my jaundiced eyes to be about six feet square, and thick in proportion. I was afterwards told that he was a professional footballer, and had been the shining light of some north country team before he joined up. Anyhow he made havoc of our defence.

My recollection of that afternoon consists of a series of visions of that terrifying figure bearing down upon me, the while a bloodthirsty crowd on the touchline urged him on to deeds of violence against my unoffending person.

Not content with scoring the goals, he seemed to take a savage joy in hushing me into the corner of the net at the same time.

After bearing the brunt of his assaults for several times in succession, I took refuge in strategy. As soon as he got within shooting distance I ostentatiously dropped my pince-nez, and went down on my hands and knees in the farthest corner of the net to look for them.

The remarks of our supporters were bitter and to the point. I heard one driver, whom I had had occasion to reprimand that morning for having dirty buttons, say to a friend "Wat's 'e doing, Bill? Looking for mushrooms?" To which his friend replied with withering scorn "Nah, can't yer see 'e's practising physical jerks for the orficers' sports next week." Even the Brigade Interpreter, a devoted follower of all our sporting events, so far forsook his usual air of detached politeness as to shake his head sadly, and remark "nix goot."

This was the last straw. Filled with a savage determination to get out of it by fair means or foul, I fell to the ground and gave a realistic imitation of a man suffering from a violent attack of cramp. The whistle blew, and I was assisted off the field amidst the sarcastic cheers of an unsympathetic crowd.

My C.O. has now released me from any further sports duties, and has appointed me Education Officer, but I cannot live down the memory of that day. My authority as a Section Commander is gone. I have a horrible suspicion that I am known to the rank and file by the euphonious name of "Mushrooms." I have been seriously thinking of applying for a transfer to the Chinese Labour Corps, but even that is denied me, as I see in the paper that the Oriental races have lately been devoting themselves to open air sports with the greatest enthusiasm. I fear there is nothing left for me but a speedy release from the Army, and retirement to the obscurity of civil life.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

TWO SPORTS SUGGESTIONS.

Sir,— (1) It is noticed that when the results of sports meetings are published, the times, distances jumped, etc., are in many cases wanting. I suggest to sports officers that this is the most interesting part to people on side their own unit.

(2) Great difficulty is experienced in getting sports kit repaired, especially cricket bats. Would it not be well worth while to have a repair depôt in Cologne where bats could be bound etc.? Two or three experienced men would be sufficient. At present bats which split are useless, and if sent to England take a considerable time to return.

A SPORTS OFFICER.

A WORD FOR THE AIRSHIP.

Sir,—I dare say I shall be hounded down as a heretic for saying it, but as one who has been trained in handling and navigating "Lighter than air" craft I must protest against the prominence always given to any feat accomplished by the aeroplane. Few people have any conception of the wonderful progress made by the airship in the past two years or what marvellous work it did — without any blowing of trumpets — in winning the war.

If the cross-Atlantic trip were attempted by an airship I know the eyes of the public would be opened to the possibilities of this type of aircraft.

"LIGHTER THAN AIR."

BYRON AND THE RHINE.

Sir,—It may interest some of your readers who have the privilege of taking trips on the Rhine, to know that the poet Byron, during his travels in Germany, paid to the Drachenfels and its Feudal Tower, a poetical tribute which will die only with the English language.

It is not possible, owing to lack of space, to give lengthy quotations from the poem; suffice it to say that the opening verse begins:—

"The Castled crag of Drachenfels Frowns o'er the wide and winding Rhine," and that the poem is one of the best known by this great genius.

THE OPERA HOUSE COMPLAINTS.

Sir.— The W.R.A.F. is very jealous of the reputation for good conduct and reliability which has gained for it the privilege of being the only Women's Force (so far) serving with the Army of Occupation.

We therefore strongly resent the facetious and untruthful statements in A. M. Richmond's letter in yesterday's Cologne Post, with reference to the behaviour of W.R.A.F.'s, Church Army workers, and "Young Guards" at the opera.

Personally speaking, I have assisted at eleven operas within the last four weeks and on no occasion has there been any sign of "W.R.A.F.'s eating buns, chatting and giggling all through the piece."

On the contrary, I have been especially struck by the remarkable silence and attention given, during the lengthy and—to the uninitiated—somewhat dreary stretches of "recitation" which occur in such operas as "Der Rosenkavalier" and "Die Walküre." On such occasions, to use a well-worn expression—"you could hear a pin drop."

I will admit that late arrivals are a nuisance—but unfortunately an unavoidable occurrence when duty prevents us arriving in time. I think it will be agreed, however, that the W.R.A.F.'s and others always endeavour to create the least disturbance possible in gaining their seats.

To adopt the "humorous" tone of your correspondent—the W.R.A.F.'s will be deeply grateful to Mr. Richmond if he could enlighten them as to where "buns" are procurable in Cologne. We are afraid they must be merely the product of a fevered imagination!

Thanking you in advance in the event of your publishing this letter.

CONCERT PARTIES.

Sir, — As a member of that long suffering fraternity, the Army Concert Party, I venture to reply to "Amusement Officer." Usually this gentleman is of the square peg in the round hole variety. He has not the faintest idea of what a concert party requires in the way of accommodation; he lacks the initiative to form a concert party in his own area, and has therefore to depend largely upon other Brigades to entertain his men. He is surprised, indeed even rude when you point out that some lighting is required, and dressing facilities in addition to a few nailed planks doing duty as a stage. At times the latter is of such small dimensions, that to give an item with movement would be an impossibility. On a recent occasion in addition to these difficulties, 40 per cent of my takings was demanded for recreational purposes for the Brigade. I wonder if your correspondent is aware that the members of these parties have to work very hard, make their own properties, and in many cases, buy their own costumes, grease paints and music. Many of us, especially the officers, are not free from Army duties, as Amusement Officer would have us think, but in our spare time travel many miles, fit up stages, show in the evening, and return at a very late hour, tired and usually hungry, and carry on duties the following morning. We are out to amuse the boys, but we naturally expect a little consideration ourselves. Put your house in order Mr. Amusement Officer and you will not lack concert parties.

CAUSES OF THE GREAT WAR.—1.

A review has recently appeared in the Berliner Tageblatt of von Jagow's book on the war and its causes. It appears at an opportune moment. From the White Book published by the British Government and from other sources we are now gradually accumulating a collection of evidence which goes far to bear out the general opinion entertained as to the causes of the immediate outbreak of the war. We propose therefore in a series of articles to examine these causes in the light of the accumulated evidence.

Whilst not attempting to cover the whole ground of the gigantic conflict and its deeper causes, we intend to subject the evidence to a searching analysis, in order, if possible, to lay the guilt at the door of the right parties. In order to do this we must briefly recall the facts of the European crisis in July 1914.

The conflict between Austria and Serbia caused by the assassination of the Archduke Franz Ferdinand on June 28th, threatened to widen into a European conflict during the critical weeks of July. Herr von Jagow admits that the terms of the ultimatum addressed to Serbia were "very sharp" and seemed to go beyond its purpose. Everything depended upon the attitude adopted by the German Government at this crisis. It is therefore significant that its representative at the Hofburg, Herr von Tschirsky, adopted an attitude the reverse of conciliatory. In fact his truculence and uncompromising bearing went far to stiffen the Austrian resistance. He stated emphatically that the relations between Austria and Serbia must be bad and that nothing could mend them. In short, Herr von Tschirsky, in his conversation with Sir Maurice de Bunsen, the British ambassador at Vienna, fully justified the common view held among Vienna diplomatists, that he was always ready to act as a firebrand in the way of encouraging the war party in Vienna to go forward recklessly, because there was no means but violent action by which the Serbian question could be brought to an end. In the article we propose examining in closer detail the various phases of the diplomatic conflict which widened into the European war.

FROM EVERYWHERE.

EVERYTHING FOR EVERYBODY.

Urged to go.—The Viennese Press is asking for the expulsion of all Hungarians assisting in Bolshevist propaganda.

Grows fast.—The comrades of the "Great War" now have 1,310 units in the United Kingdom, and fifty-two overseas.

Warm work.—The present tropical weather does not constitute a close time for billiards in London where a 15,000 match is in progress.

Franco-American.—About 5,000 Americans married French girls during the war. The authorities are said to be doing their best to prevent marriages with negroes.

War Memorials.—Following the lead of the Royal Artillery, which is raising funds for a war memorial, the R.A.S.C. is endeavouring to collect £100,000 for a similar object.

Many but dear.—Strawberries seem just as plentiful in England as in Rhineland. Hampshire alone is sending forty to fifty thousand baskets a day to Covent Garden Market, but prices rule high.

Where we fought.—The roads traversing the former battlefields of France to-day swarm with motors bringing parties of sightseers to visit the scenes of fighting.

A Royal Horse.—The King has, for the first time, entered a horse at the forthcoming Richmond Show. This annual event suffered by the war, but this year it is likely to be brilliantly successful.

Seniors roll in.—Although the Senior Officers Club has only just been formed, over two-hundred and forty admirals and generals have already joined.

No Safeguard.—The fortifications of Paris are at last being destroyed. Nobody believed in their utility before 1914, but since then their utter uselessness has been adequately demonstrated.

Getting Busy.—The reality of the League of Nations is being brought home to Londoners by the arrival of a posse of League clerks at Sunderland House, Mayfair, where work is already being started.

Still Wild.—It is surprising to hear that there still exists one wild herd of fallow deer in England. It holds its own in the forests between Horsham and Tunbridge Wells.

Slum Killing.—The Government's new housing scheme provides that nothing shall be paid for slum property which has been condemned when the site is acquired for rebuilding.

A Money Bringer.—Mr. Herman Darewski, who has written countless popular songs is composing one to assist in booming the Victory Loan. He hopes it will be sung at every music-hall and cinema during this month.

Only British.—No German prisoners are to be employed on the sacred work of recovering and re-interring the vast host of British warriors who were buried in out-of-the-way places in France and Flanders.

Mostly Successes.—Miss Violet Loraine, the heroine of many stage successes, the most notable of which have perhaps been as "The Bing Girl" in the two editions of "The Bin Boys," is at present busy writing her stage history and experiences.

The Top Hat.—At the Peace Conferences it was noticed that the top-hat and frock coat were worn by all the Austrian delegates as if they were uniform. The British representatives, however, appeared in every kind of summer garment and every kind of headgear—bowlers, soft felts, and even caps.

Flies — not Talks.—When Lieut. Whitten Brown was asked for a speech on his return from the Atlantic aeroplane trip, he replied: "It is impossible. I can only quote what Wilbur Wright said after his first flight, "You call us bird men; the only bird that talks is the parrot, and that cannot fly."

Can you guess?—A big London store is offering £20,000 in cash prizes to applicants for £100 of Victory Loan who guess nearest to the total amount of the loan subscribed between June 12 and July 12.

No Prophet.—A phrenologist, who was fined the other day for fortune telling, told an airman, "You will have two offers of marriage when you are 29." The airman replied, "I have been married seven years." To a soldier the professor of "bumps" said, "You will do well to adopt the Army as a profession."

Mimic War.—Nearly £20,000 worth of seats are already sold for the Royal Naval, Military and A.F. Tournament which opens at Olympia on the 26th inst. All profit goes to the war-stricken.

Realistic.—Sergeant G. H. Ward has designed a telling cover for the Scottish Church Lowland Divisional Magazine. It depicts an actual scene in the cemetery at St. Venant in May last year, of a Crucifix under shellfire.

Unfounded.—There is no foundation for the report that Mr. Asquith has intimated his willingness to consider an invitation from East Swansea to be Liberal candidate at the forthcoming by-election.

Unused.—No fewer than 1,500 unused motor lorries are being placed on the market. All of them are by the best makers, and as surplus war stock, will be sold by private treaty by direction of the Disposal Board of the Ministry of Munitions.

Coins Only.—The Roman villa near Brading, Isle of Wight, one of the most important remains of the kind in the kingdom, has been broken into and the collection of Roman coins stolen. A drawer containing the cash in the office was opened but nothing appears to have been taken, excepting the collection of coins.

Trained Cripples.—Sir William Treloar entertained at dinner, at Anderton's Hotel Old Boys of the Lord Mayor Treloar Crippels' College who, though seriously handicapped, have been trained at the college to earn a livelihood.

Blown up.—An explosion of gas in the yard at the porter's lodge at Victoria-gate, injured three men. They were at work fixing a gas meter when the explosion occurred.

A Mistake.—Three thousand Llwynypia colliers, who struck because two workers were arrested for non-payment of income-tax, resumed work at night on discovering that the tax was due for the last September quarter, and did not come under the miners' refusal to pay income-tax after April this year.

A mile and a quarter from home Mons Star crossed her legs and brought down Britannia and Mapledurham.

THE JOCKEY'S EXPLANATION.

After the race for the Coronation Stakes the stewards held an inquiry into the cause of the fall of Mapledurham, Britannia, and Mons Star. Carslake, the rider of Mons Star, stated that his mare crossed her legs and fell, bringing down Mapledurham and Britannia. Fox and Hulme confirmed this statement.

BY JINGO! OBJECTION QUASHED.

The objection to By Jingo, winner of the Manchester Cup, was overruled, and the £5 deposited was ordered to be forfeited.

CRICKET AT BONN.

5th BORDER REGT., CONTINUE THEIR VICTORIOUS CAREER.

During the week-end the Border Regt. has played four matches and won all of them, the first being a league match on Saturday with the 121st H.B., R.G.A. a report of which has already appeared.

On Sunday the Borderers (151), played the 15th Lancs. Fusiliers (8 and 85). The visitors batted first. Lieuts. Slack and Smeeton being unplayable on the fast wicket handled the Fusiliers out for 8 runs. Slake had 6 for 5 and Smeeton 2 for 2.

At lunch time the home sides' score was 64 for 4 (Lieut. Scotter 27). Carrying on again, Lieut. Slake hit hard for 43 but was very lucky. The innings closed for 151. Facing a defeat of 143 runs the Fusiliers made a much better show. Playing carefully they were 36 for 7 at tea time, and the innings closed for 85 leaving the Borders victors by an innings and 58 runs.

LEAGUE MATCH.

On Monday the Borders beat the X Corps. A summary of the match appears under the "Cologne Post" Cup matches.

On Tuesday the Borders (36 and 89 for 7) played the 4th Suffolk (59 and 37). This wholeday match at Bonn resulted in a win for the Borders by 3 wickets, after a strenuous uphill battle. Going in first, the visitors started well, 20 being up before the first wicket fell. The scoring was consistent, Lieuts. Hoyland (13), Sills (14) and Baily (10) being the chief contributors. On the home side going in, wickets fell fast to the bowling of Lieut. Baily and Pte. Prither, 5 being down for 21 at lunch time. On continuing, the winners closed for 36. Lieut. Baily (6 for 11) and Pte. Prither (3 for 20) bowled well. Holding a lead of 33 the Suffolks went in again, but this time they found Lieut. Smecton (5 for 10) in his best form and the side were all out for 37, Pte. Prither (14 not out) and Lieut. Baily (10) alone reaching double figures.

Left with 71 to get to save the game, the Borders lost 3 for 7 and half the side were out for 32, but Lieut. Slake, 32 (not out) and Lieut. Russer (20) set about them and at 5 o'clock the winning hit was made, leaving the home side victors by three wickets.

CRICKET AT WESSELING.

1/4th Cheshire Regt. (102) v. Western Divisional H.Q. (9.) on the latter's ground on Sunday. The former made a good start with 31 before the first wicket fell a victim to Capt. Davies who bowled exceedingly well through the innings. The Division replied very tamely, Pte. Denning bowling a beautiful length and capturing 3 wickets for no runs in his first over. Capt. Davies gave a splendid exhibition of perfect batting making 23, when he was smartly caught by the long stop. Pte. Denning secured 6 wickets for 13 runs, and Lieut. Woodcock 4 for 33.

FOOTBALL AT LANGERWEHE.

83rd BRIGADE LEAGUE COMPETITION.

At Langerwehe on Monday, before a very large and enthusiastic crowd the 2/1 Lancs. Heavy Batty. met 13 Siege Batty. in the 83rd Brigade League Competition. Up to half time, play on both sides was very keen, but 13 Siege pressed the harder and caused some anxiety before the goal. At half time neither side had scored. The second half opened with even more keenness, and from two beautiful centres by Palmer, Tyrre and Thom respectively scored the first two goals for 13 Siege. A little later Henzell added the third goal from a good centre by Thorpe. 13 (S) Batty. ran out winners by 3 goals to nil.

"COLOGNE POST" LEAGUE FIXTURES.

EXCELLENT FIRST WICKET PARTNERSHIP.

52nd WELSH. REGT. (203 for 8 declared) v. 16 LANCASHIRE FUSILIERS (132 for 6) on the ground of the L.F's at Bonn and after a interesting afternoon's cricket the match had to be left drawn. The visitors won the toss and elected to bat, Lieut. Needham and Sergt. Kay being the opening batsmen. The score rose steadily to 112 before Sergt. Kay was given out l.b.w. with his score at 24.

Second man out at 123. Lieut. Needham's innings of 84 included a 6 and 14 four's. This first wicket partnership of 112, if we mistake not, constitutes a record for the competition.

Three wickets fell rapidly at this juncture until Lieut. Harper joined Mr. Hughes and the score was taken to 197 before the latter was bowled for 23. The innings was declared closed at 203, Lieut. Harper being 32 (not out) which included six four's.

The visitors started disastrously and five wickets were down for 54 runs but on Lieut. Veitch joining Pte. Camp the score mounted steadily, and with only ten minutes to go the former was out l.b.w. His score of 38 proved invaluable to his side. Pte. Camp was undefeated when stumps were drawn with the score at 132 for 6 wickets. His innings of 55 included ten 4's.

LANCS. DIV. H.Q. (193 for 8) v. X CORPS SIGNALS (22 for 10). For the former the leading batsmen were Pte. Boothroyd (53), Major Rowntree (40), L Cpl. Smith H.B. (32), Lieut. Broadbent (13) Pte. Marsden (17) not out. Lieut. Broadbent took 3 wickets for 9 runs, and Lieut. Amond J. H. 4 for 11. Lancs. Div. H.Q. won by 171 runs and 2 wickets.

9 WICKETS FOR 18 RUNS.

"R" A.A. BATTERY R.H.A. (129) v. CAVALRY DIV. H.Q. (76) at Volksgarten. The Cav. Div. H.Q's., received their first defeat, the other three cup matches having been won. Lieut. Leman 37, Gnr. Whitehouse 27 and Gnr. Aldridge were the top scorers for the Battery. Spr. Evans came out with the best bowling figures taking 5 for 20. On going in to bat the Cav. Div. H.Q. found the "pitch" not to their liking, grass being conspicuous by its absence. This and also the splendid bowling of Gnr. Whitehouse rendered the losers "groggy", all being dismissed for 76. Lieut. Jennings for the first wicket make a capital 23, and Cpl. Adams was once gain caught when stuck at that unlucky No. 13. Whitehouse bowled 78 balls and took 9 wickets for 18 runs. It is hoped that a return game will be fixed up later on.

13th KING'S (LIVERPOOL) REGT. (157) v. 51st KING'S (LIVERPOOL) REGT. (61), on the latters ground at Beuel on Monday. The feature of the match was the excellent fielding of the 13th King's. For the winners Lieut. Baily took 6 wickets for 28 runs and Lieut. Whittaker 4 for 28. Batting, Pte. Hoyle (27), and 2nd Lieut. Walker (24) were the top scorers. For the 51st King's, Sergt. Hamilton (20) was the only one to reach double figures.

"B" v. "C" COY. 1/12 L.N.L. at Bonn. Batting first "C" Company suffered an immediate set-back, losing their two best batsmen for 12 runs, and in an hour they were all dismissed for 36. "B" Company opened out with a good hit for 4 by C.S.M. Daive, and eventually won by four wickets. Top scorers of "B" were Ptes. Whalley and Arnitagh with 14 and 9 respectively. Whalley and Birkett, the bowlers, took 5 wickets each. Exceptional catches were made by Cearman, Smith and Arnitagh.

153 BATTERY v. 3rd KING'S OWN HUSSARS on the Hussars ground at Duren on Tuesday. Scores: — 3rd K.O. Hussars 65; (Hatherly 18, Lieut. Cannon 15), 153 S Battery 80 (or 4 wickets). Sergt. Manley (23), Lieut. Wilkinson (15), Lieut. Barrett (not out) 18 being the leading batsmen. For the Hussars, Lieut. Cannon captured 3 wickets for 25, and for 153 S. Battery, Signaler Burnley 4 for 8 and Lieut. Wilkinson 3 for 13.

3rd M.G.C. (72) v. D/190 Bde. R.F.A. (38) at Poll. For the M.G.C. Pes. May and Greenhalgh reached double figures before being dismissed, and the next on the list, Eede was top scorer with 15, but after that very little scoring took place. Five wickets were down for 51 and the score only reached 72, "all out." Lieut. Baines and Bingham decided the wickets between them. The R.F.A. then went in, but none of the teams seemed happy with the bowling of Barr and Hubbert — Barr's being apparently unplayable. Taylor was top-scorer with 10, (not out), while Barr had the excellent analysis of 6 for 16. Hubbert took 3 for 20, and Eede and Falkingham each made a couple of catches.

"MAPS," 4th FIELD SURVEY BN. R.E. (72) v. 14th G.H.Q. M.T. (32) at Mulheim on Thursday. The highest scorers for "Maps" were Lieut. Cable (18) and Spr. KNOCKED OUT IN SECOND ROUND.

The much-boomed heavy-weight boxing contest at Olympia, London, between J. Beckett, of Southampton, and F. Goddard, late of the Queen's Bays, ended sensationally. Goddard was knocked out in the second round after one and a half rounds of actual fighting. Goddard was favourite, odds of 6 to 4 being laid on him.

Goddard opened with a left to the face and then followed a succession of clinches in which both men did some very hard punching. Beckett uppercut his man time after time, and then, breaking clear, flung the left hard to the chin. Further clinches followed and Beckett finished the round in fine style, getting his man on the ropes and hitting very hard on the face and body. The round was Beckett's.

The second round opened with a clinch in which both men again punched hard at close quarters. Then they broke away, and, like lightning, Beckett dashed in. Feinting with the right he got close and with a terrific left hook sent Goddard sprawling to the floor. Goddard was down for eight seconds and it was perfectly obvious that he had been pretty badly shaken up.

Upon his opponent getting to his feet again, Beckett, realising that now or never was his chance, at once dashed in again with left and right. He gave Goddard no rest, and this further punishment caused Goddard to drop his guard entirely.

He was knocked out with a terrific left hook.

GOLF.

VARDON AND BRAID.

James Braid and Harry Vardon visited Llandrindod Wells this week. In the morning they played a four-ball foursome, Vardon being partnered by George Humble, the local professional, and Braid by Harry Owen, the assistant professional. Vardon and Humble won by 3 up and 2 to play.

In the afternoon Vardon opposed Braid in a medal round. They kept well together to the turn, where Vardon led by 1 stroke, with 35 to 36. Coming home Braid played great golf. He was level at the eleventh, and then gradually forged ahead, taking only 35 for the last nine holes, against Vardon's 41. Their totals were: Braid, 71; Vardon, 76. Braid's score is 6 under bogey for the course.

OVERATH CRICKET WEEK.

ENJOYABLE "FESTIVAL" BY 190th BRIGADE R.F.A.

Overath, among the hills and the woods, was last week the scene of an enjoyable cricket "festival". At the invitation of "C" battery, the forward unit of the 190 Bde. R.F.A., the three sister batteries from the Cologne area sent down teams and spectators, and one day was also set apart for a game with the 26th Royal Fusiliers, situated near by. Though the organisers failed to win a single victory they had the satisfaction of knowing that they provided good sport.

When "A" Battery visited on Wednesday, they went in first and knocked up a total of 61. Gunner Tilley took 7 of the visitors' wickets and himself was top scorer for his side with 12; only 34 runs, however, was the home eleven's aggregate.

Bowling too much.

Next evening when the "Gunners" went to play the Fusiliers, the bowling of Sergt. Armstrong and C. Q. M. S. Johnston proved too much for them, and 37 runs was the extent of their scoring. Out of the Infantry's response with 61, Sergt. Davis himself provided 27 before hitting his own wicket.

Much more closely contested was the match with "B" Battery on Saturday, With 24 by Gunner Watson and 20 by Gunner Tilley, the home team had some hopes of winning when they closed their innings with the score standing at 90. Their opponents, however, soon showed that they meant business, and with Cpl. Hunt carrying his bat out for 28, followed by 29 by Lieut. Wimen, they emerged victorious with a total of 111. For "C" Battery, Gunner Tilley took 9 wickets for 36.

Only running up a total of 37 on Sunday, the home team set "D" Battery an easy task, all the easier because Gunner Tilley was away. The visitors declared with the score at 63 for 4 wickets.

Gothenburg is again to be the home of the Swedish Industries Fair, which this year will be held during the week commencing July 7.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

A Daily Causerie.

Full Houses for G.B.S.

From all points of view, the policy of the Rhine Army Dramatic Company in tackling the works of Bernard Shaw has been freely criticised. Considering the enormous success which attended this talented Company's presentation of "Man and Superman" some weeks ago, however, there is little ground for surprise in the fact that its members felt encouraged to submit other of the same writer's plays. Consequently, the Deutsches Theatre, Cologne, has this week been the home of two of these in "Candida" and "How he lied to Her Husband" and full houses have been the rule nightly. To-day will provide the last opportunity of witnessing a combination which provides a thoroughly enjoyable entertainment.

"Candida" Criticised.

Whether one is becoming fastidious as a result of the very high standard of excellence attained in the previous efforts of the Dramatic Company, it is difficult to say, but the performance of "Candida" yesterday evening did not seem to achieve such a full measure of success as "Man and Superman." For instance, the natural ease and fluency with which patrons of the Deutsches Theatre have come to associate the acting of Lieut. S. E. Percy was slightly lacking, in his interpretation of Eugen Marchbanks, poet and dreamer. The part calls for considerable emotional acting, but at times there was an unnatural ring in Mr. Percy's voice. Any slight disappointment that may have been experienced in this direction, however, was fully counterbalanced by the admirable portrayal Mr. Percy gave of "Her Husband" in "How he lied to Her Husband."

Back From Leave.

It is very agreeable to find the ladies of the erstwhile Women's Theatre Company have returned from leave with apparently just as keen an appetite for hard work as ever. Miss Inez Bensusan, Miss Gabrielle Paul and Miss Shirley King have been delighting Deutsches Theatre audiences during the current week and it is probable that these ladies, as well as others who have appeared on German soil recently, will find a permanent place with the Rhine Army Dramatic Company.

"The Dollar Princess."

Those who remember the performances of the "Dollar Princess" in London, and feel themselves inclined to renew its acquaintance, may be rather disappointed at the rendering of the piece now to be seen at the Reichshallen Theatre. But it must not be taken from this remark that a very pleasant evening cannot be spent there. On the contrary, the acting and singing are excellent, though naturally the general production does not bear the same high stamp which one is accustomed to see on the London stage. Frl. Marthy Frey, who played the part of Daisy Gray with remarkable talent, is a young actress with a future.

A New Revue.

In producing their new revue at the Apollo Theatre, Schildergasse on Monday, the "Tabs" are confident of success. There is an exceptionally good caste. Here you see Ernie Roberts — all complete with his monocle and middle parting — who made such a hit as Sir All But in the last revue. He will play the part of Dankyshun, a dectective, which, by the bye, is a creation of his own. So look out for "Well I'm!—!!" — which is the name of the revue — at the Schildergasse theatre on Monday next, June 24th.

SIR ALL-BUT—

Dancing at the B.E.L.C.

Last Wednesday I went to a very enjoyable dance at the British Empire Leave Club. Every one decided that it was one of the very best dances that have been given so far. The music was provided by the band of the 9th East Surrey Regt. by kind permission of Lt.Col. Cameron. At the conclusion of the Dance Miss Decima Moore called for three cheers for the band, which were most heartily given.

Pipers and Whist.

On Thursday evening drums and pipes of the 11th Royal Scots, (by kind permission of Lt.Col. Nash, Commanding Officer) gave a splendid selection to a delighted audience in the garden.

As the weather was beautifully fine the weekly Whist Drive took place in the garden. The men are getting to know of this most enjoyable entertainment; and are always keen to get a table. Lt. Halley again gave his most valuable assistance with the Whist Drive, and Pte. Price proved a most able M.C.

Not so very quiet.

Four English ladies stationed in Cologne, Misses Hanbury Williams, Kemp, Trimble and Tilnay, gave a concert this week to the men of the London A.O.C. It was held in the open-air under the shade of the trees by the river-side. An amusing incident in an enjoyable afternoon was that song "It's quiet down here", which was drowned by a German band on a pleasure steamer from which about two hundred trippers were disgorged a few yards away. Lt.Col. Wheatley the Commanding Officer recited the well-known "Kissing Cup's Race."

CAMERA TALKS.

(VIII)

BY WILLIAM R. PATTERSON, F.R.G.S. etc.

I have recently been asked several questions with reference to lenses. Many novices seem to imagine that a camera is of inferior quality if the light-strength of its lens is anything other than 4.5. This is altogether a mistaken idea, for one seldom employs this power. For general work 6.3. or 6.8. are excellent. Now, there is the question of "anastigmat" lenses. An anastigmat lens corrects the faults made in the simple "aplarat." The lines in a photograph taken with the latter are often distorted; also the projected picture may not be wholly in the same plane, as demonstrated in the following diagram.

The letter L represents the lens and the line A D C the plate. Rays projected through the lens towards A and C would appear sharp upon the developed plate, but those towards D would not, since their sharpness would be manifest only at B. Similarly, if B were sharp, both A and C would not be in focus. An "anastigmat" lens rectifies this fault; it also enables one to work at higher speed and to take better photographs on dull days. One should be careful always to keep one's lens clean and free from dust. Very fine tissue-paper or a small piece of chamois leather should be used for this porpose.

TO INSTIL CONFIDENCE.

The Globe learns that the position in Northern Russia is satisfactory from some points of view. It is, however, unsatisfactory that most of the fighting has had to be done by British troops.

The policy was that the fighting should be done by Russians so that when the time came to get out, as it would very shortly, they would leave the Russians there perfectly assured that they would not let themselves down.

GERMANY DECIDES TO SIGN THE TREATY.

PEACE NEXT WEEK.

COMPOSITION OF NEW MINISTRY.

RESIGNATION OF ITALIAN PREMIER.

NEW GERMAN CABINET FORMED.

PEACE WILL BE SIGNED.

With time regulating the inexorable finger of Fate, events are moving quickly in Germany. The old Prussian regime has gone—the world hopes, for ever; the late regime, which for the past six weeks has railed against the terms imposed by the Allies, professing to speak for the German nation, has gone. It could not act the lie any longer. Germany wants peace and must have peace.

The Scheidemann Cabinet resigned in order that it might continue the pas ar attitude, but it does not—it never did—represent disillusioned Germany.

It is as certain as anything can be certain that the Peace Treaty will be signed next week at Versailles. Probably not on Monday evening, in view of the almost necessity of allowing the new Cabinet time to shake down. If the Council of Four are convinced that the new Cabinet really has the authority, and from its composition there is no reason to doubt this, then in all probability they will grant a further extension of time. By next Wednesday at latest, however, the new German plenipotentiaries should be at Versailles.

The choice of President of the Council Ebert did not fall on Erzberger, Noske, von Richthofen or Müller. The last named was at one time probable, but Herr Bauer (a significant name), was eventually asked to form a Ministry.

The new Cabinet was accordingly constituted on Saturday afternoon. It comprises eight Socialists and four members of the Centre.

Its composition is as follows:

SOCIALISTS (8):

Prime Minister	Herr Bauer
Foreign Affairs	Herr Müller
Interior	Dr. David
Economy	Herr Wissell
Labour	Herr Schlicke
National Defence	Herr Noske
Food	Herr Schmidt
Justice	Dr. Sinzheimer

CENTRE PARTY (4):

Finance	Herr Erzberger
Treasury	Herr Mayer
Post	Herr Giesberts
Railways and Liquidation of Colonies	Herr Bell

Of these Noske, Schmidt, Wissell, Erzberger, Giesberts and Bell were in Scheidemann's Cabinet, but Erzberger was without portfolio.

News received in Paris and London on Friday was greatly at variance with the above. It was definitely asserted in official circles that Erzberger had formed a Cabinet, while in another quarter it was announced that the choice had fallen on Noske.

It is unlikely, however, that Germany's decision has been definitely pronounced, although there is no doubt whatever that the Peace Terms will be signed.

In short, the mere fact that the Cabinet has been changed has automatically dispelled all doubt that may have existed on the point.

It is significant that the Berlin Stock Exchange has maintained comparative firmness on the strength of confidential assertions that the final decision at Weimar would favour acceptance.

FIRST STEP TOWARDS RIGHTEOUSNESS.

A telegram received by the Daily Telegraph yesterday morning from its Paris correspondent says that the news was officially telegraphed through from Berlin to Paris at noon on Friday that Germany had decided to sign the Peace Treaty.

Assuming that the decision to sign is true, the Daily Telegraph says "there will be but one feeling thoughout the world when the news is known, a feeling of intense thankfulness that at last the end of the great war is actually in sight and that there is a prospect of actual peace within the course of two or three more days. If the National Assembly ratifies the decision it will be about the first step Germany has taken for five years which may count to her for righteousness in the eyes of the rest of the world."

SCENE AT DELEGATES' DEPARTURE.

After considering the police reports, the Procurator has decided that it is unnecessary to open a judicial inquiry into the unseemly incidents which occurred on Monday when the German delegates were mobbed and pelted with stones as they were leaving Versailles.

VIENNA COMMUNIST PLAN.

In the Vienna fighting this week fourteen persons were killed and over one hundred wounded. The Communists intended to take possession of the banks in order to give monetary support to the Hungarian Soviet Government, which has advanced millions to the Austrian Communists. According to the Arbeiter Zeitung the Communists intended to occupy the Imperial Buildings and to set up a dictatorship there.

DOWNFALL OF ITALIAN MINISTRY.

ORLANDO RESIGNS.

As the result of a vote in the chamber on the question of a secret session, Signor Orlando's Ministry has been defeated. The Premier has placed his resignation in the hands of the King.

Signor Orlando delivered a short speech in which he dealt with the attitude of the Italian delegates in Paris and the gravity of the internal economic situation in Italy. He said that the Italian delegates to the Peace Conference had sought from the first to maintain firmly the principal points of the Italian claims to remain faithful to her alliances and to avoid all appearances of being irreconcilable. He recalled how the delegates had obtained the systematization of the Northern frontier, while as to the Eastern frontier he said that Italy is still prepared to consider a compromise. Failing that, she stands immovably by the Treaty of London.

President Wilson and Mr. Lloyd George are now back in Paris and it is understood that they have discussed with M. Clemenceau the awkward situation created by the resignation of the Orlando Cabinet. It is sincerely hoped that Signor Orlando and Baron Sonnino will continue to be the Italian plenipotentiaries until peace is signed.

French newspapers attach much importance to the Italian crisis.

The Figaro considers that the fall of the Ministry signifies dissatisfaction with the insufficient positive results obtained by Italian diplomacy at the Peace Conference.

The Journal says that the first error was in giving to the Italian demands at the conference such publicity that all roads of retreat were cut in advance.

OPERATIONS IN NORTH RUSSIA.

MONASTERY RECAPTURED.

General Ironside, says an official communiqué, telegraphs that on June 17, troops of the Russian National Army captured Kojazerski Monastery. The only approach to the monastery, which is on an island in Lake Kojozero (60 miles S. of Onega) is a narrow causeway 800 yards long. This monastery has been held by the Bolshevists since last September, when they murdered the abbot and evicted the monks. On the Vaga on June 16 a patrol advanced against a hostile post a mile N. of Kitsa (unidentified), and the Bolshevists who attempted to vacate the post were killed.

RISING OF DON COSSACKS.

On April 6, a rising broke out amongst the Don Cossacks in the area Popov-Beryaznyagi-Ust Khoperskaya-Gorbatov, roughly 120 miles to the N.E. of Lugansk. These Cossacks had originally been fighting in the ranks of the Volunteer Army, but in February they went over to the Bolshevists. After a few months under the Bolshevist rule they decided to throw off the Bolshevist yoke and attempt to rejoin General Denikin. The first definite news of this rising was received at the beginning of May from an aviator who was sent over to General Denikin by the commander of the insurgents. He gave their numbers to be five divisions each, 4,000 strong, and one independent brigade, 500 strong. Their morale was excellent, and so far they had resisted all efforts of the Bolshevist troops, whose morale was bad, to suppress them, and had furthermore cut the Bolshevist lines of communication in that area. There seems little doubt now that General Denikin's intention to join up with the insurgents has been accomplished.

BOLSHEVIST CRUISER TORPEDOED.

A Bolshevist wireless Press message states that a British submarine on Wednesday sank the cruiser Oleg near the Tolboukin lighthouse. This is off the Western coast of the island containing the fortress of Cronstadt.

GERMAN DESIGNS ON BALTIC PROVINCES.

Information received from official sources exposes Germany's machinations to make up for her losses in the West by annexation of the Russian Baltic Provinces. From proofs in possession of the Allies there is no doubt that Germany is now deliberately intending such annexation. The Baltic German Barons have offered one-third of their land for distribution among German colonists.

On 24th May German and Baltic forces took Riga, which had been abandoned by the Bolshevists, and they took the opportunity of carrying out wholesale executions of Letts, many of whom were shot without court-martial on the unfounded charge of being Bolshevists.

he German forces, far from being of any assistance in the defence of the Baltic provinces against Bolshevism, have now proved a greater danger than Bolshevism itself. They are endeavouring to plunge the whole of the Baltic provinces into a state of anarchy in order that they may have the pretext of intervening with a view to the Germanisation of these provinces.

MANSLAUGHTER OF EPSOM POLICE OFFICER.

EIGHT CANADIANS CHARGED.

Eight Canadian soldiers, who were arrested by the civil police on Thursday for alleged participation in the riot at Epsom and the death of Police-sergeant Green, were taken before Mr. Garrett at Bow-street Police-court yesterday afternoon. The authorities were not legally represented, and only formal evidence sufficient to justify a remand was given. The accused were:—

Allen McMaster, 30, private, 3rd Canadians.
Frank Harold Wilkie, 23, private, 102nd Canadians.
Herbert Tait, 29, 11th Division Canadians.
Gervas Porier, 24, C.A.M.C.
David Yerex, 32, private, Canadian Forestry Company.
Alphonse Masse, 27, C.A.M.C.
Robert Alexander McAllan, 45, C.A.M.C.
James Connors, 19, private, 13th Canadian Highlanders.

In each case the charge was one of being concerned in the manslaughter of Thomas Green, station sergeant, at Ashton-grove, Epsom, on June 17. With the exception of Connors, who wore khaki and was apparently uninjured, all the prisoners were in hospital blue, and six of them had their heads bandaged, whilst the seventh showed a contused wound on the forehead.

Divisional Detective-inspector Ferrier, of the V Division, Metropolitan Police, deposed as follows:—At 12.15 p.m. yesterday I saw the prisoner Connors at Woodcote Park Camp, Epsom, and told him I was a police officer making inquiries in connection with the riot at Epsom police-station on the night of the 17th, when considerable damage was done and a number of officers were injured, one of whom subsequently died as the result of injuries inflicted by Canadian soldiers. I said I had reason to believe that he was one of the soldiers, and that I should arrest him for being concerned with others in the manslaughter of Police-sergeant Thomas Green. He made no reply, and I conveyed him to Epsom police-station, and he was subsequently brought to Bow-street. Later in the afternoon I went to the Canadian Military Hospital at Orpington, and in the presence of military officers saw the other seven prisoners individually. I told them I was investigating the riot at Epsom police-station, and that I had reason to believe they had been sent from Epsom to Orpington on the previous day. I cautioned them and asked if they would care to give an explanation as to how they came by their injuries. Tait, McAllan, Porier, Wilkie, and Yerex made statements, which I reduced to writing.

The written statements were produced, but the magistrate said they need not be read at that stage of the case.

Continuing, witness stated that McMaster said "I could not tell you how I came by my injuries I don't know anything about it at all." In the evening the prisoners were collected together from various parts of the hospital and were told that they would be charged with being concerned in the manslaughter of Sergeant Green. MacMaster said: "We want to get fair play. We are not the ringleaders. We don't want to be manslaughterers." While at Orpington railway station Porier said: "It is only the fellows who got hit that are taken. There were others. It is not fair." They were brought to Bow-street, and upon being formally charged that morning none of them made any reply except Masse, who was a French Canadian and only spoke French. On the charge being interpreted to him he said, "I know nothing about it."

Prisoners were remanded until next Friday, and were removed in custody.

AMERICAN EMBASSY FOR BRUSSELS.

President Wilson, addressing the Belgian Chamber of Deputies at Brussels, said that the League of Nations was the inevitable consequence of the war, the child of this great war for right. Any nation which declined to adhere to this covenant deliberately turned away from the most telling appeal ever made to its conscience and manhood. Any nation that wants to use the League for its own selfish purposes and not for the rest of the world deliberately turns back to the bad days of selfish contest.

President Wilson announced that to welcome Belgium into her new status of complete independence, he would propose to raise the United States Mission to Belgium to the rank of an Embassy and to send an ambassador to the capital.

HOSPITAL SUNDAY.

To-day is Hospital Sunday, when the forty-seventh annual collection on behalf of the Metropolitan Hospitals will be made. Its predecessors have resulted in £2,000,000 being raised. This money provides 10 per cent. of the charitable income of 250 hospitals, dispensaries, convalescent homes, and nursing associations, and, in addition, enables 7,000 surgical appliances to be supplied to maimed poor folk. There are no fewer than 10,000 patients daily occupying the beds of the London hospitals, and an average daily attendance of out-patients of 20,000.

It is hoped that to-day's collections will total at least £150,000.

AIRMEN'S WONDERFUL ESCAPE.

While an Avro machine was being flown at Northold Aerodrome on Wednesday at a height of 1,000 feet, a seam of the petrol tank burst and the aeroplane caught fire. The pilot, Lt. Startup, and his mechanic, Carpenter, crawled out on to the wing, and, although severely burned, the pilot managed to land the machine, which burst into flames immediately it touched the ground. Both men were burned and are now in hospital, but are progressing favourably.

Rear Admiral Sir William Nicholson, K.C.B., has been appointed Third Sea Lord of the Admiralty, and Controller, vice Rear Admiral Charles M. de Bartolome, K.C.M.G., C.B., to date July 1.

OFFICERS KILLED BY DIVING AEROPLANE.

R.A.F. CADET ACQUITTED.

Considerable interest was manifested in an important case at the Lincoln Assizes yesterday, Trevor Walter Chater, 19, flight cadet, was charged with the manslaughter of Captain Robin Dunn and Lieutenant John Pegg, when they were returning from the meet of the Belvoir Hounds on March 18. The case for the prosecution was that defendant caused the death of the two officers by swooping down on them with an aeroplane. Chater, it was alleged, swooped so low that he caught the heads of the occupants of a trap, killing the officers and stunning the coachman. Such action would be a contravention of the rules which had been drawn up for the guidance of pilots.

Evidence was given by Captain Richardson, adjutant at Cranwell Camp, where the accused was stationed. He stated that in reply to questions Chater admitted diving on the trap. Edward Labraham, who was driving the trap at the time of the tragedy, said he saw the machine coming towards them. It hit him on the back of the head. "All went dark and all went away from me," added witness. When I came to, I was still in the trap, and the two officers dead. Giving evidence on his own account, Chater said he was practising diving on the afternoon of occurrence. He dived at a haystack, the road appearing clear. He was travelling about ninety miles an hour. He was stunned by the knowledge of what had happened, when informed by Captain Richardson.

In the summing up, the judge said that beginning from now we shall probably see in the air flights of commercial machines, and the question as to what constitutes criminal negligence is likely to be important in the future. In the present case the crucial point was whether the carelessness displayed by the accused amounted to criminal negligence. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty and the accused was discharged.

MARRIAGE OF THE UNFIT.

BREACH OF PROMISE CASE.

Mr. Justice McCardie and a special jury in the King's Bench Division commenced yesterday the re-trial of an action for breach of promise of marriage brought by Mabel Beatrice Porter, of Barnes, against Gerald Osmond Barnard, an ex-naval officer, of Monmouth.

Defendant admitted the promise and also that it was rescinded. He pleaded that he was justified in breaking off the engagement because at the time the marriage was to have taken place the plaintiff was suffering from tuberculosis. At the former trial in April the jury, after a three days' hearing, disagreed. The case is proceeding.

PERSONAL WAR MEMORIALS.

The issue of memorial scrolls to the next of kin of all who fell in the war has been begun by the War Office. The scroll is of thick paper in the form of a rectangle, approximately 11 5/16 in. long by 7 1/16 in. wide. It bears the following inscription:

He whom this scroll commemorates was numbered among those who, at the call of King and country, left all that was dear to them, endured hardships, faced danger, and finally passed out of the sight of men by the path of duty and self sacrifice, giving up their own lives that others might live in freedom. Let those who come after see to it that his name be not forgotten.

This is followed by an inscription of the soldier's name and regiment. The whole inscription is surmounted by a device, including the Royal Arms in colour, with the initials of his Majesty the King. The scrolls will be accompanied by the following letter from Buckingham Palace over the King's signature:

I join with my grateful people in sending you this memorial of a brave life given for others in the great war.

The scrolls will be distributed as they become ready, and no special application for them should be made, as, in view of the large number involved, it is impossible to say when their issue in individual cases may be expected.

TWO IDEAS OF MARRIAGE.

"There are in England two conceptions of marriage," said the Bishop of Lichfield to the Mothers' Union in St. Paul's Cathedral.

According to one, when the sexual impulse, which they called love, ceased, the union was to be dissolved. The other idea was that of the Mother's Union: that marriage created the home, which was the best sphere for mutual service. He condemned artificial expedients, but this did not mean that every home should have the largest possible family.

HUGE COTTON STRIKE IN LANCASHIRE.

As it is proved impossible to arrive at a satisfactory agreement in the Lancashire cotton dispute, strike notices affecting 287,000 workers become operative on Saturday. All the mills are closing down.

SOCIETY IN THE DIVORCE COURT.

Another cause célèbré was heard in the Divorce Court yesterday afternoon when the Marchioness of Conygham was granted a decree of restitution of conjugal rights against the Marquis. The suit was undefended.

Petitioner, giving evidence, said that she last lived with her husband in January 1918. In December last the Marquis wrote "I am living with someone else and nothing will ever part us."

KNIGHTHOODS BESTOWED ON ATLANTIC FLIERS.

PRIZE PRESENTED.

Capt. Alcock and Lieut. Brown were received by the King at Windsor on Friday. His Majesty bestowed upon both the world famed aviators Knighthoods of the Order of the British Empire.

Later in the day a luncheon was given at the Savoy Hotel at which the Daily Mail's cheque for £10,000 was handed to the victorious airmen. Mr. Winston Churchill, who made the presentation, characterized the event as one which showed that while we have become more powerfully equipped in all that concerns apparatus, we have also preserved as a race the audacity, courage and physical qualities of the old heroic bygone times.

TERRITORIAL AIR FORCE.

The first of the aircraft instruction wings in connection with the Territorial Air Force movement was opened at St. Pancras yesterday afternoon by General Sir Hugh Trenchard. After making a thorough inspection of the workshops and lecture rooms he said he was so satisfied with the organization of the scheme that he could promise that much greater assistance will be given by the Air Ministry.

R. 34's TRIP TO THE BALTIC.

The airship R. 34 returned to its base at East Fortune early yesterday morning after a continuous voyage of sixty-six hours without landing.

Officially it was stated that the airship had been on a Continental air tour but unofficially it is understood to have been to Dantzig. The return home was made against a heavy rainstorm over the North sea. The officers have expressed themselves as extremely pleased with her performance.

The distance travelled by the R. 34 was upwards of 2,000 miles, thus removing all doubts as to the Atlantic crossing.

TEST MOBILIZATION IN NEW YORK.

In New York yesterday eight thousand troops were affected by a sudden mobilization order. The National Guard was suddenly called up to man power-houses, bridges, water works and other strategic points. The troops took fifty-five minutes to get posted at their stations.

Much publicity has been given to this practice manoeuvre for dealing with civil disturbances. Its main purpose is to serve as a warning to anarchist agents who have been sending anonymous threats to Government officials.

CLEARING THE NORTH SEA.

Mine-sweepers of the British Navy and the American Navy are now engaged in making a final grand sweep of the North Sea. The work is being shared equally between the two fleets, and the completion of the task may be expected some time about the end of November.

There are over 400 British mine-sweepers in the North Sea at the present time, and their business is to gather up what are left of the 100,000 mines that were laid down during the war. British moored mines still exist off the Belgian, Danish, Dutch, German, and Norwegian coasts.

The American mine-sweepers, which have just got to work, are stationed up by the Orkneys. The Americans laid the large minefield belt which practically stretches from the Orkneys to the coast of Norway, and the removal of this lengthy chain of death now falls to their share.

The British Mine-sweepers Service is composed entirely of volunteers, and consists of some 600 officers and 14,000 men.

BORROWED FROM GERMAN PRISONER.

A court-martial was opened at Cardiff yesterday to deal with allegations against Lieut. Frank Godder. He is charged with borrowing money from a German prisoner named Landszuis and with neglecting to pay another prisoner an amount of one guinea. The hearing was adjourned until 30th June.

RAID ON M.P's HOUSES.

Yesterday the Dublin police raided a number of houses, including those of Sinn Fein members of Parliament. They made a thorough search of the interiors, looking under beds and inside pianos, etc. So far as is known, nothing of importance was discovered.

R.A.S.C. DRIVER CHARGED WITH MANSLAUGHTER.

John Harrison, a transport motor driver in the R.A.S.C., stationed at Wimbledon Camp, was yesterday committed for trial on a Coroner's warrant on a charge of manslaughter.

He was driving a lorry which knocked down Hector Smith, aged 14. Two soldiers who were in the lorry said that when Harrison was told that the boy had been knocked down he told them to sit still and then drove away at a fast speed.

DON'T RUSH TO CELEBRATE.

The Home Office states that the date of the national celebrations which are contemplated on the conclusion of peace will be announced as soon as the treaty is signed. In the meantime the Government expresses a hope that everyone will wait for these celebrations and will not immediately upon the signature of the treaty indulge in premature action which might prejudice a collective celebration on a single date.

THE FINAL ISSUE.

WHAT WILL GERMANY DECIDE?

The German people are now face to face with the realities of the war and its consequences. The situation as we go to press is still somewhat confused. The resignation of the Scheidemann Cabinet is followed by the statement that a Government will probably be formed; under Bauer, the Minister of Labour and which will include Erzberger, with Bernstorff as Minister of Foreign Affairs.

The Independent Socialists appear to be taking up an equivocal attitude, probably owing to the fact that they wish to await the trend of events before formulating their demands for accepting office. It seems however that there is a clear majority in the National Assembly for accepting the Peace terms.

Although the Democrats are taking up a negative attitude, yet signs are not wanting that the conviction is gradually being forced upon the various parties, including the majority socialists, that any further hesitation or delay in accepting the Peace terms is impossible. We believe that this conviction is gaining ground, and trust that sense and reason will prevent the German people from committing political suicide.

The Entente have spoken their last word. The weighty and impressive covering note to the Allied rejoinder to the German counter proposals reviews the whole of the ground in dispute. The Allies remain adamant upon the Peace terms as a whole. Slight concessions have been made at various points: the Germans have been granted a plebiscite in Upper Silesia.

The Allies have also stated that they will consider the six points of honour put forward by the German Government in order to save the amour propre of the people.

All that is now required from the German Government from whatsoever fractions or parties it may ultimately be formed, is sufficient courage and a firm hand to set their signatures to the Peace Treaty. The time for hesitation, prevarication and delay is now past.

What the Allies and indeed the whole civilized world have a right to expect from those who claim to speak in the name of the German people is a firm determination to show the world that they have faced the consequences of their wrong doing, and intend to lay the foundation of that new and repentant Germany which alone can gain entrance to the League of Nations. That door will always be open to a non-militarized and repentant people which seeks to prove by newness of life that it has for ever abjured its evil ways and is resolved to tread the path of peaceful progress and legitimate expansion amongst its neighbour states.

The issue is plain—the conditions have been set forth. It is for the German people to decide.

THE FATEFUL HOUR.

HOW THE BRITISH MIND FACES A CRISIS.

Imperturbability is an undeniable characteristic of Englishmen, and we have an illustration of it in these critical days when the Treaty of Peace lies before the perplexed delegates of a fallen empire.

An American writer recently made an attempt to sum up the vagaries of English character. She called to her aid a daring figure of speech, for she likened "the average, unadulterated English person" to the Rock of Gibraltar which has "many admirable qualities, but lacks elasticity."

It is easy to point out that elasticity is not a quality which many of us would like to see either in the sentinel of the Mediterranean Sea or in the human guardians of English traditions But the opinions of our critic are worthy of more than a retort, for she has laid bare some secrets of our race.

The circumstances of these fateful days would lead a spectator of national character to expect evidence of anxiety and tension in England and her armies. A Peace conference which had to deal with an unparalleled plight of war-stricken peoples has but lately come to an end after sessions that recall the tedious Congress of Vienna. The aspirations of new-born nations have been satisfied and the proud ambitions of a mighty power have been checked. The world is waiting for a decision of its fate. Peace and war vie with each other for dominion.

Yet England's soldiers keep the even tenor of their way, ready, watchful, but imperturbable. There is no fevered strain, no hurried project, no dramatic spectacle. Our men have a stolidity which in adversity became dour indomitable courage and in victory is unruffled calm.

In England itself there is little evidence of nervous foreboding. Men and women have donned perplexing masks of gay frivolity, and have bidden dull melancholy a long farewell. In truth, the spirit of joyful abandon has spread over the homeland so quickly that not a few of its soldier sons are wondering if the sacrifice of their comrades has already been forgotten. It is not fitting that the sorrows of tragic years should be danced away in the paltry gaiety of a jazzing Terpsichore.

In these fateful hours England demands the imperturbable courage of her soldiers, and it is hers. She also demands the glad and dignified bearing of her citizens, and that also will be rendered. It is thus that we await a world's Peace.

SOCIAL PROBLEMS.

What would Jesus do?

(BY A CORRESPONDENT.)

We are living in an age that applies a social test to the claims of spiritual power. No religion that does not satisfy that test, will be seriously considered as worthy of acceptance.

Just now, when so much is in the melting-pot, the Christian claims that the thing to be greatly desired is that the pot should be heavily salted with the Christian salt.

Faced to-day with the world-wide unrest that seems to threaten civilization itself, we are not astonished to find even Christians questioning the social efficacy of their faith.

We cannot help seeing that there are branches of human action which have been tacitly reserved from the full operation of Christian principles, and we cannot rest in any such reservations.

We reckon that a faith should be true, and if true, should be consistently applicable, if in differing ways, to the whole of human experience.

Unity of Fellowship.

It seemed as if the fellowship of man with men and man with God are so dependent upon each other, that a breach in one involves a breach in the other.

Christ shows how the social structure can be permeated with real unity and real love.

If it is not possible for master and man, employer and employed, landlord and tenant, to be united in Christ's fellowship of love, Christianity is unpractical and impracticable; but Christianity does give us a point of view from which it is possible to recognize both distinctions and the brotherhood of man and how this double recognition can be effected. Here is the Christian basis of sound democracy—sane mutual respect.

We cannot all be managers, foremen, officers, masters. The master without the man is as useless as the man without the master.

At the very start it is neccessary that they must respect each other, and recognize that the other's function is a necessary and therefore an honourable one.

Above all, they should not forget that they are sons of one Father, servants of one Master, temples of one Spirit, Members of one Body, and that each is necessary to the other in the building up of that Body.

Love to all Men.

In our world to-day we find the human family divided into classes, with one class blaming another for injustice and inhumanity, and another retorting with charges of laziness or lack of thrift.

Labour is at strife with capital, and capital, with Labour.

Broadly speaking these classes have no true fellowship with one another, no sense of common bond. Society is not yet a brotherhood.

Now Christians acknowledge a law of life which is both exacting and far reaching. The law is to love all men without exception, and we are bold enough to assert with confidence, that if the law of Christ were more generally admitted in carrying on the business of the world, much of the present pain and discord of society would be removed.

In this, our day we are called upon to decide whether our Christian religion is to be a single, separate, specialized activity in which we engage from time to time, or is to be the driving force and guiding principle of all our activities.

For guidance in this matter, it is well for us to note that the social aspects of our Lord's teaching are indisseverable from his religious thought. To Him the love of God, and the love of our neighbour form the twin foundations of the religious and social life.

From Him, the Apostle John learned to teach, that "if a man say he love God, and love not his brother, he is a liar."

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

OPPOSED TO AIRSHIPS.

Sir,—Surely "Lighter than Air" cannot seriously compare the airship with the aeroplane either for its usefulness and adaptability or its speed.

The airship so far has proved a cumbrous, vulnerable weapon of war. The Zeppelin was a marvellous example of ingenuity. The greatest hopes were built on its possibilities.

They came to nought. The Zeppelin had its brief day and was used no more.

It seems to me that only a reactionary who is blind to the marvellous progress in aeroplane development could possibly see any future in the airship.

HEAVIER THAN AIR.

WANTED—SALMON.

Sir,—It is generally assumed that salmon fishing is a sport for millionaires and the "upper ten thousand", and this is no doubt in proper keeping with the established order, whereat we grouse not at all.

But apparently a new application of the idea of preservation has arisen in the land. Crab, pilchards, sardines are all to be obtained from the Divisional Canteen by Other Ranks, but salmon is reserved for Officers.

Does this mean that the E.F.C. has called a "close time" for this particular delicacy so far as O.R.'s are concerned, or is there some nearer but sternly guarded secret cause?

Perhaps someone "in the know" will be so good as to solve the mystery through your valuable columns, if you will kindly publish the query.

SOME LANCASHIRE O.R.s.

CONCERT PARTIES.

Sir,—I endorse the views of "Amusements Officer." It is a most regrettable fact that many concert parties adopt this view of an easy life and are far too ambitious in desiring enthusiastic receptions from crowded audiences, quite neglecting units not so fortunately placed, in isolated villages.

The same thing, however, cannot be said of "The Owlers," of the 79th Brigade R.G.A. who gave a most excellent show in the village of Stotzheim recently.

No party had visited this village before, and the reception afforded to this party quite bears out what "Amusements Officer" has already said. Lieut. Oxberry, the officer in charge of the troupe told me afterwards, that he would be only too glad to give the show to any unit in the neighbourhood, provided that the staging accommodation is in any way adequate.

THE OPERA HOUSE COMPLAINTS.

Sir,—It was inevitable that the behaviour of a certain type of the troops in the public places of entertainment of Rhineland should find an echo in your columns.

"A.M. Richmond's" letter was a general complaint with a quoted example, and is in no way disposed of by "Mens Conscia's" futile reply.

"Mens Conscia" seems to think that the fact of his never having taken the trouble to learn German, excuses his spoiling the pleasure of those who have.

It makes one blush to hear any Englishman trying to excuse himself for drinking in the auditorium of such a place as the Opera.

There is a growing display in many places of entertainment in Rhineland of an aggressive behaviour by certain Britishers which is a source of disgust and annoyance to the majority.

It is an unfortunate peculiarity with some, that when they find themselves in surroundings of a higher class than those to which their pre-war life accustomed them, they feel impelled to impress upon everyone within earshot how very much at home they really feel.

To them, as to the gentleman who justifies drinking out of a bottle during the show, I would say: "If the occupants of the fourth seat to your right or left are anything more than vaguely aware of your presence, there is something wrong with your deportment. Don't, however, squeal when another Britisher pillories you in the "Post."

T.W.P.

LEARN A LANGUAGE.

Sir.—It has often struck me that out of the many thousands of our boys who have occupied France and now Germany, very few indeed have ever taken the trouble to gain even a working knowledge of the languages of the two countries.

Never had the young men of Great Britain a finer opportunity of becoming at least passably acquainted with one or other of these tongues, useful not only in business and the ordinary affairs of life and valuable because of their richness in literature.

The great advantage of being in a foreign country is to learn all one can and the only way to understand intelligently a nation's life and customs is to know its language.

I appeal to every officer and man in the Army of Occupation to take up the study of French and German according to which country he is stationed in. Don't go home knowing no more than your own native tongue. That is the advice of

AMATEUR LINGUIST.

CAUSES OF THE GREAT WAR.—II.

A good deal has been written about the alleged "Crown Council" meeting said to have taken place at Potsdam on 5th July. The Kaiser and the Archduke Frederick together with representatives of the German and Austrian General Staffs and Foreign officers including Herr von Stumm, General von Falkenhayn, Counts Berchtold and Tisza, General von Hötzendorf and Admiral Tirpitz are said to have been present.

It was stated that they there discussed the situation, resolved on an active policy and drew up the outline of the fatal ultimatum delivered by the Austria-Hungarian Government nearly three weeks later.

Considerable doubts have since been expressed as to whether this meeting ever really took place.

Sir H. Rumbold, the British representative at Berlin at the time, and Sir Maurice de Bunsen, the Ambassador at Vienna, were both sceptical as to this alleged conference.

On the other hand, Prince Lichnowsky in his memorandum speaks of it as a matter of common knowledge, and this is confirmed by the American minister at Constantinople, to whom Baron Wangenheim, the German ambassador stated that he was present at the meeting, and mentioned some of the points settled.

Be that as it may, it is plainly apparent that the Austrian Government thought it might go very far in imposing terms on Serbia, and count on German support.

It was clear that there might be a limit after which Serbia and possibly Russia might refuse to yield to pressure, but before reaching that limit, much might be claimed and gained.

Some political personages at Vienna thought that no bounds need be set to their demands at all, an end might be made of Serbian independence, and Russia could not, or would not fight for it.

Others thought that Serbia and Russia would end by refusing further concessions, and that they might then be attacked with Germain aid. If France gave Russia assistance, she would be crushed also. Great Britain would be sure to stand out of the game.

Both of these views gave encouragement for vigorous and peremptory action: those who thought that Russia would never fight under any provocation, and those who wanted her to fight and be crushed, could agree in their decision to fall upon Serbia with ruthless truculence.

The Serbian minister at Vienna summed the matter up very well as follows: "Austria-Hungary has to choose between one of the following courses. Either they can regard the Serajevo outrage as a national misfortune, and a crime which ought to be dealt with on the evidence obtained at the trial, in which case Serbia's co-operation in the work will be requested in order to prevent the perpetrators from escaping the extreme penalty. Or they can treat the Serajevo outrage as a Pan-Serbian, and Pan Slav conspiracy with every manifestation of their hatred, hitherto concealed, against Slavdom. There are indications that influential circles are being urged to adopt the latter course: it is therefore advisable to be ready for self defence. Should the former and milder course be adopted, we ought to do all we can to meet Austrian wishes in this respect."

Unfortunately for the peace of the world, it was the latter course which was adopted.

AT THE OPERA.

"Das Glöckchen des Eremiten."

At the Opera House the other night, it was a real pleasure to listen to the lovely melodies of Aimé Maillart's Comic Opera which calls to life again the grace and sentimentality of a past period of the French school of music.

A detailed description of this work, so well known in every opera house and so welcomed by every lover of music, is here unnecessary; it need only be said that the performance was worthy of a full house.

Johanna Klemperer was in excellent voice and her rendering of the aria "O schweige still" brought justly forth a storm of applause.

In the rôle of Bellany, Karl Renner used his voice to its fullest advantage, receiving, as did Kaspar Koch as Silvain, well merited appreciation.

The other roles were well filled. The orchestra under the truly artistic control of Franz Weissleder gave of its very best; but in the Nozze di Figaro, the particularly soft passages might, it is thought, be rendered a little more sotto voce.

The audience showed an enthusiastic appreciation of the singers' art and of Maillart's delicate genius by covering the stage with a wealth of flowers.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

Revival of "The Crumps."

That bright combination of talent, the original "Crumps," the concert party of the London Division, won fame and fortune by reason of their undoubted ability to amuse. Then circumstances made it necessary for the party temporarily to suspend their activities and its members have been "resting" for some time. "The Crumps" have now, however, awakened to life again with a personnel that bids fair to maintain the high reputation originally achieved. At Kalk a capital performance was given to a crowded audience and if the show lacked that perfect finish that characterized the party of old, there was plenty of brightness that promises well for the future.

Weak sketch well performed.

Lieut. J. W. Knight is the guiding spirit of "The Crumps" and he has a capable stage manager and working partner in W. H. Coole. These two worked a somewhat weak sketch at the end of the programme with considerable success assisted by W. Lamb and H. Harris. Their abilities might, however, be bestowed upon a sketch containing more movement and less verbiage in the dialogue. The same pair also appeared successfully in another humorous act while in addition, W. H. Coole contributed a lively song and dance. F. Fryer gave a couple of excellent monologues while T. Whelton, female impersonator, made the most of a wretchedly poor song entitled "Kidnap Me." In "Firelight Glow," I. Walsh revealed the possession of a rich and thoroughly pleasing voice and a bright rendering of "Li'l Old Home," was given by T. Moody. Other members of the party were Lamb, T. Watkins, and F. Tollemarche, while a spirited little orchestra added greatly to the enjoyment of the performance. The "Crumps" are due for a week's engagement at the Deutsches Theatre, Cologne, — commencing to-morrow, Monday.

The Mountebanks at Kalk.

Under the skilful direction of Capt. R. Awdry "The Mountebanks" gave their opening performance at the R.A.S.C. Hall at Kalk. Undoubtedly the most ambitious itemwas the "Coster Concerted" in which a real "Moke" and coster-cart appear on the stage, with Messrs. Awdry and Peel as "Arriets" to the rest of the party's "Arrys." C. Gosling's "Cobbler's Song" (with appropriate "get up" and surroundings) from "Chu Chin Chow," Griffiths's humorous songs (with monoclé) and A Downing's sermon based on the text "Mary had a little lamb" are but a few of the turns that received an enthusiastic reception from the audience. The programme concluded with a sketch entitled "The Night Watchman"—excellently acted by Messrs R. Awdry, L. Vigar, Frehearn and F. Coombs.

Leaving.

By the way, I hear that Billy Hayward, the popular manager at the Deutsches Theatre, is leaving for "demob" on Tuesday. He is one of the most competent managers in town and his departure will be a big loss to the "Deutsches." However, he goes with our best wishes for every success in his new occupation.

In Few Words.

"The Merry Muffins" have gone to England on leave. All the party, I hear, are enjoying a fortnight's sojourn in Blighty.

On Monday, July 1st., the Rhine Army Dramatic Company are to produce Oscar Wilde's masterpiece, "The importance of being earnest".

It is also whispered that Lieut. S. E. Percy is to produce "Julius Caesar" at an early date. The stupendousness of the enterprise leaves one gasping. "Damaged Goods" is also on the card—but more of this anon.

Mr. W. D. Fazan, of the Lena Ashwell Dramatic Company, tells me that they are returning to Cologne in a few weeks time with a three-act play entitled "The Duke of Killiecrankie".

By featuring W. W. Jacobs' well-known story "The Changeling" as a one-act comedy, "The Pedlars" have introduced something new. And, judging by the applause awarded the artistes at Bonn last week, this style of entertainment has the augury of being very popular.

"The Robin Hoods", the 9th Corps Concert Party are, I believe, another party due in Cologne after they have completed their tour.

Incidentally, after their numerous local successes, the "Tiger Pips" (11th Leicester's Concert Party) are now seeking fresh fields to conquer.

PERFECT GALLOPING MACHINE.

IRISH ELEGANCE "UNEQUALLED UP TO A MILE."

It is an age of records, and the horses are taking their share in the game. No Derby winner could have brought the house down like Irish Elegance did that vast Ascot throng when he achieved the impossible by annexing the Hunt Cup under 9st. 11lbs., writes the Scout in The Daily Express.

Away back in the forties of last century a horse won under 9st. 7lbs., but race-running was not the speedy affair it is now. Peter's modern record easily went by the board yesterday, and even Victor Wild's bold effort under 9st. 12lbs. against Knight of the Thistle was overshadowed by this amazing equine machine that carries the colours of Mr. James White—a Rochdale millionaire, who has dabbled in everything financial from promoting boxing to buying ready-made mills. He never made a better bargain than when he gave Mr. R. B. Thorburn £2,000 for the ready-made Irish Elegance last year.

Irish Elegance is a second Victor Wild already with the public. They fairly mobbed him as he was unsaddled. Then you realised what a great horse he is. The enthusiastic Cottrill, his trainer, vows that there never was his equal up to a mile.

The horse has filled out, and is now a massive specimen of the weight-carrying thoroughbred. A galloping machine to perfection.

BOXING AND WRESTLING.

PROPOSED COLOGNE TOURNAMENT ABANDONED.

Circumstances have arisen which have rendered it necessary to abandon the boxing and wrestling tournament which was announced recently to have been arranged to take place at the British Empire Leave Club Cologne, on 11th July.

This will prove a big disappointment to many Army exponents of these forms of sports, but intending competitors would be well advised not to relinquish their training programmes since it is anticipated that the Supt. of Physical and Recreational Training will shortly make an announcement that will give intending champions their opportunity.

SPORT AT HOFFNUNGSTAL.

CUP WON BY "D" COY., 26th (S) BN. ROYAL FUSILIERS.

The 26th (S) Bn. Royal Fusiliers arranged a very good sports meeting and all ranks enjoyed the day to the full. The band played selections during the afternoon and tea was served on the ground. ST. ANDREWS TOURNAMENT.

The draw for the 72 holes' tournament, which will be held over the old course, St. Andrews, on June 25 and 26, has been made in London.

A remarkable feature of the draw is the fact that W. L. Ritchie is drawn on both days to play round with James Braid. Ritchie used to be Braid's assistant at Walton Heath.

ARRIVAL OF PAL MOORE.

Pal Moore the American boxer who is meeting Wilde next month, arrived at Southampton on the Mauretania on Friday.

BASKET BALL COME TO STAY.

Basket ball teams from the P. and R. T. Schools at Headquarters and the 9th Corps met on Thursday afternoon and divided the honours, each school winning a victory. The first game played between students at the school was won by 9th Corps, 12 to 7. Both teams played well considering their short time at the game. The line-ups were:

P. and R. T. School Canaries.— Cpl. Edwards; Sgt. Gardner; Sgt. Cheyne; Cpl. Clifford; Cpl. Strachan.

9th Corps.— Lt. Webster; Lt. Palmer; Bdr. Wilson; Sgt. Rushby; Mr. Rowe.

The second game between the staffs of the two schools was won by H. Q. 28 to 4. The game was featured by the close guarding of the victors and by the excellent scoring from penalties by Lieut Col. Betts, D.S.O.

H. Q. Staff.— C. S. M. Harper; C. S. M. Tyler; S. M. C. Stubbs; Lieut. Col. Betts, D. S. O.; Major Colvin V.C.

Apparently basket ball has come into the British Army to stay, and soon will become one of the major sports.

The lowest score in an innings in first-class cricket is 12 by Oxford University (one man absent) v. M.C.C. and Ground, at Oxford, May 1877.

The first French-bred horse to win the Derby was Gladiateur.

LANCASHIRE DIV. TRAIN V. "A" COY. 32nd. Bn., M.G.C.

The above teams played at Niederpleis; the Machine Gunners batting first. The first wicket fell in the second over for 6 runs. The second fell as hurriedly for 8 in the second over. The batsmen, Major Harrison and Sgt. Pollard, then settled down to a steady game, the bowling being favourable to the batsmen once they became accustomed to it. The third wicket fell for 34 after Major Harrison with some good hits had scored 19. During this wicket the batsmen scored 14 runs in one over, Major Harrison making 11 of them. Sgt. Pollard was bowled with 39 runs to his credit after holding out for 5 wickets; Corporal Goldring scored a good 16 before being caught. Sgt. Bloom took 6 wickets for 35.

After tea the "Train" commenced batting and immediately fell victims to the deadly bowling and excellent fielding of the Machine Gunners. The bowling of Major Harrison and Sgt. Pollard soon accounted for the wickets for the total score of 19 in 55 minutes. Major Harrison took 4 wickets for 7 runs, and Sgt. Pollard took 5 wickets for 8 runs, taking 3 wickets in one over on 2 occasions. Extras numbered only 4, owing to the dexterity of the wicket keeper, Cpl. Akehurst.

100 worth of Sketches sold!

"I have been totalling the number of sketches you have sold for me "during the past few months, and they amount to sixty, realising over "£100. Considering that I can only snatch an hour or two now and "then to keep my hand in, and oftener than not am working under "great difficulties—scrubbed up to the eyebrows in a dug-out or some shell-"battered building—I think you will agree that this is not a bad average."

The above extract is from a letter received a little while ago from a Gunner who was serving with the B.E.F. He is a Pupil of my Advanced Course. What he owns to has been demonstrated many times before. This Advanced Course was designed for the man who can draw but cannot sell. It has put many young Artists on the selling path. And some of the leading Illustrators of the day learned their Technique through it.

Can You Sketch?

As a Hobby, Drawing is a never-ending source of happy interest. As a Career, it offers vast possibilities to those who, having the instinct for it, put themselves in the way of getting the correct guidance. You can learn to draw by an easy, pleasant, inexpensive way, through the Post. The method is fully explained in my

NEW ILLUSTRATED DRAWING PROSPECTUS FREE.

It describes my two Postal Drawing Courses, Preparatory and Advanced, covering every phase of modern Illustrative Art—Landscape, Animal Drawing, Figure sketching, Design, Decoration, Caricature, Humorous and Serious Drawing of all kinds. Old pupils have illustrated it with numerous examples of their work taken from "Punch" and the leading Technical Publications.

The PREPARATORY COURSE teaches Sketching from the very rudiments in a pleasant, easy way. This is for the raw beginner.

The ADVANCED COURSE is for the Student who is already able to Draw. It teaches him how to turn his ordinary work into saleable work of character

Prospective Pupils are asked to note particularly that the Courses are Postal. They teach Original Drawing—not Copying. Pupils of either sex can start at any time, study anywhere, and work at their own speed. Fees are paid by easy Instalments. There are no binding Clauses whatever. You can cease whenever you wish without any liability for uncompleted Lessons or Fees. If you send copies of this Pupil's sketches, or an Original Drawing (pencil or pen), I will forward you a helpful Criticism and my new Prospectus, quite free. From Everywhere.

EVERYTHING FOR EVERYBODY.

Roses Galore.—Huge supplies of pink roses for Alexandra Day next Wednesday have been dispatched to the Army of the Rhine. There are 14 millions still available for purchasers at home.

The First.—The Rev. Frank H. F. Williams, M.C., a Welsh Army chaplain, has the distinction of holding the first service in Jerusalem, after its occupation by British troops.

Saved Forty.—Mr. J. Phelps, one of the King's oarsmen, has the gallant record of having saved about 40 persons from drowning. He holds the Royal Humane Society's bronze medal.

For Training.—Buckhurst Manor, the estate generously placed at the disposal of the British County Homestead Association, has been opened as a training centre for ex-service men by Lieut.-Colonel Sir Arthur Griffith Boscawen, M.P., Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Agriculture.

Everyone's Depot.—It is said that the ultimate purpose of the much discussed Slough depôt, after dealing with the many war surplus motors now awaiting repair, will be the maintenance of the whole of the motor vehicles required by the Army, Air Force, and other public services.

German Silver.—"There must have been some good Germans about somewhere at some time," remarked a lover of old silver at Christie's, when in the Earl of Home's sale, a 1550 Augsburg silver-gilt tankard and cover (with a central medallion of St. George and the Dragon) fetched £900.

The Red Cross.—The League of Red Cross societies is holding a conference at Geneva. The British representative is Sir David Henderson.

East gives to West.—The Maharajah of Kapurthala has given a considerable sum to be expended in the devastated regions of France for purchasing necessities for the homeless populace.

A huge terminus.—Waterloo Station, London, which has taken some years to rebuild, is to be completed next year, and it will then be one of the finest railway termini in the world.

Their new Enemy.—Disease appears to be a more tangible enemy than the Bolsheviks in North Russia. Scurvy, the romantic disease of the pirates and adventurers of our boyhood reading, has spread to five hundred Russians, though it is being kept back from our troops.

The Difference.—You can learn from a four page pamphlet just issued, how to obtain "Permanent Universal Peace," but a mere Peace Treaty fills a huge volume.

Foch Souvenirs.—At a charity Bazaar which took place in Paris an American bought one of Marshal Foch's pipes for 2700 francs; another gave 2000 francs for his pen. Buttons from his tunic fetched 300 francs each.

If!—Germany does not sign the Peace Treaty, measures have been taken for the Allies to move forward at the rate of 35 kilometres a day.

Mined.—The German ship "Mainz" with a load of 1300 tons rice for Germany was sunk by a mine. The crew was saved by a French Torpedo boat.

Non-committal.—Not much progress can be made with the examination of Landru, the French "Bluebeard." To all questions put to him he replies: "I have nothing to say. It is for you to prove your accusations."

Mary Jane's Pay.—The wages of general domestic servants have risen enormously since the war began. Mrs. W. J. Barton speaking at a meeting of the Royal Statistical Society estimated the rise to average 70 per cent.

Linking up.—It is proposed to amalgamate three important Trades Unions, the Boilermakers and Iron and Steel Shipbuilders, the Shipwrights and Ship Contractors and the Associated Blacksmiths and Ironworkers' societies with a total membership of nearly 200,000.

Tropical Days.—However torrid the weather, swift racing, hard-hitting cricket, keen tennis, and grand opera continue to attract great audiences at home.

Swimming Cures.—Hundreds of soldiers in the principal military hospitals and clinics in Great Britain are now undergoing a course of swimming as a cure for shell-shock paralysis.

Full Chimes.—The full "peace" peal of bells will be rung at Westminster Abbey to-day for the first time.

Ready.—The British Navy is once more on a war footing.

Out of Work.—There are 4,000 domestic servants on the unemployed books of the Domestic Servants' Union.

Will keep up.—No reduction in the cost of living is possible, Sir Robert Kindersley says, until the finances of Great Britain are placed on a sound financial basis.

A welcome return.—The production of "Kissing Time" at the Winter Garden once the "Old Mogul", Drury Lane, brings back to the stage Mr. George Grossmith and Miss Phyllis Dare, who have not appeared for some time.

Gas for Rats.—The old method of ferreting rats has been superseded. To-day these enemies to health are being assailed with poison gas.

War and Peace.—The strength of the Belgian Army has been fixed at 350,000 maximum for war time and 100,000 men in peace time.

His hope.—Hindenburg ended a speech of thanks after having received the freedom of the city of Kolberg by these words: "I shall go to the grave with faith in a better future."

War Stamps Boom.—Just now there is a decided "boom" in the scarce and historic stamp issues of the great war, due to the anxiety of many philatelists to complete their collections before the signing of peace brings Continental competitors into the market.

A big Deal.—A remarkable deal in linen has just been completed. Forty million yards of linen, made for covering aeroplane wings and sufficient to make a wide body-belt for the earth, have been bought for £4,000,000 from the Aircraft Dispersal Department.

Mostly Canadians.—More than 30,000 wounded soldiers have been treated during the war at the Military Hospital at Orpington, Kent. These included 16,402 Canadians and 12,592 Imperial troops.

Eased his Mind.—Peter Lee, a shipyard labourer, upon being committed for a month's imprisonment at Sunderland, yawned and languidly asked if it carried hard labour. "No," replied the chairman and Peter yawned again.

A girl Stowaway.—A girl who was attired in blue overalls, was charged at Liverpool with being a stowaway on an American transport, and was placed under probation for 12 months. She was discovered in the hold of the vessel.

Who will buy?—Two islands in the Shetlands and a number of picturesque lochs in the far North of Scotland are for sale.

Happier Days.—For the first time since August, 1914, the London and South Western Railway Company did not require to run a single special ambulance train last week.

Vests Scarce.—A remarkable feature in connection with the clothing industry is the great shortage of vests. This is because the efforts of the trade have been mainly devoted to the production of the more important garments supplied to the Army.

Asked to Resign.—The Rev. A. S. Le Mare has been officially asked to resign his position as an assistant master at Rugby Lower School because he sat down during the singing of the National Anthem.

Their own Ale.—The Crown Brewery, Llantrisant, has been purchased for £20,000 by the South Wales Clubs, Union, to which there are sixty-nine working men's clubs affiliated.

Not Good.—Industrial conditions in South Wales are very unsatisfactory, due to the lack of demand for iron, steel, and tinplates, the high costs of production keeping off buyers and discouraging enterprise.

Lloyd George Ill.—Mr. Lloyd George has been confined to his bed in consequence of a very severe chill contracted during his recent visit to the Verdun battlefields.

No Tax.—Guernsey States rejected, by 22 votes to 9, the proposal for State-aid to workers with large families, and a bachelor's tax of 5 per cent. on income to pay for such aid.

Opinions of the Moment.

OUR CHEMICAL PROGRESS.

By Professor Henry Lewis, President of the Society of Chemical Industry.

The state of scientific teaching in this country is far ahead of what it is in Germany or anywhere else, especially in scientific technology. I have maintained that view for many years, and this war has proved its correctness.

We have applied our science and knowledge to war work for not quite five years, and in that short time we have outstripped the Germans at every point.

FORGETFULNESS.

By Bruce Bairnsfather.

The last people to wish us a lugubrious Peace would be the millions who have died and suffered for it." I feel, that they would have a sense of disappointment if they knew that our appreciation mainly took the form of balls, jazz and other.

If I were Almighty for one night, I'd choose a ball night, just at the moment when forgetfulness was at its height, when those raceless parasites, the jazzband artists were jazzing their jazziest, when the heartless, canary brained women had induced their partners to become as superficial as themselves, when the night was far spent, I would, I say, by magic dim the lights and over against the wall I would have written by a giant hand in great fiery letters:

"What about those millions dead and what about the rest who live and suffer?"

CHURCH AND THE LOAN.

By the Archbishop of Canterbury.

It is, I am afraid, certain that thousands of people who were readily helpful in war time are failing to recognise the continuous responsibility which belongs to us all in meeting the intense difficulties of these post-war days.

Apart from higher and deeper considerations, the healthiness of our national life largely depends, as you say, upon the soundness of our credit, and in my judgment it would be altogether right that the clergy generally, in what they have to say during the next few weeks, should give a lead to those right thoughts, and should urge upon the loyal men and women of England the duty of responding promptly and effectively to your clear call.

The relaxing of the war-time strain is natural, and in its due measure, wholesome, but the peril of a thoughtless relapse into easy expenditure and even extravagance is very real.

A POOR BARGAIN.

By Keble Howard ("Chicot").

The ex-Kaiser continues to saw wood every day. Since the publication of the Peace Treaty he has become very nervous and works with feverish energy.

Here is a good example of the man who decided to have a little flutter in the Soul Market. Two thousand years ago the question was put: "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul"? The Kaiser thought he would answer that question once for all. He settled with himself to be the man. He plumped for a sporting chance.

But the sporting chance failed. The Kaiser lost both ways. He thought his soul, being a monarchical soul was a fair exchange for the whole world; the world was not taking him at her own terms. So he saws wood with feverish energy.

He is a true example of the silly soul-seller. He points a moral for all time.

KEEPING TOGETHER.

By Lord Reading (Lord Chief Justice).

During the war there has been a common sacrifice, a common suffering, which linked them all together, and which made them share the same thoughts and the same feelings.

After war there was a tendency for men to separate and to revert to old associations; but nevertheless there was just the same need for keeping our oversea people together with us, and for keeping burning as fiercely as ever the patriotic torch which had enabled us to weather the terrific storm which we had passed through.

Men were not likely to forget in this country what our oversea Dominions and possessions did for the Mother Country.

It was not because he feared that the memories of the sacrifices that these oversea British people made, would fade; it was not because one imagined for a moment that the recollection of the death of the noble soldiers who came from oversea to fight for us would be lost in oblivion; there was no fear of that, so long as we lived, and so long as the history of the British Empire was read; but it was necessary that we should continue to grip as closely as we possibly could, that foundation which made the British Empire what it was, which made us all proud of it, which made us one and all think when we looked back on the last five years that truly indeed the British people, with their genius for what they regarded as Empire, had built up an aggregation of nations, a congregation of men and women, which had never been equalled in the world's history, and which they could stand by, which was moulded together for one common purpose with the same ideas, and the same objects, devoted to the same ideals, which really made the Empire under one flag and under one King.

SUNBEAM PERILS.

By Dr. Haxthausen.

Dr. Finsen's discovery of the healing effects of sunshine in cases of lupus, and Dr. Reyn's statements concerning its surprising effects in tuberculosis treatment, have created a widespread popular belief in the curative power of sunlight acting on the bare skin. In consequence all Danish bathing places are filled with people who, after a short dip, doze for hours in the sun, but sunlight has bad effects in many cases, and is often the original cause of skin disease, especially epithelial cancer. Protection against light, should be part of the treatment in this disease.

OUR TRADE POLICY.

By Mr. W.M. Hughes, Prime Minister of Australia.

Some credulous persons, and some very dangerous ones, tell us that all is changed in Germany!

That the thrones of the mighty have been overturned, that where but yesterday the proud and despotic Hohenzollerns reigned unchallenged and seemingly unchallengeable, Ebert, the saddler, a man of the people, a Socialist, now rules.

But even if this change were permanent, even if it were a change of the heart and not from the lips outward, even if the spirit of the people of Germany were for the moment purged of militarism—which no one but dwellers in the clouds believe—how will that profit us if Germany regains her economic hold of the resources and trade of the Empire and of the world?

For the welfare of the great mass of the people depends mainly not upon political but economic conditions. British manufacturers, if they are to hold their own under the crushing burden of war debt, the increased cost of material and labour, must have a settled policy to which they can adapt themselves. They must know where they are.

THEORY v. PRACTICE.

By Sir Ian Hamilton.

I was the guest at the German Army manoeuvres at Frankfurt-on-Oder in September 1902. The tenth German Division were advancing to assault a position held by the Prussian Guards. The German Emperor asked me if I had any criticism to make. I at once replied "It is very fine, but I venture to think that they would never have got so far; their formations were too thick and dense." The German Emperor replied "You should think before you speak. If two out of every three had been killed the remainder would have taken the position."

"He being an Emperor," "I could not make the obvious retort that if two out of every three had been killed, the remainder would in all probability have run away."

Senders No E. F. S 3/4 5 8 3/4/6/19

Sir, Ref. your O.C.F. 1 of to-day's date I beg to report that some mistake has evidently been made, as No. 1010101010 answered his number on the 0800 hours parade this morning. He was not on the 1300 hours parade yesterday, as on his return from work in the morning he made a forced landing owing to a blister forming on the underside of his left wing, hence probably the mistake.

No 9876/4321 has been definitely reported as missing, believed killed. His next-of-kin have not been informed as he left no permanent address—his earliest recollections being of his emerging from an egg laid in a civilian stable. As he had nothing else to do he joined up in the Nth. R.E. Officers Mess Coy. Fly. Corps.

His kit cannot be traced and is presumed to have been destroyed at the same time as himself.

The whole incident seems to show that the republication of General Fly. Corps Order 1 of B. C. 2067—ref. flies always proceeding at least in pairs—is clearly indicated.

A MUCH-LIKED OFFICER.

It is interesting to record that at the funeral of the late Capt. Francis Repan, R.F.A., the officer commanding No. 2 Section London D.A.C., a very beautiful wreath was sent by the German civilians in Westhoven. At the graveside the last rites were performed by Fathers Longstaff C.F. and Langdale C.F. A number of Indian drivers from Capt. Repan's section were present at their express wish. His sterling qualities endeared him to all.

PEACE WILL BE SIGNED UNCONDITIONALLY.

1914 "STAND TO"—1919 "STAND DOWN."

SURRENDERED GERMAN FLEET SCUTTLED.

LAST ACTS OF TREACHERY.

GERMANY'S ELEVENTH HOUR PLEA.

BIG THREE INEXORABLE.

The Germans delivered a note to the Allies on Saturday afternoon intimating that they were prepared to sign the Peace Treaty with the exception of the clause admitting responsibility for the war and without undertaking the obligation to deliver up the persons named in Article 227.

Subsequently M. Clemenceau, President Wilson and Mr. Lloyd George met at the residence of the British Premier and drew up a reply pointing out that less than twenty-four hours now remained for the Germans to make up their mind about signing the Treaty and that the present note contained no arguments or consideration which has not already been examined. The Allies therefore feel constrained to say that the time for discussion is past. They can accept or acknowledge no qualification or reservation and must require of the German delegates an unequivocal decision either to accept or to reject the Treaty as finally formulated, and reaffirming that after the signature, the Allies will hold Germany responsible for the proper execution of every stipulation of the Treaty.

In Paris Conference circles, it is thought possible that Germany will ask for a few further days of grace on the ground that the new Government is in process of formation and that the request will be accompanied by a definite promise to send new plenipotentiaries to Paris with instructions to sign the Peace Treaty. The Allies will insist on acceptance of the Treaty within the stipulated time, but it is not improbable that the actual signing will be postponed till the end of the week to enable the new delegates to be selected. The general impression is that the signing will take place at Versailles on Friday or Saturday.

GERMANY WILL SIGN UNCONDITIONALLY.

Scheidemann had to go because he would not sign. Bauer took his place and endeavoured to secure conditions. The stern reply of the Council of Three, however, speedily disillusioned all the eleventh hour optimists and, forced to choose between two little words "Yes" and "No," Germany has decided to say "Yes."

The word to "stand down" has been passed to the nations.

During the week-end there has been more than one crisis in the German Cabinet and National Assembly. At first the National Assembly decided for signature by 237 votes to 138, five not voting. Then by 235 to 89 (the Democrats abstaining) a vote of confidence in the Government was passed.

The Centre Party held another meeting, however, and by 64 to 14 voted for refusing to sign. The Majority Socialists decided for unconditional signature.

The receipt of the Allies' final warning note, however, removed whatever hopes that may have been felt that the Allies would concede the two points, and at yesterday afternoon's meeting of the National Assembly at Weimar the Government decided to sign unconditionally.

EX-KAISER WILLING TO BE TRIED.

The ex-Kaiser is reported to have sent a special emissary from Amerongen urging the German Government to accept the Peace Treaty. He points out that refusal to sign would entail the complete downfall and disruption of Germany whereas acceptance would leave some hope of rehabilitation. It is understood that the ex-Kaiser counselled unconditional acceptance, including the clauses providing for the trial of himself and others.

GERMANY VIOLATES THE ARMISTICE.

WARSHIPS SCUTTLED.

Germany has violated the armistice in a startling manner by the scuttling of all the surrendered warships which have been lying at Scapa Flow, in the Orkney Islands, for the past seven months. It is a deliberate act of war on the very eve of the signing of the Peace terms!

There was a time when the British nation in general and the British navy in particular would have rejoiced to see the German Navy act up to the true naval spirit. The naval spirit is "never surrender," but the German Navy, which was afraid to come out and fight, crept across the North Sea and ignominiously surrendered. Had the ships then been scuttled the act would have been accounted to them for righteousness and the Germany navy would have retained a few shreds of honour.

They again chose, however, the craven path, and be it noted that Admiral Reuter, far from having the spirit to go down with the ships he was "saving from dishonour," was the first man ashore!

Of course Germany will disclaim the responsibility, otherwise the war would automatically resume. As for the sinking of the ships, it is an unorthodox start towards limitation of armaments.

What action will be taken by the Allies remains to be seen. Already there is an outburst of satisfaction in Germany which later will probably be tempered by an addition to the indemnity of a few hundred million pounds sterling; while as for Admiral Reuter, there is a certain clause, No. 227, in the Peace Terms which appears to cover his case.

HOW THE FLEET WAS SCUTTLED.

BRITISH SHIPS ABSENT.

A profound sensation was caused on Saturday by the news that all but twenty-six ships of the German fleet which in November last, to their eternal dishonour, ignominiously surrendered without striking a blow and has since been lying in Scapa Flow, had been scuttled by the skeleton crews.

The Admiralty announced late on Saturday night that on Saturday afternoon certain of the interned German ships had been sunk and abandoned by their crews, who had been detained in safe custody.

A later statement says that according to the latest reports received from Scapa Flow all the interned battleships and battle cruisers have been sunk except the battleship Baden, which is still afloat. Five light cruisers were sunk, but three others were beached. Eighteen destroyers were also beached by local tugs and four destroyers are still afloat. The remainder of the destroyers are sunk.

The German Rear Admiral and most of the Germans from the ships are in custody on British warships.

Some boats from some of the ships refused to stop when ordered. They were consequently fired on and a small number of Germans were killed and wounded.

In accordance with the terms of the armistice the surrendered German ships were interned with skeleton crews as caretakers and without British guards aboard.

According to unofficial reports practically the whole fleet is sunk, only twenty-six out of seventy-three vessels remaining afloat, viz. one battleship, three light cruisers and twenty-two destroyers. Witnesses in the vicinity of the anchorage state that the German flag was hoisted as the crews proceeded to sink the vessels. A message from Thurso says the fleet was scuttled by the crews opening the seacocks, after which the men swam ashore.

A Kirkwall correspondent says that the Naval authorities have refused all information, but it is understood that all the Germans were rescued and taken aboard British warships now lying at Scapa. It is stated that arrangements had been made to board the German fleet on Monday night should the Peace terms be accepted. The ships would then have passed automatically to the Allies, but the Germans anticipated matters. The scuttling was carried out while the British ships were at sea for exercises.

The following were the battleships and armoured cruisers interned at Scapa Flow:—Bayern, König, Grosser Kurfürst, Markgraf, Kronprinz Wilhelm, Kaiserin Friedrich der Grosse, König Albert, Prinzregent, Luitpold, Mackensen, Hindenburg, Derfflinger, Seydlitz, Moltke, von der Thann, Brummer, Bremse, Emden, Köln, Mainz, Karlsruhe, Bremen and Dresden.

The hoisting of the German imperial flag gave the signal to the crew to scuttle the ships. The first ship sank shortly after midday and the last at 4.30 p.m.

LOOKED AFTER No. 1.

An eye-witness of the event states that the German Admiral was the first to get ashore. He then asked the men at the aviation station to go out and rescue some German sailors who were in difficulties. Early yesterday morning violent explosions occurred at the spot where one German warship sank.

FRENCH INDIGNATION.

In Paris the news of the sinking of the warships at Scapa produced great astonishment and fierce indignation amongst the Allied Peace Delegates, especially rousing French anger. The French had counted on receiving a number of vessels to rehabilitate their own fleet. A member of the British Delegation said that the scuttling was obviously the result of a deliberately concerted plot. It demonstrates once again that the German spirit is as evil, treacherous and untrustworthy as ever. The sinking at this critical juncture is one of the worst blunders the Germans have committed and it will only make the Allies more implacable than ever.

American Naval circles regard the scuttling as a striking illustration of German treachery.

It is announced that Admiral Reuter has stated that he understood that the armistice had been terminated and that he personally accepts full responsibility for the sinkings, which were done in accordance with orders given at the beginning of the war that no German warship should be surrendered!

KURDISTAN CUTTING OUT EXPEDITION.

BRITISH PRISONERS RESCUED.

The War Office announces that a force under General Fraser, detached from the Army of Occupation in Mesopotamia, defeated the Kurdish Levies in the Bazayn Pass on June 18th, taking one hundred prisoners and three machine guns. The British losses were slight. Our cavalry occupied Sheikh Mahmuds the same evening, rescuing the British officers and men who were captured by Kurds last month.

Martial Law was proclaimed in Winnipeg on Saturday night after a fight between the police and a mob numbering ten thousand. During the encounters one man was killed and many injured.

MYSTERIOUS DEATH OF A W.A.A.C.

GUNSHOT WOUNDS.

News has been received at Luton of the death under mysterious circumstances of Miss Annie Smith, daughter of a Luton hat manufacturer. The girl was serving in Queen Mary's Army Auxiliary Corps at Dieppe. Her body was found under the cliffs on June 13th.

The first news was received from the Unit Administrator, who stated that it was supposed the girl had fallen over the cliffs. The next message, however, was from the Records Officer who stated that death was due to gunshot wounds.

The conflicting reports have caused great alarm to the parents, who have gone to Dieppe. On the body was found a note from the girl's parents granting permission to their daughter to marry a Canadian staff-sergeant who intended bringing the girl to London for the wedding. Subsequently a comrade of the deceased wrote, "I know that she placed every trust in the man she was going to marry, but she is being most wickedly deceived."

ANOTHER ARMISTICE VIOLATION IN BERLIN.

FRENCH FLAGS BURNT.

It will be remembered that by one of the clauses in the Peace Treaty Germany undertokes to return to France certain flags and banners captured from the French in the war of 1870.

Yesterday five persons, who up to the present are unknown, entered the Zeughaus at Berlin and removed a number of the flags as stipulated in the Peace Treaty. They carried them to a space in front of the monument to Frederick the Great and there burned them.

AMIR'S REPLY TO ARMISTICE TERMS.

The India Office announces that the Amir's reply to the Vice roy's terms for an armistice, while affording a basis for peace negotiations, raises points requiring consideration by the Government. The Viceroy has been authorized to address a further communication to the Amir agreeing to receive Afghan delegates at Rawal Pindi as soon as the Fast of Ramazan is over.

NORTH RUSSIAN SUCCESS.

General Maynard has telegraphed that on June 19th a bold flanking movement was carried out and the town of Kartashi was captured. The Bolshevists suffered severely, their losses including fifty prisoners and twenty killed. The remainder of the garrison fled in confusion. Four machine guns were captured. We had only one casualty.

TRANSPORT CREWS STRIKE.

The crews of the Belgian Mail packets, Princess Henrietta and Princess Clementine, which were used as hospital ships during the war, struck at Dover on Saturday for higher wages. In consequence 1,600 troops which were taken aboard the latter vessel at Folkestone had to disembark. During the war the crews worked under the British Government and received a bonus, but now, under their own Government, the bonus has been discontinued.

EMDEN'S CAPTAIN MOBBED.

Captain Müller, who commanded the original cruiser Emden, which did so much damage in the Indian ocean before being captured by the Australian Cruiser Sydney, addressed a meeting organised by Pan-Germanists at Frankfurt on Saturday. His remarks displeased the audience, which assumed a hostile attitude. Müller had to be protected by soldiers, who conveyed him for safety to the police station.

SOVIET CONSPIRACY IN U.S.A.

The New York police raided the Communist International World workers and Socialist Headquarters on Saturday and seized a quantity of literature. Documents advocating Soviet rule were discovered, many of them being regarded by the authorities as most important.

FRENCH AERODROME BURNT OUT.

A fire broke out at St Cyr aerodrome on Saturday, destroying eighteen hangars, in which were housed over one hundred machines and a considerable quantity of spare parts. The damage exceeds a quarter of a million francs. No cause is assigned for the outbreak.

R.A.F. LUNCHEON CLUB.

Owing to the increase of membership of the Ex-Royal Air Force Officers' City Lucheon Club, removal of the club to more commodious quarters has been necessary. These have been found over the Mansion House Station, where a large luncheon-room, with a smoking and reading-room attached, has been secured. All ex-R.A.F. officers are eligible for membership, and all serving officers and members of the R.A.F. Club, Brutonstreet, are invited to use the club premises when in the City. The hon. secretary is Mr. E. W. Roberts, 1, Royal Exchange-avenue, London, E.C. 3.

A bill has been passed by the French Chamber of Deputies giving complete satisfaction to the miners. Work has been resumed throughout the Department du Nord and the Pas de Calais.

NATIONALISATION OF COAL MINES.

COMMISSION REPORTS.

The Coal Commission has acted up to its promises and delivered its report on time. Chief interest attaches to Mr. Justice Sankey's report which recommends Parliament to pass legislation enabling the Government immediately to acquire all Royalties for the State and paying compensation to the owners. It recommends that the value of each individual's interest be assessed by Government valuers with the right of appeal to a specially constituted tribunal.

The miners' representatives substantially agree with the Sankey Report but suggest that it is necessary to provide fuller representation for workers on district and national concils. The owners disagree with Nationalisation in any form as being detrimental to development. They recommend, however, that State ownership should give compensation to owners on the basis of fifteen years' purchase of the amounts received for rents and royalties, calculated on the average for the last five pre-war years.

CAPTAIN FRYATT'S FUNERAL.

PUBLIC CEREMONY.

The Great Eastern Railway Company, working on behalf of and in conjunction with the Admiralty, the Foreign Office, and the Board of Trade, have in hand arrangements for the public funeral of Captain Fryatt which, it is hoped, will make the occasion one worthy of the gallant mercantile captain who suffered death at the hands of the Germans as the penalty of patriotism. Details of the arrangements are not yet completed, but the following is an outline:

The coffin will be brought on a destroyer from Antwerp to Dover on July 7, and a procession will be formed, and will move from the Naval Pier to the Marine Station, where the coffin will remain during the night. On the following day it will be placed in a black-draped coach, attached to a special train, which will convey it to Charing Cross.

At the London terminus another procession will escort it to St. Paul's Cathedral, where the first portion of the funeral service will be conducted by the Dean at noon. Representatives of the Royal family and the Lord Mayor will attend. At the conclusion of the service the procession will re-form, and proceed to Liverpool-street Station, where a second special train will be waiting to convey the coffin to Captain Fryatt's home at Dovercourt. On arrival it will be borne from the station to the Upper Dovercourt Churchyard for interment.

Further details of the arrangements will be published as soon as they are completed.

CANADIANS ENDEAVOUR TO ATONE.

On behalf of the Canadian Red Cross Society, the chairman of the Epsom Urban Council on Saturday handed a cheque for £200 to the family of the late Police-sergeant Green. The letter received by the chairman from the Chief Commissioner of the Society contained the following: "May I express to you the regret we feel for the cowardly attack made on your police-station last Tuesday night, and how deeply we all resent the disgrace that this handful of men have brought on Canadians overseas."

OFFICERS PENSIONS.

The Air Ministry announces that demobilised officers who claim to be suffering from a disability due to, or aggravated by, war service, may, notwithstanding their original statement to the contrary, on Army Form Z22, submit a claim for pension. Such claims should be forwarded to the Officers' Pension Branch, New North-street, Theobalds-road, W.C. 1, in order that a medical board may be arranged. All claims should be accompanied by details of rank, medical category on joining, and last unit.

ORIGINAL "SHINY SEVENTH" HOME.

London gave a hearty welcome to the 7th Battalion London Regiment, "the Shiny Seventh," whose cadre arrived at London Bridge Station from Belgium on Saturday. The cadre, commanded by Major W. R. Bootnby, and composed of thirty other ranks, who had gone to France in March, 1915, as part of the 47th Division, marched through the City with bayonets fixed and colours unfurled. At the Mansion House the salute was taken by the Lord Mayor, while the regimental band played their own march past. Afterwards they proceeded to Finsbury-square, some 200 former members of the battalion, now demobilised, marching with them.

UNIVERSITY FELLOWSHIP FOR BRITISH WOMEN.

The London Press announces with evidence of sincere gratification that a "Rose Sedgwick" memorial fellowship for graduate study in art has been founded by an American university for women in memory of Miss Sedgwick, one of two women members of the British educational mission which last year visited the United States. Miss Sedgwick died of pneumonia on the eve of her return to England.

The fellowship is to be awarded annually to a British woman for one year of graduate research work at an American college or university, with the definite object of drawing closer the bonds of friendship and understanding between England and America and of commemorating the services of one who gave her life in the cause.

The fellowship has been subscribed for by every college and university visited by Miss Sedgwick.

ATLANTIC FLIERS' RECEPTION AT WINDSOR.

ETON BOYS' WELCOME.

Windsor has witnessed many popular receptions of distinguished personages who have visited the Castle from time to time, but no more enthusiastic demonstration than that accorded by the Eton boys to the Atlantic airmen, Captain Alcock and Lieutenant Brown. As soon as the airmen were seated in the Royal carriage which was to take them to the Castle, the Eton boys practically surrounded the carriage, and ran with it out of the station yard, along the High-street and up Castle Hill, cheering vociferously all the while. They accompanied the carriage until it entered the Grand Quadrangle, when they gave the occupants a final cheer.

On arrival at the Castle the airmen were presented to the Prince of Wales, who shook hands and congratulated the airmen on the splendid success which attended their Atlantic flight. In one of the drawing-rooms they were presented to the King, who conferred upon them the Knight Commandership of the Order of the British Empire. The usual ceremony was observed, the airmen bending before his Majesty, who touched each recipient on the shoulder with his sword as he knighted them, remarking that it was at his own suggestion the Order had been conferred on them. The King then chatted with the new knights about their experiences on the historic flight, and expressed the pleasure it had given him to know that British airmen had been the first to fly direct across the Atlantic. The Queen also shook hands with the airmen, and congratulated them on their successful flight.

After having luncheon with Lord Avondale and Lady Minto, Sir John Alcock and Sir Whitten Brown left the Castle in a Royal carriage, and proceeded to the station, where a special train was in readiness to convey them to Paddington.

TROUBLE AT A LABOUR CENTRE.

MILITARY MEASURES.

In consequence of disturbances at the Eastern command labour centre at Sutton, Surrey, which culminated in the men refusing to obey orders, a battalion of the Cheshire Regt. and a battalion of Welsh Guards were sent there yesterday. The camp was placed under armed guard and this morning the men were marched under escort to the station and entrained for Canterbury, Dover and elsewhere. Nearly four hundred ringleaders were placed under military arrest.

The men's alleged grievance is that they have not been demobilized, but the authorities largely attribute the agitation and disturbance to men who, having previously worked on munitions and never been out of the country, now object to going to France to relieve those who have been there for some time.

MASKED MEN AT A HOSPITAL.

Mr. W. J. Curry, an accountant at Guys' Hospital, was the victim of a dastardly attack by two masked men, whose object is presumed to have been robbery. The incident occurred between five and six o'clock. At the time Mr. Curry was in the counting-house of the hospital. The door opened suddenly, and two men, carrying revolvers and wearing masks over their faces, entered the room. They pointed their revolvers at the accountant, who at once dashed at the intruders, and a struggle ensued. Apparently the men had hoped to frighten Mr. Curry by the display of firearms for they did not make any effort to use the weapons when they were tackled. Instead, one of them seized a fire-shovel and the other used a bar of some heavy material. With these weapons they struck Mr. Curry repeatedly about the head, inflicting injuries which later needed medical attention. In the struggle Mr. Curry succeded in tearing the masks from the faces of the men before they escaped from the room. He called for help during the encounter, but the men got away before assistance arrived.

FURTHER APPEAL TO EMPLOYERS.

The War Office is again appealing to employers to promise to keep open the situations of men in India so as to relieve their minds of anxiety as to their future. Demobilizable men are not being kept in India for the Army of Occupation. Their services are necessary only while the present situation continues and will be dispensed with at the earliest possible moment.

NOVEL PEACE CELEBRATION.

The Rev. J. Cartmel-Robinson, vicar of St. Michael's, Bedford Park. W., is arranging a novel peace celebration. He is inviting his parishioners, and anybody else who cares to come, to an all-night dance outside his parish hall on August Bank Holiday. He will provide a band and illuminations, and in the hall refreshments will be served.

Mr. Cartmel-Robinson says he has no patience with people who go about with a tear-bottle in one hand and a Bible in the other.

"What is wrong with dancing? It is a great mistake to think that dancing is immoral. David danced, you know. Why shouldn't people be happy? If the dances prove a success on Bank Holiday night, I shall repeat the entertainment on the following night."

RESUMPTION OF TRADE RELATIONS.

At a meeting of the Supreme Economic Council at Paris it was decided that the question as to whether they would permit their nationals to resume trade relations with Germany within the limits laid down by the blockade was one for the competent authority of each Allied and Associated Country.

In the event of any country granting such permission it was deemed desirable that all other countes should ribe so informed.

THE SUNKEN FLEET.

We seem as far as ever from an understanding of the German mind. From the beginning till the end of this campaign our foes have sprung surprises upon us.

Their latest exploit is dramatic. The German navy was surrendered to our keeping and lay in Scapa Flow — an emblem of the Allies' triumph. Battleships, cruisers, destroyers, they had failed in heroism and now were safe in Britain's haven. They were "like painted ships upon a painted sea."

Then suddenly they were no more. The crews that manned them vented their spite on the poor inglorious craft and doomed it to the sure keeping of Davy Jones.

What can we say? Our admiration for all kinds of people is so great that we are always tempted to think kindly of the wildest caprices of desperate men. Yet somehow we cannot call this exploit plucky, for it breaks the rules of the game. And that is what Englishman cannot stand.

The destruction of the German navy is a flagrant violation of the terms of the Armistice. Germany claimed a cessation of hostilities for she could not keep up the pace, and she was given her request. She was spared shame and desolation by an armistice, and now she has broken the armistice that spared her. Even Germany cannot have it both ways.

Again, it is an inopportune and cowardly business, for it was perpetrated at the very moment when the armistice was blossoming into Peace. It is, indeed, a futile exhibition of ill-nature and spleen. The German navy could not help the Fatherland in time of war and it would not help in paying the price of peace.

Lastly, it is a symptom that real, hearty "pluck" is not known in Germany as it should be known. There was a time for pluck, and had it been shown at the right time every Jack Tar would have cheered it. That time was marked by two dates—August 4th 1914 and November 11th 1918.

The German navy is covered, but it is not covered with glory. "Willing to wound, and yet afraid to strike"— that has been its motto. And history is inexorable in its epithets.

GERMANY'S GUILT.

In endeavouring to put up a good case for themselves, the Germans make a great to-do about the documents which they state they discovered amongst the state archives at Brussels.

These documents, it is declared, prove that Great Britain and France had made all the necessary plans to invade or pass through Belgium, in order to forestall the German advance. Belgium was a consenting partner to the crime, and therefore the whole Allied case against the German violation of Belgian neutrality falls to the ground.

This briefly is the German argument. Probably, when the time comes, the Belgian Government will have some rather cogent comment to make upon this wonderful story.

What is so far certain is, that the German Government, when they published these documents, deliberately altered the text, so as to make Belgium appear as a guilty participant in the world plot against a peace-loving and undefended Germany.

It is therefore all the more instructive that, just at this juncture, there should have appeared Herr von Bethmann Hollweg's "Considerations on the World War." He makes the following striking admission in reply to the criticism of the language which he used regarding the wrong done to Belgium.

He remarks: "Even if the documents found in the Belgian archives were much more compromising to the Entente than they actually were, they would only have absolved Germany from her obligation of respecting the neutrality guarantees of 1839, but we should still have been unjustified in invading Belgium."

Incidentally Bethmann Hollweg refers to the ineffectiveness of these documents as a weapon in Germany's propaganda armoury, and remarks, "We published these documents as soon as we found them in Brussels, but I have not noticed that enemy propaganda suffered on that account to any extent worth noting."

So that the Chancellor's admission made at the outbreak of the war still remains as a standing proof of Germany's guilt: "The wrong which we are now committing will be made good later on. Necessity knows no law."

GOLDEN OPPORTUNITIES.

A letter appeared in our last issue strongly urging all ranks of the Rhine Army to avail themselves of the opportunity while living in a foreign land to acquire its language.

This is sound sane advice. How many will profit by it?

The bulk of our personnel in the Army of Occupation is very young. Nearly everyone is acquainted — and that often imperfectly — with his Mother tongue and no other.

Lacking all knowledge of French in France or German in Germany makes it is impossible to get the most out of one's stay in either country.

One misses the significance of what is going on around one. There is a certain feeling of strangeness and isolation.

To learn a foreign language at home is not easy, and Britishers are perhaps the worst linguists in the world. There are reasons for this, besides the national disinclination to study.

When we go abroad we find that shopkeepers, hotel and railway servants — especially in the big places — possess at least a smattering of English. Thus we are saved the trouble of acquiring any other language.

But once get away from the regular run of tourist-frequented districts with a knowledge of merely one's native tongue one is often in a sad dilemma.

Then again, without some knowledge of the language, all the literature of the country, including even its newspapers, is a sealed book.

In a word, unless while on the Rhine, German is learnt, one is wasting one's time and all the golden opportunities pertaining to foreign residence.

Before the War there were very many who would have given much to have been assured a sojourn of months abroad. Thousands never dreamt that they would ever have the luck to travel anywhere out of England.

Now that the chances of war have brought this good fortune to them they do not seem to realise what it means from the educational point of view. The unique opportunity is within their grasp. Do they realise it?

To go back with a working knowledge of German or French may prove an asset that should be helpful to every young soldier in the Rhine Army.

Life is not all sport or concert parties. It is a grim struggle for most of us, and those best equipped mentally will prove the victors.

POINTS OF HONOUR.

It is reported that the German National Assembly at Weimar has voted by a majority of 99 in favour of signing the treaty. It is said, almost in the same breath, that the new Ministry cannot recognize the responsibility of Germany and her allies for the war, nor for handing over persons accused of violations of the Law of Nations to be tried.

It depends upon what form this repudiation of responsibility is to take whether the signature of the treaty will be a compliance with the Allied Powers' demands. If the German National Assembly has authorized the signature of the document with the reservation of the clauses referring to these matters, and does not intend to fulfil them, that is not a signature of the treaty as it stands.

If on the other hand all that is meant is that Germany will add a protest against these clauses, that is to be expected, and is immaterial, as long as she binds herself by the signature of the treaty to do all that is required of her to carry these clauses into execution. She cannot be heard, having signed the treaty as it stands, to say that she is not bound by clauses against which she merely protests.

We take it that the latest report is true and the Assembly voted for the Treaty to be signed unconditionally. Truly, this point of honour is a little empty now. The time for scruples about collective German honour was long ago, before she set greedy and irreverent hands to tear it to tatters before the world.

Honour went by the board when, in spite of the report of von Wiesner to the Austrian Foreign Minister that no proofs could be discovered that Serbia had any part or share in the murder of the Austrian archduke, "but on the contrary grounds which weaken such a supposition," Vienna and Berlin made Serbia's refusal to submit to everyone of the unheard of terms imposed upon her, a pretext for war.

Honour had fled, when Belgium was violated under pretences acknowledged now to have been false. Honour's face was veiled when to violation was added outrage and rapine in that unfortunate land, and Belgian civilians were made to march in front of German troops against their own countrymen. Where was there room for honour in the men who carried out the "U boat" war against hospital ships and traders? What honour had or could ever have, the men who murdered Captain Fryatt, who deported more than a thousand civilians — women among them — from Lille? No, to speak of honour in regard to Germany's conduct of the war is to bastardize a fine word. To attempt to repudiate the parentage of the war after its miscarriage is futile in the face of the evidence of their own state documents and the consensus of the world which had the liberty and material to judge these things when they were done. It is merely the antics and cross-gartering of a Malvolio. True honour for Germany lies in keeping the pact to which she is putting her hand.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

WHY DO WE TIP?

Sir,—Are we never to be delivered from the curse of tipping?

Englishmen appear to think it necessary always to pay for any services rendered, however small, and one might add, however bad.

Whatever may be said for the habit at home under normal conditions, can be very little, I think.

But here in an occupied country surrounded by enemies! Here we are, giving our own money to our opponents, to help them pay the costs of the war. The situation is ludicrous.

What is the reason?

It is that the Englishman feels uncomfortable unless he bestows a tip on the waiter—even in the clubs, where tips are supposed to be prohibited—because he is afraid that the waiter will be disappointed if he receives nothing!

Or does he consider it bad form not to tip, and that such an offence will smirch his respectability?

But nobody likes it. Then why do it?

SEACOCK.

THE OPERA HOUSE—A LAST WORD.

Sir,—Like A. W. Richmond, your latest correspondent wilfully misses the whole point of the argument in order to make disparaging comments on those who so annoyed him by possessing a sense of humour.

The point that concerns me personally is that you cannot logically expect absolute silence during the performance of comic opera.

I have lately seen two performances at the Opera House, 'Die Walkure' and 'Lohengrin', and that portion of the audience near me paid them both the respect they so richly deserved. But I shall always hope that both of your correspondents will be surrounded by a 'Light-hearted crowd of both sexes' if they ever again attend a performance of say, 'Rigolette' or 'Figaro'.

Different Operas attract different audiences, and I recommend that your correspondents leave comic opera severely alone until they can cultivate a stronger sense of humour than they appear to possess at present.

MENS CONSCIA RECTI.

A POINT FOR THE E.F.C.

Sir,—It would be interesting for hundreds of troops, who can only get to Cologne on week-ends for purchasing articles at the British Expeditionary Force Canteen, to know why Saturday has been chosen for stocktaking.

I was there on Saturday last, with scores of others, who had travelled from different parts to make purchases because they were unable to obtain more than small quantities in their own canteens.

Could not more convenient arrangements be made?

W.H.F.

LINKED BY THE AIR.

Sir,—By the wonderful achievement of our airmen in crossing the Atlantic, the cousins, England and America are in closer touch with each other now by both sea and air, than ever before.

Whatever may have been the little squabbles between us in the past, we now shake hands, as it were, across the vast Atlantic.

The Americans are as good sportsmen as we are; we both love fair play, whether it be a question of sport or war. If one beats the other, the victors never fail to cheer the vanquished. And that is the spirit of true sportsmanship.

But the American eagle has claws that are quite as ready to scratch as those of the British lion. I imagine that our foes would be the first to acknowledge this.

We must remember, both of us, that a "League of Nations" cannot prevent future wars. Man has quarrelsome moods which are inexplicable, and fighting is Nature's safety valve.

The Americans are, indeed, worthy of our esteem and there is blood-relationship between us.

WHY NOT COMIC OPERA?

Sir,—May I say a few words as to the type of theatrical fare provided in Cologne?

We have been treated to drama, farce, revue, and last, but not least, grand opera.

So far, however, two popular forms of entertainment appear to have been neglected.—I refer to comic opera and musical comedy.

There must be hundreds of music lovers who find grand opera just a little too "heavy" especially when given in German. Why not strike the happy medium by introducing the above types of entertainment.

As regards comic opera, I think Gilbert and Sullivan would be particularly welcome and evidence of this was forthcoming at a recent concert at the British Empire Leave Club when a selection from "The Gondoliers" was enthusiastically received.

A SULLIVANITE.

ANOTHER PLEA FOR AIRSHIPS.

Sir,—'Heavier than Air' is wrong. 'Lighter than Air' is right. Airships are certainly for most purposes superior to aeroplanes.

For naval work airships have done more useful work than seaplanes and flying boats, and even for army work airships for a long time did useful night bombing work, and with helium they will continue to do so.

As 'Lighter than Air' points out, people have no idea of the enormous strides made in airship development during the war. Speed has risen from 50 knots to 75. Useful lift from about 5 tons to 30, duration from 30 hours up to 5 days in the air, and height of climb from 10,000 feet to 22,000 while aeroplanes have not improved in anything like the same degree.

As for the Zeppelins, they were one of the greatest successes in the war, and our own naval airships have done just as fine work over the North Sea, — to name only one theatre of their operations — as the aeroplanes in France, and without any booming from the Press.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

"The Owlers" at Cuchenheim.

Quite the most unique thing in dances was the new Salome dance which Lieut. Palin (Esme) and Dr Fulton (Maggie) gave at Cuchenheim the other evening. I was very pleased with the performance, especially the cinema drama burlesque. Pte. Corner as the "Producer" and Pioneer Evans as "Props" were exceedingly funny. Bomdr. Pawson, as usual, was a big attraction with his blue-clad "friend." Last evening "The Owlers" gave another successful show at Odendorf, introducing several new numbers from the latest London revues.

Dancing.

Another excellent dancing class was held at the B.E.L.C., on Friday last, several new pupils presenting themselves for tuition. Thanks to Cpl. Heather, who is an excellent teacher, Sergt.-Major Flegate, Pte. Price, and Ptes. Tolson and Collins, who render the music, the classes are a great success. Two N.C.O.s called, by the way, who were anxious to learn the best methods of teaching the art to soldiers of their battalion who wished to attend the real dances at the B.E.L.C.

Too Funny for Words.

This little "Cliche" is an impression of "Bert Warning, the popular comedian, in one of his latest numbers. Late of "The Balmorals," he is a great acquisition to "The Pedlars," scoring an instantaneous success on his first appearance with them, as a comedy parson. Now an established favourite with the troops, from the moment he makes his appearance on the stage until he leaves it he keeps them in convulsions of mirth. His humour is clean and bright, while his facial expressions and mannerisms are remarkable, and we fear the day when "demob" may come and rob us of such a fount of amusement.

The Tell Tales.

The concert Party of the 21st Bde., "The Tell Tales," are becoming quite well known. They added another success to their long list of achievements on Friday last at Roilzheim. Lieut. Tidecombe as Teddy, Cpl. Onch (late of Fred Allandale's concert party), Bdr. Cunningham, a comedian, and Gunner Robinson, a tenor are four really clever artistes. Sig. Snow plays "Marjorie"—an adorable flapper, while Bdr. Bunson is the accompanist. For a provincial party, I thought the staging and effects very good.

Something New.

When the colonel forms an orchestra and also plays a prominent part, be sure there's something doing. Lieut.-Col. R. T. Telly, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., has formed an orchestra with the 12th Loyal North Lancs, and a successful start was made the other evening for a series of impromptu orchestra and vocal concerts arranged by Capt. W. Harkess. In the vocal sphere the second-in-command, Lieut.-Col. W. H. Murphey, D.S.O., sang "Mandalay" exceedingly well, 2/Lt. C. H. Donnellan gave us "Somewhere in Somerset," while Ptes. Burrows and Stoughton are two singers of much talent. Ptes. Hands, Spink, and Webster also contributed. By-the-bye, Shiel Anderson, Jack Streets, and Billy French (three of the old "Chequers"), in addition, helped in the success of the show. One hopes to see more of "The Loyals."

"Q"—A Story.

Last evening at the Deutsches Theatre "The Crumps" began their week's show with a particularly successful 'first night! I say particularly successful advisedly, because they are up against a big proposition in the counter-attraction of the "Apollo" revue. "Q"—described as a psychic p'story of the p'supernatural—was the main feature of the performance.

One of the O.R'S.

Wilhelm Backhaus, the world-renowned pianist, now in Cologne, was, I believe, just an ordinary soldier in the German army. He was eventually promoted to Unteroffizier and placed in charge of a permanent guard over some horses. A man, truly, in his time plays many parts—especially in a military sphere.

Anti-Ragtime.

A correspondent writes me thus: "I have often felt that I would like to give vent to an expression of resentment with regard to the attitude of some of the 'Rag' specialists who frequent places where real, good, solid music is produced.

I must say that I am very pleased to know that someone has put a word in, for real good music. Now what is finer than the outpourings of those real passionate strains which are the reproduction of nature itself? Nothing.

The real reason for my writing is to appeal to the common sense of the aforementioned 'Rag' specialists, to just consider that there are places where their stuff can be had, and on the few occasions when music may be listened to, I would ask them to act with decency, bearing in mind that all good music is sacred."

In few Words.

To-morrow evening at 7 p.m., Dr. Francis is to give his third "Travel in all Continents" Talk at the Loreley Hall, Y.M.C.A., (Central).

That well-known violinist, Gunner Alfred Barker is assisting, I see, the Rhine Army Choral Society Concert on Friday in addition to his activities as a member of "The Tabs" Concert Party.

Owing to movement of troops it is announced that most of the fixtures in the Big Hall (Central Y.M.C.A.) are cancelled and replaced by cinema.

SERVICES' GREAT MARATHON RACE.

WON BY MACHINE GUNNER.

PREVIOUS HOLDER COLLAPSES IN WINDSOR—LONDON CONTEST.

At the Sports Meeting at Stamford Bridge on Saturday the great event was the Marathon race from Windsor to London. The previous holder, Djebelia, an African, hailing from Tunis failed to finish, in consequence of cramp at Ealing. RACING FACTS AND FANCIES.

BY "JERRY M."

It is stated that Mr. Bottomley backed his horse "Aynesley" to win a small fortune in the "Manchester Cup" won by "By Jingo."

* * *

Quite a sensation was caused on settling day, when the news of the objection to "By Jingo" flashed round.

* * *

Sir A. Black, I am pleased to hear, is out again Though naturally disappointed at "The Panther' display in the Derby, he took the defeat in a sporting spirit, and, in a letter to his trainer, said, "It is the fortune of war." The "Panther's" next outing will be in the Irish Derby on June 25th.

* * *

"All Alone" we fear is over-rated, for although backed down to favourite he made no show against "By Jingo." But although sympathizing with his fair owner, one feels sure that, after a rest, he can be placed to win a nice race. It was asking perhaps a little too much of the horse to run him at Manchester just a week after his gruelling race over the "iron Bound" Epsom course.

* * *

The match "Irish Elegance" versus "Syndrian" Trainers up catch weights, over five and a half furlongs ought to prove an interesting affair, Loates will be able to give "Syndrian" professional assistance, and will doubtless have an advantage in weight. But if Cottril "sticks on" I think "His Elegance" will do the rest.

* * *

Dont be surprised if "Bright News" wins a sprint race very soon. I noticed him well up with the leaders in "Irish Elegance's" race on Saturday. He raced wide on the stand side, and may not have been generally noticed.

41st M.G.C's 100 RUNS VICTORY.

41st Battalion M.G.C. and 208th Sqdn. R.A.F. played a friendly game of cricket at Heumar. The M.G.C. were in excellent form, and, thanks to the batting by Major Boumphrey (54), Major A.G. Barry (31), Lieut. T.E. Andrews (25), and Lieut. M.J. Hanson (18 not out) the good score of 164 was made. Lieut. Russel Rigby (3 wickets for 25) was the most successful bowler. The 208th Sqdrn. R.A.F. put up a fair show, but could do little against the bowling of Driver Gorrard (6 wickets for 31) and were all out for 63. The outstanding batter of the R.A.F. was Lieut. Russel Rigby (27 not out).

BATTALION SPORTS.

51st LEICESTERSHIRE REGIMENT.

With the kind permission of Lieut.-Col. Dumbell, D.S.O., the 51st Bn. Leicestershire Regt. carried out their annual Regimental Sports at Euskirchen last week. The regimental band was in attendance and played a number of very appreciative selections. The whole proceedings were carried out in a very efficient manner and reflected great credit on the part of the sports president and committee. JUMPING AND TENT-PEGGING.

152 BRIGADE R.F.A. SPORTS MEETING AT HENNIF.

The 152 Brigade R.F.A., Eastern Division, who are temporarily camped at Hennif, held the first of a series of sports on Friday. Jumping and tent-pegging were the items, and these were watched with keen interest by a large crowd of spectators.

In the jumping there were several "jibbers," especially amongst the horses ridden by N.C.O's and men. Some fine jumping, however, was shown by the officers' mounts, and, in this class, Major Tanner carried off the first prize, his horse showing very pretty action and clearing the obstacles with apparently little effort. Lieut. Cowley made a good second. In the items for N.C.O's and men the results were:—1, B.S.M. Smith; 2, Signaller Sefton; 3, tie between R.S.M. Worsfold and S.M. Sumner.

A fine display.

The tent-pegging created a great amount of interest and enthusiasm. Lieut. Gilbert gave a fine display, and, altough unlucky in the first run, he secured two perfect pegs and took premier place amid loud applause. Capt. Wilson came in a good second. A run in pairs between Lieuts. Gilbert and Chaldecott resulted in the peg being carried by the first-named officer. An amusing bit of friendly rivalry was shown between Lieut. Graver and R.S.M. Worsfold, and the latter ultimately won the points amid enthusiasm.

"COLOGNE POST" CUP MATCHES.

FOUR WICKETS WITH FOUR CONSECUTIVE BALLS.

The match between Mid. Div. H.Q. and 269 A.E Coy. (IX Corps H.Q.,) resulted in a win for the former by 6 wickets. The Coy. batted first and compiled only 35, thanks to the remarkably good bowling by Pte. Ashmore, who captured 8 wickets for 10 runs. Besides achieving the "hat trick," he secured four wickets with as many balls, and five with 6 balls. The Mid. Div. side had no difficulty in making runs, surpassing the Coy.'s effort without the loss of any wickets, and scoring in all 112 for four, thus winning easily by 6 wickets. Chief scorers for the winners were Wheatley (39), Ashmore (20) and Best (19).

"D" CORPS SIEGE PARK (93 for 5 wickets) v. 1/1 NORTH MIDLAND H.B. R.G.A. (90). On the latter's ground in the 4th round of the C.P.C.C The 1/1 North Midland H.B. put up 90 runs principally due to the excellent batting of Sergt. Simms and Lieut. Simmons, who scored 24 and 35 respectively. Sergt. Mumford, Lieut. Graves, and Pte. Stubbs bowled well for the Siege Park team. After enjoying an excellent tea provided by the homesters, the Siege Park XI opened with Sergts. Dickinson and Payne, who carried the score to 45 before Dickinson was bowled by McGuire for 23, compiled by excellent strikes. Pte. Williams gave most of the assistance to Pte. Payne in carrying the score to 93 for 5 wickets, leaving "D" Siege Park winners by 5 wickets for 3 runs. Payne scored a well-played 38. Lieut. Simmons and Bmdr. McGuire bowled consistently well for 1/1 North Midland H.B.

145 SIEGE BATTERY v. IX CORPS TROOPS M.T. COY., on the latter's ground at Euskirchen on Saturday. For the M.T.'s, Major Dyer (15) and Privates Cox and Frewin (11 each) were the principal scorers. Gnr. Lemons (31), Capt. Robson (20), and Gnr. Robinson (10) were the leading batsmen for the gunners. Gnr. Lemons took 8 wickets for 20 runs.

29th MACHINE GUN BN. (135 for 6 wickets) v. 31st LABOUR GROUP (53). Only Pte. Withington (24) and Pte. Piper (14) made anything like a stand for the 31st Labour Group, against the bowling of Cpl. Sadler, who took five wickets for 22 runs, and Lieut. Astill, four for 27. For the M.G.'s, Pte. Durant hit fourteen 4's out of his total of 62. Pte. James (32) and Lieut. Archibald (14 not out) also played splendid cricket.

77 SIEGE BATTERY (81) v. 488 SIEGE BATTERY (12) at Godesburg on Saturday. For 77 Siege Battery Cpl. Fenton (22) and Signaller Mills (27) batted very well. 488 Siege Battery, on going to the wicket, could do very little against the bowling of Sergt. Garmousway and Cpl. Fenton, the whole side being out for 12 runs, Fenton taking 4 wickets for 3 runs and Garmousway 4 wickets for 8 runs. The fielding of both sides was very smart. For the losers, Timms took 4 wickets for 18; William 4 for 32; and Lieut. Mills 1 for 5.

Victory Loan
"A Lucky dip"

HERE is the finest opportunity that has ever been offered to the investing public; a British Government Loan, which in addition to the high rate of interest guaranteed by the State, gives to every holder the certainty of sooner or later receiving a very substantial sum of money over and above the repayment of the whole of the capital invested.

The result of this Loan will be a very vital thing to the whole future of the country for at least a generation.

Its success will strengthen the National Finances, stimulate commerce and industry, promote employment, increase the purchasing power of money, and reduce the cost of living.

The Joy Loan offers two kinds of security:

FUNDING LOAN.—Issued at £80 per cent., to be repaid at £100 per cent. in 1960—90. Interest £4 per annum, or at the rate of 5 per cent.

VICTORY BONDS.—Issued at £85 per cent. Repayable at £100 per cent. by annual drawings, thus giving the holder of a bond bought at £85 the chance of a £15 Lucky Dip. Interest £4 per annum, making the yield on £85 equal to £4 14s. 1d. per cent.

As little as £5 may be invested through the Post Office, or as little as £50 through any bank.

Echoes from Rhineland.

Dignified "Ragtime."

Have you ever noticed that the orchestras in the cafés of Rhineland when they attempt to play ragtime airs seldom catch the spirit of syncopated melody. Their execution bears more or less a family likeness to that of grand opera? It takes a fullbloodad negro band to play ragtime with the real "snap" required but most British bandsmen come somewhere near the idea. The Germans scarcely ever.

Wayside Altars.

One of the most picturesque features of the recent Corpus Christi celebrations and processions, and one never seen in England was the erection of wayside altars in the country villages. These shrines were draped and decked with reverential care. Candles were burning and flowers and foliage strewn before each as the procession with the laity chanting litanies and the clergy carrying the Host under its silken canopy approached. Then a short impressive ceremony was held before the altar, and the procession reformed to make its way to the next altar on the route. One could not fail to notice that many of our own troops who profess to the Catholic faith saluted, as the Host passed by them.

A Quaint Ceremony.

An amusing incident was seen in a restaurant not a thousand miles from the railway station at Bonn the other day. Two young Germans attired in all their best, sat down at a table for lunch. Before giving their order to the "Kellner" they created mild consternation among the British officers present by divesting themselves almost ceremoniously of their white linen cuffs and depositing these most carefully on the floor beneath their chairs!

Sunday Troubadors.

Have you noticed the large numbers of young fellows who go out into the country on Sundays dressed in some semblance of troubador garb, with guitars slung over their shoulders? They take the early morning trains or tramcars for some miles out of town and then start on an all-day tramp along the rural roads through the forests. Their day's food they carry in packs, and as often as not are accompanied by girl friends, who also bear packs similarly filled. For miles and miles these merry parties tramp singing to the accompaniment of the guitar, returning at night tired but invigorated.

A Strange Deficiency.

A corporal in the Bedfords was saying the other day that he could not quite understand why a city of the importance of Cologne possessed no equivalent of the large variety houses we have in Great Britain. He and his comrades, since their arrival, had searched in vain for any place of amusement akin to the fine Hippodromes or Empire Palaces they have been accustomed to frequent at home. In their place there seem to be only comparatively small, low pitched cabarets where vaudeville turns are given, and where in addition to a charge for entrance one is expected to buy wine not too reasonable in price and very often not sold in less quantity than a bottle. It does seem strange that the modern British Variety Theatre has no counterpart here, though cinemas are plentiful enough.

The Popular "Eis".

There is one item in the way of refreshment in these hot days that the German appears to excel in and that is the preparation of delectable icecreams. All over the towns of Rhineland the tempting word "Eis" meets the eye. The variety of these ices also is amazing. Not just the usual vanilla and raspberry flavours but plenty of others and all attractively served up. In one resort yesterday, at least a dozen different varieties of "Eis' were on the menu card. Usually, too, one can sit in a bright clean airy cafe enjoying the tasty cool confection while listening to the strains of an orchestra. To accustomed to live in an average British town, even one as large as Cologne, the number of refreshment rooms and cafes specialising in ices and music is astonishing

Caters for Camera men.

There are plenty of photographers in the Rhine Army, and they will be glad to know that at the Kingsley Library and Camera Club in the Church House, 79 Johannis Strasse, Cologne, they can now find dark rooms for developing their films. The Club is also starting next Monday a series of lectures on elementary science, combined with outdoor Nature study with cameras, which should attract the more serious minded photographers. The Rev. W.R. Lawson C.F. is the moving spirit and would like to enrol members.

The Cheap Cigar.

One of the things that is cheap and quite excellent in Cologne and other German places in Rhineland is the native-made cigar. Numbers of our boys who seldom indulge in such a luxury at home have in consequence become regular cigar smokers. Some of them, however, have a grievance which they give voice to very often in their letters to this paper. It is that throughout the whole of Sunday there is not a single cigar shop open for business. Coming from England where the tobacconist is one of the few tradesmen not amenable to Sunday observance, they complain. There seems only one remedy, and that is to laze in your stock of cigars for Sunday consumption some time on Saturday.

The Reason Why.

It was in a Cologne restaurant the other day that this was heard. A British officer had ordered a salad and when it was brought to him he noticed that it did not appear to be over-clean. Calling the waiter to him, he asked in his most impressive style "Why don't you wash the lettuces?" "Vell, sir," replied the Teuton servitor in all seriousness, "it is like dis. Der Soap is so very dear just now. It vas not possible!"

Hatless Frauleins.

As one walks the streets of the Rhine towns in the present spell of warm, sunny weather, it is impossible not to remark how many of the girls and women go about hatless. It is a common sight abroad to see womankind of the working classes wearing no headgear, but here in Germany the custom extends to the better classes as well, and thousands of smartly or lightly dressed damsels flit about the town with only Nature's head covering to protect them from the sun. But the hair is invariably dressed with taste and neatness, and the custom has good sense on its side, one must admit.

Where are they?

What has Germany done with their wounded? Talking recently with a Gunner officer who has been in Rhineland for three months, he said that in that period the number of men he had seen who bore marks of having been wounded in the war could not have exceeded the number he could count on his fingers. It is certainly a fact that cannot fail to have impressed many of us. It would be interesting to know what has become of all the maimed and crippled enemy soldiers. One sees abundant evidences of the havoc wrought on our manhood at home, but very few here. It is strange. Up to now there seems to be no valid explanation of the phenomenon. Yesterday a German who had lost both legs was seen wheeling himself along the Hohenzollernring on a miniature wheeled vehicle; but this was a notable exception.

Will you Contribute?

The Editor of "The Cologne Post" wants to encourage all ranks of the Rhine Army to make use of their powers of observation and whenever any phase of life in the occupied territory strikes any of his reader or whenever they come across any unusual incident he would like to have a short paragraph about it. Every day there must be scores of interesting incidents witnessed by individual officers and men worth recording, and many customs that are different from our own that must strike everyone and could be noted down with advantage.

A prize for the best.

Those who use their eyes intelligently are the most likely to benefit by their sojourn in a strange land. So will all who read these lines jot down what they think will make an interesting paragraph and send it to the Editor without delay? Such items should never exceed 150 words, and even shorter notes will be acceptable. Every day the sum of 10 marks will be given for the best sent in, and it should be borne in mind that in awarding the prize, more credit will be given to the subject than to the style of writing, so that lack of literary ability will be no deterrent to anyone. The envelope should have the word "Echoes" in the top left hand corner.

OUR BOOK SHELF.

FARMING FOR NOVICES.

Five years of open-air life, at times not of the "healthiest" we must admit, have caused many temporary members of H.M. Forces to think seriously about the possibility of ever returning contentedly to the lecture room, the study or the office.

Freedom from walls and furniture has developed that love of the open air instinctive to the unfettered animal within us; and hundreds, thousands of us have pondered over the possibilities of small holdings, fruit and chicken farms, and other occupations where this love could be given free play.

War has brought us to endure fatigue, to take risks, to need the free air. We want really to live.

As a member of the Advisory Committee of the National Agricultural Committee, Mr. Green has encountered this want and in his small, but pregnant, book he points out the best paths to follow in order to acquire our several ideals in the simplest manner.

It is not an idyllic picture, a prose poem of farming, the author gives us, nor is it an exhaustive treatise on agriculture or horticulture, it is just a plain statement to enable the ex-service man, or woman, to see "the way to go about it."

Mr. Green gives actual figures of small holdings balance sheets, indicates the best paths for gaining knowledge, tells us what has been done and what left undone, officially in the matter of helping men on to the land; gives practical hints as to the method of testing land to find its suitability for any certain line of culture or production.

In fact, he gives the reader just those hints, which the ex-service man, with little or no knowledge of farming, etc., and more likely than not, mighty little capital, must have ere he finally decides to live a man's life, in wresting a living for himself and family from mother earth.

("First Advice to would-be Farmers" by F.E Green, crown 8vo, pp 192, Price 5/-net, by post 5/6. Published by the "Country Life" Library, 20 Tavistock Street, Covent Garden, London W.C.)

Confessed.—"Yes, I did that. I stabbed him three times. He asked me to do it." This statement was made to a constable by a lad of seventeen, charged at Sutton with being concerned with a man not in custody in the murder of a painter.

IN RUINED RHEIMS CATHEDRAL.

There have been many and such conflicting reports of the state of Rheims Cathedral as it was when the Germans were finally driven back, but these are the correct details. The western façade and portal are severely battered, while the greater number of the pinnacles of the southern front have been shot away; the roof has several gaping holes in it, the high altar is a formless mass of debris, and the choir as such has ceased to exist.

The glass has entirely disappeared—some, indeed, has been preserved, but most has been totally destroyed. All that really remains is the core of the fabric—probably considerably shaken and weakened—and the remarkable series of statues within the west wall.

Nothing in the way of restoration has yet been begun, and the public are shown the church by a guardian, who tells them that it will take a generation to repair it.

It is hard to conceive any better reminder of the German than this pathetic sight of this monument of Gothic art, which the vandals of the twentieth century have left a shattered shell.

EDUCATION.

The Education Officer of the 2nd Brigade R.A.F. informs us that at the Wing School, Bickendorf Aerodrome, reading, writing, arithmetic, mathematics, and German, French and shorthand are now being taught by expert instructors, including members of the W.R.A.F. and that any troops in proximity to the aerodrome are invited to attend. The time-table arranged is as follows:—

	14.00 hrs. to 15.00 hrs.	15.00 hrs. to 16.00 hrs.
Monday:	Arithmetic and Mathematics	Reading and Writing.
Tuesday:	German	French and Shorthand.
Thursday:	German	French and Shorthand.
Friday:	Arithmetic and Mathematics	Reading and Writing.

Very Young.—Mr. Malcolm C. Boyle has been appointed organist and choirmaster of Holy Trinity Garrison Church, Windsor. Mr. Boyle is 17 years old, and was recently elected Goss Scholar at the Royal Academy of Music.

FROM EVERYWHERE.

EVERYTHING FOR EVERYBODY.

A big bonfire.—Four thousand damaged motor-cars were recently burned in a bonfire near Wissant.

Friendly.—The inhabitants of the neutral zone seem to be anxious for the British troops to bring them within the occupied territory, and there is no reason to expect a hostile demonstration in the event of an advance.

Ready for Action.—All elements of an army in the field have assembled in the narrow strip of Rhineland between Cologne and the bridgehead outposts.

Bobby's Peop'e.—London policemen have unanimously pledged themselves to "decline to resign either from the union or the service if called upon to do so by the authorities.

Talking in Yards.—"It is very difficult to talk in yards, I know," said Judge Sir Alfred Tobin at Westminster County Court when the plaintiff in a case said a vehicle was a quarter of a mile away.

Torrid Toronto.—Not in 80 years, which is as far back as Toronto weather records go, has there been so hot a June as this one. There has been no single cool day since May 24. Most days have registered a temperature around 90deg., with 94 as the maximum.

By Air.—Instituted on March 1, the Folkestone-Cologne air mail service has reached a total of 2,276 outward and 386 inward bags for the three months ending May.

Dust Ahoy!—The Birmingham City Council are likely to place with the Edison Electric Company an order for electric dust vans at a cost of £32,000. The American company is about to start a factory in Birmingham.

Riots at Mannheim.—Food riots gave birth to Spartacist riots at Mannheim with serious consequences.

Railwaymen Out.—A railway strike has broken out in the district of Erfurt.—Traffic is impossible on the lines to Gotha, Jena and Gera.

Aeroplanes Burnt. - A fire broke out by accident at the aerodrome of Saint-Cyr near Paris. Eighteen shelters and about 100 aeroplanes were destroyed. Damages are estimated at four millions of francs.

A Question of Tongues.—We see on the walls in Cologne in English and French two placards announcing certain sports. The French translation of "Flying Corps" is "corps des voleurs" — the robber corps!

Religious Guards.—For the first time in history, the Irish Guards celebrated the Feast of Corpus Christi with an outdoor procession of the Blessed Sacrament at Warley Barracks.

Quickly Burnt.—The pier pavilion at Parguton near Torquay, has been totally destroyed by fire in less than an hour. The charred ruins collapsed and fell into the sea.

To Wed.—The Hon. Pamela Bruce, youngest daughter of Lord and Lady Aberdare, is to be married on July 1st to Major the Hon. Edward Kenelm Digby, who is Lord Digby's heir and a Coldstreamer. He has been once wounded, won the M.C., with bar and the Croix de Guerre.

Twenty-five.—Yesterday the Prince of Wales attained his quarter century in years. Our soldier prince carries his age most youthfully.

For the War Museum.—There is to be a big photographic section of the Imperial War Museum, and since the armistice a number of panoramic photographs have been taken of groups of all branches of the services to adorn its walls.

Disarmed.—The disarming of the Turkish Army has been completed. In accordance with the agreement between England and France, all the equipment will be taken to France.

Bombed a Procession.—At the termination of the Corpus Christi procession at Valencia a bomb was thrown. Several persons were injured.

A Biography.—A Life of Sir Stanley Maude is being written by Major-General Sir C.E. Caldwell, K.C.M.G., and will be published in the autumn.

Cinema Tragedy.—One hundred and fifty persons, including many children, are reported to have been killed or injured in a fire at a cinema theatre at Mayguez, West Indies.

Good Rye.—The rye crop in Germany is said to be above the average.

The King at Zeebrugge.—The King is expected to visit Zeebrugge at an early date. At the point where the Vindictive was alongside the Mole a commemoration tablet is to be placed.

A Sad Day.—July 8 is the probable date of the public funeral at Dover court of the late Captain Fryatt, who was shot by the Huns for defending his ship against a U-boat.

Donkey Somersaults.—A labourer, who was awarded £30 in an action against the L.C.C. stated that he hired a three-year-old donkey and barrow and a tramcar came up behind and ran into the vehicle. The shafts were broken, he was thrown out, and the donkey turned a somersault into the gutter.

As Colonel-in-Chief.—The Prince of Wales is in South Wales in his new capacity as Colonel-in-Chief of the Welsh Guards, and the band of the Guards and a guard of honour supplied by the regiment has been sent to participate in the ceremonies.

The Limit.—"Our telephone system is undoubtedly the worst in the world," said Lord Joicey at Newcastle recently.

Monsoon Wagering.—The Indian monsoon has burst, and doubtless large sums have changed hands over the precise time of the event. The natives gamble tremendously on the "burst," and as the bookmakers are generally also schroffs (moneylenders), if they don't get the punter by the neck the one way they usually catch him the other.

Docks for Giants.—The Port of London is busy on an extension scheme at Tilbury to enable huge liners to be docked in the Thames, and passengers to be landed even from the Leviathan, the monster ship of 54,282 tons.

That Ribbon.—It is believed that the ribbon for the general war medal which has been exhibited in military outfitters' windows for the past two months will be released for issue this week.

Our Prophet.—Mr. H. G. Wells wrote a short story prophesying the use of tanks in war, nearly sixteen years ago. The Tank Corps journal has recently reprinted this remarkable story.

For Farmers.—The Board of Agriculture has appointed a departmental committee to further the development of agricultural machinery in this country.

Clothes Dearer.—Autumn will bring no relief in regard to the price of clothes. It is prophesied that men's suits and overcoats will cost more than twice as much as they did before the war.

A Loss to Corfu.—Many merchants of Corfu, are bewailing the prospect of the departure of Allied soldiers and sailors from their picturesque and snake-infested island. It is estimated that the money left in the merchant's tills by officers and men of the two services amounts to the tidy little sum of £1,000,000

TEXT OF GERMAN LETTER OF ACCEPTANCE.

DELEGATES START FOR PARIS.

COURT MARTIAL FOR THE SCUTTLER.

DENIKIN'S ENORMOUS CAPTURES.

GERMANY'S ACCEPTANCE OF THE TERMS.

MENTAL RESERVATIONS.

The following is the text of the note sent to M. Clemenceau by Herr von Haniel stating that the Germans agree to sign the Peace Treaty.

"Sir,—The Minister of Foreign Affairs has instructed me to communicate to your Excellency the following.

"The Government of the German Republic has seen with consternation from the last communication of the Allied and Associated Governments that the latter are resolved to wrest from Germany, by sheer force even, the acceptance of those conditions of peace which, though devoid of material significance, pursue the object of taking away honour from the German people.

"The honour of the German people will remain untouched by any act of violence. The German people, after frightful suffering during the last few years, lacks all means of defending their honour by external action. Yielding to overwhelming force, but without on that account abandoning their views with regard to the unheard of injustice of the conditions of peace, the Government of the German Republic therefore declares that it is ready to accept and sign the conditions of peace imposed by the Allied and Associated Governments."

DELEGATES START FOR PARIS.

Germany at the last moment sent a note to the Big Three asking for an extension of forty-eight hours owing to the developments at Weimar, but their request was refused by the Allies. According to unofficial information received on Monday morning, Herr Bauer, the Prime Minister, had already selected the new peace delegation. They left Weimar almost simultaneously with the telegram announcing Germany's willingness to sign unconditionally, and were due to reach Versailles on Tuesday morning.

In Paris, it is considered probable that the Treaty will be signed on Thursday. Neither the Germans nor the Italians have yet appointed delegates. The Treaty has to be printed on parchment. It will also be necessary to examine the credentials of the plenipotentiaries who will have to sign the Treaty.

SOUTH GERMANY'S WARNING.

The Berlin correspondent of the National Tidende (Copenhagen) learns that the German Government was finally induced to consent to the signing of the Peace Treaty by a statement made in the State Council by the South German representatives. They told the Cabinet that in the event of any advance of the Allies they would be unable to guarantee the maintenance of the unity of the Empire. The new Cabinet, says the correspondent, is regarded in Berlin merely as a stop-gap whose duty it is to make peace.

CHEERFUL GERMANS.

Telegraphing from Weimar, the correspondent of the International News Service says that the National Assembly hall was thronged with a laughing and cheerful crowd when the German Assembly voted their decision to sign the peace terms. The balconies were all filled, chiefly with women. The crowds, who were anxiously waiting, received the news of the decision without cheers.

LONDON WAITING FOR SIGNATURE.

The news that Germany has decided to sign was received quietly in London. There were no demonstrations, the general feeling being that it is much more seemly to wait until after the actual signatures have been appended. The news will then be universally made known. At Woolwich it is to be announced by the firing of a salute from the barracks.

DENIKIN'S GREAT SUCCESS ON WIDE FRONT.

ENORMOUS CAPTURES.

It was officially announced yesterday that the advance of the Russian Volunteer forces continues with success along the whole front from the Caspian to the Sea of Azor, towards Tsaritsin. The Bolshevists have suffered a severe defeat and have lost seventy-five per cent. of their effectives in the area of the middle Don. Bolshevist Divisions were dispersed into small [illegible] thus cutting the Bolshevist 9th Army in two. Contact was obtained with the Cossacks, giving Denikin 22,500 reinforcements.

Towards Khartov the 13th Army is in full retreat. The whole of the valuable coal and ironfields in the vicinity have been captured. The Volunteer forces are advancing towards Yokoterinoslav and as their communications are threatened the Bolshevists are reported to be evacuating the Crimea.

Since the beginning of June Denikin has captured 32,000 prisoners, 348 guns, 550 machine guns, 11 armoured trains and an enormous quantity of ammunition and war material, and has besides liberated 90,000 square miles of territory.

Vienna.—A Polish military communiqué from the Galician front dated June 16th states that the agreement signed by delegates of the Polish and Ukranian armies to cease fighting on June 21st. is provisional on the line of demarcation being fixed.

SCUTTLING OF THE GERMAN FLEET.

COURT-MARTIAL FOR ADMIRAL.

Admiral von Reuter is to be court-martialled for breaking the armistice conditions. He will be taken to Nigg, near Inverness, under arrest. The place, time and other details of the trial will be arranged by the Allied Council in Paris.

Another statement in official circles is to the effect that Admiral von Reuter will be tried on the charge of breaking his parole.

It is understood that certain official information has been received which makes it practically certain that there was collusion between Berlin and the Admiral of the interned fleet which resulted in the scuttling of the German warships at Scapa. It is admitted that communication between Berlin and the crews first left on the ships has been extremely difficult, if not impossible, but the arrival of new crews from Germany gave the Germans their chance. The men probably came with definite instructions to sink the ships.

In conflict with the above report, which emanated from a very high source it is stated that the Admiralty has reports showing that the scuttling of the Fleet at Scapa was entirely the work of the German Admiral and was not carried out as the result of instructions from Berlin.

The German casualties are stated to have been six killed and ten wounded. A Thurso correspondent states, however, that over one hundred are believed to have been drowned. A number of bodies have been washed ashore.

GERMAN REJOICING.

Our Paris correspondent, describing the demeanour of the secretaries attached to the German delegation at Versailles, says that when they received the news through wireless cypher they did not attempt to disguise their joy. The sinkings are commented upon at great length in the Parisian newspapers. Much dissatisfaction is expressed and many papers deeply deplore the "negligence" on the part of the British authorities which allowed the plot to be so easily accomplished. General Nudant has sent several notes to von Lenner at Versailles with reference to the sinkings.

FRENCH INTERESTS.

A Copenhagen message from Berlin states that the sinkings at Scapa are characterized as "heroic." All the Berlin newspapers assert that no seafaring nation could have acted otherwise.

The Budget Commission has decided to send a delegate to M. Clemenceau to ask if the Government is in a position to give information regarding the conditions under which the German fleet was sunk, and whether measures will be taken to make good the injury which French interests have suffered.

GERMAN CREWS SENT TO WALES.

Over 800 German prisoners left Nigg this afternoon by special train for Wales. Among the prisoners was the Admiral and his staff. The rank and file of the German sailors seemed to be in high spirits. As they marched a distance of three miles to Nigg railway station they sang German songs, and one of the party played a musical instrument. The prisoners looked a motley lot, especially those belonging to the smaller craft. Those belonging to the Kaiser, Kaiserin, Hindenburg, Emden, and other bigger vessels were more sailorlike. The men were carrying all sorts of kitbags, and some had small wooden trunks. The officers had leather bags, and one had a handsome leather hatcase. The Admiral and his flag lieutenant were taken to the station in a motorcar. Before the prisoners were entrained corned meat and biscuits were served to them. The prisoners were under charge of armed Seaforth Highlanders.

M.P.'S DEMAND FOR INQUIRY.

Speaking at Arbroath last night, Mr. J. Long Sturrock, M. P. for Montrose Burghs, referred to the Scapa Flow affair. He sincerely trusted that the strictest possible inquiry would be made into the why and wherefore of the proceeding. It appeared to him to be a perfect outrage that, after those ships were gathered in, no precautions should have been taken to prevent the nefarious German from playing exactly the sort of dirty trick we might have expected from him. He trusted that not only an inquiry would take place, but that the Government would take its courage in both hands and make such an example of the leading German officers responsible for the outrage as would let the Germans know that we had at last come to the conclusion that there was no use any longer our beating about the bush with them. It was a treacherous trick, a most nefarious trick, just the sort of thing that characterized their conduct through the whole progress of the war, and it was now up to the Government to make sure that we got adequate compensation for the ships that had been put to the bottom of the sea.

BRITISH TROOPS TO OCCUPY DANTZIG.

The Daily Telegraph states that the Council of Three has decided to send British troops to occupy Dantzig until the Government of that city is completely organised. President Wilson has intimated that American troops would maintain order in upper Silesia.

CHARGE AGAINST FAMOUS ARTIST.

ASSISTING THE ENEMY.

The charges against De Lazlo, the famous Hungarian portrait painter, who was naturalized soon after the outbreak of war and was interned in September 1917, was mentioned to the Certificates of Naturalization Revocation Committee, sitting at the Law Courts yesterday.

Three specific allegations were made:—1, that he supplied an escaped Austrian officer with money and failed to notify the police until twenty-four hours later; 2, that he sent and received letters otherwise than through the post, namely through the Dutch diplomatic bag; 3, that in December 1914 and January 1915 he attempted to persuade Mr. Wimborne Bone to send letters for him from New York to Hungary.

The Committee, of which Mr. Justice Salter is chairman, has to decide whether De Lazlo's naturalization should be revoked and the Home Secretary has decided to act on the recommendations of the Committee.

In opening the case for the Crown the Attorney General said that the questions for consideration of the tribunal were whether it is desirable for the certificate to be revoked; whether De Lazlo has shown himself by act or speech to be disaffected or disloyal to his Majesty; whether during the war he unlawfully traded with the enemy and whether the continuance of his certificate of naturalization is conducive to the public good.

Counsel stated that when De Lazlo became naturalized he had as sponsors Mr. Balfour, Lord Lee, Lord Devonport and Mr. Guinness.

Extracts from letters which had been intercepted were quoted by counsel. Writing on the subject of his naturalization De Lazlo said "It caused me severe mental conflict, but because of my five sons I had to do it." Continuing, counsel said that De Lazlo transmitted some letters in secret through the Dutch Embassy bag and several of these letters indicated that to some extent the Dutch Embassy was being made use of for the purpose of conveying letters and pictures.

Evidence was given by Mr. Austen Chamberlain, who said that he found de Lazlo to be absolutely candid, strictly scrupulous and a man of honour. It was not conceivable to him that de Lazlo would wilfully betray us.

The hearing was adjourned.

THE "UNFIT" BREACH OF PROMISE CASE.

PLAINTIFF WINS.

The re-trial of the action for breach of promise of marriage brought by Mabel Beatrice Porter, of Barnes, against Gerald Bernard, an ex-Naval officer, was concluded yesterday.

The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff and awarded £250 damages with costs.

At both the trials the jury found that plaintiff was not at any time suffering from tuberculosis, which was the case for the defendant, but the jury at the first hearing were not unanimous.

RECEPTIONS TO OVERSEAS TROOPS.

The War Office announces that owing to a new system having come into force, the dispatch of the cadres of units from overseas to this country has been greatly accelerated. It is, therefore, necessary to cancel the previous instructions regarding the notification by civil authorities of intended civic receptions; and it is now requested that any civil authority wishing to extend a reception to any returning cadre will at once notify the War Office (telegraphic address "Seemliness 4," London) of its intention. Unless such notification is received at the War Office by Saturday next, no guarantee can be given that the request will be complied with, owing to the fact that the cadre may already have been dispersed overseas.

HIGH PRICES FOR OLD STORES.

At a sale just conducted at the Anzac Factory, Glasgow, by the Disposal Board of the Ministry of Munitions, a sum of £91 was paid for a one-ton electric overhead runway hoist, which cost when new £44. A one-ton suspension electric hoist which cost £57 was sold for £64. For a 10-h.p. shunt wound d.c. electric motor, 240 volts, 790 revs., £75 was paid, a profit of £24; and for a similar motor with double the power, which cost £73 10s., the sum of £122 was paid.

REFORMS IN MALTA.

IRISH POLICE INSPECTOR MURDERED.

RACE COURSE TRAGEDY.

The latest agrarian outrage in Ireland occurred on Monday, when a high police officer was murdered in full view of a crowd of racegoers.

District Inspector Hunt, of the Royal Irish Constabulary, at Thurles (Tipperary), was shot dead immediately after the conclusion of the race meeting.

The inspector was standing in the centre of the roadway, which was thronged with people, when three shots rang out and he fell mortally wounded.

No arrest has yet been made.

CO-OPERATION, WORK AND DUTY.

THE LABOUR GOSPEL.

The Australian Premier, Mr. Hughes, replying to the toast of his health at a dinner given in his honour by Trade Unionists last night, said that the industrial heavens are overcast. It is foolish to deny, he asserted, that the outlook is grave but if the world is to be saved, force must give way to reason. Labour might learn from the fate of Germany what would befall if it resorted to similar methods.

A solution of the present troubles of England or any other country could be found only through the gospel of work, duty and co-operation between all classes. The foundation of the new England depends upon the production of more wealth. Those preaching and advocating restriction of output were the enemies of labour, whose counsel, if followed, will inevitably lead to destruction. Only by a supreme effort of all classes could Britain hope to bear the burdens of the war and hold its own in the markets of the world.

POLICE FIRE ON CANADIAN STRIKERS.

There was a serious development of the Winnipeg strikes on Saturday afternoon when as the result of disorderly conduct on the part of the strikers the mounted police were ordered out. They came to blows with the mob, the strength of which was estimated at 20,000, and ultimately used their rifles, one striker being killed and fifty others wounded. The trouble arose out of an attempt to hold a parade which had been forbidden by the Mayor.

Ninety arrests were made the following day.

The president of the Council at Ottawa has informed the Dominion House of Commons that the mounted police fired at the Winnipeg strikers in selfdefence after they had been fired on by the mob. The police displayed the utmost patience and did not fire until compelled to do so. Complete order now reigns.

The Minister regretted the loss of life and expressed the hope that the incident will convince everyone of the Government's determination to maintain law and order at all costs.

DISGUSTED DERBYSHIRE SOLDIERS.

NOTTS SOLDIERS ATTACK PICKET.

There was disturbance in the town of Mansfield by soldiers from Clipstone Camp on Sunday night. A picket 100 strong was broken up by the soldiers, and four of them were so badly injured that they had to be taken to the hospital. A bank window in the Market-place was smashed, and the civil police force, which was augmented, had to draw their batons.

SEASIDE HOTELS RELEASED.

The Grand Hotel, Broadstairs, and the Hotel Metropole, Folkestone, have been released from Government occupation, and the Grand Hotel, Broadstairs, is now open for the reception of visitors. The Hotel Metropole, Folkestone, is being re-decorated, and, it is expected, will be completed and ready for opening about the end of July.

The American Y.M.C.A. has completed this week the construction of the "Pershing Stadium" at Vincennes, the largest in the world, seating 27,500 people, and presented it to the French nation for international championships, where, no doubt, the British athletes will claim their big share of laurels.

PUBLICAN FINED FOR ATTEMPTED BRIBERY.

WHISKY TEARS.

For persistent attempts to bribe two staff inspectors of the Ministry of Food, Alfred Parker, sixty-three, late licensee of the "Harrow," Sandy-lane, Beddington, was fined £25 at Croydon yesterday.

It was stated that the inspectors called at Parker's house on March 27 and took whisky samples, ascertaining the prices charged. They met with considerable difficulty in doing so.

After much pressure from the defendant they went into the bar-parlour, where he offered them £1 each if they would take no action. The offer was increased to £2 each, defendant saying that proceedings would ruin him.

One of the inspectors remarked, "We don't do our business in that manner," but Parker went on to say, "Don't take any notice this time. I will give you any sum you like to mention if you leave the samples here and call for them another day."

He followed the inspectors out of the house, imploring them all the time to take the money. He broke down and cried.

In mitigation it was pleaded that defendant had an invalid wife, and a son subject to fits, with whom he had been sitting up the greater part of the night before the inspectors called, and he was in a nervous and overwrought condition.

It was added that he had already been fined £40 and ten guineas costs in relation to the sale of the whisky and had been compelled to give up his license.

FOURFOLD MURDERER'S APPEAL.

FRESH EVIDENCE.

The appeal of Henry Perry, the ex-soldier who was recently at the Old Bailey sentenced to death for the murder of an entire family named Cornish at Forest Gate on April 28th, was heard in the Court of Appeal.

Counsel for the appellant is endeavouring to prove that the verdict was against the weight of the medical evidence, which was of opinion that Perry was insane.

Further evidence was now called.

Dr. Theophilus Hyslop, a specialist in mental diseases, after a long examination of the prisoner came to the conclusion that he is of unsound mind and understanding. He was subject to hallucinations, which he not only believed in but which pervaded his mentality.

The case stands adjourned.

DRILL HALL DESTROYED.

Fire completely destroyed the Drill Hall of the 20th Battalion the London Regiment London Territorial Force Association at Hollyhedge House, Blackheath-hill, yesterday. The structure, of corrugated iron and wood, 110ft by 45ft, burned very quickly, and before all the fire engines arrived on the scene it had collapsed. Fortunately, it wasisolated, and the brigade, with two motor pumps at work, had no anxiety as to the safety of other property.

COLONIALS RIOT IN STRAND.

A strenuous conflict between Colonial troops and Metropolitan police occurred in the Strand on Monday night. The police were obliged to use their batons and a number of men on both sides were hurt.

The trouble arose through the police endeavouring to arrest two Australian soldiers. A disturbance followed and the crowd, which soon collected, assisted the prisoners to escape.

NEW ITALIAN DELEGATES POLICY.

Rome.—Signor Nitts, the new Premier, addressing the Italians of Dalmatia said that the new Italian delegation to Paris would firmly uphold Italian rights in the Adriatic.

The general opinion is that the new Government will seek to efface the bad impression created by Italy's attitude. It will show itself in Paris even more energetic than its predecessor.

HASTEN SLOWLY.

A few days ago the British Government urged that no Peace celebrations should be indulged in before a specific date, which will be determined officially and in due course. This policy is opportune.

There have been so many excursions and alarums of late that the coming of Peace is fraught with perplexity.

The dove with its olive branch has been hovering over a stricken world, and even yet she has not alighted. It is wise to wait in patience for the day of historic signature.

Even then a great celebration is premature. The passions of the world have been bitterly stirred, and time must pass before mankind is assured that peace is a reality.

From the beginning of days there have been short-sighted people who cried "Peace, peace when there is no peace." A celebration does not make a Peace.

But we give way to no pessimism of heart. The events of long-drawn-out years make us chary of haste and anticipation, yet the omens are good.

At last we stand on the threshold of the temple of peace. Nothing but the direst ill-fortune can now rob us of the fruits of victory or the blessings of security.

It was John Milton who told Oliver Cromwell that peace has victories no less renowned than war. In truth, peace is the greatest of all victories. When the time comes for celebration, there should be in our high festival, distinct and notable features.

It should be a thanksgiving—a deep-souled tribute to the valour of comrades who gave to their country unmeasured heroism and sacrifice. No worthy rejoicing will miss the note of homage to the men that are no more.

It should be a joyous celebration. The close of the greatest war in the history of the world, lifts a sore burden of woe from humanity. For almost five years men have groaned under the the heavy hand of Mars, and they must mark their release with triumphant rejoicing. But a worthy rejoicing is not frenzied Saturnalia.

It should be a united celebration. The Empire that lent its sons from every land should on one day unite in common and thankful joy.

It should be, lastly, a festival of optimism This war was to end War. This peace must ensure Peace.

THE "STARS AND STRIPES."

Last week saw the final issue of "Stars and Stripes." Its valedictory address is a Victory edition with a pictorial supplement illustrating the activities of various branches of the American E.F. since the United States entered the war.

Especially interesting to the British is the account which it contains of the doings of a section of the II Corps which worked and fought on our front, and in admirable union with us in the decisive months of September and October last year.

"Stars and Stripes" when it first put its head out of doors was an inconsiderable bud which had germinated at Neufchateau and was grafted, for printing purposes, on "The Daily Mail" at Paris. It blossomed into a flower which shed half a million petals weekly for the delight of the Dough Boys.

It meant a lot to them, for it brought news from home and carried news thither—three thousand miles away and more. It did its work well.

It claims modestly that it did not win the war. No! but it helped. Can anyone of the millions employed in the job say more? We can only call goodbye after its vanishing form.

We cannot quite wish for a new war to bring it back. We are sure however that the united effort of the Anglo Saxon race which it chronicled will live for ever.

That race has shrines and homes of its common spirit and common tongue throughout the tight little realm of England and the broad plains of America.

The common battlefield of France constitutes another later shrine and consecrates again the old.

THE TWO COURSES.

The sinking of the German warships at Scapa Flow and the mobbing of Captain Müller by Pan Germans at Frankfurt, dot the "i" and cross the "t" in German points of honour.

Twice with honour could the German fleet have gone to the bottom. First before the armistice, if it had come out into the open, and in one last desperate bid for victory, disappeared in a blaze of glory, which would have burnt up the soiled records of the preceding years. Next, on the declaration of the armistice, if it had preferred self-annihilation to surrender, Britain would have understood.

Neither course did it take. The ships were handed over under the armistice conditions, and in pursuance of them, skeleton crews of Germans were put on board to hold those ships on trust until such time as their fate had been decided.

The Admiral, his officers, and his crew, knew that they held those ships on trust. The British fleet relied on the Admiral's sense of honour.

When the moment to hand over their trust arrives, the German sense of honour permits a German officer to scuttle his ships at sea — and himself ashore.

And Captain Müller of the Emden is mobbed by Pan-Germans at Frankfurt. The British could understand Müller. Britain did not need the ships. Germany did need certificates of true honour.

If she kept her ships to the end for the purpose of having something with which to bargain, her people are the poorer by the act of those Pan-German officers.

It is they — the people — who pay in the end for these pranks of perverted patriotism and cheap "Heldentat."

When will they purge themselves of these gentlemen? For we believe there are Germans who understand what Britain understands.

THE "B.P."

A product of peace conditions.

He is not the seedy individual with the shabby overcoat who hangs around the Billets prepared to "take" anything from the Sanitary Squad to the Batman, complete with breeches and spurs (borrowed from the transport driver), mounted on his officer's charger.

Not at all! Our battalion photographer is a dynamic force born under the gentle influence of Peace. He has sprung into existence since the cessation of hostilities

During the war, he probably was one of the many Pte. Lightfoots who transformed themselves into a beast of burden at short notice, who tossed up for the odd ration, sang songs about the Sergeant Major on the march and whose only claim to distinction occurred on the days when the C.O. held orderly room. His ability to produce finished prints of our special pals and the inevitable German bullock harnessed to the plough, was not dreamed of.

With the coming of the armistice and the boom of the pocket camera, however, he came into his own.

A notice in Battalion orders one day acquainted all and sundry of his installation at B.H.Q., where for trifling sums of a few pfennigs, he would develop and print photographs for any rank in the Battalion.

This relieved Pte. E.C. Going of a problem he had long turned over in his mind. If he purchased a camera, should he send the films to "Blighty," or entrust them to a professional in Cologne or excavate a dark room for himself in the back garden of his billet?

He was not quite sure if the latter proceeding was covered by the terms of the armistice. The probability of the promulgation of a Court Martial in which Pte. E.C. Going was no longer entitled even to the rank of Private, but was referred to merely as "The accused" was removed.

How Pte. E.C. Going prevailed upon the company officer to part with 100 Marks by such magic as "I'm well in credit, Sir" and "haven't had an advance for a month Sir," and how he subsequently toured the camera shops of Cologne does not concern this chronicle of the coming of the B.P.

The next evidence of the works of the B.P. were displays of prints in the canteen. Football matches, the regimental band, the R.S.M. taken unawares in the middle of a "posh" salute.

All these and more the Alfs and Erbs of the Battalion, who preferred the more intense excitements of "Pontoon" to the milder one of photography, could purchase cheaply as souveneirs of their stay on the Rhine.

When, soon after his installation, the B.P., owing to pressure of work, closed his sanctum until further notice, his position became assured and the popular fallacy which the Company man cherishes regarding "the scrounge at B.H.Q." was exploded.

So long as we remain an Army of Occupation under more or less peace time conditions, we hope that under the camouflage of "Machine Gunner," "Transport Driver," or "Cook," we may retain our B.P., and some day, who knows, a kind Army Council may re-write the worn out parchment whereon is written "Establishment," finding room therein for him who has become an irremovable institution!

S.J.G.

THE LONELY SOLDIER.

Oh God, if Love is the key of Life,
And loveless Life is Death,
Then better had I be dead than live
In the blight of his icy breath.
Friendless am I as the cold, cold moon,
Alone in the pitiless sky,
Watching the world's great tragedy
As the drama of life rolls by.
Oft, when in billets we've rested,
And we've sat by the flickering fire,
The boys have talked of their loved ones
And the homes of their hearts' desire.
And the world to me has seemed as bleak
As the wastes of the fighting zone,
For it's made me think of the times that I
Have gone on leave — alone!
I've no joyous girl to meet me,
With welcome in her eyes;
I've no happy wife to greet me,
Whose love might harmonize.
And I've sat and thought by the firelight,
As it gleamed on the beams above,
That, God, this might be a different world
If you gave me a girl to love.

CORITED.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

DORMANT TALENT.

Sir,—As the Art and Photographic Exhibition, held at Bonn recently, showed that there is such talent in the Xth Army Corps, surely there must be unlimited artistic and photographic talent hidden away in the whole of the Rhine Army.

Why not a great art and photographic exhibition for the whole of the British Army on the Rhine, to be held in aid of the Red Cross?

E. D.

LEARN A LANGUAGE.

Sir,—How can we learn a language without a master or an opportunity of attending classes, which I "hear" are arranged for those in the army of occupation?

I suggested to the O.C. of the unit that I would pay a civilian a remuneration for lessons in French and German, if he could not tell me of any classes being held around or in Cologne, but owing to that being a case of fraternizing with the enemy it was turned down.

How can I obtain the benefits which "Amateur Linguist" puts forth in his letter?

"IRIS."

ANOTHER CANTEEN COMPLAINT.

Sir,—May I be allowed to say a word or two in support of E.G.'s recent letter? In addition to the short supply of such necessaries as cigarettes etc. for our troops at the E.F.C. canteen, which may be unavoidable, there is absolutely inadequate accommodation for the sale of same.

There are many men who often only require to buy one packet of cigarettes, but have to stand in a long queue of any number up to a hundred for perhaps one whole hour. This spectacle has often been seen in pouring rain.

Surely use of one of the numerous arcades or large buildings could be made by conversion and thus protect our men from getting soaked.

Is one small counter sufficient to serve all the troops who are continuously passing through Cologne?

M.G.C.

DEBATING SOCIETIES.

Sir,—I should like to know why the O.C.s. of more units do not encourage their men to form debating societies.

I know of course that there are already a certain number of these in the Rhine Army and they are most valuable in ventilating all sorts of opinions.

They give men the opportunity of expressing what they think and of hearing the views of the other side.

Debating Societies are in the highest degree educational and yet the knowledge imparted comes in an interesting way.

Of course this is summertime, and the temptation is to be out of doors, yet, in spite of this, thousands attend indoor entertainments, so really the time of year is no excuse for not starting a debating society.

It would be interesting to hear the experiences of those who have organized them in the Rhine Army.

A.H.T.

GERMANY'S COLOURS.

The old flog revived.

During the last few days the Commission which is examining, at the rate of one Article a week, Dr. Preuss's draft of the new German Constitution, has dealt with the Article which concerns the national colours. By a narrow majority it was decided to discard the black-white-red — "from darkness to light, through blood" — and revert to the colours which were adopted after Germany was liberated from Napoleonic domination in 1815. On the point of seniority this would appear to dispose of Belgium's objections, as that waspish nation only dates, as a separate kingdom, from 1830.

The "colours" of Germany have been suppressed and revived several times. Originally (1815) they were represented by a black one-headed eagle on a gold (heraldic) field, a banner borne on a gold stick being presented by a young girl named Amalie Nitschke to the students at Jena and adopted by them as their standard. In 1832 colours were decentralised and the various States ordered to choose their own. The year of the revolution, 1848, saw them restored and again suppressed. In 1866 they were adopted for the third time and were carried into battle by the 8th Army Corps in the Federal struggle against Prussia.

Prussia, however, happened to win, and became the dominant power in the Federation of German states. Its colours, black and white, with the addition of the Brandenburg red, were forced upon the others and ratified at the formal constitution of the German Empire in 1871.

Now it is decided to revert to the old Revolutionary colours, or, as some prefer to describe them, the colours attributed to the old Holy Roman Empire. There is this distinction, however, between the German and Belgian arrangement The German device is three horizontal, bands—black, red gold, counting downward—the Belgian being in three vertical stripes—black, yellow, red, counting from the flag staff.

Victor Hugo, was it not, who extolled the Rhine as being "rapid as the Rhone, broad as the Loire, confined as the Meuse, sinuous as the Seine, limpid and green as the Somme, historic as the Tiber, royal as the Danube, mysterious as the Nile, spangled with gold like an American river, covered with fables and ghosts like a river of Asia." He might have added, with a near approach to the truth, "beautiful as the Thames."

Of all the famous rivers which have inspired poets and musicians none can challenge the Rhine in lyrical output. Perhaps after Peace is made the steamer trips up the river will be resumed, coal supply permitting, and we shall hear "Loreley" and similar melodies as we used to hear them in the dear old days before the war. Doubtless also our hearing will be assailed with horrible syncopated tunes and jazz bands. Thank Heaven nobody has perpetrated "Ragging on the Rhine" or a similar outrage.

Payment of Contributors.

General articles on any subject of interest to the Armies of the Rhine will be paid for on publication.

In submitting such articles, contributors should always enclose an addressed envelope for return in case we are unable to use them.

Articles must always be concise and to the point, and never exceed 500 words.

They should be addressed to the Editor of The Cologne Post, A.P.O., S. 40 Rhine Army, with the word "Literary" in the top left hand corner of the envelope.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

Well I'm!—!!

Last evening I paid a visit to the Apollo Theatre where "The Tabs" presented a new musical revue entitled "Well I'm!—!!" It is the best thing "The Tabs" have given us and certainly the best show seen at the Schildergasse Theatre. The staging, dresses, and general effects leave nothing to be desired. The music is catchy; the humour, bright; the dancing, clever; and the caste is of all-round excellence. Moreover, it is original, and encompasses all the finer subtleties of everything from opera and Elgar to burlesque and jazz, and has a plot!

Tankyshun and Bitashun.

The story centres round the efforts of two detectives Tankyshun and Bitashun (Ernie Roberts and Jack Knowles) to guard some jewels. Sir Robert Tanner (Rob. Norrie) has the jewels and also a pretty daughter Myrtle (Cliff Mayston) whose hand is sought by Silas K. Jeffries (Bert Rex), and we have a delicious combination of love, conspiracy and comedy. Miss Gladys Narcott plays Jeanette, an accomplice of Baffles, a cracksman (Geo. Baines), while Miss Hilda Potts plays Lady Marion, a guest of Sir Robert. There are all sorts of interesting people. Alf Barker is the violinist, the inimitable Geo. Huntley plays Spud the gardener, and Will Benson makes an adorable maid. The other members of the caste fill their parts admirably. I strongly advise anyone wishing to see a good show to pay a visit to "Well I'm!—!!"

On Tour.

"The Robin Hoods" are, I hear, breaking all records on their Southern Division tour, playing to packed houses everywhere. Many return dates have been offered, but previous bookings prevent them accepting any at present. They have a new show in rehearsal, which, with the addition of new artistes, will worthily uphold the reputation "The Robin Hoods" have always had of presenting a first-class entertainment.

Monsieur, le comédien.

This is an impression of Ernest Franklin, a versatile light comedian with a big army reputation, as the Frenchman in "Get Busy" the recent "Tabs" (G.H.Q. Party) revue at the Apollo Theatre. He was extremely popular with the audiences here in Cologne, and although the exigencies of the service have demanded his being recalled for military duties elsewhere, we hope to see more of him in the near future. Franklin, apart from his theatrical activities, is a sergeant in the R.A.M.C.

A Backhaus Recital.

Wilhelm Backhaus is giving his second recital to-night (Wednesday) at 7 p.m. in the Bürgergesellschaft. The change of venue is commendable, the Dischsaal being hopelessly inadequate on the last occasion. The majority of the audience were English, who are much better acquainted with Willie Backhaus than are the Kölner, while as for the world-famous artiste, he is much more familiar with Queen's Hall, where we were wont to hear him before the war.

An Old Favourite.

Numerous admirers of Bert Errol, doyen of all female impersonators, will be interested to have news of him since his departure from "The Gaieties" at Lille. He writes me from Glasgow, where, by-the-way, he is booked to appear in pantomime next Christmas. He tells me that since leaving the Army he has been suffering from neurasthenia, and, at first, had to considerably curtail his professional engagements. I hear his gowns are more gorgeous and his voice more "Tetrazzini" than ever. It is not generally known that he took top "C" nightly while on tour in France. Incidentally he is is to produce Amy Woodford Finden's "Indian Love Lyrics" in Manchester prior to taking it to the Coliseum, London. Ewart Noble, who played with him in "The Gaieties," is to resume his old part.

On the Screen.

Speaking of film plays, I notice that the three Army Cinemas have some excellent films for the first part of the week. No. 1 Cinema is showing an excellent four-part drama entitled "Betty to the Rescue," featuring Fanny Ward. Charles Ray is the star in "Country-Boy," a four-parts production at the No. 2 Cinema. "Storm and Sunshine," a Blue Bird five-part drama takes precedence at No. 3 Cinema. The additional pictures are also of a very fine standard.

A 5th Division Dinner.

By the way, the 5th Division are holding a dinner, open to all officers who have served in the 5th Division during the war, at Oddinino's Restaurant, Regent Street, at 8 p.m., on Saturday the 28th inst. Owing to the special circumstances of the last few days the time limit for applying for tickets as regards officers from the Rhine Army has been extended. Officers proposing to attend who have not already sent in their names should notify the Hon. Sec., J. L. Fryers Esq., M.C., Merchant Taylors School, London, L.C., as soon as possible. Names can also be sent to Lieut.-Col. S. Gore-Browne, General Staff, G.H.Q., British Army of the Rhine. Memoership of Club 5/-, dinner tickets 15/- extra (exclusive of wine).

Cecily Hamilton's Repertory Company.

The plays which were to have been given on Monday in the Big Hall, Central Y.M.C.A., 44, Friesenstrasse, will, I hear, be presented there this evening (Wednesday) at 7 p.m., by the Cecily Hamilton Repertory Company, which has been sent out under the Lena Ashwell direction.

JACQUES.

PROBABLES FOR THE IRISH DERBY.

EVENT OF THE WEEK.

DONOGHUE RIDING THE PANTHER TO-DAY AT THE CURRAGH.

Irishmen, I have no doubt, (writes "Hotspur" in "The Daily Telegraph") will regret the absence from their Derby of Grand Parade but a wise discretion has been shown in not asking him for this effort so soon after his Ascot race.

It is not possible to suppose that he showed his true form with Glanmerin, who was given 17 lb. and an absurdly easy beating at Chester by Rich Gift. It may be, of course, that Glanmerin has come on a lot lately and his trainer certainly thinks he has a good chance at winning the Irish Derby.

The running of The Panther for this valuable race will certainly be the outstanding event of the week, and with Donoghue riding him I look forward to his rehabilitation. He need be no better than he was on Two Thousand Guineas Day to win, and I fully expect him to do so. So far as I know the Irish form I imagine that Snow Maiden, winner of the Baldoyle Derby, is supposed to have the best chance. In that case the spoils are once again likely to leave Ireland.

4,000 SOVEREIGNS RACE.

The race is one of 4,000 sovs., being 3,400 sovs. to the owner of the winner, 200 sovs. to the breeder of the winner, 100 sovs. to the breeder of 2nd, 200 sovs. to owner of 2nd, and 100 sovs. to owner of 3rd, by subscription of 50 sovs. each, 30 sovs. for those struck out on Jan. 1, 1919, but 10 sovs. only for those struck out on June 5, 1918, for three-year-olds.

JOHNNY SUMMERS DISQUALIFIED.

BOB MARIOTT DECLARED WINNER OF LIGHT-WEIGHT CHAMPIONSHIP.

At the National Sporting Club on Monday night Johnny Summers was disqualified in the tenth round of the contest for the light-weight championship. Bob Mariott was declared the winner.

The contest was disappointing, the men continually clinching early on. Both were warned not to hold, and later Summers was repeatedly warned. Summers made a great effort to get in close for in-fighting, but Mariott's defence was too strong.

FOOTBALL AT OHLIGS.

LOWLAND DIVISION H.Q. v. 212 EMPLOYMENT COMPANY.

Lowland Division H.Q. were due to play the 5/8th Royal Scots in a return match, but owing to most of the latter team being indisposed, the game had to be posponed, and a match with the D.H.Q.'s old rivals, the 212 Employment Company, was quickly arranged. The first half was evenly contested, and at half time D.H.Q. led by one goal to nil, Brown being the successful player. The second half opened decidedly in favour of D.H.Q., though determined efforts were repeatedly made by the 212 to equalise. One fine shot in particular was only just saved by Strachan throwing himself full length at the ball. Towards the end D.H.Q. had the upper hand, and goals in quick succession were added by McCallum (3 and McCafferty (1). The game ended:—Lowland D.H.Q.....5; 212 Employment Company.....0.

WALKING RACE TO BRIGHTON.

The Surrey Walking Club, which carried out one of its periodical "strolls" from Westminster to Brighton on Saturday evening, is arranging an open walking race from London to Brighton for amateurs, which will take place on Saturday, Sept. 13. A number of promises of entries have been received, and an effort will be made to beat the record set up ten years ago by H. V. L. Ross, who did the journey from Big Ben to the Aquarium in 8 hours 11 minutes 14 seconds. All men who have served in the Forces are specially invited to take part in the club's events.

LOWLAND DIVISION H.Q. TEAM.

A representative of the General Mess football team writes to state that as the Clerks' Mess has ceased to play and the General Mess is the only team in G.H.Q., the General Mess has assumed the title of Lowland Division H.Q. Team.

"REVENGE IS SWEET."

ANOTHER EXCITING FINISH IN CAVALRY DIVISION CRICKET MATCH.

Just over a month ago the H.Q., R.H.A. 5th Bde. visited the Cavalry Division H. Q. at Quadratn, and the "right of the line," after a most exciting finish, won by one run. The Cavalry Division have now had their revenge and have wiped out their defeat. The R.H.A. batted first and compiled a total of 68 runs.

The Cavalry started disastrously, losing their first five wickets for 18 runs. Spr. Deanley and Cpl. Adams played very steadily, and carried the score to 45 before the latter was caught after making 11. Spr. Deanley was the ninth man out with the score standing at 58, after having made a most valuable 18 runs. S.S.M. Ellis and L/Cpl. Irskine, the last wicket pair, thus found themselves in a most exciting position, but they did the needful, amidst plenty of excitement, S.S.M. Ellis being caught with the final score 71, so the Cavalry won by 3 runs. Both games have thus provided most thrilling finishes, and a "wag" has suggested a "Rubber."

A.A.A. CHAMPIONSHIPS.

R. BRIDGE TO DEFEND TITLE IN TWO MILES WALK.

An international entry is already assured for the Amateur Athletic Association Championships to be held at Stamford Bridge Grounds on Saturday, July 5. The Northern European nations will be well represented, Sweden having entered champions.

Norway has entered three record-holders, and the U.S.A. Army and New Zealand Headquarters have also put in fine teams.

R. Bridge has intimated his intention of defending his title in the two miles walk, and S. Frost is expected to do likewise in the steeplechase. R. S. Woods, the Light Blue weight-putter, will make a welcome re-appearance on the athletic field in that event, while a notable entrant in the hurdles is Major E. G. W. W. Harrison, M.C., winner of almost all the Eastern Command Championships in 1914, and regarded then as a likely hurdles champion in the future.

DOWNFALL OF CHAMPIONS.

16th H.L.I. COMPANY FOOTBALL AT HAAN.

To-day "B" Coy. sit in sackcloth and ashes. Their cry. is "Woe unto the day when we met "C Coy." The mighty are indeed fallen! The glory has departed! "B" Coy., hitherto undefeated, have met their Waterloo at the hands (or shall we say feet) of their rivals of "C." The match was played at Haan and aroused great interest in the Battalion, there being a large attendance of onlookers.

Five minutes from the start Capt. Lean opened the scoring for "C" Coy. Play continued in favour of "C" and when McKee scored a second goal that sounded the death kneil of "B" Coy., hopes of victory. Until the end of the game "C" Coy., were easily the superior side and during the last 10 minutes "B" Coys.', goal underwent a heavy bombardment. That the final score was only 2—0 is a fine tribute to the "B" Coy.

For the winners all played a sound game, Richardson at outside right showing a remarkable turn of speed and Semple at half-back displaying splendid judgment. Great credit is due to the referee, Lieut. Young, for the able way in which he handled the game. On the losing side the goalkeeper and centre-half (Cpl. Herd) were outstanding, but the forwards were weak. The story that "B" Coy. intend to take up Ludo as a sport instead of football is perhaps only an idle rumour.

Thomas (3—2); Beningfield beat Haviland 3—0; Tindell Green beat West 3—0; Riseley beat McIlquham 3—0; Brown beat Wiswell 3—1; Thompson beat Deed 3—2; Dixon beat Ingram 3—0; Bisseker beat Lindop 3—0; Doust beat Chesterman, retired; Decugis beat Thol 3—0; Washburn beat Mellett (3—1).

A FAMOUS CRICKET ELEVEN.

CAPT. BOND'S TEAM v. 2/4th BN. DUKE OF WELLINGTON'S REGT.

A very interesting cricket match was played at Merzenich on Sunday between the all-famous Capt. Bond's eleven and the officers of the 2/4th Battn. Duke of Wellington's Regt., which ended in a win by the former by 4 wickets. The officers batted first, making a total of 65, the only officer attaining double figures being Lt. Rawson with 18. There was some bright cricket to be seen when Cpl. Albone and Pte. Brewis faced the bowling of Lt. Lawes and Lt. Rawson, the former running up a total of 22 in quick time before being neatly bowled by Lt. Lawes. The next 3 wickets fell without an additional run being scored, but L/Cpl. Boyes soon knocked up the few remaining runs that were required, and Capt. Bond's Eleven declared their innings with 4 wickets in hand, after scoring 76.

Several teams have opposed this eleven, but only on three occasions have they been defeated, their average being, played 16, won 13, and lost 3. Cpl. Albone is the crack player of the team, and his absence at any time would be a great loss, for he is a good all-round cricketer, and a well-known ex-member of the Halifax Eleven.

"C.P.C.C." COMPETITION

THE SEASON'S LEAGUE FIXTURES.

Some inconvenience is being experienced by teams taking part in the Cologne Post Cricket Cup Competition as a result of their inability to discover the whereabouts of their opponents. This difficulty would be entirely overcome if both teams in each fixture would get into communication with each other, giving as much information concerning the prospective match as will be of assistance sufficiently early to allow arrangements to be completed. If each secretary concerned would without delay after the publication of the fixture lists write to the opposing team stating the situation of his ground, whether a home or away match, and any other information he considers of value, all—including ourselves—would be spared a great amount of trouble and unnecessary anxiety.

174 SIEGE BATTERY v. 354 SIEGE BATTERY.

This cricket match was played on the latter's ground on Saturday. 174 won the toss and elected to bat first, compiling 91, Cpl. Frost 16, and Sergt. Hill 15. After tea 354 started merrily, obtaining 48 for 5 wickets in 30 minutes (Bdr. Beresford 14). The remaining batsmen, however, never got settled down, and the side was dismissed for 61, leaving 174 the victors by 30 runs. For 354 Gnr. Wilson took 4 for 24, and Bdr. Beresford 3 for 24. For 174 Cpl. Frost, who bowled throughout the innings, took 4 for 23.

R.A.F. CRICKET WEEK AT LINDENTHAL.

The R.A.F. cricket week at Lindenthal is proving a notable success; many good matches played between brigades and units stationed in and around Cologne will be published in The Cologne Post as soon as they have been collated. The competition has been run on the knock-out system.

The Land's End to John o' Groats cycling (safety) record (about 900 miles) is held by H. Green. His time was 2 days, 19 hrs. 50 mins. (in 1908).

Victory Loan
"A Lucky dip"

HERE is the finest opportunity that has ever been offered to the investing public; a British Government Loan, which in addition to the high rate of interest guaranteed by the State, gives to every holder the certainty of sooner or later receiving a very substantial sum of money over and above the repayment of the whole of the capital invested.

The result of this Loan will be a very vital thing to the whole future of the country for at least a generation.

Its success will strengthen the National Finances, stimulate commerce and industry, promote employment, increase the purchasing power of money, and reduce the cost of living.

The Joy Loan offers two kinds of security:

FUNDING LOAN.—Issued at £80 per cent., to be repaid at £100 per cent. in 1960—90. Interest £4 per annum, or at the rate of 5 per cent.

VICTORY BONDS.—Issued at £85 per cent. Repayable at £100 per cent. by annual drawings, thus giving the holder of a bond bought at £85 the chance of a £15 Lucky Dip. Interest £4 per annum, making the yield on £85 equal to £4 14s. 1d. per cent.

As little as £5 may be invested through the Post Office, or as little as £50 through any bank.

Put all your money into VICTORY LOAN

Echoes from Rhineland.

Lilies of the Valley.

On Sunday most of us in Rhineland must have noticed hundreds of German cyclists of both sexes returning from the countryside, their machines laden with huge bunches of wild flowers. Of course the same thing is to be seen in any British town, though not to anything like the same extent. The Germans would seem to be even greater lovers of wild flowers than we are ourselves. But our boys have not been slow either, in capturing floral souvenirs from the woods and forests near the Rhine. While the extensive carpets of lilies of the valley were blooming many a British soldier gathered posies of the dainty flower, and hundred of boxes containing lilies found their way through the army post office to relations, friends and lovers in Blighty.

An Urgent Despatch.

Rather an amusing incident occurred recently at a certain battery stationed "somewhere in Rhineland." At about 01.00 in the morning, when the O.C. was indulging in the ecstasy of his "beauty sleep," he was rudely awakened by the arrival of a D.R. bearing a foolscap official envelope. The cyclist had come miles and miles from a distant headquarters, and the O.C. battery, scenting important secret instructions in the event of an advance, breathlessly tore open the envelope. Half dazed, owing to the abrupt awakening, but keenly eager to comply with orders, he hastened to read the document it contained. As he read it he gasped in amazement. From it he learned that a jazz band would be performing on the morrow at a certain dance some fifty kilometres distant!

"Wassersport."

During the warm weather it would appear that the larger part of the Army made daily pilgrimage to the river beach at Rodenkirchen, which is one of the chief spots where bathers of both sexes congregate. Here might be seen frauleins, frauen and herren of Cologne, in all their war paint or lack of it, and mixed bathing is the great attraction. It has been remarked that the female form divine shows no traces of the hunger which the starving Teuton population were said to have suffered in war days — quite the reverse.

Locks, Bolts and Bars.

A soldier in one of the Scottish regiments on the Rhine was remarking the other day on the number of locks, bolts and bars to be found in most German houses. He cited the case of his own billet. To obtain admission, he said, he has first to kick at the yard gate and alarm the frau. She then unlocks the door of the kitchen, where she sits, goes to the bedroom, unlocks that door and removes the key of the sidedoor, relocks the bedroom door, shoots back the various bolts and bars of the side-door and finally unlocks it. It now only remains to unlock the yard gate. But stay.—

Key after Key.

He is not yet in. She now discovers that she has not got that key with her and so has to work her way back through the various anti-thug devices back to the kitchen. She then hunts for the key of the dresser drawer, secreted under the fender, and unlocks the table drawer. Rummaging in it, she finds the key of the gate, and starts afresh. All she has to do now is to unbolt her way through to the yard, remove the barricade of wood from the gate, pull back the farm wagon which is backed up against it, slide back the two bolts, turn the key, push down the springlatch and — how simple! — "Open sesame."

Rantzau's Ancestor.

Rather an interesting fact came to light yesterday in regard to Count Brockdorff Rantzau. It seems that one of his ancestors was a certain Josias von Rantzau who was made a Marshal of France. His portrait, strangely enough, hangs in the Palace of Versailles where the present Rantzau has been so active in connection with the terms of Peace. It is known of Josias Rantzau that he lost one arm, one leg, one eye and one ear in the wars of his time—that is to say, one of each pair of members, and therefore his epitaph is quite correct, which says: "Only one half of the great Rantzau is lying here: the other half is resting on the battlefields."

Swimming Dangers.

The sparkling wavelets of the historic Rhine are as tempting to swimming enthusiasts as those of any other stretch of water. That a morning dip without the exercise of the greatest possible care, however, is full of dangers, has more than once been emphasized recently. The several drowning cases that have been reported, one of which, at Bonn, was caused by the overturning of a small boat, have supplied ample evidence of the treachery of the fast running water. Even the little side streams, where strong currents appear to be absent, have many dangers lurking under the surface and swimmers should not attempt to enjoy their cooling influence without the most careful investigation.

German Road Repairs.

The system of road repairing in the large towns of Germany, although not entirely free from defects, is certainly scientific and the results are usually thoroughly satisfactory from the point of view of traffic comfort. Further, the system of renewing small patches of the road surface at a time, enables the improvement to be made without seriously holding up the thoroughfare. The absolute lack of consideration for night motorists by the German authorities, however, has caused the utterance of many strong words in the solitude of a dark night. Small holes of perhaps a foot square and three or four inches deep sometimes occupy the middle of a main road without the slightest signal of warning and it is surprising that many a motor-cyclist has not come to grief on account of them.

Prizes for "Echoes."

The Editor of "The Cologne Post" wants to encourage all ranks of the Rhine Army to make use of their powers of observation and whenever any phase of life in the occupied territory strikes any of his readers or whenever they come across any unusual incident he would like to have a short paragraph about it. Such items should never exceed 150 words, and even shorter notes will be acceptable. Every day the sum of 10 marks will be given for the best sent in, and it should be borne in mind that in awarding the prize, more credit will be given to the subject than to the style of writing, so that lack of literary ability will be no deterrent to anyone. The envelope should have the word "Echoes" in the top left hand corner.

To-day's prize of 10 marks is awarded to Saddler W. H. Clift, 1st Section R.F.A., Light D.A.C., Army of the Rhine.

Notes from London Town.

"ALL THE KING'S HORSES—"

The King is having his stables renewed by some fresh and more youthful horses. At the present time most of the Royal horses in the stables are getting decidedly long in the tooth. The King's two special mounts, the chargers Delhi and Sultan, one or other of which he invariably uses at reviews, are far from being in their first youth. His Majesty is a great favourite with both of them, however; they answer to his voice and are as tame as cats. He would certainly never consent to discard either of them. But two splendid pure Arabs are expected at Buckingham Palace shortly. These are a present from the King of the Hedjaz, and their arrival is being eagerly awaited by the Royal grooms, fine horseman all, with a fine horseman's keen sense for a fine horse. They will have to be very carefully trained, however, before being used on public and ceremonial occasions.

SNARING THE ENEMY

Not many country cousins, though many of them know London better than most Londoners, have ever been in Portugal-street. It is a quiet, discreet backwater of the Strand, and, like Caesar's lean men, looks fit for treasons, strategems, and plots. There, was appropriately located during the war — it is about to shut down — the expert postal censorship department. The general impression was, I fancy, that German espionage and secret service had things all their own way. The phospherescent gleam of stage melodramatics encompassed the popular conception of the Enemy. But actually, especially where he encountered civilian brains, that was not so. At this unobtrusive office off the homely Strand, within sound of the tooting busman's call, some amazingly elaborate German plots were unravelled and foiled. There were experts who deciphered secret codes in 60 different languages or dialects. Others worked out countless hieroglyphic messages. Others worked with smelling chemicals which revealed all sorts of invisible writing. More than one sequel to the scientific investigations in that back street off the Strand took the dramatic denouement of a rifle volley in the Tower moat and another German spy dismissed on his larger quest. One dangerous artist was pounced on and shot, as the result of the enlargement of a code message giving his whereabouts microscopically marked in dot and dash along the tramway lines on a picture postcard photo of Amsterdam.

POPULAR CRICKET

Some of the great amateur cricketers who play the game for its own sake, and regard the public spectacular side of big cricket as merely a subsidiary feature, are rather sore — and perhaps a little wrath — over the very existence of such a controversy as, "How to brighten cricket!" And cricketers, being as a rule greatly conservative, are by no means pleased with recent innovations. A friend of ours, who set out to obtain prominent player's views on. "How to popularise cricket," received one reply — on a firmly-written postcard, of which he has made no use for publication. The writer is one of the most famous — and incidentally, "popular" — of English amateurs, and what he wrote was: "Regarding the brightening of cricket I can conceive nothing more likely to induce the spectators to view the game in a more rosy hue than — free drinks and plenty of 'em!"

"BISHOP OF THE FRONT."

A pleasant compliment is being paid this week to Bishop Gwynne. A cheery gathering of padres will assemble at the Cannon Street Hotel to dine with the bishop in honour of his work as the Chaplain-General's Deputy in France—the "Bishop of the Front".

Like most bishops, but more so, he is very jolly company and the most convivial group at the feast will be that in his immediate neighbourhood. He used to be a great footballer and once preached at a football service from the text "Then Elisha said, 'Shoot', and he shot."

One of the saddest blows of the war to him was the death of his great friend, Kitchener, whom he first met in the Soudan. Bishop Gwynne is the best exemplification of the Church Militant.

BE WARY!

Take care that this doesn't happen to you when you go on leave.

Some weeks ago a soldier arrived at a London terminus and fell into conversation with an enterprising individual correctly equipped with the very latest in silk hats and modest grey spats. This man suddenly rushed off in the direction of the booking office but returned almost immediately with a crisp note fluttering in his fingers. "Have you change for a fiver, old man?" he asked, "the booking clerk says he hasn't change."

The simple soldier handed over five one pound treasury notes, receiving in exchange for them the fresh white paper. With a hurried expression of thanks the gorgeous stranger rushed off again—and was seen no more.

On presenting the five pound note an hour later at a neighbouring tobacconist, our soldier friend had it politely returned to him with the intimation that "Bank Engravings" were not accepted at that establishment in payment for goods.

He looked more closely at the paper in his hand to find that instead of being a Bank of England note as he imagined it to be, it styled itself a "Bank of Engraving," issued on the authority of oen John Bradlaw, and otherwise printed in exact imitation of a bona fide five pound note.

COMPASSIONATE GROUNDS.

The extreme compassionate grounds on which a soldier may claim release from service are defined in a recent Army Order. The provisions do not apply to men serving on regular engagements whose period of service is unexpired, or to those who have volunteered for the Army of Occupation.

Release may be claimed under the Order by the following:—

Son who has a widowed mother with two or more children dependent upon her, the mother and children being incapable of earning.

Grandson who has a grandparent with two or more great-grandchildren or grandchildren dependents all of whom are incapable of earning.

Husband whose wife is a chronic invalid and wholly dependent on the soldier, either without children or with no children capable of earning.

Widower with two or more children under fourteen years of age and no near relation to look after them. The expression "near relation" is interpreted as parent, grandparent, brother or sister.

Don't Scratch.—Sir Ronald Ross, the authority on tropical diseases, says that most deaths after mosquito bites are due to the entry of some poison into the system, possibly by scratching.

New Crimes.—A woman asked the magistrate at Thames Police Court for a summons for "inflammation" of character. The next female applicant asked for a process for "desolation" of character.

A Film Paradise.—Torquay is developing into a Los Angeles for film artists. Already many well-known novels have been filmed there, as well as historical scenes.

A Samson.—The strongest man in Grimsby — George Williams — has just died, aged 75. He could carry with ease a trawl beam, a task usually performed by four labourers.

With the Milk.—The Bishop of Coventry's motor having broken down several miles from Coventry, his lordship accepted a milkman's offer of a lift for the remainder of his journey, in a milk float.

A Weighty Cargo.—The complete text of the Peace terms, in French and English, was brought from Paris to London by aeroplane. It forms an unstitched volume of 418 pages, weighing 2lb. 5oz.

Fighting Reptonians.—At Repton School speech day it was stated that the school has a very fine war record in the war, 338 old boys having fallen. As a memorial fund £ 25,000 is being raised.

Safer Outside.—A man smoked in Southwark County Court. "Bring him here," ordered Judge Granger, "and I'll make it a dear smoke for him." But he wasn't brought. Being discreet, he promptly disappeared.

Couldn't Wait.—The congestion of the docks at Liverpool is serious. The delay in discharging her cargo was so long that a large Atlantic liner has taken her load of grain back across the Atlantic.

Decimals Needed.—English children cannot learn languages like foreign children because their brains are worn out learning our complicated weights and measures, says Mr. E. C. Barton, of the Decimal Association.

Snakes.—A Dorset farm employee saw a large number of adders come out of an old heap of manure. He succeeded in killing seven of the snakes, which varied in length from twenty to forty inches.

A Clean Sweep.—Four German mine sweepers and two auxiliary ships have arrived in the Cattegat to remove mines. Further ships are expected, and it is hoped to clear the Sound in one month.

Coal for All.—Free coal was available at Nottingham the other day, when a wall at the Army Pay Corps central offices collapsed. This exposed 400 tons of coal, which had been hoarded in the event of another local strike.

A true Fish Story.—A Glasgow angler has made the biggest catch ever recorded by one individual on Loch Lomond. Within an hour and a half he landed one salmon at 13 lbs., two at 12 lbs., one at 12½ lbs., and one at 10½ lbs. The total weight was 60 lbs.

For Planes.—During the war investigations were assiduously carried on to discover a fuel which should prove ideal for aeroplane motors. The most satisfactory proved to be gasoline refined from the crude petroleum of certain producing fields.

Still in Force.—In view of the fact that the registration for certain foodstuffs may be necessary after June 30 next an Army Council instruction states that leave or duty ration books must be provided until further notice for officers and other ranks on leave, or on extended leave, or temporarily sent from their unit on duty.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR SIGNING THE TREATY.

PRECAUTIONS AT VERSAILLES.

BRITISH ADMIRAL AND THE SCUTTLER.

ADMIRALTY EXPLANATIONS.

THE SIGNING OF THE PEACE TREATY.

HOW IT WILL BE DONE.

It is intimated in French official sources that the signing of the Treaty certainly cannot take place before Friday and possibly not until Saturday. Up to late on Tuesday afternoon the Germans at Versailles had received no information regarding the names of the new delegation or the time of their arrival. It is supposed that Herr Müller, the new Foreign Minister, will be the principal delegate.

All arrangements for the signature are now complete. M. Clemenceau, President Wilson and Mr. Lloyd George will sign first, the Treaty being carried to them by the Master of the Ceremonies. The Big Three will sign as they sit. The other plenipotentiaries will sign at a special table and the Germans will sign last.

After the Treaty has been signed the delegates will be conducted to the Terrace at Versailles where they will see the famous fountains in full play. Four hundred French and Allied journalists will be admitted to the ceremony and a portion of the park will be opened to the public. The actual signing will probably take place on Friday at three o'clock.

There will be no special military display, the only troops present being those necessary to maintain order. These comprise seven regiments of cavalry and four of infantry, totalling about 16,000. Gendarmes and police agents will be stationed along the route to Versailles.

CLEMENCEAU TO RESIGN.

The Echo de Paris announces that M. Clemenceau intends to resign immediately the Treaty has been promulgated as he considers that the task for which he took office has now been accomplished.

President Wilson will leave Paris on the evening of the day of signature.

"WE HAVE WAITED FORTY-NINE YEARS."

When M. Clemenceau was informed of the German decision to sign the Treaty unconditionally he turned to the other Ministers present and said: "This is the moment for which we have waited forty-nine years." The Premier then conferred with Mr. Lloyd George and President Wilson, and subsequently was present at Les Invalides, where a salvo of 101 guns was fired.

As the evening wore on signs of rejoicing increased. Flags appeared in the streets and cafés, and American, French and British soldiers linked arms and sang Le Marseillaise.

VOTING IN THE GERMAN ASSEMBLY.

MILITARY ULTIMATUM.

The method of voting in the National Assembly was by members rising from their seats. The question put was: "Is the German Government authorised to sign an unconditional peace?" Only the Conservatives remained seated.

The speakers for the National and People's parties made a last frantic effort to persuade the Assembly to insist on attaching conditions. Before the session Noske visited the Centre party caucus and exhibited the ultimatum of the German Generals to resign if the Government surrendered Germany to the Entente. The indirect reply to this was a manifesto adopted by the leaders of all parties expressing the gratitude of the German nation for the services of the German armed forces.

RANTZAU ON THE DELEGATES' WORK.

A GAME BUT NOT A GAMBLE.

Correspondence which passed between Count Brockdorff-Rantzau and President Ebert has just been published.

The former explains his reasons for refusing to sign the Peace Treaty, saying: "I confidently hoped for the success of my policy if only the German people had backed me up. The negotiations at Weimar show, however, that for reasons of internal policy it appeared impossible for the Government to risk the stake without which I could not win a game which was no wild gamble. I only pre-supposed firmness and self reliance."

Ebert replied, thanking Rantzau for his efforts on behalf of the "unhappy Fatherland."

PROGRESS ON ARCHANGEL FRONT.

A War Office despatch from Archangel states that the enemy, after three fruitless counter attacks on the night of June 20/21 on our new positions on the Dvina, withdrew from Treitskii. He is now holding positions in and around Gordosk with advanced troops along the banks of the Solmenga river. Our troops are holding Chestako village. On the left bank the enemy vacated Yakovlevskoe and is holding Seletskoe. The enemy's retreat was very hurried and he left behind many rifles, ammunition and engineering stores.

WHY THE SCUTTLING WAS POSSIBLE.

EXPERT ADVICE REFUSED.

The House of Commons re-assembled yesterday afternoon after the Whitsun recess and recent events caused a great number of questions.

Mr. George Lambert asked the First Lord of the Admiralty why precautions were not taken to prevent the Germans from scuttling the warships at Scapa.

Mr. Long's reply was to the effect that complete reports of the circumstances attending the sinkings had not yet been received. It was known, however, that Admiral von Reuter had said verbally that he had personally given orders for the sinkings, being under the impression that the armistice had ceased on the Saturday.

The question of reparation for this act is now under consideration by the Allies in Paris.

The statement that the crews were changed periodically is incorrect. Sick men only have been changed as circumstances arose. Precautions were not taken by the Admiralty to prevent the possibility of scuttling the ships because such precautions were impossible. The ships were interned, not surrendered, and the Admiralty therefore had no power to place crews on board. It is not correct that the Admiralty Naval advisers had recommended internment of the ships. Their views were clearly and definitely expressed at the time of the surrender but the decision of the heads of the Allied Governments favoured internment.

This decision has controlled the situation ever since and made prevention of scuttling impossible. He strongly deprecated the unjustified attacks made on Admiral Wemyss.

The effect of the adoption of a policy of internment instead of absolute surrender was that the Admiralty had no right of access and no right to place armed guards aboard. Consequently the act of sinking the ships was simple.

Mr. Lambert: Did this internment take place contrary to the advice of the naval experts at the time of the armistice.

Mr. Long: The naval experts recommended as strongly as they could that the ships should be surrendered, not interned. The advice of the Admiral was not taken.

VON REUTER UNREPENTANT.

The following official information has been issued by the Admiralty. On Sunday afternoon the German officers were formed up on the deck of the Revenge under an armed guard, with Admiral von Reuter and his staff in front.

Admiral Fremantle then addressed Admiral von Reuter and told him he must consider himself a prisoner of war for having violated the terms of the armistice. Admiral Fremantle added that this traitorous act was not the first occasion on which the Germans had violated the civilized laws of the high seas. This speech was translated into German by a British officer.

Admiral von Reuter replied that he accepted the responsibility for what he had done. He felt that any British officer would have done the same and he also would do it again under the same circumstances. The prisoners were then marched off.

WATCH THE GERMANS.

Speaking at a dinner at the Carlton Hotel last night, Mr. Long, First Lord of the Admiralty, referred to the Scapa incident. It showed, he said, that we must be very wary of placing confidence in those who had been defeated and we should have to see to it that they carried out the conditions of peace. The Germans are not to be trusted and care will have to be taken to see that they do not again disturb the peace of the world or cause a repetition of the suffering they had caused by the war. We must realise that we are dealing with a people who are out particular about the way in which they carry out conditions they have accepted.

SALVAGE TOO EXPENSIVE.

The Admiralty reported yesterday that if tugs arrive in time it will be possible to salve the Baden, Emden, Frankfort and Nurnberg. The Admiralty discredit a report emanating from Paris that the Germans have sunk the remainder of their warships in German harbours. There is no prospect of salving the other ships without elaborate preparations. Meanwhile all necessary measures have been taken to secure the ships which are still afloat and to prevent further damage.

MIDDY SAVES FOUR DESTROYERS.

It was owing to the gallantry of a young midshipman whose name has not yet transpired that four German destroyers were saved from sinking. Armed with a rifle he boarded the nearest destroyer and compelled the crew to close the seacocks. In this way the vessel was kept afloat until it could be beached. Following up this success he coerced the crews of three other vessels in similar manner.

MARTIAL LAW AT SINGAPORE.

An official statement by the War Office says that disturbances broke out at Singapore on June 19th, owing to the anti-Japanese boycott. Chinese rioters caused considerable damage during the day and night.

H.M.S. Sidney, of the Australian Navy, remained in the harbour instead of leaving as intended, and sent landing parties to assist in keeping order. Three Chinese and one Japanese were killed and a number wounded. The city is now reported quiet, and business has been resumed.

FORTHCOMING SCENE AT VERSAILLES.

FRANCE TO KEEP THE TREATY.

The signing of the Peace Treaty, when Germany has finally been brought to see the handwriting on the wall, will be the occasion of solemn and impressive procedure.

Never in the history of the world, says the Sunday Times, have so many nations participated in the signing of a treaty. Never has a treaty been signed which so vitally affected the welfare of the whole world. Never has a treaty been signed which so changed the geographical contour of Continental Europe, and never has a treaty been signed which attempted not only to conclude with peace existing states of war, but to put all warfare to an everlasting end.

Never has history recorded an incident more dramatic than that which will transpire as the first of the German delegates dips his pen in the ink of despair to sign away once and for ever the much-vaunted hopes of German imperialistic sway over a conquered world.

International conventions are usually signed in one original by plenipotentiaries of all the contracting nations. This original is usually deposited with the Foreign Office of the nation in whose territory the conference is held. The world Peace Treaty in the original will, therefore, be deposited in the French Foreign Office at Paris.

Copies of this original will be sent to the Foreign Office of each of the contracting nations. After the actual signing the Treaty will be ratified by each of the twenty-seven nations according to its own method of procedure.

LONGEST TREATY ON RECORD.

The Treaty, written on heavy white paper, of a distinct weight and quality, known as "treaty paper," is the longest document of its kind ever written, consisting of 80,000 words, making a fair-sized volume of average size.

It consists of fifteen sections, which indexed read as follows:—

1. Covenant of the League of Nations.
2. Western frontiers of Germany.
3. Other frontiers of Germany.
4. German rights and privileges outside of Europe.
5. Military, naval, and air provisions.
6. Repatriation of prisoners of war.
7. Responsibility for the war.
8. Reparation and restoration.
9. Financial requirements.
10. Economic clauses.
11. Aerial navigation.
12. Freedom of transit.
13. International traffic regulation.
14. Guarantees required.
15. Miscellaneous provisions.

THE ORDER OF SIGNATURE.

The [illegible] and the Austrians will probably sign in the same column as the Germans, directly beneath the signatures of the latter delegates.

France will be the first of the Allied Powers to sign, followed in all probability by the United States, Great Britain, then by Italy and Japan. The signatures of the associated Powers will follow those of the Allied Powers, probably in the following alphabetical order:—

Belgium, Brazil, Bolivia, China, Cuba, Ecuador, Greece, Guatemala, Hayti, the Hedjaz, Honduras, Liberia, Nicaragua, Panama, Peru, Poland, Portugal, Serbia, Siam, Czecho-Slovakia, Uruguay.

In the Treaty, Germany is referred to as the party of the second part.

GERMAN GOVERNMENT APPEALS TO GERMANY.

THREE OBLIGATIONS.

Following their acceptance of the Peace Terms, President Ebert and the German Government are issuing an appeal to the German people, the text of which runs as follows:—

In accordance with the National Assembly the Government has signed the Peace treaty. We signed with a heavy heart, thinking only of saving our people from further war sacrifices and from the pains of famine.

Peace is concluded.

Now guard and secure Peace!

The first necessity is the fulfilling of the contract! All efforts must be made for the fulfilling of this contract. As far as it is realisable, it must be realised. We shall never forget those who in all probability will be separated from us. They are flesh of our flesh. We shall stand for them wherever we can, as for ourselves. They may be separated from Germany, but not from our hearts.

The second necessitay is Work!

The burden of this peace can only be borne if not one hand is idle. For every term not fulfilled our adversaries can answer with advance, occupation or blockade. Who works, defends his country.

The third necessity is Duty!

As we remained at our posts in spite of all distress of our conscience, everybody must do it. Soldiers, officials and civilians, every one must keep true to his duty for the sake of all, in these worst of all bad days. We are compelled to deliver Germans to enemy tribunals. We have defended ourselves against it to the utmost. But if officers and men do not help us to maintain interior discipline, not only a few hundreds but millions of our compatriots will be delivered to occupation, annexation and terror.

Germany must remain able to live. Without interior order there can be no work; without work no fulfilling of the covenant; without fulfilment no Peace, but war breaking out again. If do not all help, the signature on the Treaty is without value. Then alterations or revisions of the terrible burdens are impossible. The days we now lose can cost our children years of enslavement. Government and people must set to work at once. There must be no pause, no standing aside. There is only one outlet from the darkness of this contract, the preservation of our country and people through unity and work. Help us to this, men and women!—

President Ebert,
Bauer, Erzberger, Noske etc.

FOURFOLD MURDERER MUST HANG.

APPEAL DISMISSED.

The Court of Criminal Appeal, yesterday afternoon, dismissed the appeal of Henry Beckett, who was convicted and sentenced to death for the murder of the entire Cornish family, at Forest Gate.

Lord Reading, in giving judgment, said the murders were committed with great deliberation and the acts were consistent with the acts of a sane man of criminal and brutish disposition. There was not sufficient evidence, even with the addition of the new evidence taken, to justify the Court in disturbing the verdict of the Jury.

EX-SOLDIERS AND EMPLOYMENT.

CO-ORDINATION OF EFFORTS.

A proposal for a union of societies dealing with the needs of the ex-soldier was announced at the thirty-fourth annual meeting of the National Association for Employment of Ex-Soldiers, held at the head office, Victoria-street.

Lord George Hamilton, the Chairman, said an amalgamation with societies of kindreds objects would render the organisation more powerful, and such an amalgamation would be proposed on the 27th of the month. The report showed that during the year 6,157 men had been placed in permanent employment, and the numbers had been gradually increasing to the pre-war figure of over 10,000.

Sir Samuel J. Waring said unfortunately there were to-day a great number of soldiers out of employment. One reason for this was the paralysis which existed at an outcome of the war, and which would probably continue until peace was settled, and another—greater and more difficult to remedy—was the lack of a distinct and definite economic policy on the part of the Government. Sir Samuel thought more attention should be given to the deserving claims of the long-service man. Employers did not realise that there were numerous position, which the soldier was qualified to fill because of his professional training. People had been eloquent in their expressions of admiration for those men while they were fighting their country's battles. They made promises as to the fair treatment they would get, and it was to be hoped that those promises would be translated into action.

MINISTRY OF MUNITIONS STATISTICS.

MARCH 1918 LOSSES.

Ministry of Munitions, Mr. Kellaway gave some astounding figures to the House of Commons yesterday. Incidentally he revealed the British losses in material during the German offensive in the Spring of 1918. These included 1,000 guns, 70,000 tons of ammunition, 4,000 machine guns, 200,000 rifles, 700 trench mortars and 200 tanks, yet within a fortnight all these had been more than replaced.

On the day the Hindenburg line was broken through, British guns fired 243,000 shells more than were fired during the whole of the South African war. Fifteen thousand tons of poison gas were supplied during 1918 alone and Mr. Kellaway claimed that while the offensive powers of British gas were equal to German gas our anti-gas apparatus and appliances were far ahead of any other.

The Disposals Department had realised to date 130 millions sterling. The Kempton Park Depot is being rapidly cleared but Slough is indispensable. The Government could do with thousands more lorries than are on order just to enable them to clear the congested ports.

SUPREME ECONOMIC COUNCIL TO BE DISSOLVED.

The American Government has rejected the British proposal to perpetuate the Supreme Economic Council, which will, therefore, cease to exist after peace has been restored. The paper says that the British representatives on the Council recently approached the American members, including Mr. Hoover, with a scheme for the continuance of the Council, with headquarters in London. It is urged by the British that the Council would be a stabilizing force throughout Europe, more especially amongst the new nations, which have been largely dependent on the Council for supplies of food and raw materials, as well as financial support.

Whilst admitting the soundness of the argument, the Americans objected on the ground that in such a permanent Council there would be danger of building up a bureaucratic power, thus exposing to pointed criticism the democracy of any country participating in the scheme. In American circles it is pointed out that a permanent food council could easily be made the most powerful body in the world, controlling both Governments and peoples. The refusal is in accord with American financial policy, which is not to enter into any scheme for pooling the war debts of Allied and Associated Powers. The United States is quite willing to give all possible help in steadying economic conditions in Europe, but not to be bound by any formal obligations.

R.A.F. OFFICERS SENT TO PRISON.

The hearing was concluded at Middlesex Sessions yesterday of the charges against Lieut. Hankey and Lieut. Young, of the Royal Air Force. They were accused of stealing stores from the Hurst Park Depot of the Royal Air Force, and it was alleged that the officers, instead of removing to other depots, goods of which they had charge, sold them and pocketed the proceeds.

The jury found both prisoners guilty. Lieut. Hankey was sentenced to twelve months and Lieut. Young to nine months imprisonment in the second division. It was stated that as the result of the conviction both officers would lose a considerable gratuity.

THE CHARGE AGAINST SOCIETY ARTIST.

INNOCENT CORRESPONDENCE.

The investigation into the naturalization of M. Philip Laszlo, the well known Hungarian portrait painter, and allegations against his loyalty, was resumed at the Law Courts yesterday by the Certificates of Naturalization Revocation Committee, consisting of Mr. Justice Salter, Viscount Hambleden, and his Honour Judge Radcliffe, K.C. This is a tribunal to whom the Home Secretary has power to refer inquiry when the question of the revocation of a certificate of naturalization arises, and on whose recommendations he acts. Ordinarily its proceedings take place in camera, but a public hearing may be granted on the application of the Crown or of the naturalized person concerned, if the circumstances are considered sufficiently important. Laszlo applied for naturalization on August 15th 1914—eleven days after hostilities began—and the certificate was granted on August 29 of that year. After being interrogated by the authorities of Scotland Yard, he was interned, in September, 1917, and it was in consequence of suspicions as to his attitude and of certain acts he had committed which it was supposed indicated disaffection and disloyalty that the question of the revocation of his certificate arose.

The Attorney-General made general allegations of disaffection and disloyalty, and of communicating with the enemy during the war, but added three specific charges—that he supplied money to an escaped Austrian officer named Horn, that he sent letters to, and received letters from Hungary, not through the ordinary medium of the post, but through the Dutch diplomatic bag, and that he had attempted to send letters to Hungary viâ New York.

The case for the Crown being concluded, Earl Selborne gave evidence.

He said he had known Laszlo since 1910 and regarded him as incapable of doing anything dishonourable or treacherous.

Sir John Simon, K.C., in opening Laszlo's case said that the sister of the Foreign Minister in Holland had come to England to give evidence as to the innocent nature of the correspondence between Laszlo and her brother in Buda-Pesth, for whom she acted as intermediary.

Laszlo, said Counsel, had never wilfully transgressed the regulations. Directly he heard that it was wrong to send relations money and letters he ceased to do so.

The hearing was again adjourned.

TOTAL PROHIBITION IN THE UNITED STATES.

Unless a miracle intervenes, the United States goes "bone dry" from coast to coast on the 1st July. There is just time for those with plenty [illegible] prices of spirits, wines, and liquors [illegible]. The favourite midday occupation in big American cities to-day is to attend auctions, where you may buy cases of drink at three times the usual price. There is brisk bidding everywhere, and almost every house with a cellar is stocking up for a long siege. The most depressing sight to brewers is the spectacle of tens of thousands of public-houses and gin palaces already deserted. The Salvation Army will take as many as possible for tea-rooms.

In every city, people are booking seats in the restaurants for a glorious farewell to the demon rum, which will last well into the small hours of July 1, when prohibition becomes effective. As a compensation for what is to be lost, there is a movement afoot called "Buttermilk Day." The only fly in the ointment is the extraordinary demand for drugs, such as heroin and opium, which will apparently be substituted by some strong drink.

OFFICER'S TRIBUTE TO HIS WIFE.

In the will left by Major Baird, one of the first American army officers from New York to be killed in France, a remarkably affectionate tribute is paid to Mrs. Baird, to whom he leaves his entire estate, valued at £4,000.

The eulogy, which forms a considerable part of the will, says in part: "I want to say to the world that my wife, in my estimation, is the most perfect woman I ever saw, heard or knew of. She is endowed with marvellous courage, a very strong will, and an intensely high ideal of honour. Her love has never at any time diminished, but grown always, until I feel it has reached the point that can reasonably be considered the acme of perfect love. I am the richest of men in that I am plessed with the truest and most honourable, loving wife in the world."

Major Baird said he had never broken a promise or pledge to his wife nor ever deceived or told her a falsehood, "except as necessary to buy her presents and pleasantly surprise and cheer her."

COTTON STRIKE NOT SETTLED.

It is officially announced that in the dispute between the Lancashire employers and workers the operative cotton spinners have rejected the terms of the proposed settlement which was reported to have been effected at a joint conference held at Manchester on Monday. The decision for rejection was reached at a meeting held at Southport but it was agreed to call a meeting for tomorrow to discuss the whole question.

DERBY MEN'S PROSPECTS.

Replying to a question in the House of Commons Captain Guest said he could add nothing further to the previous statements regarding the release of the men enlisted under the Derby scheme. They numbered about 300,000 and it was obvious that the whole of them could not be released immediately after Peace has been signed.

He hoped, however that, it would be possible gradually to diminish the forces which are now being kept at the disposal of the War Office.

The Ottawa authorities now have a captive airship over the city watching for any possible hostile movements on the part of the strikers.

TOMMY'S DOG.

What is to be the fate of Tommy's pet? This is a question which is exercising the minds of many who during their enforced absence from home have become attached to and found a pal in the best sense of that much abused term in a member of the canine breed.

We are all familiar with this type of pets, of mascots, he is perhaps the most popular. There is the big cumbersome mastiff, the noisy terrier and now to the collection has been added a diverse variety of Teuton breed, yet responsive as their fellows.

One recalls their comradeship, their share in the discomforts now happily past, the feeling of fellowship which their presence gave in moments of danger, their devotion at all times. In lighter vein one calls to mind their distaste of anything not associated with things military, their adaptability, one might almost say their mimicry of Tommy's characteristics as a scrounger and now with increasing demobilization arises the question of what is to become of him.

Reluctantly perhaps he will be handed over to a comrade. There is a strong case for official action. To many a man the cost of quarantine is prohibitive, apart from the separation involved and so it comes about that this class of pet is cast adrift or eagerly adopted by a resident who is quick to appreciate the good points of dogs of the British strain trained and bred as many of our war dogs have been. One realises the difficulties in the way and we leave it at that, but it is a problem which calls we believe for some notice if not sympathetic action.

LANGUAGE STUDY.

In connection with the letters that have been reaching us advocating that all ranks in the Rhine Army should lose no time in acquiring the knowledge of another tongue, many people have conceived the idea that we British are incapable of learning foreign languages well.

It is true that, compared with our own, the grammars of most other tongues are more complicated in structure, but surely this should not deter the Briton from studying another language or even more than one.

It has been said over and over again that the man who knows two languages is worth two men, and, with regard to trade, there was never a truer saying.

We must exhibit, in the future, much more enterprise with reference to languages, just as the traders of foreign countries before the war, and just as they have already begun to do, now that hostilities have ceased.

German prisoners in England were always allowed ample leisure for purposes of study and one of their principal subjects was Spanish. This, in itself, indicates an intention of extensive trade with South America. They were also acquiring a no mean knowledge of English. In short, they were thinking of the future.

It is true that English is spoken almost everywhere. Travellers have been known to have met with English-speaking natives in most outlandish places, but such occurrences are extremely rare.

We must not expect English to be spoken wherever we may wish to trade or with whichever country we desire to correspond; we must, in the future, acquire a sound knowledge of the language of the folk with whom we deal. By this means we waste no time and our transactions become much more profitable.

At the present time the study of foreign tongues is much more necessary to the British race than ever it was before, since many of our young men, having lived an outdoor life for a year or so, will no longer be content with the routine of the usual business office.

They have developed that peculiar sense, the Wanderlust. Their hearts are larger, their lungs have expanded, their limbs are stronger; they desire to spread across the world—in the interests of Great Britain and their own.

Many will, of course, proceed to the colonies, but by no means all, because there will be innumerable openings for enterprising travellers, business men in other lands — to name a few, all the countries of South and Central America, both the West and East Indies, Russia, and other European powers.

And if we are to compete with other nations we must of necessity acquire as sound a knowledge as possible of the idiom of the land with which we deal.

In the most important countries of the world, the education authorities are impressing the need for language study upon the people; in some cases it is being enforced. Intelligent parents are doing the same.

Hitherto the British have not taken kindly to this branch of learning. There remains no doubt, however, that those young men who have the will and energy to plod along with their grammar books and excercises, and whose work is supported by ambition, have a bright future before them.

Upon these depend Britain's prestige, and her power to lead the world in every branch of commercial enterprise.

A NIGHT AT THE OPERA.

Dear Maister Editor,

THE PRICE.

Sweet are the fruits of Victory; we shall see
Gay coloured bunting floating in the breeze.
Once more the conquerors, once again proud, free,
But who has paid?
Not we, the few that now remain and strive
To put behind those awful days gone past.
Not any soul that now is still alive,
But those who died.
Yes: Our Dear Dead—and those they left behind,
Who watched and waited, waited all in vain
With broken hearts, and faces pale and lined:
They too have paid.
But surely God as made a special care,
Of those who waited, waited all in vain,
Of those who lost their loved ones, way out there
Of those who paid.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

DEBATING SOCIETIES.

Sir,—I am in entire agreement with A.H.T who, in his letter in to-day's issue, emphasizes the educational value of debating societies.

Apart from the considerable knowledge which the process of discussion imparts, there is no finer means of achieving fluency of speech and thought than by taking part in public debate.

Mr. Asquith, among many of our most successful public speakers, makes no secret about his early experience being gained as a result of frequent participation in the discussions of a humble debating society.

T.U.G.

LEARN A LANGUAGE.

Sir,—Perhaps "Iris" will be interested to know the outcome of an effort made early in the year to start a language class, such as he suggests in your issue of yesterday.

With the consent of the Commanding Officer of my Battalion, who, by the way, was never more valuable than when on the subject of fraternization, a class was started and the services of the local schoolmaster were engaged.

A charge of one mark a lesson was made—a small one considering the present rate of exchange. Officers and men attended, and the experiment met with a certain amount of success, spoiled only by demobilization and eventual breaking-up of the Battalion.

Let "Iris," if he is billetted outside Cologne, as I presume he is, get into touch with a local educational dignitary and all will be plain sailing if there is a real desire to master languages.

ATKINS.

ABOUT CHURCH SERVICES.

Sir,—In the units stationed some distance from the big centres such as Cologne, Bonn or Aachen, there is generally provision made to hold services in their camps on most Sundays for the Church of England officers and men, but little seems to be done for the Roman Catholics. They often appear to be quite forgotten when arrangements are made for other denominations. As one of them, I think this is a grievance worth ventilating.

FIDELIS.

THE CANTEEN GROUSE.

Sir,—May I be permitted to support "M.G.C." in what we may now regard as the daily "canteen grouse?" The complaints are not without reason.

Week by week the regimental canteen allotment is quickly swallowed up, and with the appearance of the familiar "No cigarettes," the men are obliged to make use of the E.F.C. canteen in Cologne. Those who have seen the queue outside these premises will realise what this means. Often enough the greater part of an afternoon is spent in an endeavour to reach the counter, and many men rather than waste their time prefer to return, less the much-favoured solace.

Now it seems to me that much of the difficulty can be overcome, if regimental allotments are increased. Failing this the canteen should be re-organized.

A "change" counter should be set up, and another set apart for the exclusive sale of cigarettes. Much time is wasted in the giving of change and argument as to the validity of certain paper money.

The exercise of a "system" would, I am sure, relieve congestion and incidentally improve one's temper.

R.H.A.

CAUSES OF THE GREAT WAR.—III.

In our last article we saw that Austria was confronted with the alternative of localising the dispute with Serbia or of widening it into a European question.

What we have to realise is that behind the attempt to humiliate Serbia was the intention of challenging Russia, and with Russia, France. Before we proceed to examine minutely the nature of the demands formulated by Austria with German support, we must carry our minds back to the state of affairs in July 1914 in England, France and Russia. To take England first—on July 24th, the Irish crisis was at its height.

The Buckingham Palace Conference of 21-24th July had just failed to bring about a solution of the Ulster question by consent. Ulster was armed, and openly defying the Government of Mr. Asquith to apply force; the Nationalist Volunteers had begun to arm also.

Anyone who consults the file of a London newspaper for July 1914, will there find thrice as much matter on the Irish deadlock as on the European crisis. It was prospective civil war within the United Kingdom, and not a general European war—which all but a few diplomatists thought preventable by negotiation—that was occupying the minds of the Ministry and the nation.

In France, politicians of Paris were wholly preoccupied with the Caillaux political scandal. The Caillaux trial occupied an equally important place in the newspaper columns with the Irish question, whilst the Serbian-Austrian question was relegated to a very subsidiary position.

Meanwhile Russia had her own troubles in the shape of strike-riots. These had begun on May Day, and had been continuing intermittently ever since.

The Caillaux trial being then due, the President of the Republic, accompanied by M. Viviani, the new Premier, and the Foreign Minister, arrived on 20th of July to pay a ceremonial visit to the Czar of Russia at Cronstadt.

On the day when the Austrian Minister at Paris served the ultimatum document upon the Quai d'Orsay, there was no Premier or Foreign Minister to receive it, and no President to be consulted.

Putting together the Irish crisis, the Caillaux trial, and the long continued Petrograd riots, some observers said that the precise moment for the launching of the Austrian ultimatum had been skilfully chosen.

The three Entente Powers were each so engrossed with their own internal troubles that their Foreign Ministers would find it hard to concentrate their attention on the new crisis.

To face the possibility of war abroad during a desperate home crisis, requires a strong mind. Nevertheless, if the Government at Vienna was counting on the possibility of disunion among the Entente statesmen, or of their shrinking from dealing with the question from fear of a reopening of the whole Eastern question, it was doomed to disappointment. In each of the three capitals where the Austrian note was most unwelcome, the Government took up the question at once, thrusting aside the urgent domestic troubles as matters of minor importance. How this raised the question to wider issues will form the subject of our next article.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

Theatre and Opera House.

The new theatrical and operatic season commences on August 31st. At the theatre (Schauspielhaus) "Torquato Tasso" by Goethe will be played. Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream" will be staged the week following.

"Tristan and Isolde" will be produced on the opening night at the Opera House. The orchestra will be under the direction of Herr Otto Klemperer. On Sept. 6th Puccinis "Tosca" is announced, while Mozart's "Cosi fan Tutte" will follow on Sept. 27th.

The Tiger Pips.

All who appreciate a bright and breezy evening's amusement should make a point of seeing the show staged by the "Tiger Pips" the talented combination associated with the Pioneer Battalion of the Leicestershire Regt., stationed for a short time in the Zülpich area. Their talent has been much remarked upon in the Brühl district where the Battn., was in training up to a few weeks ago. The O.C. Party, Lieut. Steijes writes to say that he has several vacant dates, and, having seen the entertainment, we say that units requiring a visit would do well to get into touch with him. The show has been revised in its entirety and much new business introduced, while the stage properties and dressing have been completely overhauled.

At Warderburg

Performing at Warderburg, which by the way, has an admirable concert hall, the "Tiger Pips" led by the two comedians, Messrs. Whitebread and Whitehead, were in great vein. The show gave evidence of careful rehearsal and Col. Lambton, D.S.O., officers and men of the Battalion had every reason to congratulate themselves upon the success of the evening.

A B.E.L.C. Concert.

A very delightful concert was given by the Western Divisional String Orchestra at the British Empire Leave Club on Wednesday evening, under the able conductorship of Lieut. J. Ainslie Murray, A.R.A.M. It was hard to believe that the band had only been in existence for two months, so excellent was the ensemble. The programme opened with the "Poet and Peasant" overture by Suppé, followed by Sibelius' "Valse Triste." Other items which were much appreciated were Fincke's "Gavotte" and "The March of the Giants." Pte. J. F. Shaw, 53rd South Wales Borderers, sang "Kashmiri Love Song," his fine voice filling the hall, and thoroughly delighting the audience. The violin solo by Dr. Young was received with great enthusiasm. He played a serenade by Deula and the audience would not be satisfied until he had played two encores.

New Dances.

Another very successful dance was held the other evening at the B.E.L.C. As the weather was a little cooler it made the evening all the more enjoyable. Exhibitions of the "Decimore Waltz" and the "On Leave Fox-Trot" were given and afterwards practised and thoroughly enjoyed.

The regular attendants of the B.E.L.C., Wanst Drives I am sure will be sorry to hear that Pte. Price has been demobilized. He has always undertaken the duties of M.C. and will be very much missed both on Thursday evenings and also at the dances and dancing classes where he has been of very great assistance.

Ford the Fiddler.

When you see "The Robin Hoods," look out for Aubrey Ford. I have not yet had the pleasure of meeting the other members of the Company, but I knew Aubrey in civilian days. He is quite "The big shakes" in violinists and is making audiences sit up. I believe I am right in saying he is a Professor at the London College of Music. He will be already familiar to London concert goers.

Stotzheim Amusements.

Incidently I have received the following from a member of "The Robin Hoods" party: "Re Capt. Batty's remarks about no other party having appeared in Stotzheim before, I might say "The Robin Hoods" gave a show last February to the 8th Brigade, and so successfully that they had to pay two return visits."

"King's" Make Merry.

Quite an enjoyable little concert was given by the 13th King's Liverpool Regt., at Lieburg-Mulden the other evening. 2 Lt. Russell was responsible for the arrangements. There was a galaxy of talent, including Capt. Heckerhill, M.C., Lieut. White, L/Cpl. Warnock, Ptes Cowre, Horton, Hughes, Walters, Walsch and Dmr. Woodcock. After a very pleasant evening Col. Potter, C.M.G., D.S.O., moved a vote of thanks, which was taken up by all present in good style.

Y.M.C.A. Activities.

The following are a few of the fixtures arranged by the Y.M.C.A. at Loreley Hall. This evening Capt. G.N. Cooper will lecture on "Engineering Marvels" (with lantern illustrations). To-morrow the grand music competition, organised by Mr. Arnold Jones, takes place. On Saturday Capt. R. S. Gwatkin Williams is to give his interesting lecture, "In the hands of the Senussi." They are announced to start at 7 p.m. each evening.

Another Recital.

The famous association of Austrian chamber musicians, Prof. Rosé and his partners, will give a recital in the Grand Hall of the Burgergesellschaft on Sunday next the 29th June. Quartettes of Haydn, Beethoven and Schubert will be played. The concert begins at 6 o'clock.

In Few Words.

After their run at the Apollo Theatre, "The Tabs," I hear, are to make a lengthy tour of the Divisional areas.

Apropos of the Rhine Army Musical Societies, an interesting announcement will appear in this column to-morrow.

This evening there is a whist drive at the B.E.L.C. The Pipers of the 11th Royal Scots will be in attendance.

The Kristall Palast, a well-known Cologne cabaret, announce that commencing July 1st they will stage "the finest boxers in the world." Does Mr. C.B. Cochran know of this?

ENGLAND'S BEST AMATEUR SIDE.

THREE-DAY MATCH AT LORD'S.

GREAT GAME BETWEEN AUSTRALIANS AND GENTLEMEN'S XI.

"I advise all cricketers who can spare the time—especially those interested in amateur cricket—to get to Lord's to see the three-day match which begins there to-day. The title of it is "A Gentlemen of England XI. v. The Australians."—Col. Philip Trevor, C.B.E.

Thus wrote Col. Philip Trevor on Monday, who, after seeing the majority of the first-class counties perform this season, expresses the opinion that in point of all-round excellence the Australians have a better side that any English county can put in the field. Their fielding and running between wickets is alone believed to be worth, roughly, 70 or 80 runs a day to them. If they beat the Gentlemen's XI they may be said to have defeated our best amateur team.

At Lord's on Monday the home team opened very well, scoring 378 for six wickets, as the result of sheer good batting. This was compiled in rather more than 4½ hours of actual play. At this stage of the match the weather presented signs of being unsettled, and the touring team were obliged to bat on a sticky wicket which is not exactly to their liking. P. F. Warner captained the Gentlemen's XI.

"COLOGNE POST" CUP MATCHES.

NOTABLE BOWLING.

MIDLAND D.A.C. (64) v. 9th CORPS H.A. (26) on the former's ground on Monday, when the D.A.C. won their first match in The Cologne Post Cup. The visitors batted first, but did not survive very long before the splendid bowling of Capt. Brewin O.B.E. (5 for 14) and 2nd Lieut. Jeffries (4 for 3), and were dismissed for a total of 26.

The D.A.C. commenced badly and only managed to draw ahead after the fall of the sixth wicket. The last wicket, however, was the feature of the day's play. 2nd Lieut. Jeffries, getting in some powerful hits, made 23 (not out), and Capt. Brewin O.B.E. 12 before he was run out. Gunner Crossley (16), also batted well for the home team, who compiled in all 64.

BEST IS BEST.

77 SIEGE BATTERY (183) v. MIDLAND DIV. H.Q. (62) at Brühl on Monday. 77 Siege Battery batted first and knocked up the score of 183, the feature of the innings being the fine batting of Mills, who, going in at the fall of the first wicket, carried out his bat for 93, and Cpl. Fenton batted well for 42. Wheatley, of the Midland Division team, batted well for 33, the rest doing very little against the bowling of Cpl. Fenton, who had 6 wickets for 26 runs, and Sergt. Garmousway 3 for 25. The Div. team tried six bowlers, the most successful being Best (5 wickets for 45) and Triston (3 for 38). The fielding of the winners was a notable feature of the game.

92nd FIELD AMBULANCE (84) v. 91st FIELD AMBULANCE (27), on the 92nd F.A. ground on Monday. The visitors batted first but could only produce 27 runs against the bowling of Cpl. Langford and Pte. Richardson, the former taking 7 wickets for 18 runs, and the latter 2 for 7. The leading scorers for the home team were Cpl. Langford (28), Pte. Bancroft (22), and Pte. Roach (16).

BILLIARD MATCH AT KALK.

The Water Tank Coy. of Ehrenfeld brought an excellent team to play the Kalk "Dough Boys" in a friendly game of billiards on Monday. The visitors won the first three games, giving the Bakers a severe shaking. However the Bakers pulled up wonderfully in the remaining three games. Results:—

R.A.S.C. Water Tanks 535;
"Dough Boys" 511.

The Bakeries have no further fixtures and invite any team in friendly rivalry. Teams 6 a side, game 100 up.

SPORTING REFLECTIONS.

"Dough Boys" Sports.

Travelling back to town on the 6.39 from Coblenz the other afternoon, I noticed little groups of American soldiers get in and out at various wayside stations, carrying the implements of sport. Cricket does not seem to be at all popular with them, probably owing to the slowness of the game. It was baseball, baseball, all the way. A Senegalese soldier, whom Thomas Fuller, the eminent mediaeval divine, might have termed "a saint in ebony" eyed the dangerous-looking bat very suspiciously. Perhaps he thought the war had broken out again.

What of Quoits?

Few genuine games of quoits were played by British "Tommies" in France or Belgium during the war, and in Rhineland the devotees of this ancient pastime seem to be equally few and far between. What is the reason? It is a hefty game of skill for old and young, which can be played on the poorest ground, and within an area of comparatively small dimensions. It is, moreover, not too strenuous for the tropical sort of weather with which, until the arrival of Jupiter Pluvius, we were somewhat embarrassingly endowed.

A Land of Bowlers.

The voice of the grouser is heard in the land of our birth, here, there, and everywhere. In the cricket arena he is not satisfied with the speed with which the great national game is played. Out here there is no such cause for "jibbing," it being no uncommon spectacle for a side to be out without a single batsman reaching double figures. A Rhineland team the other day ran up a dozen runs in a match. This is a veritable land of bowlers. Can it be the result of throwing hand-grenades?

The Rhineland "Jockey Club."

Not the least interesting feature of the lists of registered horses, which the Rhineland "Jockey Club" has issued, and which appear in serial form in the columns of The Cologne Post, is the names of the "gee-gees," and one wonders how some of these appellations came to be selected. That must, I fear, remain a secret locked up in the bosom of each equine owner. One of my lady friends is strongly of opinion that it must be a case of "thereby hangs a tale". I wonder.

THE RAMBLER.

The highest number of cricket runs in a year in England is T. Hayward's 3,518 in 1906, which he compiled in 61 innings (8 times not out), average 66.37. The previous best was 3,309 by Abel in 1901, in 68 innings (8 not outs), average 55.15.

H. Green at Stamford Bridge on May 12, 1913, ran 20 miles, 952 yds. in 2 hours.

The longest time for remaining under water is Georges Pouliquen's 6 mins 29 4-5 secs, at the Piscine de la Gare, Paris, Nov. 2nd, 1912.

C. Rowell ran 100 miles in America in 1882 in 13 hrs. 26 mins. 30 secs.

"THE MOTOR OWNER."

One of the most sumptuous puplications ever produced in England has just come to hand, namely No. 1 of "The Motor Owner," printed by W. H. Smith & Son, and issued by the Periodical Publishing Co., Ltd. The magazine, which will be published monthly at a shilling, is printed in four colours and a more artistic opus one can hardly imagine. Its object is to assist the man who owns a car as well as he who wishes to buy, and the proprietary, it should be noted, are completely independent both of motor manufacturing interests, and of large publishing houses. It has been launched by a group of private motorists who believe that the car-owner deserves more consideration than he has hitherto received. Among several highly informative articles may be mentioned "Cars in Prospect: Details of New Models for 1919"; "How the Motor Car Helps the Aeroplane"; "Car-Owners And The War;" "Is Car Design All Wrong?" "A Revolution In Steering"; and "Petrol v. Benzol: Points In Favour of the Home-Produced Fuel."

By means of the now abolished cradle cannon W. Cook in July, 1907, scored 42,746.

The pole-jumping record is held by an American amateur, Mark S. Wright, who cleared 13 ft. 2 1/4 ins. in America in 1912.

Echoes from Rhineland.

Labelled Villages.

The system of painting in large letters the name of a village on a conspicuous wall near its entrance is one that might with advantage be adopted in England. The idea has many points in its favour which the authorities of practically all continental parts do not fail to recognise. In the thri ling days of war, the Germans as they moved through France and Belgium made good any deficiency there may have been in this respect, and many of us were saved much time, map reading and irritation in consequence.

After his Bath.

The other day a soldier was seen to emerge from the Kaiser Wilhelm Baths. A fine upstanding fellow he was with the real military spring about him. But what detracted from his dignity was, that adhering to the seat of his F. S. trousers was a tablet of brilliantly tinted scented soap, which twinkled with every oscillation of his legs. No doubt he had sought for it high and low in the sanctity of the unrobing chamber. But it must be confessed that the sight of it so ostentatiously affixed to the seat of his slacks caused everyone in the street — Germans and Britishers — to smile broadly.

Arts and Crafts.

It will be welcome news to many that an arts and crafts exhibition of the work of officers and other ranks of the Rhine Army is to be held about the beginning of October. The exhibition is to last four days and will include a photographic section and a display of the work done by students of the Army Technical College recently opened at Siegburg. It is proposed to classify exhibits under three groups: (a) Art, (b) Engineering and Woodwork, and (c) Arts and Crafts, while each group is to be divided into numerous sections and sub-sections. A miscellaneous section will comprise exhibits not coming under any of the other fifteen defined sections, but, in the opinion of the judges, of sufficient merit to warrant exhibition. The photographic section will prove a very popular feature if one may judge from the numbers of soldiers who may be seen about with cameras. It is obvious that the net is so widely spread that no one who is handy with his fingers and ideas need be left out.

The Penalties of Peace.

Some excitement was caused in Cologne on Monday night owing to a rumour having got abroad that Peace had been signed. A small crowd had gathered in the Hohe Strasse round a vendor of "Extra Blatts." Strangely enough the chief purchasers were Tommies, who stood in the rain complacently gazing at the small "Specials" — which they obviously couldn't read. A soldier was seen to ask another what the paper said, and on this man replying "Peace is signed mate," the first Tommy ejaculated. "Bl— is it? Well I'd better go and have a couple of 'wets' before we're confined to billet."

Tommy As a Glutton.

There are certain billeting areas in Rhineland which just now are very much favoured by the young soldier. I refer to the districts in which fields of luscious strawberries are to be seen and which form a happy hunting ground for Tommy. The buxom maidens, whose task it is to collect the fruit, are after all very susceptible to the wiles of our young friends, and while "schokolade" has often played a major part in the transaction, gift strawberries have figured in the daily dietary, so plentiful is the fruit for which we in Cologne are asked four marks a pound. Cherries, too, are to be had for the asking, or rather raking. Travelling in the direction of Bonn, a company were seen putting the regulation ten minutes rest to good purpose. After all, the cherries were anyone's property. Why worry?

Springed Cycle Wheels.

Contrary to the opinion of many people, the adoption of metal, spring tyres on bicycle wheels is by no means a brilliant and original inspiration prompted by the shortage of rubber in Germany during the war. The idea is as old as the hills, as a matter of fact. In the British Museum to-day there are to be seen bicycles of a very early pattern, the wheels of which are tyred very similarly to the cycle one sees in large numbers in Cologne to-day. Springed cycle wheels showed signs of coming into general usage in succession to the solid rubber tyres of the "bone-shaker" days but happily our nerves were spared the noise and rattle for which these are responsible by some ingenious person introducing the pneumatic idea.

On a War Basis.

The recent movement of troops, although anticipated, was not without its humorous side and we are afraid that many a portly regimental quartermaster who disappeared with the institution of the regimental cadre, would have been reduced to despair. One reason was the immense accumulation of stores and kit. How many officer's valises will turn the scale at the regulation weight with British "Warms", white flannels, sports kit and photographic apparatus figuring amongst other things in one's possession nowadays? Very few we should imagine! Full use was made of the "dumps," but even there the transport carried its full loads. Transport officers had much to blaspheme about. Staffs lacking experience did not help things and for once the men who made their nightly journey with the rations to the line and guided the pack ponies in the direction of the Rhine came in for compliments.

Going Astray.

However, the normal has been reached and we can breathe again, but at least one mess will chuckle from time to time at the recollection of how its mess kit went astray on a lorry which did a full journey in one day, and dumped stores at the ultimate destination of the battalion. To requisition crockery was an easy matter, but the half loaf which was borrowed from another company mess seemed more important alongside a pile of plates and dishes with the remains of the whisky allotment twenty kilometres further on.

Tramcar Gallantry.

One sees some interesting incidents sometimes on the crowded trams of Cologne. The other day for instance the wife of an English officer boarded one, but there was no seat vacant. The conductor with some chivalry called for a volunteer to give up a seat. There was no response. Then he demanded that a stolid individual reading a German newspaper should do so, and with a snort of disgust he proceeded to rise. The English woman was no sooner seated in his place than a solidly built hausfrau carrying a market basket, got up and suggested that the displaced man should take her seat. Without a second's hesitation this gallant individual did so.

Using Paper.

During the war we were often told that the German people were reduced to wearing paper clothes owing to the scarcity of cotton and woollen materials. This may have been a fact though it is doubtful if anyone in the Rhine Army has come across any of this paper clothing in actual use. But in the advance of last autumn a good deal of ingeniously made paper cloth and canvas was picked up. It was used for camouflage and also for palliases among other things. The most notable use for paper in Rhineland appears to be for table-cloths and the custom has much to recommend it. A paper table covering costs scarcely anything and immediately it becomes stained it can be simply thrown away. While linen cloths are perfect when spotlessly clean but when dirty as they too often are, they are an abomination.

Prizes for "Echoes."

The Editor of "The Cologne Post" wants to encourage all ranks of the Rhine Army to make use of their powers of observation and whenever any phase of life in the occupied territory strikes any of his readers or whenever they come across any unusual incident he would like to have a short paragraph about it. Such items should never exceed 150 words, and even shorter notes will be acceptable. Every day the sum of 10 marks will be given for the best sent in, and it should be borne in mind that in awarding the prize, more credit will be given to the subject than to the style of writing, so that lack of literary ability will be no deterrent to anyone. The envelope should have the word "Echoes" in the top left hand corner.

To-day's prize of 10 marks is awarded to Corpe E. Fisher, G.H.Q., Rhine Army.

GETTING BACK MACHINERY.

While the pundits at Paris have been talking about indemnities, the men on the spot, in the French and Belgian spheres of occupation, have been taking quiet steps to secure them. Their very practical modus operandi is as follows:

They arrive in swift motors at a German factory, and proceed to inspect the machinery. The manufacturers' secret marks enable them, in spite of all camouflage, to identify machines of French or Belgian origin. Having identified them, they send for the firm's books in order to ascertain how, when, and from whom the said machines were acquired. Some of them may have been duly bought and paid for in peace time; but others are found to be "war booty" purchased at a nominal price from a German Government department during the war. That point established, the further procedure is sharp and summary.

PHOTOGRAPHS OF UNITS.

The War Museum authorities are very anxious to have group photographs of units and Mr. Nicholson, of Panora Ltd. is at present with the Rhine Army for the express purpose of taking "Panorams" of units etc.

Officers commanding units of which panorams have not yet been taken, should communicate with Mr. Nicholson c/o British Press in order to arrange for time and date.

The taking of the panoram involves no liability: a proof is submitted to the officer in charge and copies may be ordered or not as desired.

It should be noted that horses or troops on parade cannot be taken. As there is a possibility of units being disbanded or troops changed about all those O.'s C. who wish to have these photographic souvenirs of their units taken should communicate with Mr. Nicholson as soon as possible as his dates are likely to be booked up quickly for some time to come.

RENAMING HUN LANDS.

How shall we designate the German colonies that have been rent from her by the war, and some of which, at all events, will almost certainly remain in our possession?

Probably the Bismarck Archipelago will become New Britain, which was the name it bore before we ceded the islands to Germany in 1884.

The Australian Commonwealth Government claims the privilege of re-christening Kaiser Wilhelm's Land, in New Guinea, but what name it shall hereafter be known by has not yet been decided.

Only one thing is sure. These, and other similar German titles, will have to go.

THIRST.

What is the best "quencher" for hot weather? George Steevens, writing of his experiences of thirst on the road to Khartoum, answered unhesitatingly, "Abu Hamed," compounded of gin, vermouth, angostura, lime juice, and soda —especially soda. Of its effects he grew lyrical: "It spreads through body and spirit—not swirling through like the Atbara, but irrigating, like the Nile. It is the soil in the sand, substance in the wind, life in death. Your sap runs again, your biltong muscles take an elasticity, your mummy bones toughen. Your self has sprung up alive, and you almost think you know how it feels to rise from the dead." But I doubt how the mixture would work in London—even if it were obtainable.

ANKLE ONSLAUGHTS.

Insect pests are worrying women who wear open-work stockings. The prolonged drought produced a prolific host of insects, and certain species of gnats are developing a disconcerting interest in dainty ankles. Some women are wearing linen bandages as a protection against these unchivalrous pests.

An official at the Natural History Museum, South Kensington, states that the chief offender is a tiny insect bearing the long name of Ochlerotatus Dorsalis, which breeds in estuaries and explores inland. It is to be found all round London, especially on the Surrey Downs.

Another bloodthirsty gnat is the Pulicaris, which is labelled at the museum as "particularly troublesome in the evening. Its bite is severe, and with many people causes bad sores."

Gossamer stockings are the insects' opportunity, and prevailing fashions provide them with a happy hunting ground.

FURTHER OMINOUS DELAY BY GERMANY.

FLOUTING THE ALLIES.

SIGNATURE AGAIN POSTPONED.

REPARATION FOR SCAPA SINKINGS.

GERMANY'S DANGEROUS PROCRASTINATION.

PROBABLE ULTIMATUM.

Up to late yesterday afternoon the names of the German plenipotentiaries who are to proceed to Versailles to sign the Peace Treaty had not been received by the secretarial staff of the Peace Conference. Although there is little doubt that Germany is finding some difficulty in forming their corps of plenipotentiaries, official circles in London are inclined to think that the delay in naming the delegates is not altogether unintentional. It is probable that the Allies will present an Ultimatum to Germany allowing them a few hours only in which to appoint delegates.

Saturday is now definitely fixed as the day for signature. Preparations for the final ceremony are complete in every detail, having been carefully arranged. The Germans will be received at the Trianon Palace at Versailles without military honours, but military honours will be rendered them when they depart. No protests or German speeches will be allowed by M. Clemenceau, who will preside.

FLOUTING THE ALLIES.

Later.—There is still no news of the departure of German delegates and the questions are being asked: Are the Germans trying to flout the Allies or are they unable to find proper persons to undertake the signature? In authoritative circles the first hypothesis is the most favoured. The attitude of the Germans is declared to be intolerable, and a well-known diplomat told a Press correspondent that certain measures will be taken if the present situation is not resolved within a few hours.

Marshal Foch and the Allied commanders on the Rhine have been advised that the Germans are showing the greatest incivility and truculence and all troops have been told to keep their eyes open for hostile demonstrations.

REACTIONARY UNREST IN GERMANY.

SERIOUS TROUBLE FEARED.

Messages from Berlin state that all things seem to indicate impending disturbances. The political situation is confused and the position of the Government is threatened from all quarters. It is uncertain, if the need arose, whether they would get the support of the troops. Vorwärts says that an attempt will undoubtedly be made to prevail upon the army to carry through a reactionary coup d'état and utters a warning that this will mean the ruin of the German people. The Conservative organ Die Post states that all communication with the Eastern provinces is interrupted and that surprises may be expected from that quarter.

General Daimling, former Governor of Strasburg, writes to the Press energetically defending the action of the Government in agreeing to sign unconditionally. He points out the dire consequence of refusal and concludes by saying that the true national honour consists in Germany again endeavouring to rise and not in heroic attitudes and great words.

TREACHERY ON POLISH FRONT.

News was received yesterday afternoon of a conspiracy by reactionaries to overturn the Government and wreck the peace. East Germany is in a state of tumult and is cut off from communication with Berlin. To-day, just before the Germans are to sign the peace, material proof has been obtained by the Poles that a German plan to attack them has been devised and is ready to be put into execution.

Concentration of troops and even skirmishes are reported from the frontier and it is stated authoritatively that the Allies will take the most energetic measures if the Germans attempt to carry out their plan.

LUDENDORFF'S CHAMPIONS.

The Deutsche Tageszeitung states that a large number of officers sent a telegram to Noske declaring that those who try to arrest Ludendorff in order to surrender him to the Allies will do so over their dead bodies. A number of prominent Germans are talking about resigning when the Peace Treaty is signed. The general staff of the voluntary Landjaeger Corps now stationed at Weimar have handed their resignations to Noske, who again tendered his own resignation but this was refused by the Social Democratic party. Ebert's resignation has also been retracted.

TURKEY'S AMAZING DEMANDS.

A second memorandum was handed in from the Turkish delegation at Paris yesterday. It is understood that the Allies are drafting a general reply which will be confined to Turkish responsibility in the war and will not attempt to solve the question of peace in the East.

The New York Herald (Paris) states that the note handed in by the Turks is an amazing document containing a statement that Turkey insists on the complete unity and independence of the Turkish Empire as it existed before the war! The note admits the independence of Armenia, but proposes that Palestine be given only partial independence; that the Governor be appointed by Turkey and that justice be administered in the name of the Sultan.

SCAPA GERMANS INTERNED IN WORCESTERSHIRE.

DEFIANT AND ARROGANT.

The German Admiral von Reuter and his comrade scuttlers of the German High Seas Fleet arrived from Scapa Flow to-day, and detrained at Gobowen, two miles from Oswestry. There were two trains, each carrying a load of thirty officers and 400 men, closely guarded by a strong escort of Gordon Highlanders. Admiral von Reuter travelled in the first train, and as he stepped out on to the platform the bitterly cold wind made him look the picture of health. He got into a car which was waiting, and was motored to Park Hall, where he is under close arrest. He was accompanied by two officers as escort. The men were marched through the village to Henlle Camp, adjoining Park Hall Camp, ten minutes' walk from Gobowen, still led by their officers and under strong local guards of the Royal Defence Corps, which reinforced the Highlanders' guard. Their attitude was proud, defiant and arrogant, and they marched like haughty victors, singing and whistling till brought to their senses by the women of Gobowen, who hooted and booed and shook their fists at the insolent German prisoners.

BIG THREE DISCUSS SCAPA.

REPARATION CLAIMED.

The Council of Three, having received the official reports, discussed the Scapa Flow affair yesterday regarding suggestions which have been made, that the British authorities were responsible for the occurrence. The following facts have transpired. When the armistice was negotiated the British Naval and other representatives on the Supreme War Council strongly urged their demand for the surrender of the German fleet. The French military authorities, however, particularly desired a speedy conclusion of the armistice on account of the serious daily loss of life on the Western front. They put forward the view that surrender was not essential for purposes of the armistice and if insisted upon might occasion delay. They therefore suggested internment in neutral ports.

This view was supported by Admiral Benson of the United States and a compromise was ultimately effected whereby internment in a British port was decided upon.

From this it is obvious that responsibility does not rest on Great Britain from an international standpoint. In saying that, however, it is important to observe that the British authorities, do not suggest that the decision arrived at was not the best under the circumstances. One must endeavour to reconstitute the atmosphere which existed when the armistice was prepared. All the Allies were anxious to end as soon as possible the terrible loss of life.

ACT OF GROSS BAD FAITH.

The Allied and Associated Powers have addressed a note to Germany on the sinking of the fleet at Scapa. It states that the sinking of the ships constituted at once a violation of the Armistice, a destruction of the pledge handed over, and an act of gross bad faith. The Admiral in charge attempted to justify his action by alleging that the armistice was ended. By virtue of a communication addressed to the German delegation on June 16th, the armistice could only terminate on Germany's refusal to sign; or, according to international law, if no answer was returned, any violation of an armistice by individuals acting on their own initiative only confirms the right of demanding punishment of the offenders and an indemnity for losses sustained. Therefore it is open to the Allies to bring before a military tribunal the persons responsible. Furthermore the incident gives the Allies the right to reparation.

The incident is not an isolated one. The burning of French flags constitutes another deliberate breach of the Peace conditions accepted by Germany. In consequence the Allies declare that they will exact the necessary reparation.

ESTHONIANS DEFEAT GERMAN MILITIA.

ZEPPELIN SHOT DOWN.

The Esthonian Legation has received a telegram stating that the Esthonian troops in the direction of Roop and Venden have defeated the German Baltic Militia, put them to flight, and recaptured Roop and Venden, which were recently taken by the German Baltic troops. The Esthonians are now advancing quickly to the south in the direction of the Dvina. It is confirmed that the German Baltic Militia includes a great number of German occupation troops. The Esthonians shot down at Venden a big armed German airship.

ITALY'S NEW DELEGATES.

The new Italian delegation to the Peace Conference in Paris will probably consist of the Marchese Imperiali, the Ambassador in London; Signor Tittoni, the new Minister for Foreign Affairs! and Signori Scialoja, Marconi, and Maggiorino Ferraris. Signor Salandra, the ex-Premier, declined to join the delegation.

SPARTACIST OUTBREAK AT HAMBURG.

MARTIAL LAW.

Martial Law has been proclaimed at Hamburg and its suburbs, Altona and Wandsbeck. On Tuesday evening the Spartacists, who had entrenched themselves behind the Kaiser Wilhelm Hotel, unsuccessfully attacked the Town Hall, which was defended by Government troops. They then tried to burn the Stock Exchange. After capturing the railway station they again attacked the Town Hall. Ten dead and fifty wounded were counted.

On Wednesday morning the Government troops recaptured the railway station after hard fighting. At midday the troops asked for an armistice to remove the wounded, but this armistice was violated by the Spartacists, who succeeded at last in storming and occupying the Town Hall.

Prisons also were stormed and prisoners liberated. The building of the tribunal has been looted and all municipal records and documents burnt. The police took no part in the fighting, which was very severe and extensive, artillery being used on both sides.

By the evening all official buildings had been occupied by the revolutionaries.

A provisory commission of twelve has been formed, which is negotiating with the former Senate and the Commandatur.

The cabinet has ordered General von Lettow-Vorbeck to march against Hamburg.

Noske has issued a proclamation in which he says that riots have to be suppressed by unrestrained force of arms if necessary, and that similar measures will be used in the event of strikes, to ensure protection of workers whose work is essential to the community.

BEDFORD CAMP W.A.A.C. TRAGEDY.

SENSATIONAL DEVELOPMENT.

The mystery attending the murder of Miss Nellie Rault, the young W.A.A.C. who was stabbed to death at Haynes Park Camp on May 12th, took a new and sensational turn yesterday, when the Director of Public Prosecutions instructed Scotland Yard to re-open enquiries.

Chief Inspector Wensley is in charge of the case and went to Bedford to confer with the local police. Important developments are expected.

It will be remembered that the coroner's jury returned an open verdict.

CANADIAN RIOT AT EPSOM.

BATTLE IN DARKNESS.

The inquest on Station-Sergeant Thomas Green, the victim of the riot at Epsom on the 17th inst., was resumed yesterday. Two Canadian soldiers named Frank Harold Wilkie and James Connors, who were remanded at Bow-street, were present in custody.

Inspector Pawley, who was on duty at the police station on June 17, said a crowd of soldiers followed two of their comrades who had been arrested, and he heard one of them say outside the station: "Come on, boys; let's go in and fetch them out." This crowd was dispersed.

About 11.30 p.m. a large crowd of soldiers arrived at the station armed with sticks and pieces of wood fencing. Stones began to fly about, and a rush was made on the station.

The police were only twelve in number, and were overp wered. Witness ordered a retreat. Station-Sergeant Green suggested that they should charge the soldiers from the rear, and they succeeded in clearing the men off that part. The battle went on in total darkness.

Witness received a blow on the head, and did not see anything more of Green until he saw him in a house opposite lying unconscious.

The camp authorities related the ineffectual attempts made to prevent soldiers going to the station. The camp was disorganised and half the men were out.

The inquiry was again adjourned.

BELGIUM AND PRIORITY OF REPARATION.

The Council of Four yesterday signed a document giving formal approval of and granting priority to Belgium, in the matter of reparation to be paid by Germany, to the amount of one hundred million sterling. The Council also confirmed, says Reuter, a plan to wipe out Belgium's war debt through substitution of German funds for Belgian obligations, the four great powers, subject to approval by their Parliaments, taking over German bonds.

The bonds which the Powers propose to take over are a special issue which the Peace terms require the Germans to make to reimburse Belgium for all sums which Belgium has been forced to expend as the result of the violation of the Treaty of 1839.—British Wireless Service.

BELGIUM'S INDUSTRIAL LOSSES.

The Central Industrial Committee of Belgium, says Reuter, which is formed of delegates from all the co-operative associations of Belgian manufacturers, has collected figures relating to the injury suffered during the war by Belgian industries. The principal losses are: Mines, £26,320,000; iron and steel, £44,300,000; machinery, bridges, framework, and rolling stock, £65,080,000; textiles, £87,940,000; leather and skins, £28,720,000; tramways, water, gas, and electricity, £11,430,000; the total being £391,480,000 up to April, 1919. The figures include the expense of upkeep, losses from lack of work during the war or immediately after, and the help accorded either to the workmen who remained in Belgium or those who were taken prisoner and carried into slavery. The accounts do not include the losses arising from sequestration by the German military authorities, as no figures are as yet available.

Turkey has expressed its readiness to negotiate with Great Britain about the fate of Egypt and Cyprus!

MINISTRY OF MUNITIONS ACTIVITES.

GIGANTIC TRADING.

The Minister of Munitions, Mr. Kellaway, in the House of Commons warmly defended the Ministry against many of its critics, especially those who sought to make the public believe that it was the home of "waste and muddle," because of certain strictures in the Auditor-General's report. Most of these cases were concerned with experimental supplies, where the Ministry had cancelled contracts, and Mr. Kellaway producing a tobacco box from his pocket containing some half a dozen bullets, proceeded with much spirit to point the moral of his tale. He held up two bullets in turn, practically indistinguishable one from the other to the casual eye. Yet while the German air-raiders had scoffed at the one, a single experience of the other had terrified the Gothas so effectually that they never returned. The Whitsuntide raid of 1918 was the last German raid of the war. Yet the enemy had planned another and still larger raid for the following night. What kept them back was their terror of the new British bullet. The Ministry, therefore, was bound to go on ordering big supplies of the best available material at the moment, though pretty sure that it would soon be superseded by the invention of something better.

Other specially interesting statements of Mr. Kelleway included the following:

The introduction of the system of costings has saved the country 300 millions in the Ministry of Munitions alone.

7,344 contracts, involving £102,000,000, are still running.

The Disposals Department has realised £130,000,000 to date. It is getting such good prices for the State that it is now accused of profiteering.

£650,000 was realised from the sale of motor transport in the last three weeks.

DISABLED SOLDIERS AND CIVIL SERVICE.

The Minister of Labour, under instructions from the War Cabinet, has convened a committee to inquire: (1) Into the possibility of the more extensive employment of disabled soldiers in Government departments; (2) Into the question of substituting ex-service men for temporary women clerks in Government departments.

Sir Malcolm G. Ramsay, K.C.B., Assistant Secretary to the Treasury, is chairman. The secretary is Major W. H. Lowe-Watson, D.S.O., D.C.M., St. Ermin's Hotel, London, S.W. 1.

GIANT AEROPLANE CRASH INQUEST.

The inquest on Captain Rawlings and Captain Dunn, the two officers who were killed at Farnborough by the giant Tarrant triplane when starting on its trial flight, was resumed yesterday at Aldershot.

Mr. Tarrant, the designer and builder, giving evidence, described the accident. He said the six engines were started up and when the lower four were accelerated the machine taxied five hundred yards and then turned on its nose. The accident occurred after the top engines were accelerated. In his opinion they were accelerated too suddenly, with the result that the tail pulled up.

A verdict of accidental death was returned.

PRIVATE MOTOR-CYCLES ALLOWED.

An Army Council instruction states that serving officers may import their own private motor-cars and motor-bicycles into France, Flanders, and the territory occupied by the Rhine Army. Transport arrangements must be made and the expense borne by the owners. Petrol, tyres, etc., may be issued from local Army stocks on repayment.

SPEED THE PARTING GUESTS.

Labour troubles at Liverpool having been settled, Canadian Headquarters are resuming the interrupted repatriation of Canadian troops. On Saturday last the Scandinavian sailed with 375 married men and their dependents, and on Monday the Belgic sailed from Liverpool to Halifax with 3,230, mostly made up of Eastern Ontario units. On the same day the Grampian sailed with 300 married men and their wives and families for Quebec. Various other sailings have been arranged for the rest of the month, so that by the beginning of July the number of Canadian troops still in this country should be substantially reduced.

EX-MAYOR COMMITTED FOR TRIAL.

At Southport to-day Mr. Hampson, ex-mayor of the borough, was committed for trial to Liverpool assizes, on charge of fraudulently converting to his own use £22,500 belonging to the Vulcan Manufacturing Company.

Purvis and Hamer two co-directors, were also committed for trial, charged with aiding and abetting.

SERVICE REVOLVERS WANTED.

Anyone with Army revolvers and pistols for disposal will find the Ministry of Munitions willing to purchase them. Suitable weapons are .45" and .455" of service pattern made by Messrs. Webley and Scott. Colt. and Smith and Wessen. and should be sent by parcel post to the Chief Inspector of Small Arms, Enfield Lock, Middlesex, for valuation. The sender may fix his own price for the pistol, and if not will be offered the price of the valuation.

The mail service between Ostend and Dover has been suspended as the result of a seamen's strike.

THE DIEPPE MYSTERY DEEPENS.

SERGEANT'S BODY FOUND.

The mysterious death of Miss Annie Smith, of Luton, a member of Q.M.A.A.C., whose body was found on the shore at Dieppe with a bullet wound, has been followed by dramatic discoveries.

Close to the beach where her body was found a second body has been washed ashore, that of the sergeant to whom she was engaged. He too had died as the result of a bullet wound which had been inflicted by a shot fired from a German revolver. The authorities are offering a reward for the discovery of the revolver.

Miss Smith, it is stated, met the sergeant at Dieppe. He said he was a widower and they became engaged. Then he was ordered to Cologne. It is understood that the hitch in the marriage arrangements was due to the fact that he was unable to prove that he was a widower.

"IMPROPERLY DRESSED" LIBEL ACTION.

In the King's Bench Division yesterday Mr. Gavin Knox Gilchrist, formerly A.P.M. at Southport, sued the Daily Mail for damages for alleged libel, contained in a letter which appeared in that paper reflecting on the conduct of plaintiff as A.P.M. It purported to be written by a subaltern. In consequence of its publication he claims that he lost his appointment.

The letter alleged that plaintiff had pulled up the writer because he was wearing a collar of too light a khaki hue.

Defendants admitted publication and pleaded fair comment on a matter of public importance.

The hearing was adjourned.

THEFT OF ARMY PAY DRAFTS.

At Tower Bridge, Cecil Hall, 35, accountant, of Trinity-road, Wandsworth, was charged on remand before Mr. Bingley with stealing from the Army Pay Office, Buckland Huts, Dover, fifty demobilization postal drafts of the negotiable value of £700, the property of the Secretary of State for War.

The evidence for the prosecution in this case was completed at the last hearing, and was to the effect that the prisoner was alone for two nights in the hut in which the drafts were kept in a locked cupboard. After he was demobilized these drafts were missed. He was arrested by Detective-inspector Cornish in consequence of having left four of the stolen drafts in a taxi-cab at Waterloo Station. In the meantime forty-two of the postal drafts had been cashed at various post-offices.

Prisoner was now further charged with stealing and receiving from the same office at Dover 200 Army money-orders of the negotiable value of £8,000.

A clerk from Lloyds Bank, St. James'-street, S. W., produced a certified copy of the prisoner's banking account. From June, 1918, until the end of February last the account was practically dormant, with a balance of between £2 and £3. Since the prisoner's arrest he had withdrawn £450, and there was now a balance of £41.

Prisoner was again remanded in custody.

MUNITION WORKER'S £24 A WEEK.

Giving evidence at the Old Bailey yesterday in a case of bigamy, Sergeant Dennison said the prisoner, Charles John Young, 27, a mechanic, had earned from £15 to £20 a week, and one week £24, as a munition worker. He was an acetylene welder, and had been employed by a company on piece work. His real wife was in the workhouse at Southampton.

The Recorder: So all this money was being squandered in some way or another?

Witness: Yes. He added that afterwards prisoner and his second "wife," who was also a munition worker, both drew out-of-work pay.

The Recorder, in sentencing prisoner to nine months hard labour, said: "You were demoralised by the preposterous wages you were paid as a munition worker. It did not do you any good. The whole of the money was squandered without being of any use to you or your class, and with infinite damage to many of the community, for it was the payment of these preposterous wages throughout the country which has led to the present exorbitant price of provisions. Had a reasonable wage been paid instead of these fancy wages there would not have been this enormous increase in the price of food."

AMBULANCE TRAIN RECORDS.

For the first time since the war there were no ambulance trains on the lines of the L. and S.W. Railway last week. It is stated that there were no complete ambulance trains in existence when war broke out, but so quickly were they constructed that fully equipped travelling hospitals were ready waiting when the first convoy of wounded "contemptibles" landed at Southampton Docks on August 28, 1914.

Since July, 1916, the L. and S. W. Railway has run from Southampton alone 5,485 special ambulance trains, conveying 883,537 officers and men. On several occasions notably after the fall of Antwerp and the Battle of the Somme, the staff had to work night and day.

On the heaviest day, July 7, 1916, no fewer than thirty trains were loaded and despatched with their human burden in twenty-four hours. Among the hospital ships dealt with were the "Britannic," Aquitania," and "Mauretania."

FREE RAILWAY WARRANTS.

It is notified by an Army Council instruction that warrant officers, non-commissioned officers, and men granted leave prior to embarkation, will be granted free railway journeys in the United Kingdom irrespective of whether they are proceeding for service in a theatre of war, or on garrison or other duty overseas.

THE NATION'S HEALTH.

This week a new department of State has come into being and the era of reconstruction has begun. Its inauguration is propitious, for the Ministry of Health must command the interest and sympathy of all who care for their country's welfare.

The popular notions of health have of late undergone a change. Not long ago the man who showed any outward qualms regarding his physical well-being was reckoned a morbid faddist to whom more pity than sympathy was given.

Health was only a matter of concern when a man had one foot in the grave. In less dire circumstances it was never a subject of conversation or worry.

Then the great war altered our perspective. The army needed healthy men, therefore the army trained men for health. Health meant hardihood, good spirits, and efficiency.

Sanity of body nurtured discipline of soul, and bred heroism on the field of battle. The haphazard policy of the past was repudiated and in the first years of war there was a race of strong, resolute men, who, in robust health and cheery hopefulness set out on the great enterprise.

But warfare brought its own sorrows. The grim mechanism of battle shattered the strength of many a soldier, and the sick and maimed as they returned to the land for which they fought made an unspoken appeal to the conscience of their countrymen. Once more, there was a problem. England had to pay a debt of honour to the stricken, and had to set about the task of healing and comforting and stablishing her sons.

The matter of health is insistent even amongst the civilian population. The times are out of joint. Production is the watch-word of the worker, and production means human concentration in urban areas. Such concentration demands a constant regard for the physical welfare of men and women. Prosperity cannot be bought at the expense of healthy body and contented soul.

Until now the health of Britain has been the concern of several departments of State—the Local Government Board, the Home Office, the Education Department, the National Insurance Commission. It is only natural that its problems have not so far been solved in a statesmanlike fashion.

But now the Ministry of Health takes over from these various bodies every matter which affects the physical welfare of the nation. It is the latest department of State but it must not be the least important. The eyes of Britain are fixed upon the new Health Ministry.

OUR CUP.

The Cologne Post Cricket Cup Competition was hailed with marked enthusiasm on all hands by the Army of Occupation.

It promised the incentive without which the competitive spirit is likely to flag somewhat, and entries poured in. The little T.M.B. threw down the gauntlet to Battalions and other larger units — in all some 170 teams representing all arms and branches of the service announced their desire to compete for the handsome silver cup, and the 12 miniature cups for the members of the winning team, and without any unavoidable loss of time Leagues were formed for the different areas and fixtures published.

The first matches were played at the end of May, and until the recent movements of troops, the competition was on the whole, progressing satisfactorily.

But there were exceptions, — and regretfully we have to assume that in the case of a few certain clubs, the initial enthusiasm was not maintained — with the result that fixtures were allowed to get into arrear.

Difficulties there are admittedly, but effort and determination on the part of cricket secretaries will work wonders, and in the few cases referred to, this effort and determination appears to have been lacking.

The enforced postponements resulting from the concentration of troops has piled up arrears of 3 or 4 matches against each club with the result that those who were behind before are astonished at the leeway they now have to make up. Unfortunately a few defaulting teams hold back the whole competition and perhaps if cricket secretaries realise this, they will make stronger effort to keep pace with the fixture list.

Now that units are resuming normal routine again the fixture lists must be studied, and the rules also. Rule 7 particularly. It provides that teams failing to keep an engagement without good reason forfeit 2 points to their opponents. And if we are not notified of the good reason we can only take it that none exists, and award the points to the other team.

The complete season's fixture lists will be sent to each competing club this week and meanwhile every effort should be made to play off the matches already published. In cases where this is impossible, secretaries will, when they have the whole fixtures before them, be able to fit in the arrears to the vacant dates, and so the progress of the competition will be assured. Pushfulness on the part of the cricket secretaries will carry the competition through to a successful finish, and with units once more settled, we confidently look for the encouraging progress which marked the opening of the various leagues.

NO CHANGE YET.

The proclamation that has been issued to the population of Cologne by the British Military Governor announcing that when the signature of Germany to the Peace treaty at Versailles occurs this will not mean the definite conclusion of peace, is a timely warning to everybody in Rhineland.

The Peace which has been so long in coming, and is even now, at the eleventh hour, held up by further delay, will not become a reality until the conditions are formally ratified by all the Powers who are parties to it.

Until that happy day arrives therefore it has to be impressed on everyone, whether belonging to the Rhine forces or not, that the military administration of the occupied territory has to be maintained as at present.

All orders that have hitherto been promulgated remain in force and it must be clearly understood that if Germany's representatives face the music as it is hoped they will before this week closes, the existing conditions of our occupation continue unchanged.

ANOTHER WAR TRAGEDY.

It was looking at the dictionary with an expression of intelligent interest, while the "hausfrau" pointed out the words.

This was no attempt at fraternization — perish the thought — but we were endeavouring to provide ourselves with a working knowledge of each others' language through the medium of the dictionary.

"My" she said in German, pointing to the word with her forefinger — "husband" (so she was married then) — "fought — in — the — war" — she went on, becoming somewhat agitated. "And" — she continued — "now" — (pulled out my handkerchief ready for emergencies) — "walks" (I breathed again) — "with — a" (here I waved my hand proudly to indicate I was already familiar with the word) "Bienenstock" she concluded, pointing to it on the page.

I stared incredulously.

"A beehive?," I said, reading the English translation against the German word.

"Ja, ja," she replied, nodding her head vigorously, obviously pleased at having made me understand her harrowing tale.

I sank into a chair and mopped my forehead. Taking my action for a mark of respect for the terrible calamity which had befallen her husband, she turned and left me.

Later I walked into the mess, still pondering the matter in my mind. The mystery was unfathomable, I thought.

At the first suitable opportunity, I unburdened myself to the other members of the mess. They listened in silence.

"Yes", I said, with tears in my eyes and a lump in my throat; "and now he walks with a beehive."

They stared at me without speaking.

"It's true", I assented. "She said so twice."

A and B flatly declined to believe it.

C was more cautious. "Something is wrong somewhere", he murmured.

"It might be an idiom", D suggested. D is our billeting officer and speaks German. "I haven't quite got hold of the patois yet."

"Well, I think she's been pulling your leg, if you ask me. Ridiculous." This from E, who can never bring himself to believe anything unless he has proof. You know the kind.

Suddenly D got up excitedly. "That's it, that's it "he exclaimed wildly, waving his arms about.

"What's what?" I said.

"Why, leg, of course. She must have said "Beinenstock," and then pointed to the wrong word.'

Well, perhaps so, since according to the dictionary it means "wooden leg."

Yet, she was very certain about the other.

SEACOCK.

THE BELLS OF PEACE.

The bells of peace are ringing
Across the war worn world,
The souls of men are singing,
The battle flag is furled:
Deep, deep, has been the darkness
Of this long, hellish night,
But now the morn is breaking
We hail the growing light.

The bells of peace are ringing
Our brothers hear the strain,
And nation unto nation
Re-echoes it again;
In all God's holy mountain
No more shall men destroy,
But build a new creation
Of love, and peace and joy. ANON.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

GALLANTRY.

Sir,—I read the note on this subject in yesterday's "Post."

While our men are courteous to all women and readily give up their seats I don't notice that there is much willingness on the part of German male passengers.

If we can learn much from the German nation in many directions I think it will be agreed that our attitude towards women is superior. And this applies to all classes in Great Britain.

CHIVALRY.

A COMPARISON.

Sir,—I was rather interested in the observations of your corresdondent as to "Tramcar Gallantry" appearing under the heading of "Echoes from Rhineland," which I regard as one of the most attractive features of your paper.

Since my stay in and around Cologne, I have been struck by the deference shown by what we regard at home as the weaker sex for the males. The action of the hausfrau is typical of this attitude, but I hardly know which I most admire.

I have just returned from leave and I was astounded at the callous indifference shown by the so-called weaker sex for a man who has lost a leg in this war. I refer to the disorderly rush which generally precedes the departure of a train, fight for seats on an omnibus and the many incidents of every day life. I have seen many a seat accepted without so much as a word of thanks, and an utter disregard of the courtesy of a favour.

It may be due to the entry of woman into the sphere of labour or her desire to assert herself, but it leaves one thinking.

"BILL."

TENNIS FOR "O.R.s"

Sir,— I am sorry to admit that my only contributions to your bright and breezy paper so far have consisted of two "grouses" which you have kindly published.

Here is just one more. When are definite facilities to be provided for other ranks in the way of tennis?

Possibly I am badly informed but I understand that there is now no court available for Tommy in Cologne. Is this because there is insufficient demand for the game or is lack of accommodation responsible?

"RACKET."

DEBATING SOCIETIES.

Sir,—"A.H.T." asks why the O.C.'s of more units do not encourage their men to form debating societies.

Much, I imagine, will be done in this direction with the approach of the winter, when we of necessity will have to forego evening outdoor sport.

It is next to impossible to arouse interest in any indoor gathering just now. But that problem will solve itself.

I know that there is a real desire to give expression to views upon the hundred and one problems of reconstructione with which we are faced. It fell to my lot to preside over a debate (held during parade hours), the subject being that of "Housing."

Some very interesting news was forthcoming which showed that much thought is being given by certain men of the Rhine Army to such matters and that very often a dullard at drill thrives in debate.

I trust O.C.'s will be encouraged to furnish news on similar lines.

Only by such interchange of views can the education officer furnish his division with a correct estimate of the young soldier's opinion upon any subject.

W. D.

CAUSES OF THE GREAT WAR.—IV.

We saw in the last article that Austria, with Germany backing her, selected the time of internal embarrassment in each of the Entente countries in order to launch an ultimatum to Serbia unparalelled in severity. Reasons of space forbid us from going into every clause and article. It was not merely an indictment of the Serbian Government for complicity in the Serajevo murders, but an endeavour to humiliate Serbia to the position of a vassal state of the Duoi Monarchy. Not only did Austria claim the right to appoint magistrates in Serbia in order to suppress certain propaganda; she also demanded the right to exclude from civil and military office all such persons as she might from time to time designate as hostile to herself. Other clauses were inserted no less provocative to Serbian patriotism — e.g., the right to expel from Government employment University teachers or schoolmasters whom the Austrian Government chose to designate as actively or potentially hostile. All these three clauses strike at the essential element of sovereignty, and if King Peter had conceded them, he might have been directed to dismiss every conceivable holder of authority from the Prime Minister to the humblest schoolmaster.

Article 10 was the most sinister part of the whole document. It required that the notification of the execution of all the Austrian demands must be made without delay, the answer having to be returned within 48 hours. It was a physical impossibility to comply with this demand. The ultimatum was given in to Dr. Patchon, Serbian Minister of Finance, in the absence of the Prime Minister, at 6 p.m. on 23rd July; Baron Giesl, the Austro-Hungarian Minister, announced that he and his suite would leave Belgrade at 6 o'clock on Saturday the 25th unless the ultimatum had been accepted without a word of alteration.

The intention was obvious. It was a deliberate attempt to infringe the authority and independence of a small Slav nation in such a provocative fashion as to compel Russia to take up the challenge in her capacity as head of the Slav peoples. The Serbian Premier hastily sent for the British and Russian Charge's d'Affaires, and informed them, that, whilst willing to give way on minor points, there were others which it were quite impossible to concede.

What makes the whole thing even more mysterious is the conversation which took place on July 27th between Herr von Jagow and M. Jules Cambon, the French ambassador, and which is reported in the French Yellow Book. When M. Cambon asked whether Germany must follow the Austrians everywhere with closed eyes, and whether the secretary of state had taken cognisance of the Serbian reply handed in two days ago in which most of the demands had been complied with, Herr v. Jagow is said to have answered: "I have not yet had time for it." It is precisely these details which Herr v. Jagow should have treated and which he has ignored in his book. It is now evident that the German Foreign Office had not seen or revised the Austrian ultimatum. It had given carte blanche to the Vienna Ministry, and had no more than a general knowledge of what the document contained. Yet, when it was published, Berlin considered the demand which struck terror into every European capital as "equitable and moderate."

BACKHAUS' PIANO RECITAL.

Backhaus has already earned a great reputation in England, and his recital on Wednesday evening gave further evidence of his great genius and established further his portion as a pianist of the first rank.

His performance of Brahm's beautiful rhapsody in G minor with its perfunctory ending was masterful. His "sotto voce" playing was perfectly delightful, and his playing of the Schubert-Lizt "Soiree de Vienna" was perhaps the most entrancing item in the whole concert. His playing of the beautiful melody of Schubert's "Impromptu" in C minor was not treated quite so lovingly, and there was a certain element of mechanical unpoetic precision in the rendering.

In exact contrast to this the little G flat study of Chopin was thrown off in a delightfully airy way.

Schubert's long Improvisation on his own tunes in the "fantasia" is an unsatisfactory piece in a concert hall, although it must have been delightful to recline on a sofa and listen to the composer himself playing it. The rendering of the beautiful middle section of the Scherzo in the Chopin Sonata was a wonderful example of the pianist's art.

One fancied either hand was controlled by an independent player. This was also to be felt in other works performed. The unconventional "piano" at the end of the Funeral March was also very effective. Perfection is impossible in any march of art and the playing of Backhaus is really great. He has an extraordinary command over his instrument, and his touch and clarity of reading are delightful.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

A New Party.

Although on trek and minus their stage "props" the new concert party of the 1/6 West Yorks gave a splendid entertainment to a crowded house at Hilgen the other evening. The regimental band played selections throughout. "B" Coy's Jazz Band, under "Drum-major Jazzer" Metcalfe brought down the house. Pte. Moyse, exceptionally clever female impersonator, Cpl. Archer, comedian, and Pte. Gooch, light comedian, were all in great form. Sergt. Sutcliffe sang "The Admiral's Broom," Lieut. W. H. de Voil surpassed himself as an elocutionist; while Pte. Dalton, a concertina expert, and Pte. Moss, a dancer, did well. Rev. George Kendall, who organised the party, and Lieut. Wilkinson also contributed to the programme. Lieut. Dobson and Bandsman Brooks were accompanists. At the close, Col. Howard, D.S.O., thanked the artistes.

Who Bitashun Is.

There is a comedian in Cologne with a future. His name is Jack Knowles (this is him). To style him as the "Languorous Lancashire Laughter-maker" about sums him up. His methods are unique—inimitable. He stands alone; follows form but not Formby; and—well is perhaps more versatile. Like most burlesque comedians he has had a varied career. First he was with Ohmy's Circus, then in drama, was complimented on his dancing by Lauri de Freece, but avoided musical comedy—his ambition was to be a music-hall comedian. Knowles played with Charlie Chaplin in the Casey's Court Juveniles. In 1913 he won the £20 prize for dancing and introduced the "Turkey Hop" on the leading music-halls, but that is not his main forte. His quaint style, mannerisms, and facial expressions, are a positive scream. He is making a big hit as Bitashun in "Well I'm—! !" at the Apollo Theatre.

Ladies Too!

On Wednesday evening the weekly dance took place at the British Empire Leave Club. Perhaps the fact that there were forty-three ladies from the W.R.A.F. present accounted for a more than usually big crowd. The "Pedlars" Jazz Band proved a great attraction and made the dance a tremendous success.

A Peace Dinner.

An enjoyable dinner was held on Wednesday evening by the clerks of the Military Governor at the Hotel Monopol in celebration of Peace. Some wit had previously summarized the proceedings as follows: "Come and see the lions feed. Circus at 7.0.p.m. Great caste of performers, including the Military Governor's penpushers and rough riding typists. Also the learned literary fiends of the newspaper The Cologne Post, and those who indulge in patience with poor Tommy's mail, the perpetually perspiring post performers." As an afterthought it was stated that "if Jazz is desired, application should be made to the President, in order that all breakable articles may be removed." No casualties were reported.

Now Demobbed.

Always interested in the movements of our "front-line stars" after their return to England, the countless admirers of Sydney Rosenbloom, the classical pianist, late of "The Goods" Concert Party, 58th (London) Division, will be glad to know that his big re-appearance concert at Wigmore Hall was an enormous success and secured an extraordinarily good "press." The concert was entirely of works of his own composition and he was assisted by the famous Benno Moiseiwitsch and Miss Daisy Kennedy. At the front he was always "Rosie" to everybody, and we wish him every success now that he has come into his own again.

FAVOURITE FAILS TO REHABILITATE HIMSELF AT THE CURRAGH.

An exceptionally interesting meeting opened at the Curragh on Tuesday, when several English horses entered into competition with the best of Irish horses, most of the latter being trained at the Curragh.

On Wednesday the premier event was the Irish Derby, when hopes were entertained that the Panther would be able to rehabilitate himself to some extent, especially as Donoghue was riding him. This, however, was not to be, the Panther being unplaced. Snow Maiden was third.

Results:—Irish Derby:—1, Loch Lomond (3-1); 2, Cheap Popularity (25-1); 3, Snow Maiden (4-1).

Loch Lomond won the Irish Derby by six lengths, half a length separating the second and third.

The brass band of the Royal West Kents discoursed music throughout the afternoon and evening in tuneful fashion.

"COLOGNE POST" CUP MATCHES.

On Wednesday 25th June at Ohligs a league match was played between A/51 Battery R.F.A. and the Lowland Division. M.T. Coy resulting in a win for the latter. Rain made the wicket very treacherous and the game looked like a win for the Gunners, but Lt. Whatmore pulled the M.T.'s out of the fire by making a splendid score of 30 (not out.) The bowling on both sides was very good. Result:—Lowland Division M.T. Coy 63 runs, for 9 wickets...A/51 Battery R.F.A. 0. 38.

"AUSSIES" OUTPLAYED.

SURPRISE RESULT OF 3-DAY MATCH AT LORD'S.

Australians.....1st innings; 85; 2nd innings 184
Gentlemen .....1st innings; 402

So ineffectively did the Australians bat at Lord's on the second day of the match against the Gentlemen of England XI that they only compiled 234 runs at the expense of 18 wickets. The batsmen, practically without exception, were powerless against the fast bowling of M. Falcon and J.W.H.T. Douglas, the former taking six wickets for 41 runs, and the latter four for 34.

On Wednesday, the last day of the match, the Australians only scored 184 in their second innings, and were thus defeated by an innings and 133 runs. This is the first defeat of the touring team.

OLD RUGBEIANS v. RUGBY SCHOOL.

CRICKET TEAM CAPTAINED BY P. F. WARNER.

At Rugby, P. F. Warner captained a team of Old Rugbeians that met Rugby School in a two days match, the side also including R. A. Boddington, the Lancashire wicket-keeper.

In the first innings Old Rugbeians scored 221 and Rugby School 257. Old Rugbeians declared in their second innings with 233 for five wickets, leaving the present generation of schoolboys two hours in which to get the 198 runs necessary to win. L. B. Wimole (68), E. Whittall (45 not out), and C. F. Johnson (42 not out) batted so vigorously that the School passed the required total at 199 for four wickets with a quarter of an hour in hand.

In the first Old Rugbeians' innings G. J. Straker took five wickets for 60 runs, and H. W. Standring three for 52. In the first School innings T. C. Ashwell took seven wickets for 113 runs.

TRICKY LEG-BREAKS.

5th K.O.S.B. v. A BATTERY, 50th BRIGADE R.F.A.

Two very pleasant games between teams of these units have recently been played. With the aid of William Cook, the Lancashire's stalwart, the gunners won the first match by 25 runs.

Cook mixed some tricky leg-breaks with his expresses, but a thoroughly sporting side stood up to him very confidently. Sizer bowled a consistently good length for the losers and was well worth his 8 for 27. Cook got 6 for 17. For A Battery Gr. Cook scored 12; 2nd Lieut. Griffiths 23; Sergt. Pateman (not out) 11; and Shoeing-smith Bird 10. For 5th K.O.S.B. Lieut. Payne (10) and Lieut. Thomson (10) were the leading batsmen.

JACKDAW KILLED.

TERRIFIC DRIVING AT ST. ANDREW'S ON EVE OF "TOURNEY."

Many of the competitors in the £500 Professional Golfers' Association tournament, were practising this week on the old course at St. Andrew's on the eve of the competition. The weather was boisterous, a strong easterly wind being especially troublesome on the outward journey.

The ex-champion, Arnaud Massy, who had a round with L. Holland, whom he beat by 2 and 1, and who took 42 to the turn, came home in 37, having killed a jackdaw with an iron shot in the course of his round of 79.

Jean Gassiat, A. J. Miles, and J. Oke had a free-and-easy three-ball, without keeping a score. Abe Mitchell and Cyril Hughes opposed F. Robson and C. Ralph Smith, and a large number of spectators watched an exciting game.

Mitchell and Hughes were dormy one, and at the last hole Smith sliced into the garden of one of the Gibson Place houses, the others being quite forty yards over the road. Mitchell's terrific driving was a feature all through.

INTER-THEATRE GOLF SHIELD.

RIFLE AND REVOLVER MATCHES

800 ENTRIES FOR THE KING'S PRIZE AT BISLEY.

Many riflemen, including members of prominent rifle clubs, overseas troops, and Public Schoolboys, are shooting in the contests for practice on the National Rifle Association ranges at Bisley.

A recent contest was a match between teams representing H.M.S. Excellent and the Stock Exchange Rifle and Revolver Club, eight a side, 10 shots each at 200, 500, and 600 yards. H.M.S. Excellent team won by seven points with an aggregate of 840 points, against 833 scored by their opponents. In a revolver match, also between teams representing H.M.S. Excellent and the Stock Exchange Club, the sailors again won.

THE KING'S PRIZE.

Up to Monday morning there were 800 entries for the King's Prize for rifle shooting, to be competed for at the forthcoming Bisley meeting. This is exclusive of overseas entries, which are expected to number at least 100, and the number will probably be considerably increased in the next few days. Several ladies have entered. It is expected that the Prince of Wales will distribute the prizes at the close of the Bisley meeting, which lasts from July 9 to July 16 next.

Entries include Major Munday, Hon. Artillery Company, aged 72, and Col. Seely, M.P.

MIKE BLAKE OUTPOINTED.

GEORGE CLARK'S SUCCESS IN CLOSE BOUT AT THE RING.

The money match for £50 a side and the Ring purse between George Clark, of Bermondsey, and Mike Blake, of Notting Hill, who met in a 20 3-min. round contest, was a big draw at The Ring this week. It resulted in a win on points for Clark after a close bout. Both men weighed in the same morning, and were within the scheduled weight of 8st 8lb.

Although the first few rounds were inclined to be rather tame, the bout gradually developed into a hard contest. Clark, who was very quick and clever with his feet and head, did most of the leading. He used his snappy left in good style and varied his punches and tactics well. Blake occasionally left himself open to take blows on the face, but he scored with much harder punches than his opponent. Clark thoroughly deserved his victory.

Joe Beckett was received with loud cheers when he was introduced in the ring prior to the big contest.

WIMBLEDON CHAMPIONSHIPS.

SPLENDID PLAY IN 2nd ROUND MEN'S SINGLES CHAMPIONSHIP.

Some splendid play was seen at Wimbledon on Wednesday in the second round of the men's singles championship. The men's doubles competition entered upon its first round. Results:—

SPORTING ITEMS IN BRIEF.

No Racing at Hamburg.

On account of Spartacist disturbances the races which were to have taken place at Hamburg this week were cancelled.

London Amateur Foresomes.

As Captain Jobson is unable to obtain leave, St ke Poges is being represented in the London amateur foursomes by Mr. O. C. Bristowe and Captain W. E. Gilbey.

Galloper Light.

To the general disappointment Manilardo may now be considered a very doubtful starter for Sunday's Grand Prix de Paris, but there are great hopes that Galloper Light will be too good for the French three-year-olds.

Favourite Strokes.

A. F. Wilding won fame by his whip-up forehand drive. Bereft of it he would have become commonplace. In even more marked degree, S. H. Smith owed his greatness to one shot—a terrific forehand punch.

Polo at Deauville.

Polo is to be revided at Deauville, Normandy, this summer, and a number of English players are going over to take part in the August season. There will also probably be a contingent from our Army of Occupation, in addition to the French players, and the Spaniards are also expected to compete in that month's Deauville tournaments.

Lord Lonsdale and Betting.

"I have never had a bet since I was twenty-one years old," Lord Lonsdale said to a man who once congratulated the new Jockey Club Steward on an all too infrequent racing success.

Anglo-French Boxing.

Articles were signed this week by Charlie Lane, late 16th Hussars, whereby he agrees to meet Louis de Pontnieu at the Noveau Cirque on July 14.

New Outside Left for Arsenal.

The Arsenal have signed on Alfred Baker, a young outside left, who assisted Huddersfield last season and helped them to get into the final of the Yorkshire Victory Cup. He was one of the most-sought-after juniors of the season.

Continuous Service Record.

The record for exclusive continued playing service to a first-class football club is believed to be held by R. Crompton, of Blackburn Rovers, who first played for that club in October, 1896, and did not play for any other club until after the war broke out.

The Belgian Crew.

Owing to the clashing of dates of the Henley Regatta and Olympic Regatta in Paris, the crew from the Ghent Rowing Club will be unable to take part in the Thames event, for the Belgian military authorities have decided that the club must compete in the French affair.

PHOTOGRAPHY.

William R. Patterson F.R.G.S. etc.

I have seen so many faulty negatives of late that I deem it advisable to suggest the cause and origin of failure. In some instances the plate showed nothing on development; in this case, it may never have been placed in the camera, or the sheath which covered it may not have been withdrawn.

With the instruments we are buying nowaday, there are so many knobs to turn and other things to do, that one may be excused, at the beginning, for forgetting them.

Then, I have seen blurred negatives. By careful scrutiny one may often descry two outlines quite close to one another; if the object remained still, the operator must have shaken the camera; this often occurs when one exerts too much force in pressing the button or in otherwise manipulating the shutter.

Also, the exposure may have been too brief, in which case both camera and object may have moved, or the camera may have been set quite fast, but the object may have swayed slightly, thus producing a blurred outline.

It is always wise to consider these points beforehand. In photography, it is also wise not to attempt impossibilities.

I have known people who attempted snapshots at sunset; this, of course, was through a false understanding of the power of light.

It is quite excusable, since, although distant objects stand out clearl/ silhouetted, the light is not strong enough to warrant a fact exposure, at eventide. One must learn to judge.

Another fault that I have discovered among both officers and men is the omission to set the diaphragm which allows more or less light to pass through the lens. To-day one takes a photograph with a long exposure at, perhaps, 9 or 12,5 and then to-morrow another at quicker speed — omitting to enlarge the diameter of the diaphragm.

Before taking any picture one must remember always:—

(1) To set the shutter at proper speed.
(2) To arrange the aperture.
(3) To focus.
(4) To remove the slide from the plate-holder or film-pack holder.

To forget any one of these manipulations means a bad result.

Now, on a stormy day in spring and summer, one may have all strength of light within the space of five minutes. Heavy black clouds may obscure most of the sun's light, and the clouds may pass away suddenly, leaving a most dazzling brilliancy.

In each instance both shutter and aperture will need to be re-arranged. With photography, as with everything else, practice makes perfect. With regard to the use of pocket exposure-measurers, it is better by far to leave them alone, and to rely absolutely upon one's own judgment.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES.

Lieut. Loffe C. Coy. 2nd Bn. M. G. Corps.—Your Kodak is 8 x 14 in size. You should obtain a Goetz "anastigmat." Get a 4.5 if you can afford it; you can always diminish the diameter of your diaphram. The Address is being sent to you by post. Mention The Cologne Post. Exact prices will then be given to you. Write to Messrs. Routledge of 68—74 Cather Lane London E.C. 4, for a book.

Pte. R. E. H. Barker, c/o Camp Commandant VI Corps H.Q.:—

(1) The date of durability ought to be pointed on all boxes of plates etc. Do not purchase any that are without the date.

(2) By "flexo" release I presume you mean what the Germans call "Spiegel Reflex." If this is so, your whole apparatus would need to be altered. If not, please give further details.

Sgt. Edmonds, "D" Coy, 51st Bedfords:— The address is being forwarded to you.

Pte. S. H. Coleman, "Q" Branch, Midland Divisional H.Q. Brühl:—If you can afford it, get a 6x9 for plates or filmpack fitted with Zeiss Tessar lens (6.3) costing 334 Marks less 10% for British troops. An address of a reliable firm is being sent to you by post.

Captain X, Cologne:—Yes, autochrome plates require a much longer exposure than others. Your fault, of course, lies in your not using the yellow screen.

Curious (Bonn):—Please give more details. How can I advise you when you mention nothing with reference to the time of day, the aperture of your diaphram, the strength of light and the speed of exposure. You must really study these things.

Some correspondence arrived too late for the publication of replies.

A Cycle Comedy.—Thefts of bicycles have been prevalent lately in Kingston. A young woman complained to the police that hers had disappeared. Echoes from Rhineland.

No Ill Feeling.

Sir H. H. Johnston G.C.M.C., who has recently spent three weeks in Rhineland, says that Cologne, Bonn, Brühl, Solingen, Düren — all the large and small towns of the British occupied area—seemed full of life and happiness; and nowhere in the country districts, where a tremendous agricultural effort towards food production is being made, nor in the industrial region nor in the magnificent towns along the Rhine, the tidy villages, the old walled cities, the trams, trains, theatres, shops, parks, restaurants, and museums, did he notice any ill-feeling whatever aroused by the omnipresence of the soldier. Nowhere did he hear a complaint from a German householder, tram conductor, cleric, shopkeeper, policeman, or peasant directed against the British army of to-day.

The Teuton Type.

A vast amount of rubbish was generated in this war about the anthropology of the Germans, says Sir H. H. Johnston. They were held to be a race apart from British and French, a brutal type of square-built, graceless women, of stocky, big-bellied men with a straight up-and-down back to the head and a considerable infusion of the ruthless, ugly Mongol. There is a type like this to be found among the Slavs and the German-speaking people in Prussia, in parts of north, central and east Germany. But the Rhineland people and the South-west-Germans, the Westfalians and Holsteiners, might easily pass muster as English or French, for the reason that they are long-headed, and correspond to the mixed types of modern England and lowland Scotland, of northern and eastern France. They are as good-looking as we are, or as characteristically ugly. "Why, them people in the trams is just like us," said a soldier with whom I talked. "'Cept for their dress, you wouldn't know they was Boshes."

How do you stick your beans?

Look at the German vegetable garden and notice the manner in which the runner bean is trained. Instead of the crossed-stick system we are familiar with in England you will see rows of single poles. These poles, which are usually about 1½ inches in diameter at the bottom and anything from 8 to 18 feet in length, are firmly planted in the ground before the beans are sown, and resemble Kentish hop poles in appearance. Perhaps the Rhinelanders consider it advantageous to give their beans a good "place in the sun," and it would be interesting to know which is the better method, English or German.

An Amusing Notice.

It is said that the German is a better master of the English language than we are of German. One is lead to disbelieve this after reading a notice in a certain Cologne hair dresser's shop.—"MAKE SHARP SHAVEKNIVES." The professional advertiser would tell you that this is a good advertisement, as it certainly draws attraction.

Literature in the Country.

Literary rambles are quite a feature just now with some of the troops in Rhineland. The Y.M.C.A. Reading Circle at Euskirchen is one of the societies that indulge in them and this week went out into the country to listen to a paper by the president Pte. J. K. Douglas on "George Eliot and her work." After the paper had been read Lance Corporal J. W. Lambert showed an intimate acquaintanceship with "The Mill on the Floss," and described in some detail the scenes laid round and about Gainsborough, which figure in this work of George Eliot.

The Cult of Theosophy.

It would seem that a considerable number of efforts to organise societies for serious study are being made to-day in the Army of Occupation. The Army as we know it is composed of many thoughtful studious men who in peace days would, of course, never have been in the fighting services. They are making their influence felt. Apropos of this a letter has reached this office from R.S.M. H. Main, 53rd Royal Warwicks, Rhine Army, saying he would like to meet any fellows of the Theosophical Society with a view to forming a study circle for young students of the cult of Theosophy. He wishes also for anyone interested, who may not yet belong to the Society, to communicate with him.

The Friseur's Cousin.

Company Commander:—Is there a hairdresser in this place?

Quartermaster:—Yes, sir. Just up the street. His name is Friseur. There is another of the same name round the corner. I believe they are cousins.

Rhineland Tram Ways.

About one of the first things a Londoner notices in the bigger Rhineland towns is the system of tram cars. In this at lest Germany has the old Country beaten "to a frazzle." Can any Englishman hope to compare the cars of his native town with those, say on the Cologne-Bonn route or Bonn-Siegburg service. Then again the system of confining the rails to one side of the road and leaving the rest clear for other traffic is miles in front of the British method which uses the greater part of the road, i. e. the centre, thus causing endless confusion and delay. What, however, astonishes the average Englishman above anything is the sight of a tram-car drawing a loaded railway truck through the streets of the town. This system of using universal guages for tram rails and locomotive ways is too obviously advantageous to require explanation, and is one that our own authorities might do well to study.

In the Clover Fields.

The Germans have a different way from the English of cocking their clover. Large rude wooden tripods are erected about the field, and staddles made to each about a foot from the ground of a few crossed rails nailed to the legs. On these staddles large cocks are built, about a third of a load in each. If a period of rain sets in and the clover has to stand, it has a dry base and comparatively little surface and so retains its sweetness. The size of the cocks makes it possible for the sun to scorch through and dry it unduldy, and a moist but not dangerous heat is generated internally — a heat necessary for a rich stack of fodder, which after standing a few months should cut as crisp, and smell as sweet as a gingerbread, to use a simile of an old farmer friend of mine.

GUNNER OLIVER O.

Soldierly Types.

One frequently hears in Cologne comments on the remarkably fine type of man in the prime of life who is usually to be found employed as a policeman, tramconductor, postmen, fireman or hall-porter in a government building. The soldierlike bearing is particularly noticed. The reason for this is that when a German N.C.O. has served his twelve or more years in the army, he is promised definite employment in the government service, should his conduct during his army service have been exemplary. It is to be feared, however, that the German government was not only swayed by a desire to reward the soldiers who had passed out of the service. These men also formed a strong and numerous reserve of disciplined men, on whom the country could rely in time of war, and they also helped to keep in his place the humble civilian, who, in a country where a man without some sort of uniform is looked upon as an inferior being, existed for the convenience of the government officials, instead of the reverse being the case, as in England.

Rhine Army Musical Societies.

The summer weather is causing some changes in the plans of those responsible for the musical societies in the Rhine Army. For instance, it has been decided to suspend the rehearsals of the Orchestral Society and also of the Mixed Voices Vocal Society, until the autumn, when probably there will be a large accession of new members. The rehearsals of the Male Voice Choral Society, however, will continue to be held each Monday, Wednesday, and Friday at 17.45 in the Lecture Room at the Church Army Club, Antoniter-Strasse, Cologne. The Friday rehearsal each week is to be devoted in the main to music of a sacred character, which will be sung at the Military Church services. All past and present members of the Male Voice Society and Church Choir are asked to attend the rehearsal on Monday evening next in order that arrangements for the proposed series of concerts may be completed. These arrangements were unfortunately somewhat upset by the recent advance of troops to "the Front," but it is confidently hoped that by Monday next normal conditions will have been resumed.

On the Eve of Peace.

Probably the last man to be shot as an act of war was a civilian who was shot shortly after 1900 hrs on peace night. He was attempting ad smuggling "coup" but being observed ran away. The sentry aimed at his feet but hit him in the head killing him instantaneously. The report that the battalion to which the sentry belongs has been warned for a musketry course at Delbrück at present lacks confirmation.

Prizes for "Echoes."

The Editor of "The Cologne Post" wants to encourage all ranks of the Rhine Army to make use of their powers of observation and whenever any phase of life in the occupied territory strikes any of his readers or whenever they come across any unusual incident he would like to have a short paragraph about it. Such items should never exceed 150 words, and even shorter notes will be acceptable. Every day the sum of 10 marks will be given for the best sent in, and it should be borne in mind that in awarding the prize, more credit will be given to the subject than to the style of writing, so that lack of literary ability will be no deterrent to anyone. The envelope should have the word "Echoes" in the top left hand corner.

To-day's prize of 10 marks is awarded to Lieut. W. Kerr-Morgan, Advanced Supply Depot, RASC, Army of the Rhine.

WILL PEACE BE SIGNED TODAY?

DELEGATES PASS THROUGH COLOGNE.

GERMAN NAVAL OFFICERS MURDERED.

ALLIES AND THE OTTOMAN EMPIRE.

PLENIPOTENTIARIES PASS THROUGH COLOGNE.

THE HOUR APPROACHES.

The main station at Cologne presented its usual scene of hurry-scurry shortly after nine o'clock yesterday morning, but few of the many civilians hurrying from the trains on their way to business recognized in the contingent of very ordinary-looking men who moved across the platform to the office of the R.T.O., thirteen of the most important Germans at present alive.

Observed by but comparatively few people, the German plenipotentiaries broke their journey from Berlin to Versailles to devote a couple of hours or so at Cologne to partake of a meal. The circumstance revealed yet another phase in the closing chapters of the greatest war in history for, this afternoon, two of these men will append their signature to the historic peace terms admitting the guilt and the defeat of the German nation.

They were Herr Müller, the German Minister for Foreign Affairs, and Herr Bell, Minister for Colonies, the only similarity in whose appearance being that each wore a black tie. Müller, a tall, thin individual with pointed features and piercing grey eyes presented a striking contrast to his fellow delegate, who is short, rather rotund, and surveys his surroundings through a pair of black-rimmed glasses.

The delegates left Berlin at 9 o'clock on Friday night and arrived in Cologne at 9.23 a.m. They were met by Capt. Schwink, of the German General Staff, Bridgehead, Cologne, and his Adjutant, Capt. von Lossnitzer, of the German S.W. African Forces and were conducted by Lt.-Col. S. I. Leslie Ditnus, R.T.O., Cologne, to the palatial apartment that was formerly the ex-Kaiser's waiting room.

The superstitious omen of sitting thirteen at the breakfast table was avoided by the presence of a young female secretary, who appeared to take not the slightest interest in her surroundings.

Shortly after ten o'clock, the special train was re-boarded, and after a brief delay for the purpose of attaching a dining car, the plenipotentiaries proceeded on their mission of world-wide importance, with Capt. Hinchley-Cooke, British General Staff, in charge of the train.

Among the members of the party were Herr Autzen, Herr Heurer, Legationsrat Dr. Schmidt, Herr von Kamphöven and Fräulein Stegemann.

GERMANY'S ELEVENTH HOUR DECISION.

DELEGATES START.

It was officially announced in Paris yesterday, that Germany had notified that the following three delegates are being sent, viz: Herr Müller (Foreign Minister), Herr Giesberts (Post and Telegraphs) and Herr Leinert. They were expected to arrive at seven o'clock on Saturday morning. It is still hoped therefore that the Treaty will be signed on Saturday afternoon. The ceremony of signing is expected to last three hours.

HARA-KIRI IS HONOURABLE.

Various rumours are afloat in Paris Conference circles regarding possible last minute trickery on the part of the German delegates. One amazing suggestion comes from an American source that the enemy delegates will commit suicide immediately after signing!

Such heroic measures after the fashion of Japan hardly seem in keeping with the character of the present day German.

REPORTED FLIGHT OF THE EX-CROWN PRINCE.

An Exchange message from Paris states that the ex-Crown Prince has escaped from Holland accompanied by a staff officer and has reached Germany. The news caused great excitement in Paris, but the Foreign Office in London had received no information.

Up to the time of going to press, there is neither confirmation nor denial of the report.

A former American Ambassador at Berlin was interviewed regarding the occurrence. He said that although it might cause serious trouble in Germany any movement to restore the Hohenzollerns to power must inevitably fail. He was in no way surprised at the escape of the ex-Crown Prince.

CESSATION OF HOSTILITIES IN HUNGARY.

Information from Vienna states that Hungary, at the request of General Poels, has ceased hostilities on the Czech and Roumanian fronts. The Hungarian Army has withdrawn behind the line of demarcation under the surveillance of British, French and American officers. A neutral zone fifteen kilometres deep will be established between the opposing forces.

The Finnish Parliament has accepted the proposal declaring Finland a republic and it is generally supposed that General Mannerheim will be the first President.

OPEN REBELLION AT HAMBURG.

HUNDREDS OF CASUALTIES.

Messages from Berlin state that the disturbances at Hamburg developed during the night into open rebellion. The fighting has become much more severe, the losses already reported being estimated at one hundred and eighty-five killed and several hundred wounded. A considerable amount of artillery was brought into action. General von Lettow-Vorbeck is now advancing on Hamburg at the head of a strong force of reliable troops.

The Berlin outbreak is subsiding. Traffic has been resumed everywhere, except at the Goerlitzer railway station, which is the headquarters of the strikers. The majority of railway employées who struck have returned to work.

CAUSE OF THE OUTBREAK.

The violent outbreaks at Hamburg, which have resulted in the capture of the whole town by the proletarians, were the direct sequel to a hunger revolt directed against a man named Heil, a manufacturer of preserved meat. It was discovered that he was utilising the flesh of dogs, cats and rats in his trade. The crowd stormed his house, maltreated him and forced him to eat raw cat-flesh. Afterwards they wanted to hang him, but as no cord was at hand he was thrown into the Alster.

MACKENSEN COMMANDING ON POLISH FRONTIER.

HINDENBURG RESIGNS.

News has reached Berlin from Cracow that Mackensen has assumed command of the armies near the Polish frontier. This contradicts an earlier message to the effect that Mackensen had made an agreement with the Hungarian Government to march through Silesia with 100,000 men in order to enter Germany.

Hindenburg has now resigned the supreme command. Groener, his Chief of Staff, has also resigned but has offered to remain at his post during the present crisis.

Hindenburg's farewell address to his troops, states:—

Soldiers,—I informed the Government that I, as a soldier, preferred perishing with honour than submitting to a shameful peace.

At this moment of parting I think with emotion of the long years during which I served three royal and imperial War Lords. The times of quiet and indefatigable peace work; the glorious succession of great victories; tenacious resistance; all these things are before my eyes, but with deep pain I also contemplate the days of the collapse of our Fatherland.

The possibility of maintaining order and fruitful work depends mainly on the solidarity of our defensive power. It is therefore our first duty to preserve a solid defence.—Wireless Press.

How discreet! But what about that Hindenburg line?

TALES OF HOFFMAN.

General Hoffman of Brest Litovsk fame, authorizes the German press to state that he and the troops under him on the Polish frontier will not abandon one inch of German territory, even at the command of the Government, but will defend the old frontier by force of arms. He absolutely refuses to recognise the Treaty. On the other hand the Presidents of the three East German states have issued a joint proclamation stating that in consideration of the rest of the German people it is the duty of the people of the Eastern provinces to submit to the conditions of the Treaty.

ALLIES AND THE OTTOMAN EMPIRE.

The Paris Council of Ten has replied to the statement of the Turkish case submitted by Ferid Pasha. They do not doubt that the present government of Turkey profoundly disapproves of the policy followed by its predecessors but speaking generally a nation must be judged by the Government which rules it.

Regarding the appeal for complete territorial restoration the Council says it cannot admit that among the qualities of the Turks are to be counted a capacity to rule over alien races. Neither among the christians of Europe nor the Moslems of Smyrna, Arabia and Africa has the Turk done otherwise than to destroy wherever he conquered. Never has he shown himself able to develop in peace what he won by war.

The Council declares that there is no justification for the argument that the maintenance of the Turkish Empire, now demanded by religious sentiment, was an issue raised by a struggle in which Protestant Germany, Roman Catholic Austria, orthodox Bulgaria and Moslem Turkey banded themselves together to plunder their neighbours. The only flavour of deliberate fanaticism perceptible in these transactions was the massacre of christian Armenians by order of the Turkish government. The idea that diminution of the territories of the historic Moslem State would injure the Moslem cause is not acceptable to the Council. The modern history of the governments enthroned at Constantinople can be no source of pride to thinking Moslems throughout the world.

"IMPROPERLY DRESSED" LIBEL CASE.

SHADES OF KHAKI.

There were several amusing passages yesterday during the hearing of a libel action brought by Captain Gilchrist, formerly an Assistant Provost Marshal, against the proprietors of the Daily Mail.

Captain Gilchrist asserts that owing to the publication of a letter of complaint he lost his post.

Major Coltart, who gave evidence in support of plaintiff's case, was much surprised when Mr. Rigby Swift, K.C., said: "Do you think that you will be stopped by an A.P.M. when you leave the court?"

The Lord Chief Justice inquired the reason for the question, and Mr. Swift said: "Well, look at the button of your left hand pocket." The major looked and found it unbuttoned, amid the loud laughter of the court.

There was further hilarity when Captain Gilchrist assured the judge that he was so anxious that officers should wear the right shade of khaki collar that he sent twenty-six samples to the War Office.

GERMAN DISCIPLINE AT SCAPA.

OFFICERS MURDERED.

Sensational allegations are made regarding the behaviour of the Germans at Scapa, during the past few weeks. At least two German officers were murdered by the crews under them. One a Lieutenant, was stabbed in the back and the other, a Commander, after being bound up and weighted, was thrown overboard to drown.

It is said that Admiral von Reuter appealed to the British authorities but they declined to interfere in disciplinary matters. Hardly a British officer or man boarded any German ship subsequent to the initial inspection last November. The Germans generally were treated as lepers.

RUMOURED ATTEMPT TO SHOOT. ERZBERGER.

It is reported that as Erzberger, Minister of Finance in the Bauer Cabinet was proceeding along the streets of Weimar, on Wednesday evening, he was shot at by an unknown assailant. The Minister escaped unhurt. Details of the attempt have not yet leaked out.

DENIKIN'S VICTORIOUS SWEEP.

The volunteer Army of Denikin has now fairly launched its great offensive and everywhere is sweeping back the enemy. In Southern Russia the evacuation of Sebastopol and the Crimea by the Bolshevists is considered imminent.

The Ukranian Press Service reports that Petljura's Army is advancing successfully along a line in the general direction of Kieff. Ukranian troops have taken several villages only thirty miles from that town, while Gregorieff's Army is marching to occupy Odessa, Nikolaiev and Kherson in order to move against the Bolshevist Army on the Dniester and to effect a junction with Petljura's troops.

MOVE TOWARDS SOLUTION OF IRISH QUESTION.

An important new movement, known as the Irish Dominion League, is being started in Irish politics. It is being organised by Sir Horace Plunket, who has already received great encouragement. He is shortly issuing a manifesto.

The chief objects of the movement are to secure a settlement of the Irish question along the lines of Dominion Home Rule and to create a representative body of Irishmen, both Ulstermen and Nationalists, who are genuinely anxious for a settlement and whom the Government may consult.

NO PREMATURE CELEBRATIONS

The War Cabinet Committee on peace celebrations last evening issued the following:

"It has already been stated that immediately following the signature of the Peace Treaty at Versailles, an announcement will be made by the Government of the celebrations which it is proposed to hold at an early date, and the public have been requested to postpone their rejoicings until that date. It is hoped, therefore, that premature festivities will not be arranged, particularly those such as the lighting of bonfires, which would involve a considerable and wasteful expenditure of money.

"It is from every point of view desirable that the national rejoicings should be organised simultaneously, and kept within reasonable bounds both as regards scale and outlay."

CLOSING TIME EXTENDED.

The military Governor has issued a proclamation to the civil population which orders that from the day on which Peace is signed, cafés and restaurants will be allowed to remain open until 10 p.m., and traffic will be allowed in the streets up to 11 p.m.

GRANTS FOR TRAINING.

During the week ended June 24 the Grants Committee of the Ministry of Labour sanctioned 178 grants for training ex-Service men, whether officers or men from the ranks of similar educational qualifications, in civil careers. The total of grants made up to date is 803, and of these 376 are for officers and 427 for other ranks. Accountancy, engineering, the law, and commerce are the occupations for which by far the greater number of these 803 successful applicants wish to train.

HARD LABOUR FOR RIOTOUS CANADIAN.

SAVAGE ASSAULT.

Appearing in court with his head bandaged, Shelby Bowen, a Canadian soldier, was charged on remand with assaulting police constable Mills during the fracas in the Strand on June 18th.

The constable said that defendant struck him in the mouth, causing him to fall. As he got up he received another blow. Attempting to close with the man he was again knocked down and kicked on the head.

Prisoner, on being arrested by other policemen shouted, "Come on Canadians, give them another Epsom."

Sentence of four months' hard labour was passed.

CANADIANS' LATEST RIOT.

WOKING THIS TIME.

One loses count of the number of times Canadian troops have wantonly run riot in England during the last few months. They may be good fighters, but they are sadly lacking in good manners.

The latest disturbances in which Canadian soldiers were concerned, have just occurred at Woking and before order could be restored the local police had to call for reinforcements from the military authorities.

In consequence of recent disturbances, the town of Guildford had been placed out of bounds. This caused the Canadians to visit Woking in large numbers. The latest conflict arose out of disputes between Canadians on the one side and British discharged soldiers and New Zealanders on the other. One of the latter was seriously injured and one Canadian was arrested. Quiet was not restored until after midnight.

MEDICAL OFFICERS WANTED.

The War Office is prepared to accept the services of medical practitioners, including those who have already served, who are desirous of undertaking duty with the Army.

The terms of service are as follows: Candidates who have served before will be commissioned in their previous rank; those who have not served will be commissioned as lieutenants. The period of engagement to be for one year or until no longer required, whichever shall first happen.

Pay to be at the rate of £550 a year, inclusive of all allowances (except travelling allowance and rations or the allowance in lieu thereof.—Outfit and kit allowance will be issued to candidates who have not received them for previous service.

Demobilized officers, whether Temporary, Special Reserve, or Territorial, are eligible to re-engage under these terms. All candidates must be fit for general service at home and abroad. Applications should be addressed to the Secretary, War Office, Adastral House, E.C. 4.

EX-OFFICERS' CHEQUE FRAUDS.

Donald Walker, formerly an army officer, was sentenced to nine months, hard labour for a series of frauds on the Army and Navy Stores and Civil Service Supply Association. Prisoner adopted various form of cheating, including the use of forged cheques, and personation of officers and ticket holders.

He went to the stores in the uniform of the London Scottish and walked from department to department ordering clothes, boots and other goods to be sent to an hotel address. He paid for the foods by means of fictitious cheques on blank paper.

Prisoner pleaded that the business methods at the stores left them open to that kind of fraud, particularly when a man was hard up.

AN IRISH VERDICT.

After a three-days' inquest at Dundalk, a coroner's jury found that Mathew Murphy, a commercial traveller, motoring from the North of Ireland, was shot by the military at midnight on June 5. The jury added that reasonable precautions were not taken by the authorities to safeguard the general public, and more effective and less dangerous measures should have been adopted. Soldiers stationed at Dundalk had been called out on a report from a police-sergeant at Carlingford that a Sinn Fein raid was contemplated. The contention of the Crown was that deceased had been challenged three times before a shot was fired. The shot was aimed at the engine, but went through Murphy's thigh, and he died two days later.

MEMORIAL TO LONDON TROOPS.

London City Corporation yesterday declined unanimously to grant the site in front of the Royal Exchange for the erection of a memorial to the London regiments. The memorial, designed by Sir Aston Webb, was to consist of two Venetian masts of copper 75ft. high.

Mr. H. P. Monckton raised an objection to the selection of so splendid a site for a memorial which he considered unworthy of the occasion.

It would be impossible, he said, to guarantee that the masts would maintain a perpendicular position; moreover, the memorial would dwarf the wonderful frontage of the Royal Exchange.

MISHAP TO LEAVE TRAIN.

When entering Charleroi station, during Wednesday night, two coaches of the Calais-Cologne leave train fouled the points and were derailed. Fortunately no one was injured, and the journey was resumed after the coaches had been detached.

DIRECT VERSUS POLITICAL ACTION.

LABOUR CONFERENCE.

At the annual conference of the British Labour Party which is being held at Southport the discussion yesterday was opened on the important matter of direct and political strike action.

The presidential address of Mr. McGurk, who is the Lancashire miners' representative, was eminently broad and sensible and the meeting followed his lead on the question of "direct" versus political action which has been given such prominence lately within the labour movement.

Direct action, he said, means that the strikers aim not for industrial, but for political ends and such strikes are necessarily generally on a very large scale. A few extremists who advocate this policy have been very active in pushing it to the front during the last few months and the matter has more than once come to a definite issue between them and the supporters of political—that is parliamentary—action.

The present conference is the latest and most formal trial of strength and the constitutional party has so far won.

WHEN THE NEXT CALL COMES.

UNIVERSAL TRAINING.

General Sir Henry Horne, who on the Western Front, commanded the First Army, speaking at a dinner held last night to welcome ex-service men, strongly advocated the formation of a National army on territorial lines.

He said he did not want this army to go fighting abroad, but he did want army training for the manhood of the nation so that we shall not be found wanting when the call next comes.

RE-ENLISTMENT OF N.C.O.'s.

The Army Council announce that ex-warrant officers and non-commissioned officers who re-enlist with the Regular Army for short periods on condition of immediate promotion to the substantive rank they previously held can only be accepted for promotion to that rank provided a vacancy exists. The re-enlistment is with the branch of the service in which the man last served.

A man who was not last serving on a normal engagement in the Regular Army cannot be accepted in a rank above that of sergeant, while a man re-enlisting into the R.E., R.A.M.C., R.A.S.C., and Military Police, or into an arm other than that in which he last served, can only be accepted in the rank of private.

PREFERRED DEATH TO DEMOBILIZATION.

A verdict of suicide while temporarily insane was returned at a Stafford inquest yesterday on 2nd Lieut. Thomas William Stanley Cusack, 20, Royal Irish Rifles, who was found shot at Rugeley Camp.

It was said he was about to be demobilized and was disappointed at leaving the Army. A brother officer said Cusack told him that in an aeroplane accident in which his pilot was killed, he (Cusack) jumped from the machine on nearing the ground, but was unaffected by the experience.

He left a letter asking that his kit-bag might be sent to his mother, whose stage name was Miss Lily Iris, at Warrington crescent, Maida Vale, London.

SOLDIER M.P.'s CONTEMPT FOR CONCHIES.

"As a soldier who has been fighting for our country and Empire since the commencement of the war I have no sympathy whatsoever with concientious objectors, whom I consider to be unworthy members of our Empire, and for whom I have the greatest contempt," wrote Brigadier-General J. T. Wigan, D.S.O., M.P., replying to a Presbyterian minister who asked him to help secure the release of a number of conscientious objectors.

START OF JOY LOAN CAMPAIGN.

Trafalgar square was gaily decorated yesterday for the grand fête which marked the opening of the Joy Loan Campaign in London.

As a result of the days's efforts over one million pounds was subscribed in the Square alone.

An Army Order just issued announces that investments in Victory Bonds and Funding Loan may be made by soldiers by means of Army Form W. 3,273. The amount invested must be £4-£5 or a multiple thereof for Victory Bonds, and £4 or a multiple thereof for Funding Loan, Officers who wish to invest in these securities will make their own arrangements with their agents or bankers.

MANCHESTER WAREHOUSE FIRE.

Thousands of bales of cotton and large quantities of rum and sugar stored in warehouses of the Ship Canal Company at Manchester were destroyed by fire yesterday morning. The outbreak, the cause of which is unknown, occurred in the cotton section of the warehouse.

AIRMEN AND TOWER BRIDGE.

The Air Ministry states for the information of all pilots that the practice of flying through the Tower Bridge between the high-level footways and the bascules must cease. Any such cases reported in future will be severely dealt with.

WHY DOES GERMANY DELAY?

There is no doubt of the delay, though there may be differing opinions of its motives. The world is wearily watching the reluctance of Germany to pay the price of her defeat. At times it seems as if her will was set against the signature of her delegates. One Cabinet falls because it will not seal the Peace; another rises because it is prepared to endorse the decision of Versailles.

Yet the Treaty is unsigned. Even when representatives were appointed by the German Government to proceed to the Hall of Mirrors, there has been delay—Herr Müller has found scruples, and will not do what once he dared. So time is stolen by Procrastination, the robber.

If the world is waiting, it is waiting with growing irritation. Peace deferred maketh the heart of the world sick. Travesties of patriotism such as the Scapa Flow fiasco and the Berlin holocaust of French flags do not mend matters within or without Germany. They arouse the passions of men who would gladly view the passing of strife and tragedy.

Mankind longs for the close of an era of war and is looking through the mist of wide-spread disorder to a better epoch. Any policy of friend or foe which hinders the coming of that age is resented with increasing vehemence. A stern hand must limit the days of unsettlement.

It is difficult to measure German mentality, but it seems fair to judge that the German Government is even yet trusting that tortuous delay will bring some strange chance to their rescue. Like Micawber they are "waiting for something to turn up."

Such a hope is vain. The Allies have fought shoulder to shoulder in the evil days of war, and they will not forsake each other in the happier times of victory. They believe that they did not begin the war and they know that they ended the war—and the ending is to be fitly consummated.

Delay in the signing of the Peace terms is grievous to the Allies, but it is more than grievous to Germany—it is dangerous. Her only hope is in submission, and even to her, Peace will bring its fruits.

WAR SAVINGS.

We have frequently commented upon the extreme popularity of war savings institutions, a fact borne out by figures which we have been able to publish in connection which certain units.

There can be no two minds as to the value of such institutions.

The fact that one has accumulated a few pounds in this way gives a capital sense of security for the days to come; and the additional satisfaction that German shopkeepers did not take all the money which finds its way from the pay table.

The method is simple. An officer should be present at the pay parade and as each man leaves he should be invited to subscribe a few marks.

The total eventually reaches the required amount and Tommy becomes the proud possessor of a certificate, often enough ante-dated, a fact which carries with it increased interest. We heard recently of a case where the certificate issued was two years old.

All that is required is a little intelligent co-operation, not that spirit which led one Company Commander to report "Nothing doing."

Taking a man at random, he asked, "Want to put any money in the War Savings?" "No, thanks, sir," was the reply. "Didn't I tell you so?" was his triumphant observation.

Whereas a little persuasion would have done everything and the man would have thanked him in a year or so for his interest.

To the uninitiated the method is very simple. A responsible officer should undertake the secretarial work for a battalion, backed by representative officers from each company. The benefit of thrift should be persistently brought before the men, and the literature which is easily obtainable displayed, instead of, as is often the case, consigned to a corner. Some very striking posters are to be had.

All that is required is the good will of officers. They should give a popular lead and the men will surely follow, a fact borne out by the letters we receive asking where War Savings certificates are to be bought. Each man should be encouraged to take a book, and it should be explained that while money can be paid in, it can also be withdrawn.

No qualms on this score need be felt. Tommy is only human, and when he has secured one certificate, he will not rest until he has a second and so on. It is only human nature.

Once there is the inspiration, the desire to spend will be overcome by the desire to save, and the war gratuity accruing will be permitted to remain intact on the return to civil life, because of the lead which it is possible for those in authority to give to the rank and file in this matter.

GEORGE.

To say that George had "fallen" out of the window wouldn't be quite true. I don't think George could "fall". He certainly could tumble in, out, up, through, across, upon, away, among, back over, and off. A clever exponent!

He had tumbled out of the window and broken his wrist and everybody in the Battery laughed.

"Callous brutes!" you will say. "Malicious devils!" But then you didn't know George, and so you don't know why they laughed. That is my story.

A little scandal first, low in your ear. George was very fond of whisky, and that whisky had an extraordinary effect.

He never reeled or staggered, or became amorous or violent—that would be a low story. But those whisky fumes did get into his extremities and play him some strange tricks.

Perspective became his evil genius and direction a lost sense. He could never descend to a dug-out without bumping his head, he would insist upon trying to stand upright in a cellar no higher than his ears, he was always getting lost.

There are some people who will never accept a principle until it has been demonstrated in a violent manner. Here was a very obstinate case.

In a shell-pocked, barbed-wired land George was in his element. You saw him at his best there, you recognised the inexhaustibility of his art. The one rule in life, as in writing, is to be infinitely various — the secret of George's popularity. The light railway running by the guns brought him down every time, his chin must have been as scarred as a professional footballer's. The unexpected is supposed to be the essence of a joke; if so then here was the exception that proves the rule.

This perversity was not confined to obstinacy towards fixed principles and old established truths taught us by the scientists, but manifested itself in his attitude towards the poets dictum that "East is East and West is West" which he would not accept.

Perhaps he inclined unduly towards the doctrine of Galileo that East could be reached by going West

But I, who have accompanied him on many expeditions think this was his rule — "To find a place, walk about in the probability zone until you come to it".

It is not without its merits; there is no strain on the mathematical faculty, it leads to all sorts of romantic situations — the spice of life.

If George would record his experiences he would add a very interesting and valuable chapter to "The Probabilities of Chance". For maps, George had no use whatever. A "1 in 100,000" just represented his chances of finding a place by using one.

One day we were saddened by the news that George was leaving us, he was going to a Kite Balloon Section. Poor George!

Of course he didn't mind; he had never tumbled out of a basket 5,000 feet up.

But we knew he would, or float gracefully some day when the wind was contrary, in a parachute to the enemy's line. We already saw his name in the casualty lists. Poor George! it was all up with him.

The sentence however, was never carried out, George was reprieved. Foch wanted us, and wanted us all, and we limbered up and went.

And the night before we went into the line for the battle that was to be the beginning of the end, George fell out of the window.

If ignorance of the law is no excuse, then George was guilty of violating the laws of the point of balance, and should have been charged with self inflicting wounds. Instead of this, three months at Brighton and then "demobbed".

For the demobilization scheme was after George's own heart—chance was the basic principle, and he was lucky.

OWEN OLIVER.

THE TIDINGS.

A word went out of Weimar,
To all the world from Weimar,
That the age of war is done.
And there is joy that once again
Life will be normal and free and sane
And know not bomb nor gun.

And this is the talk of men who meet
In café and billet, field and street:—
"You will go back to your job, brother,
And I shall go back to mine;
Sergeant will take up his pen once more,
The corporal open his cycle store,
And the private milk his kine."

Hard things are thawing,
Like the frosts withdrawing,
At the spring wind from Weimar,
For Germany will sign.

The word went out of Weimar,
To Rhineland out of Weimar,
And it thrilled every soul;
And faces are pale and hearts are sore
In the Hotel Excelsior
And in the Monopol.

And this is the way they talk and think
Beneath the palms when the tea-cups clink:
"What will become of your job, brother,
And what will become of mine?
The Major reverts to second Loot,
And the G.S.O. drills the raw recruit
In a regiment of the Line."

Red tabs are falling
Like leaves at the calling
Of the autumn wind from Weimar,
For Germany will sign.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

LEARN A LANGUAGE.

Sir,—There are many, I have no doubt, like "Iris" and myself, who have not the opportunity of learning German and bettering our French.

Could not teaching be run on the same lines as our technical schools at home, i.e., a qualified teacher visit remote villages like ours, say once a week, for the purpose of teaching French or German, preferably both.

I feel sure none of us would mind paying a weekly contribution or a certain figure per lesson, if we could enjoy the privileges of learning even our enemy language.

Many of us are grateful to „Amateur Linguist" for bringing the matter forward, and also to you Mr. Editor, for your sound comments under "Golden Opportunities."

TY CENDL.

THE ENEMY WOUNDED.

Sir,—In your "Echoes from Rhineland" a contributor remarks that he has very seldom seen a German who bears the marks of wounds received in battle. In Cologne, I admit, I have not often met one, but here, near the outpost line, I have met a good many. There are two men in this village who have lost an arm, and several who look very much the worse for wear.

The correspondent wonders where the thousands of German wounded have gone to. The wounded men he sees at home now are mostly convalescent, and attached to some home or hospital, and still under the control of the army. Would a beaten enemy allow his victors to see that his country is full of maimed men? There is more of Germany than is occupied by the Allies. There are other towns than Cologne in Germany.

R.B.

ABOUT CHURCH SERVICES.

Sir,—I am interested in the letter of "Fidelis". I feel certain that he does not speak for many Catholic soldiers.

All I can say is that my experience is different. I don't think many of us have been forgotten on Sundays, and I'm sure our "padres" aren't to blame.

It's up to "Fidelis" to get hold of a Catholic padre, and he will soon put matters right.

R.C.

OUR CRICKET CUP.

Sir,—I was glad to read your gentle strafe of those cricket secretaries whose teams have not been pushing along in the competition.

One would have thought that after the astonishing rush to enter, everyone would have been eager to play fixtures as announced and I was surprised to observe from the League Tables how little a number of teams had done.

The lapse during the past few days has been unavoidable, but previously I imagine that only in a few cases was it impossible to keep up to date with matches. In the case of my Battery, we were away at practise camp when the competition started and were consequently unable to play during the first fortnight.

But you considerately postponed our opening matches and since our return we were able to play four games before the moving forward orders came along — a better record than can be shown by some teams who have had no such difficulty.

"SECRETARY BIRD".

THE G. S. RIBBON.

Sir,—I am tired of seeing announcements that the General Service Ribbon is "nearly ready for issue". Months ago I read this, but where is it? I see a firm advertises in the Post urging all ranks to wear it, but how can they, when it cannot be procured, and even if it could be, it is not authorised yet.

By the time it does come along I rather suspect there won't be a huge number left in the Army who served in the Great War.

I believe the ribbon has been in the English shops for a month or two and a lot of men have bought it. Most of us would like to sport it while still in the Army. When are we likely to be able to do so?

"1916 MAN."

"STANDS SCOTLAND WHERE IT DID!"

Sir,—Once a week there appears an article in your columns in the homely Doric of the North of Scotland, dear to readers of "Johnny Gibb of Gushetneuk" and "Life among my Ain Folk." These articles are welcomed weekly by many Scotsmen and several Germans, the former perusing them for sentimental, and the latter for linguistic reasons.

When the feature first appeared it was a column in length, then it dwindled to three-quarters, and now I see with some emotion that it has been cut down to half its original size.

Are your English vandals at work? "Stands Scotland where it did"? Or has Peter, the author of the Epistles, turned indolent in his old age? Before the merciless attenuating process is continued farther, I hope some modern Jeffrey will take either Peter or the vandals in hand.

SCOTIA.

PAINT AND POWDER.

Sir,—When I was last on leave I could not help seeing the change that has come over our British girls. Almost all were painted and powdered and to me the sight was abhorrent.

I know it used to be considered the sign of a lady that she never descended to "making-up" and by that sign you knew she was a lady.

But to-day it is impossible to say if the girls and women you meet in the streets are really ladies, or are merely third-rate chorus girls or even demi-mondaines, for all are equally assiduous in colouring their cheeks and lips, powdering their noses and darkening their eyebrows.

I think it is up to every soldier going home on leave to "rub it in" to all his female relations and friends that this modern freak is intensely disliked by all clean-minded sane men.

ANTI-PAINT.

AT THE OPERA.

"Rigoletto."

Whether you regard "Rigoletto" as mere garish melodrama or as a genuine tragedy, it provides a rich display of dramatic situations. It breathes the very atmosphere of mediaeval passion in the Duke's lawless love and the father's revenge of his daughter's honour, through the assassin's stiletto. The outstanding figure is the deformed dwarf and a highly convincing rendering was that of Herr Liszewski this week. Equally admirable was Käte Herwig as Gilda in her duets with her father or with her fickle lover. Herr Krauss as the handsome duke, sang his way into Gilda's and Maddalena's heart very seductively and the ever popular "La donna è mobile", so beloved of tenors, was a rare treat. The audience followed with keen appreciation the development of the drama up to the final climax, almost painful in its tragic intensity. While the honours fell deservedly to the principals, a word of praise is due to Herr Lindlar's Monterone, the sinister Sparafucile of Herr Höttges, and Katharina Rohr's Maddalena.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

"The Chequers" Unchequered.

"The Chequers" have suffered severely, like many others, from demobilization, four only of the old party remaining, but the process of reorganization, I am delighted to hear, has now been completed and the new "Chequers" have been giving performances for a month past at Siegburg and Troisdorf. Judging from the size of the audiences and their applause, I am told, these have been thoroughly appreciated. "The Chequers" reopen at Siegburg on or about Saturday next, going to Wahn about the 7th July. On July 29th they appear at the British Empire Leave Club, Cologne.

B.E.L.C. Doings.

I hear that Baron d'Erlanger is coming to Cologne next week to speak to the members of the British Empire Leave Club on the subject of The Channel Tunnel. Other B.E.L.C. news is that the Whist Drive on Thursday had to be held indoors owing to the weather. Forty-five tables were filled and it was another success.

The first Ladies Prize was won by Pte. Hall with a score of 157 and the first gentlemen's prize by Pte. Ramsden with a score of 153. The 2nd and 3rd Ladies Prizes went to Pte. Bissell and Pte. Morrison.

Pte. Price having been demobbed L/Cpl. Taylor officiated as M.C. Once again the pipers of the 11th Bn. Royal Scots (by kind permission of Lt. Col. Nash) delighted the men of the B.E.L.C. by a splendid programme of music. Owing to the bad weather the music ended earlier than usual.

Baffles.

Talking of "straight" men. Quite a well-known figure in pre-war and Army theatrical circles is George Baines, who plays with Jack Knowles in clever double acts. In "The Darktown Strutters Ball" he was a huge success. Coming of an old theatrical stock, he started his thespian career at the early age of seven. Whilst still in his teens his success as a juvenile lead in revue was cut short and he signed the Big Contract. In France Baines has played many parts from the Ugly Sister in "Cinderella" to the Mesmerist in "The Bells." For two years he was producer for the "Jesmond Jesters," the 50th Divisional Party. He is an exceptionally clever, neat, and conscientious worker—and says his hardest work is prompting "comedians." At present with "The Tabs" at the Apollo Theatre, he is playing Baffles, a cracksman, with distinct success. The above is an impression by Roy.

"The Owlers."

The 79th Brigade Concert Party, "The Owlers", paid a flying visit to the Casino, Euskirchen, on Wednesday night, and received a splendid reception. They are fortunate in possessing two clever vocalists in Bdrs. Broome and Walker, and their rendering of the "Battle Eve" duet was admirable. Bdr. Pawson in his ventriloquial sketch is always assured a hearty welcome. Foremost amongst the comedians is Pioneer Evans with his items at the piano, and as "Props" in a farcical sketch, "Producing a Cinema Drama." The "girls," Lieut. Palin and Dvr. Fulton, are chic and dainty in their speciality dances; while Pioneer Corner, monologist, Lieut. Oxberry, baritone, Gnr. Litchfield, comedian, and Gunners Panter and Brown, pianists, make up a varied and well-balanced show.

JACQUES.

THE OLD SCOUTS' CORNER.

Last Saturday we had a very pleasant ramble to Königsforst, and in spite of the somewhat inclement weather, a very enjoyable afternoon was spent. After a stroll through the forest, tea was partaken of, and we arrived back in Cologne about 7 p.m.

* * *

On Wednesday evening owing to rain, we were unable to follow our usual custom, and have the circle in the garden. However, the music room in the Lindenthal Y.M.C.A. proved an admirable substitute.

A most interesting paper on the 3rd Scout Law was read by Corporal Sands, and this was followed by a very heated discussion. A real "scouty sing-song" brought a delightful evening to a close.

* * *

To-day, we are going to ascend to the top of the Cathedral, and will all our members please note that we are meeting outside the Dom Hotel at 2.45 p.m. We shall go to Lindenthal for tea and attend the performance to be given by the Lena Ashwell Dramatic Company is the evening. So rally up, all old scouts, and let us have a record attendance.

FIGHTING THEIR BATTLES OVER AGAIN.

"OVER THE TOP" AT OLYMPIA.

AMAZING REALISM AT NAVAL, MILITARY AND R.A.F. TOURNAMENT.

The Naval, Military and Royal Air Force tournament was opened at Olympia, London, on Thursday afternoon. The King and Queen, who were in the Royal Box, as also was Marshal Joffre, were given a rousing welcome. The interior of the building has been camouflaged this year to represent Flanders, and a typical French village with a river and mill has been constructed, barriers being painted to represent sandbags.

TUG OF WAR.

The competitors' section of the Tournament opened with a Tug-of-War, of which the following were the results:—

1st Round: 3rd East Surreys beat Royal Marine, Deal.

Railway Construction Troops R.E. beat No. 2 A.R.D.

R.A. Barracks Devonport beat 3rd Buffs.

Hqrs, R.A.F. beat R.A. Barracks, Chatham.

3rd Leinsters beat 1st Gordons.

3rd Group, R.A.F. beat British Troops, France.

No. 1 A.R.D. beat 3rd W. Yorks.

1st Irish Guards beat H.M.S. Queen Elizabeth.

In the Inter-Port Field Gun competition H.M.S. Victory was first; and the Royal Marine Artillery second; the time being 7 mins. 18 4/5 secs.

The Tournament season continues for a fortnight.

A SURPRISE "ATTACK."

At the dress rehearsal which preceded the tournament the representation of warlike conditions in the battle zone was a very interesting as well as skilful pretence. The moving story is thus described by an observer:—

A surprise attack has carried the British troops to a position where two lines of German trenches defend a walled farm. It is dawn.

A Véry light soars into the sky; there is the pan, pan, pan of a few shots, and then silence. . . . Suddenly the barrage bursts over the enemy lines. For a minute the shells shriek and crash into the German first line, and as the barrage lifts on to the second line the tanks move forward over the wire entanglements.

The bayonet charge, the bombing of the communication trench, the attempted counter-attack by the Germans, the prisoners, the last dash for the farmhouse as it bursts into flames—all are studied from the life.

As the attackers make their triumphant advance, a man falls here and there.

One staggers back to the first-aid station, he sinks and falls, showing all the symptoms of the man badly hit and out of the last struggle for good and all. Red Cross men run forward; for a moment he is a centre of hurry and confusion, and then, most natural of touches, somebody gives him the all-conquering Woodbine, and he smiles just as he did in France.

The Show, held on the picturesque, tree-encircled Army Athletic Ground, will be on the same attractive lines as last year, increased by classes open to civilians for hunters, polo ponies, and harness horses. It is hoped also to include various spectacular events. The King is presenting a valuable prize cup again, and many influential people, including the Duke of Connaught, are interesting themselves in the event.

MILITARY MATCH AT THE OVAL.

The Royal Fusiliers at the Oval this week made a good draw of the game with the Household Brigade, who, declaring at 317 for five, left the Royals two and a half hours in which to get the runs. A seventh-wicket stand of 113 brought them within measurable distance of achieving their purpose when stumps were drawn at 7 o'clock. Major G. V. Goodliffe hit no fewer than twenty 4's and was batting an hour and a half. Scores:—

Household Brigade	5 (wkts, dec.) 317
Royal Fusiliers	(7 wkts) 258

LANCERS V. GUNNERS.

2nd LONDON BRIGADE GROUP SPORTS MEETING AT ENGELSKIRCHEN.

Much interest was taken in the sports meeting of the units attached to the 2nd London Brigade Group, held at Engelskirchen on Monday. The rivalry was that of units, and not individuals, for all were out to win the cup presented to the unit which scored most points. The team events particularly were stubbornly fought out, the excitement culminating in the closing event when Lancers met Gunners in the final tug-of-war. The cup depended on it. For eight minutes the strain was terrific. At last, amid tremendous applause, the excellent coaching of the Lancer team told, and they won.

And this was not the only notable achievement. Capt. Bald, of the 113th Siege Battery, threw the cricket ball 102 yards, and Gunner Owens, of the same unit, was almost equally successful.

The band of the 10th Queen's played during the afternoon, and added much to the enjoyment of the occasion. The prizes were presented by Brigadier General F.A. Gudgeon, C. B., who congratulated the committee on the organisation, and especially commended the Lancer Squadron for their fine exhibition. Three cheers were given for the General, and for Major Pratt, M.C., M.G.C., who organised the meeting.

BRILLIANT RECOVERY OF VARDON IN ST. ANDREW'S "TOURNEY".

There was a close finish in the golf tournament at St. Andrew's on Thursday, Vardon by suberb play extricated himself from the position which the previous day left him, namely ten strokes down, and finished only one stroke behind the winners, Mitchell and Duncan, who tied 312 each. Hendren "Guessing."

Hearne and Hendren were batting recently when Hearne, who had made 56, appealed against the light. Hendren, who had rattled up 21 in very short time, also told the umpire that he "couldn't see them very well." "Well," said the umpire, "if you can't see them, you're guessing at them all right!"

HEALTH—ENERGY—VIGOUR.

The Nerve Centres derive their energy from a natural phosphoric nutrient which is replenished by certain elements in the food we eat. In cases of strain or excess, we obtain insufficient to meet the demand. The Muller Nutrient is identical in composition with the natural phosphoric fat, and is a food, not a drug—nourishment, not a stimulant.

The Muller Nutrient increases the physical energy, instead of making demands upon it, and immediately supplies the exhausted nerve centres with their vital nourishment. The user soon becomes conscious of the help and strength his system is receiving.

Echoes from Rhineland.

The Tramcar Driver.

Visitors to Cologne and other continental towns often remark the comfortable circumstances under which the electric tram driver performs his duties, by reason of the cars having been constructed with an enclosed driving platform, which most of our English trams do not possess. Observation in Germany will show the driver's hands to be clean and supple, as compared with the often thick, and coarse-grained hands of our drivers at home. Neither has the face developed that rugged, weather beaten look of the British tram driver. London trams, we know, are similarly built, but those of most British provincial places lack the roofed-in, glass-fronted platform.

A Fruitful Idea.

One of the most interesting features of the highways leading to the various parts of the bridgeheads, and one not seen in England is the rows of fruit trees flanking either side and making a most picturesque avenue, and a very paying one too. These fruit trees are well cared for, belong to the public and consist mostly of cherries, apples and pears. When the fruit is ripe the trees are stripped and it is sold, the proceeds being used to assist in the upkeep and maintenance of the roads. It is a greater crime to rob these public trees than those of the private owners in the orchards by the wayside.

Not Genuine.

The practice of sending home to one's women folk, souvenirs of "foreign countries abroad" is not confined to the English Army, although masculine choice of feminine apparel invariably causes lovely woman to prove that "speech was given us to conceal our thoughts." Frequently one sees a German girl wearing a white smock blouse with a sort of embroidered brassard on each arm and a similar patch back and front. Such blouses are from Bulgaria, Roumania, and thereabouts, brought or sent home by German soldiers serving on those fronts. The genuine ones — for they seem to have set a fashion — are of rather coarse material and the colours are crude, red, and blue.

Candour in a Café.

It frequently happens that our foreign contemporaries, particularly the lower classes, in expressing themselves in English, do so with a delicious strain of unconscious and unintentional humour. The following should serve as an amusing example:

The other day a Rhine Army Tommy in need of refreshment looked rather circumspectly at a few cafés with a view to obtaining it. Finally he came to one barely a stone's throw from the famous Dom, which appeared to suit him. His preference being for coffee, his attention was naturally drawn to a price-list in the window, in which coffee figured, amongst other things. The tariff started thus: Coffee 20 pfgs.—Genuine Coffee 50 pfgs.

A very candid confession as to the composition of the cheaper variety, he thought.

Tours Through Stricken Areas.

The Belgian State Railways are quick to realise the commercial value of a tour of the places round which the fate of the Allies centred through long and bitter hours. They have organised a three days' tour from London during which the visitor will travel first class throughout at an inclusive charge of £12.12.0. It is guaranteed that this sum includes not only railway fare but also hotel accommodation and food, from the time of leaving London until the return. Visitors are taken to Belgium via Dover and Ostend. Zeebrügge is visited, and a whole day is devoted to a tour of the battlefields. The itinerary includes Ypres, the Yser, the "Big Bertha" at Leugenboom, Dixmude, Poelcapelle, Zillebeke, St. Julien, Forest of Houthulst, Pervyse, and Furnes.

The Ruins of Ypres.

"This is holy ground. No stone of this fabric may be taken away. It is a heritage for all civilized peoples."

So runs the legend displayed before the ruined market place at Ypres, and King Albert, on his recent visit, expressed his gratitude to the British Town Major for this appeal to the often unscrupulous souvenir hunter. "I am glad that has been done," said the King. "It is sacred ground indeed," but if this can be said of Ypres, the tomb of many a warm-hearted British Tommy, equally insistent are the claims of other sites which bring to mind incidents of the past four years. We should tread dangerous ground were we to suggest the superior claims of one site over another — divisions are pardonably jealous of their achievements — but an official pronouncement on the lines of that made recently with regard to Menin Gate would be welcome. At the Menin Gate the ground over which the Canadians fought has been presented to Canada by the Belgian Government for the erection of a memorial building, a fact which led the President of the United States to eulogise the idea and to further the impression that the work of American pilgrims will be commemorated in the same way.

Prizes for "Echoes."

The Editor of "The Cologne Post" wants to encourage all ranks of the Rhine Army to make use of their powers of observation and whenever any phase of life in the occupied territory strikes any of his readers or whenever they come across any unusual incident he would like to have a short paragraph about it. Such items should never exceed 150 words, and even shorter notes will be acceptable. Every day the sum of 10 marks will be given for the best sent in, and it should be borne in mind that in awarding the prize, more credit will be given to the subject than to the style of writing, so that lack of literary ability will be no deterrent to anyone. The envelope should have the word "Echoes" in the top left hand corner.

To-day's prize of 10 marks is awarded to Pte. M. Freedmann 257th A.E. Coy. Labour Corps, Rhine Army.

PEACE SIGNED AT LAST!

GERMANY SUBMITS TO THE INEVITABLE.

MILITARISM'S LAST THROW.

CAUSES OF THE DELAY.

FIERCE FIGHTING IN POLAND.

GERMAN DELEGATES SIGN THE TREATY.

PEACE.

The treaty of Peace was signed by the German delegates at 15.50 yesterday.—Havas Agency

The German delegates were the first to sign. On receipt of the news a salute of 101 guns was fired at Cologne.

Thus, at ten minutes to four on Saturday the 28th June 1919, officially ended the greatest and most terrible war the world has ever known.

Five years and a day have passed since the Archduke Franz Ferdinand of Austria and his wife were murdered at Serajevo, a little town in Serbia, this habit of the Habsburg house for tragedy being the event which furnished the pretext for the war.

The German delegates who signed the Peace Treaty were Herr Müller and Herr Bell, members of the new Bauer Cabinet. Throughout the week there has been great apprehension of eleventh hour trouble. That this feeling was not unwarranted is shown by the revelation of a military conspiracy which is printed below. Happily for Germany and happily for all the Allies, the plot failed.

To say that there is Peace, is foolish. There is only the making of Peace. Only if Germany makes an honest endeavour to "play the man" and take its proportion of the general atonement for the suffering and misery entailed by the war, can there be a lasting Peace.

WHY GERMANY DELAYED SENDING DELEGATES.

NEVER INTENDED TO SIGN.

The Dantzig correspondent of the Berliner Tageblatt states that at a meeting attended by about fifteen hundred non-commissioned officers, a member of the Eastern Provinces United Peoples Council named Wittmeyer declared that the councils had planned to establish a republic and to offer armed assistance when the Peace treaty was signed.

In this North East Republic one Winnig was to have ruled as Imperial Commissioner, with Batocki, Schnarckenburg and von Below as Ministers.

Everything was ready and food and money had been secured for the men, but at a conference of Generals at Weimar, the whole plan broke down, as the Government were afraid that the troops, instead of fighting Poland, would march on Berlin and re-instate the ex-Kaiser.

Wittmeyer stated that the Government had intended to refuse to sign the Treaty and then let the enemy advance to the Elbe, where resistance would have been offered. This plan, however, was also given up owing to the distrust between the Government and the Generals. Finally an attempt was made to form an Eastern State with Poland but the Poles refused to consider the scheme.

BLOCKADE TO CONTINUE FOR AWHILE.

AWAITING RATIFICATION.

The Prime Minister, (Mr. Lloyd George), and Mr. Bonar Law will leave Paris on Sunday and will be in their places in the House of Commons on Tuesday.

Although the Peace Treaty has been signed at Paris, the blockade of Germany will not be lifted immediately. Trade with Germany cannot be resumed until the Treaty is ratified by the Parliaments of all the powers concerned. This will probably take three weeks or a month.

The present war measures will therefore continue between the signing and the ratification of the Treaty.

MORE PEACE PROBLEMS.

JAPAN AND AUSTRIA.

At a meeting of the Council of Three yesterday morning the Chinese delegates to the Peace Conference stated that they were prepared to sign the Treaty without reserve, Japan having promised to restore Shantung on a date to be fixed by the Conference. The Council afterwards discussed the question of reparations as affecting Austria, which are complicated by the splitting up of the Austro-Hungarian Empire.

Considerable difficulty is being experienced in determining what proportion of the Austrian national obligations should be undertaken by the new Czecho-Slovakian state. It is hoped, however, to reach an agreement on general lines before President Wilson and Mr. Lloyd George leave.

COUNTER-REVOLUTION IN HUNGARY.

QUICK RETRIBUTION.

On Tuesday in Budapest an attempt was made at a counter-revolution by officers, who seized a Danube monitor and occupied an artillery barracks. The monitor fired three shells at the Soviet building. A large number of people hastened to the river bank, waving white cloths and calling for cheers for the King and the White Guard. Shots were also fired from the windows of many houses, as a result of which some soldiers and passers-by were hit.

The working population of Budapest, however, united in support of the Government, and comparatively soon after, the outbreak was suppressed. The ringleaders have already been executed. The town is quiet, and bodies of armed workers are patrolling the streets.

PORTABLE GALLOWS.

The Austrian Foreign Office has announced that Marshal Foch has sent an ultimatum to the Communist Government at Buda-Pesth that Allied troops are en route to the Hungarian frontier. The rule of the Hungarian Soviet Government is daily becoming more terrorist. Commissary Szamuellis in particular is distinguishing himself by travelling the country in a special train equipped with an execution party of Red Guards and a portable gallows and is passing numerous death sentences.

GERMAN ADVANCE IN POLAND.

Warsaw, 25th June (delayed). The papers of Vilna announce that Marshal Hindenburg stayed recently at Kovno in order to persuade the Government of the province to adopt hostile measures towards Poland.

He promised in case of war with Poland, the collaboration of the voluntary corps of Russian Lithuanians. The Polish population of some villages of the Kozle district, exasperated by the provocations of the Grenzschutz, took arms and bloody fighting ensued.

On the 26th June two German battalions arrived at Herby. A German aeroplane was brought down near Herby and the two aviators were killed. An insurrection has broken out in the provinces given to Poland by the Treaty of Versailles. The insurgents refuse to recognize either the new German Government or the Peace Treaty.

German aeroplanes have machine gunned Alexandrow, Lubicz, Slupca and Konin.

25th June (delayed.)—On the night of the 22nd June, German artillery opened fire in the sectors of Czenstochowa and Lublinice.

Six companies of infantry attacked Wieruszow and the town is in flames. The attack was repulsed by Polish troops.

In upper Silesia, sanguinary reprisals against the Polish population are reported.

THREAT OF MARTIAL LAW.

Noske, Minister of National Defence, in a proclamation referring to the recent disturbances, says that any attempt against public order and safety will be suppressed by every means at the disposal of the Government. If necessary the whole of the Empire will be placed under Martial Law.

In Noske's opinion the disturbances are no longer a question of ordinary economic working class movements, but of well-prepared political action which it is intended should spread over the whole country.

REPORT ON SCAPA SINKINGS.

Admiral Freemantle's report concerning the sinking of the German fleet at Scapa was received yesterday afternoon by the Board of Admiralty. It contains nothing more of general interest than has already been published.

Steps are being taken to salve such ships as can be salved, but it is not considered possible to salve more than four vessels.

As to the reported sinking of the German ships at Wilhelmshaven and Kiel, there is stated to be no truth in the rumour.

LYING BOLSHEVIST REPORTS.

The Bolshevist leaders are egregious liars. In a report sent out yesterday by Wireless they stated that mutiny had broken out on a number of British warships and that the crews had hoisted the red flag.

The British Admiralty, in describing the report as a tissue of lies, says that it has at length decided to give an official denial of the Bolshevist communiqués which are being extensively circulated in other countries.

NEW HOME RULE SCHEME FOR IRELAND.

IMPORTANT MANIFESTO.

An important manifesto was issued by the Irish Dominion League last night. It outlines a scheme to promote the immediate establishment of self-Government for Ireland within the Empire, recognising it as a distinctive nationality and claiming the same place within the League of Nations as is possessed by the over-seas Dominions.

The manifesto is against the settling up of a republic which would only divide Irishmen at the time when every effort should be made to unite them. The scheme embraces the creation of an Irish Parliament which would control all internal Government, fix, levy and collect all taxes, including customs and excise duties, and making an agreed contribution for naval, military and diplomatic services in money or kind, or both. The defence of the island would remain as now under a single central control, but no authority other than the Irish Parliament would have power to impose compulsory service upon Irishmen.

The manifesto states that under the scheme now put forward on the lines of the Dominion Governments the rights of Ulster would be respected and it appeals to Ulster Unionists to state what special safeguards they demand.

Sir Horace Plunkett has drafted the manifesto, the signatures to which comprise chiefly men and women who have not hitherto been engaged in active politics but who feel that the situation demands an expression of opinion other than that of Sinn Feiners and Ulster Unionists. It is put forward as the only possible remedy for the disorder and unrest which disturb the present and darken the future of the country.

Lord Mounteagle, Lord Ashbourne, Lord French, Sir Thomas Esmond, Colonel Pope Hennessy, D.S.O., Captain Gwynn and Serjeant Sullivan, K.C., have already signed.

LABOUR CONFERENCE RUNS AMOK.

THE STRIKE WEAPON.

After a heated debate the Labour Conference at Southport voted yesterday on the question that the Parliamentary Committee of the Trades Union Congress be consulted with a view to effective action being taken to stop the operations in Russia by an unreserved use of political and industrial powers—in other words, in favour of the policy of the general strike as a political weapon.

The decision was taken amid a scene of very great tension, the card vote resulting in a victory for the extremists by a majority of 958,000.

Mr. Henderson subsequently announced that a general demonstration against Allied intervention in Russia will be held in Great Britain, France and Russia on July 20th and 21st.

Mr. Ben Tillett delivered a strong indictment of the extremists' policy, declaring that those who are the most blatant for bloodshed would be the first to skulk away if the soldiers turned out.

CARD LOSSES IN A TRAIN.

At the Court of Bankruptcy yesterday, John Edmund Lord, described as a member of a well-known club in Pall Mall, sought discharge from bankruptcy. The Official Receiver estimated the total indebtedness at £5,439, and expected that complete realisation of the debtor's estate would yield £206.

He said that soon after the outbreak of war debtor obtained a commission in the army, but was invalided out of the service in May last as the result of wounds.

The debtor attributed his insolvency to losses at gambling on racehorses and at cards. Last year, while travelling between London and Manchester, he lost £1,000 while playing auction bridge with three other men.

His discharge was suspended for two and a half years.

PENSIONS, GRATUITIES AND CANTEEN FUNDS.

The Executive of the Army Committee has discussed numerous subjects which should be brought up in the House of Commons in the debate on Army estimates.

Among the points on which members are urged to concentrate are the following:—That service with the forces be taken into consideration when reckoning pensions in the civil service; that an early decision should be arrived at as to the disposal of canteen funds, and that gratuities to non-commissioned officers and men should be granted on the same scale as to officers.

Over seventeen million pounds was invested in the Joy Loan in Trafalgar Square yesterday.

An official communiqué issued at the Hague makes it clear that the ex-Crown Prince is still at Wieringen.

A fire broke out in the hutments occupied by American troops near Pleyel St. Denis, entirely destroying the camp. The flames were only mastered after two hours strenuous effort.

R 34, the British super-airship, will start on her Trans-atlantic trip at two o'clock next Wednesday morning, whether peace is signed or not. The only possible alteration in this arrangement will be due to the weather.

WELL-KNOWN WOMAN CHARGED.

FAMILY TEMPER.

Having been arrested on a magistrate's warrant at Euston Station, Mrs. Velma Isaacs, aged 24, of 9, Rodney-court, Maida-vale, was brought before Mr. Biron at Marylebone, charged with obtaining goods to the value of £318 17s from Messrs. Debenham and Freebody, of Wigmore-street, by false and fraudulent pretences, on June 18 and divers other dates.

Accused was represented by Mr. Harry Baker.

She was the divorced wife—the decree nisi had not been made absolute—of Mr. Godfrey Isaacs' son, and the prosecution had ascertained that she was about to leave London for America in the company of the co-respondent in the divorce proceedings, Mr. Cox, when she was arrested. Only evidence of arrest was now offered.

Detective-sergeant Askew, D division, stated that about eight o'clock that morning he saw the accused at Euston Station waiting to leave by a train for Liverpool. He explained who he was, and told her he held a warrant for her arrest. She accompanied him to the railway police office, where he read the warrant to her. She replied:

"Cannot I pay for the things now? I did not do it to defraud Debenhams, but to make Godfrey Isaacs pay something for me. I did not intend to defraud them at all."

Later she handed him two trunks, packed wih goods, which had been brought from the cloak-room. She also gave him an article from a dressing-case and a gold wrist-watch.

Mr. Freke Palmer: Is the property she handed you the subject of the charge?

The sergeant said it was, and added that when formally charged the accused repeated that she did not intend to cheat the firm, and said she was going to America with Mr. Cox to-morrow.

Mr. Harry Baker said he was not in a position to cross-examine, bout he had investigated the matter, and had come to the conclusion that it was not a case where the accused intended to defraud.

The magistrate replied that that was a question for him.

Mr. Baker: The whole matter has arisen because of temper on the part of members of the family. Will you grant bail?

Mr. Biron: No, I shall not grant bail. There is evidence that she was leaving the country with a very large quantity of property, which she is alleged to have obtained in this way.

Accused was remanded in custody.

EXTRAORDINARY BIGAMY STORY.

THREE HUSBANDS.

Remarkable evidence was given at Grays yesterday, when Constance Emily Benson, the wife of a soldier, of the village of Bulphan, near Purfleet, was charged with bigamously marrying two men named Morris and Phillips.

Joseph Benson, the accused's husband, said they had five children. Whilst he was in the Army his wife wrote that she was going to marry Morris, and the two actually cohabited when he came home on leave. Witness knew nothing of this until Morris subsequently told him that he had married her.

Alfred Phillips, a Plumstead ex-soldier, said he met the accused last May as a consequence of an advertisement in a London paper for someone to adopt a soldier's widow's child. After a week's acquaintance he proposed to her, and they were married the following week. On going to her home at Bulphan he found not one but six children, five of whom, she said, belonged to her brother-in-law. Benson was introduced to him as the brother-in-law.

Other evidence was given that the accused drew two separation allowances. She was committed for trial on the bigamy charges and on a charge of drawing a separation allowance on false pretences.

"IMPROPERLY DRESSED" LIBEL ACTION.

EX-A.P.M. WINS.

The action for libel brought by Captain Gilchrist, formerly A.P.M. at Southport, against the Daily Mail for publishing a letter reflecting on the manner in which he carried out his duties, resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff, who was awarded £650 damages.

FOR THE NEXT WAR.

Major-General Sir H. T. Lukin, D.S.O., who commanded the South Africans at Delville Wood, and later commanded the 9th Division, addressing the City of London School Officers Training Corps yesterday, said: "I hope there is not going to be another war, but I am afraid the probability is that during the lifetime of the young men I see before me now there will be another great war, in the event of which a request will be made for you to come forward and do your best, which I know you will do."

EXTENSION OF HOURS.

We learn that no proclamation extending the hours of opening for restaurants and the free circulation in the streets of German civilians has been issued. The paragraphs in the local press are therefore premature until an official proclamation has been published.

POLICE OFFICER FATALITY AT EPSOM.

EIGHT CANADIANS CHARGED.

The eight Canadian soldiers who were arrested in connection nith the recent riots at Epsom in which Station-Sergt. Green was killed, appeared in the dock at Bow-street yesterday. They were charged with being concerned together in the manslaughter of that officer.

Sir Richard Muir, who prosecuted, asked that, in the event of the evidence being sufficient, the defendants should be committed for trial to the Surrey Assizes on the charge of manslaughter and rioting.

Dr. Thornley, who attended Station Sergeant Green, said the deceased had received at least three separate wounds on the head. The skull was fractured, the fracture extending from the wound right over the left eyebrow.

Evidence was given by a number of witnesses to the effect that the defendants, on the morning after the disturbance, appeared in camp bearing newly inflicted injuries.

The hearing was adjourned.

FAMOUS ALIEN ARTIST'S NATURALIZATION.

CASE CONCLUDED.

The Certificates of Naturalization (Revocation) Committee concluded the hearing, yesterday, of Mr. Philip de Laszlo's case, which had been referred to it by the Home Secretary under the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1918. Mr. de Laszlo was cross-examined by the Attorney-General.

The question to be decided by the Committee is whether a certificate of naturalization granted to Mr. de Laszlo de Lombos (generally known as Mr. de Laszlo), on August 29, 1914, should be revoked on the grounds that he was disaffected or disloyal to the King, that he had traded with the enemy, that he had committed offences against the Defence of the Realm Regulations, and that the continuance of the certificate was not conducive to the public good.

The members of the Committee are Mr. Justice Salter, Lord Hambleden, and Judge Radcliffe, K.C.

After fifteen minutes retirement, the Committee gave their decision, Mr. Justice Salter stating that the committee had decided to report to the Home Secretary in favour of continuing Mr. de Laszlo's certificate of naturalization on the general question of loyalty.

They were of opinion that Mr. de Laszlo had not shown himself by act or speech disaffected or disloyal. He had broken the law with regard to trading with the enemy, which was not denied. The sending of money and the use of the Dutch diplomatic bag, however, was not an evasion of international law in their opinion, but was merely inadvertent. Mr. de Laszlo had made complete reparation in the matter of the incident of the escaped officer. It was impossible to imagine anything more innocent then the whole bulk of the correspondence which had been placed before them.

PROTECTING THE POLICE.

Mr. Bingley, at Greenwich, referred with regret to an increasing tendency on the part of people to interfere with the police in the execution of their duty, and said that the practice must be stopped. The remarks arose out of a charge against Charles Day, 32, private in the North Lancaster Regiment, who admitted being drunk and disorderly, and who was shown to have kicked four constables while "mad drunk." Having served eleven years in the Army, he was let off with a fine of £10. Charles Maybee, 31, of Walpole-road, who caught hold of the ambulance on which Day was being taken into the police-station and shouted, "Don't let them take him in," was fined £5, and Leonard Victor Hardy, 20, of Hunsden road, New-cross, who was also said to have incited a large and hostile crowd to rescue Day, was fined £3.

ABBEY SERVICE FOR CHAPLAINS.

Speaking at a memorial service for members of the Royal Army Chaplains' Department at Westminster Abbey yesterday, the Archbishop of Canterbury said they were thanking God specially for the work—faithful, if need arose, until death—of those whose ministry was wrought among the thousands of our lads in the camps and battlefields abroad, or at the teeming ports and bases, or out upon the sea. In the Church of England more than 7,000 clergy offered themselves for whole-time service with the troops. Commissions were given to 3,060. One hundred of these laid down their lives, 178 were wounded or disabled, and our annals were enriched for Church and people by the recorded heroism of not a few. "The other churches of our land," said the archbishop, "have of course, in proportion, their corresponding facts. With them our link has grown closer as, in face of the great issues of life and death, we have worked together. Let that cementing bond grow ever stronger." The Church's living hold on English manhood, terribly as it still fell short, had grown stronger.

WRENS AND WRAFS.

The numerical strength of the W.R.A.F. is at present 442 officers and 20,400 other ranks. It is announced by the Parliamentary Secretary to the Admiralty that the W.R.E.N.'s will be completely demobilized by the 1st October.

(The Caviare Mouse).
The latest progress of Kinomatography is a real operetta. The words of the songs are original poems of Hans Kraly and set to music in original compositions by Carl Alfredy. They were performed by a large ensemble of well-known male and female singers. The kinematographic performance is executed by first class members of Berlin theatres. The collective art is between the accompanying music and the performing film is absolute and the illusion complete. Our productions cause an increasing measure, packed houses and rejoicing applause of the audience, a striking proof of the excellency of our performances.

WHAT OF THE EAST?

So far as the West is concerned. Peace has been signed.

Nobody with any sincerity can say that in spite of this, Western Europe has not to face many troubles.

But what of the East? It is seething with strife, and probably will be for many a long day

Quite apart from the Yellow Peril, which will sooner or later be a menacing cloud on the horizon of the future, the struggle of antagonistic races is going on with bewildering activity.

Russia, torn assunder by conflicting interests, with a mushroom Bolshevik government menaced on all sides, is a pitiable object lesson to-day.

In those portions of Russia not comprised in the South-Eastern area, there are the forces of the Siberian government from Omsk, the British-led army of Archangel, the Finns operating north of Petrograd, the Karelians, the Esthonians, the Ukrainians, the Poles and finally the Germans all operating in this sphere, so that to follow the various struggles with any degree of comprehension, one needs a map always before one, and a clear notion besides, of the diverse aims of the belligerents.

It is all a sad and bloodthirsty tangle.

Then we come to the extreme of South Russia. Here we find there are four Anti-Bolshevik armies fighting—General Denikin's volunteer forces, the Cossacks of the Don and of the Ural, and General Semenov's Astrachan Corps. Altogether in Russia the Bolshevik armies are said to comprise quite a million men.

Unfortunate Roumania is carrying on two wars. One in the east against the Ukrainian Bolsheviks; the other in the north against the Hungarian Bolsheviks and the government of Bela Kun. The Hungarian Bolsheviks again, are facing the Tcheco-Slovaks.

Our own forces have still plenty of work on hand in the near and far East. In Egypt, in Syria, in Mesopotamia, in Afghanistan and on the Indian frontier they continue to be actively employed.

FRATERNIZATION.

If one may gauge opinion aright so far as the rank and file are concerned there appears to be a hazy idea as to the line of conduct to be adopted with regard to this much-debated subject.

There can be no doubt that less is heard of it than was the case when the British Armies made their appearance on the Rhine, and if with the coming of peace the the existing relationship is to continue, then we think it might be made the subject of talks with the men. Opportunity for this is offered through the various educational efforts up and down the occupied area.

The subject has been relegated to the background, and already there is a fast growing belief — for which we know of no official authority — that before many moons, the restrictions will be relaxed in favour of an open display of that friendliness which the man in the ranks cannot help leaving behind him as part of his sunny nature wherever he goes.

The appeal for the exercise of a sense of dignity is as necessary to-day, if not more so, than it was in the early days of the year, bearing in mind the number of young troops to be found in the billeting areas.

Their attitude is in some degree to be excused. They have not seen the things their demobilized brothers have, they have not tasted of the horrors with which the older man is familiar, but this makes all the more necessary, utterance of the appeals which have been wods.

We know the temptations in and out of billets, to fraternize. Kindness, perhaps is not forced, but in the background is that inheritance handed on by the men whose bones are rotting on the battlefields of France and Belgium and by whose effort, in part, our presence on the Rhine was made possible.

The young soldier should keep this before him and he will not then go astray.

THE RECRUITING BOOM.

On all hands an extraordinary boom in recruiting for the Army is reported. This is not confined to the Metropolis, but is spread throughout Great Britain. The figures are estimated by those best able to judge at between 30,000 and 40,000 a week, figures which we venture to think bear out the optimism expressed by the Secretary for War some time ago.

The recruiting, we learn, is not confined to any particular section of the male population. Men and boys of all classes of life are joining the Colours, some without any previous experience of the Army.

Curiously enough, the Northern Command is credited with the biggest rush, there being 7,000 in one week, due no doubt to a partial cessation of work on the withdrawal of war contracts.

These figures give much food for thought. Is the call of the Army making itself felt? We all know of the comradeship to be found in all ranks, of the lifelong friendships which have been struck up between individuals of entirely different schools of thought. These remain.

With the return to civil life then, there will to a great many come the call. It is impossible to share the company of a man over four eventful years, to live and sleep with him, often under the most primitive conditions, without forming an attachment which cannot be thrown off easily.

But there is another side of the question, that is so often advanced by the men on their return from leave. Is it that men are accepting the life which the Army offers rather than face unemployment? That there is unemployment, there can be no doubt, for many of these new recruits are old munition workers who now find themselves without the work necessary to existence.

Whatever the economic causes, however, and our inability to appreciate the point of view of the man, who refusing to re-enlist is demobilized and thus loses claim to the bounty and furlough incidental to his action, we fail to find any of that humour in the boom in recruiting which one writer sees. We are told that the re-enlistments include men who shouted for demobilization, only to find there was no work for them.

The work of reconstruction which the authorities are facing in no half-hearted fashion, must involve the displacement of men, but there is little humour in our minds in, an old soldier being unable to resume his old job. Rather is it one for extreme regret,

THE PRINCE OF PEACE.

MORAL BASIS OF SOCIAL ORDER.

(BY A CORRESPONDENT.)

The PeaceTreaty has at last been signed. The nations of the world hope be relieved from the anxiety imposed upon them by war. The plenipotentiaries of the nations, are agreed that men want a new world established, that shall be a place of security, wherein can be fostered and developed the ideals and activities which make for the betterment of human life and the nobility of the race.

Now what influence has the Prince of Peace exerted in the deliberations of those upon whom the task was laid, to meet these demands?

Christ's teaching is pre-eminently opposed to warfare, and though it may be objected that up to this time it has produced little effect on professing Christian nations, yet the fact cannot be denied, that we have lived to see the day when those nations have arrived at the conclusion that war is a most illegitimate means of settling their differences.

The time has been long, but we see now, in the underlying principle of the establishment of the League of Nations, clear indications that the Christian leaven is gradually leavening the whole lump of humanity.

Can the nations make permanent peace without the co-operation of the Prince of Peace?

We cannot, though we dared, have a world remodelled on old lines to commit old sins in a new kind of way — the nations arming to the teeth, defying each other to try a bout of arms; a soulless system of industrial competition, manifesting its unholiness in the slum and in the plutocrat?

"Better far," as someone said the other day, "a planet, on which human life is rendered impossible than a revival of the old antipathies which destroy all beauty and nobility, and can but make for the moral suicide of the race."

The whole basis of life must be readjusted to the moral standard sanctioned by the Prince of Peace. That which is morally right must be economically right in industrial relations.

Among great nations less desire for expansion at the expense of others less powerful; rather a dealing with each other in a spirit of goodwill and forbearance. And in individual life, less selfish demand for rights, and a higher conception of social duty.

Though this may sound so splendidly utopian, disregarding the essential thing called human nature, yet upright industrial conditions cannot be maintained without recognising the golden rule announced by the working Carpenter of Nazareth.

In the Prince of Peace, Christ Jesus, we find a redemptive agency, a re-creative power, to remake men, remould society, and re-establish the world in righteousness and peace.

REQUIEM.

Couched in thy soil, oh, France!
Sleeps my beloved;
Daffodils and Fleur de Lys,
Dandelions guard him!
Not shell, not nor ploughshare
Shall e'er disturb him,
Not roll of drum, noblare
Of bugle arouse him
Only the passing wind,
Trill of the soaring lark,
Murmur of crystalline brook,
Effulgent summer suns —
Night and her golden stars
Shall weave his gossamer dreams,
Whisper the message of Peace!

LIONEL VERNEY.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

REMEMBER THE BLIND.

Sir,—May I suggest that the first Sunday after the signing of Peace may be used as a day of practical thanksgiving by all the religious denominations in making a grand collection in aid of our more unfortunate comrades who have lost nature's greatest gift.

I am certain that our "old boys" at St. Dunstans Home for the Blind would be glad to think that they were not forgotten by the Rhine Army.

"ONCE BLIND."

TENNIS FOR "O.R.s".

Sir,—Like "Racket", I too should be glad to know if facilities are likely to be provided for other ranks in the way of tennis, only whereas "Racket" pleads for Cologne, I do likewise for Bonn.

I know for a fact that there are several enthusiasts of the game here, and the news that courts were being allotted to us, would I feel sure, be received with delight.

"ANOTHER RACKET"

MAKE THEM SALUTE.

Sir,—It has been rather noticeable lately that the uniformed Germans are not saluting British Officers with the alacrity that was customary when we first entered the occupied area.

Yesterday one of these officials gave me a most slip-shod salute with a cigarette in his mouth. Naturally I pulled him up and gave him a bit of my mind. I think it is up to every officer in the Army of Occupation to enforce personally the order as to saluting.

If everyone saw that there was no slackness in this respect it would be a good thing for us all.

MAJOR B.

A BELATED RIVER TRIP.

Sir,—Having anticipated for several months the pleasure of seeing the beauty of the Rhine, we got up betimes last Sunday in the endeavour to arrive punctually at Bonn, whence it was stated, according to time table, we should leave at 9.30 a.m.

We got on board S.S. Lohengrin in good time. However, in spite of our haste and effort to be punctual, the time of departure was postponed until 10.30 a.m. and it might have been later, had not several ladies (I am sorry to have to mention it, but once more they were "W.R.A.F's") decided that it was time for them to come along.

It is very much regretted by the writer to have to labour discussions on "W.R.A.F's" but it is thought some effort might be made by these ladies to assist the excellent organisation in condescending to do one of two things viz:— to be punctual or to book for the trip when they know they can be in time.

"BITTE SEHR".

A QUESTION OF CLASS.

Sir,—In a recent issue the following remark attracted my attention: "It is a common sight abroad to see womankind of the working classes wearing no headgear, but here in Germany the custom extends to the better classes as well."

As regards the non-wearing of headgear, I am in no way concerned, but I do take exception to the oft-repeated suggestion that those who are not workers are of the "better class," or even that those who work with their wits are necessarily of a better class than those who work with their hands.

In England we are slaves to class distinction. We have our so-called upper class, middle class, and working class, and we regard them in the order in which I have placed them. I recognise that these classes do exist in the social world, but what I want to see is the working class naturally taking pride of place in our thoughts.

The world is run from day to day by those who work, and by those only. The others are merely parasites.

A CHANCE FOR SWIMMERS.

Sir,—Seeing the enthusiasm shown by every branch of the Rhine Army for all kinds of sport, could not some of our swimmers bring this art to a place in the sun along with football, cricket, etc. Certainly there is a lack in our units as a whole for swimming.

It would tend to give a fillip to inter-unit rivalry for laurels in this branch of sport and nothing is more exciting than a good "swimming gala," many of which could be arranged by the kind help of our sports officer.

"RIGOLETTO"—A PROTEST.

Sir,—May I lodge a mild protest against the people running the Grand Opera shows at the Cologne Opera House for their outrageous treatment of "Rigoletto."

As a great lover of Italian opera, I would suggest that unless the German artistes can sing through an opera without leaving out several very fine (and also very difficult) parts, it would be better for them to restrict themselves to light operas more within the scope of their vocal qualifications.

The fact that they actually ventured to omit whole songs from so well-known an opera as "Rigoletto" struck me as being a very insolent expression of their assessment of our knowledge of grand opera.

I travelled a very considerable distance in very dirty weather for the pleasure of hearing that opera, and I was very annoyed to hear the tenor sing the introduction only of his famous song in the second act, the baritone omitting a difficult piece of his duet with the soprano quietly dying in her sack without singing herself to death as Verdi laid down she should.

AN OFFICER'S GROWL.

Sir,—Much has been heard of the inconvenience experienced be N.C.O's and men of the Rhine Army in getting their wants satisfied at the E.F.C. canteen.

If the queue I saw last evening is a daily feature of that particular thoroughfare then the complaint is well justified, but the officers have their own particular little grouse.

So far as the canteen is concerned I am not aware of any dissatisfaction, but anyone who has endeavoured to repair a deteriorated wardrobe at the Officers' Clothing Depot will have a different tale to tell.

There seems to be not much organisation. Customers are served out of their turn, long waits are the rule, the service is in the hands of individuals with little adaptability. Indeed the muddle is apparent to anyone.

May I suggest that a little more ginger should be put into this department. It is aggravating to stand at the counter for an hour and a half to be told that the particular article required is not in stock.

AT THE OPERA.

"Der Z geunerbaron."

The popular and sprightly melodies of the "Zigeunerbaron" succeeded in filling the Opera House on Friday, and many were turned back being enable to secure a place. We will refrain from entering into an extensive criticism of the music, as the opera has already been rendered a good many times during this and last season, and has been previously described. It simply remains to state that Friday night's performance was a very excellent one.

The two first acts of the Opera are certainly the best, and the artistes did their utmost to give full effect to the popular numbers. Of course "Wer uns getraut" always gains the lion's share of the applause, and certainly Hans Clemens as Sandor had not to complain of his reception. He had his "beau jour." Mimi Werhard-Poensgen as Saffi excelled in voice and acting, and was also greatly fêted, with her partner Hans Clemens. Hans Robert as Kalman Zampan contributed greatly to the success of the evening by his natural gift for comedy.

The other parts were also in good hands and the ballet earned a great applause. The orchestra under Franz Weissleder's experienced direction was as excellent as ever, in rendering the fiery rhythm of the great Viennese master's music.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

Army Discoveries.

George Grossmith says that the Army Concert Parties will undoubtedly discover many useful small-part men, who have, during their experience in this kind of work, learned how to wear clothes and walk a stage. Personally I think some big part men may also be found. Several members of the "Kissing Time" Company at the new Winter Garden Theatre, Drury Lane, were members of concert parties in France, including Peter Shannon, the dusky dancer, Stanley Brightman, stage manager, Frank Stepe, box office manager, Tim O'Connor, dancer, Rob. Currie, comedian, Stanley Holloway, and Alan Dale.

Spud the Gardener.

The cliché you see here is an impression of George Huntley the comedian, who plays the part of Spud the gardener in the new "Tabs" revue, "Well I'm!—!!" at the Apollo Theatre, Cologne. He is, as I think I've mentioned before, an old hand at the game, and is certainly an acquisition as a heavy comedian to the G.H.Q. Party. His burlesque of East Lynne with Iona the maid, is quite one of the best features of the first scene in the present revue. Although a little out of his sphere, Huntley was also a big success as the waiter in the last "Tabs" revue, "Get Busy."

The Leave Club Programme.

To-day the Rev. Gower Rees is to talk to the men in the writing room at 5. p.m. and at 6.30, the Royal Dragoons will give a concert by their string band in the Theatre (by kind permission of Maj. Tomkinson D.S.O., On Monday, Miss Sara Silvers is going to give her delightful "Songs at the Piano" in the music room at 5. p.m. and at 6.30 there will be a practice dance in the ball room. On Tuesday, there is to be a very full day. There will be a dancing class in the theatre at 5. p.m. and an impromptu concert in the music room at the same time. Amongst many other interesting items Baron d'Erlanger will speak on the "Channel Tunnel" at 6 p.m. and at 7.5 the "Tiger Pips Concert Party" will perform. On Wednesday, the band of the 10th Royal Hussars, (by kind permission of the C.O.) will play for the dance held in the theatre at 6.30 p.m. The pipers of the 11th Royal Scots will play in the garden at 5.30 p.m. on Thursday, and a whist drive will take place at 6.30 the same evening. On Friday, there will be an impromptu concert in the music room at 5 p.m. and a dancing class in the theatre at the same hour. These will be followed by a Lena Ashwell concert party, kindly presented by the Y.M.C.A., at 7. p.m. in the Theatre. Another of the B.E.L.C. popular dances will be held in the theatre on Saturday, July 5th at 6.30 p.m.

A Fine Concert.

Owing to the exigencies of war, Capt. Sykes' famous Rhine Army Choir Society was unable to perform at the concert at the B.E.L.C. on Friday evening. It was a great disappointment. Miss Lavie's solos on the violin gave great pleasure. She played Godard's "Berceuse de Jocelyn" and later in the progamme "Canzonetta" by d'Ambrosio. Miss Una Stone kindly sang "My Flower of Dreams" and "Melisande in the Wood." Miss Somers Cocks played a 'cello solo with her usual success. A string quartette consisting of four members of the B.E.L.C., Miss Smyth, Miss Lavie, Miss Clark and Miss Somers Cocks, played; two of German's Henry VIII Dances and "Molly on the Shore" by Percy Granger with great spirit and excellent rhythm. Major Greenless sang beautifully and his songs included "The Pipers of Pan," and "Loves Coronation" with a cello obligato. Later in the evening he gave "Mary my Girl" and "Let us forget" by Maud Valery White. He was most ably accompanied throughout the evening by Miss Clarke, whose excellent musicianship is well known at the Leave Club. One of the features of the evening, however, was the violin playing of Alfred Barker, whose beautiful tone and expression roused the greatest enthusiasm among the audience. He was recalled time after time, after his solos by Hubay, and played Dvoraks "Humoresque" and an arrangement of one of Chopin's Nocturnes as encores. The comic element was provided by Jock Liminal who sang "Mary Arry" and the "Ladies who fought and won," causing much mirth and laughter.

LONDON AMATEUR FOURSOMES.

RESULTS OF THIRD AND SEMI-FINAL ROUNDS AT SUNNINGDALE.

Harewood Downs, the last winners of the trophy in 1914, who were again represented by the same couple, were beaten in the third stage by Merton Park. The match was all square at the turn, but Merton Park took the lead at the thirteenth, won the fourteenth and fifteenth, and halving the sixteenth, gained a surprise victory by 3 and 2. Mid-Surrey, although starting badly, being 3 down at the fourth and 1 down at the ninth, eventually beat Leatherhead by 2 up and 1. The third round results were:

Merton Park (Mr. R. B. Barton and Mr. F. H. Wethered) beat Harewood Downs (Mr. R. Harris and Lieut.-Col. A. E. Williams) by 3 and 2.

Mid-Surrey (Mr. S. H. Fry and Mr. "E. H. Royalat") beat Leatherhead (Mr. H. H. Archer and Mr. S. A. Harding) by 2 and 1.

Romford (Capt. W. A. Murray and Mr. J. J. Murray) beat Royal Wimbledon (Mr. F. S. Bond and Mr. P. Carr) by one hole.

Addington (Mr. A. C. M. Croome and Mr. G. L. Mellin) beat Walton Heath (Mr. Angus Hambro and Mr. P. C. Gaulter) by 2 and 1.

LADY GOLFERS' CLUB.

The Lady Golfers' Club held their spring meeting at Barnehurst, Kent, on Thursday. Miss Cecil Leitch, the lady champion, won the scratch prize with 81; Mrs. Kellie, 99 less 18—81, the handicap; Miss G. L. Kennedy and Mrs. Stanley Stubbs the foursomes against bogey; and Mrs Kellie the sealed holes competition.

RUMANIANS DEFEATED.

INTER-ALLIED ATHLETIC GAMES AT THE PERSHING STADIUM, PARIS.

In the Inter-Allied athletic games at the Pershing Stadium the final of the throwing the Javelin competition resulted as follows: — Bronder (America), 55.818 metres, 1; Liversedge (America), 53.87 metres, 2; Butler (America), 48.639 metres, 3.

In the fencing contests, Italy won 19 matches to Rumania's 17 and will meet France in the final tie for the Allied championship.

The Italian Association football team beat the Rumanian team by seven goals to one.

MOTOR CAR IMPROVEMENTS.

Among the special tendencies which characterise the new models may be mentioned an increased adoption of overhead valves, detachable heads, cantilever suspension, the spiral bevel drive central change-speed control, the reduction of lubricated parts, the elimination of grease cups and the driving of the speedometer from the constant mesh pinions of the gear box.

Dazzle and Jazz.

Those fortunate individuals who have not to sit down in order to arrive at a conclusion as to when the next leave is likely to come along, will learn with interest that at present London is all Dazzle and Jazz modes. Customers are spending their money lavishly and getting in return audacious colour schemes and riotous hues. The East End is no more the hunting ground for feathers and violent plush. These have been forgotten, regarded as pre-war. In the Mile End-road "Dazzle" jumpers and "Jazz" stockings are to be seen and the fashion grows.

There is the absence of any price-tickets from the gowns and hats displayed, which gives the proprietors such scope in the joyous game of "weighing up" the customer.

Small millinery establishments exist by the score, and they exhibit just the same characteristics as those of the West End. Only a few models are displayed; the names given to them are usually diminutions of feminine Christian names, and they lean to conspicuous colourings, transparent brims or crowns, with small flowers or fancy ornaments in unusual positions.

One of the Muffins.

Everybody knows Max, the talented comedian of "The Merry Muffins," the Highland Division Concert Party. But few know that he is an artiste of renown in the variety world and recognise in the soldier-comedian, Edgar Max, of Max and Lily, the well-known music-hall pair. For two years he was the outstanding comedian with "The Game Cocks" (40th Divisional Party.) When the Germans advanced in 1918, "The Game Cocks" had a particularly rough passage. All the "props," etc., being blown to pieces. But the indomitable Max set to work and in a short time produced Fred Karno's "Mumming Birds." It was a huge success, and he was complimented by Lieut. Sandy, R.A.F., late manager to Fred Karno, for the excellence of the show. His big drum burlesque with "The Merry Muffins" is one of the best things I have seen for a long time.

Within Monastery Walls.

The other evening, the walls of the historic monastery at Siegberg resounded with music and song, the occasion being a concert given by "C" Company, the 12th Loyal North Lancs. Rgt. The Padre, Capt. the Rev. J. W. Hope proved the most versatile contributor to the entertainment, singing "Two eyes of grey" and "The Sweepers", besides reciting "The Hell Gate of Soissons", and "His only hair." Others who helped to make the evening go with a swing were 2nd Lieut. Case, 2nd. Lieut. Donellan, Ptes. Cohn, Harwood, Barrows, Webster, Challoner, and Pte. H. Furser, a most accomplished pianist. Altogether it was a splendid evening.

WILLARD v. DEMPSEY.

THE 12 ROUNDS FIGHT AT TOLEDO ON JULY 4.

Jess Willard, the heavy-weight champion, meets Jack Dempsey at Toledo, U.S.A. at 3 p.m. on July 4th, when the Heavy-weight championship of the world will be decided.

Willard receives the large purse of £20,000, Dempsey's share being £5,500. In addition to this the pugilists are each to get one-third of the proceeds from the cinema rights, which are of substantial value. The gate receipts it is anticipated will beat all records.

As the fight is limited to 12 rounds, it may be safely predicted that a ding-dong struggle will ensue. To obviate a decision on technical points both men will make herculean efforts to bestow the Order of the K.O.

The following is a comparison of their physical records:—

The judges are Drexel, Biddle, and Tex Rickard.

FIGHT OBJECTED TO.

A Washington message states that a resolution has been introduced into the House of Representatives urging the governor of Ohio to prevent the Willard-Dempsey fight at Toledo on July 4, because such an event would be a desecration of the nation's birthday, and would dishonour the nation throughout the world.

WILDE'S MEETING WITH PAL MOORE.

BY EUGENE CORRI.

There has been quite a lot of discussion as to whether Wilde has been wise in fighting Pal Moore, the American bantam, next month, many people are asking what can be the value of such a match. Wilde may win; we think he will, but if victory does come his way it will tell us nothing more than that which we already know—that Wilde is a marvel.

There is no doubt that after Wilde's contest whith Lynch a feeling came that the wonderful Welshman runs a great risk in giving heaps of weight away to men who in the opinion of sound judges are numbered among the best boxers in the world. However, the point of view taken by Wilde is this: "The judges said that Pal Moore beat me at the Albert Hall; everybody else declared that I won. I certainly do believe that I beat him and I am confident that I can do so again. I want to prove this."

Very Shrewd.

Wilde is a very shrewd young man and his manager, Ted Lewis, is also very shrewd, and it may be that in stipulating that Moore must do 8 stone 4 lbs at the ringside they have made a good match. Whether it will be a match that will capture all London remains to be seen. We did say that Wilde had only to take the ring and everybody would flock to see him, but you will remember that in a recent match when he met Alf Mansfield, the crowd at the ringside was not an unusually large one. However, Wilde is still a vogue, and I shall be surprised if Olympia is not full when he appears against Pal Moore on the 17th of next month.

The American has arrived and has, I believe, gone to Brighton to train. He is more than "quietly confident," of course.

FRENCH BOXING.

At the Continental Sporting Club in Paris the following were the results of boxing contests:—Lemery beat Chevauchée on points in a 6 rounds contest. Lebois beat Deligny who gave up in the 5th round; Henri Veme beat Billy Kleck on points in a 10 rounds match; while Nilles, the champion of France, beat the American Jameson on points in a 12 rounds contest.

NOBLE v. CRIQUI.

The boxing match at the Nouveau-Cirque, Paris, on Friday evening between Tommy Noble and the Frenchman, Eugène Criqui, resulted in a draw.

"COLOGNE POST" CUP MATCHES.

5 WICKETS FOR 9 RUNS.

5th K.O.Y.L.I. (140 runs for 4 wickets, innings declared closed) v. VI CORPS H.Q. (37), on VI Corp's ground at Cologne, on Wednesday. The Y.L.I. batted first, scoring 140 runs in 75 minutes. Lieut. Scott batted brilliantly, scoring 77 runs before being caught in slips and Lieut. Keates contributed 38. Sergt. Bunting, for the winners, took 5 wickets for 9 runs, all bowled. The VI Corps played only 10 men.

52nd BN. MANCHESTER REGT. (58) v. LANCS. DIV. SIG. COMPANY (42) at Geistingen on Wednesday. 2nd Lieut. W. G. Hardy, 52nd Manchesters, is worthy of mention for a well contributed innings of 22. The visitors had to bat for the most part of their innings in the rain. C.Q.M.S. Medcock and Pte. Thorpe shared the bowling honours for the winners, and the keenness shown by the team in the field gave them their victory.

41st BATTALION M.G.C. (167 for 5 declared) v. 2nd SQ. M.G. CAV. DIV. (40) at Heumar on Thursday. The Cavalry batted first, but owing to the bowling of Driver Gorrad (6 wickets for 14) and Major D. Boumphrey (4 wickets for 19), were all out with the total of 49. The M.G.C's then went in to bat, and passed their opponents total with only two wickets down. On the fall of the fifth wicket, the total stood at 132, when Major Boumphrey, who was batting, was joined by Capt. Backrath, who, between them brought the score up to 167. Unfortunately, a heavy downpour of rain prevented the game being carried on, so the "Gunners" declared, leaving the last two mentioned "Not Out", and the total as above. Particularly good was the batting of Lieut. Andrews (37), Pte. Wood (2), Major D. Boumphrey (40 not out), Sergt. Briggs (24) and Captain Backrath (16 not out).

2nd CORPS H.Q. (62) v. 23rd MIDDLESEX REGT. (51) at Leverkusen on Wednesday. For 2nd Corps H. Q. Capt. Mc. Neil (28 not out), was the only batsman to reach double figures. Sergt. Redgrave (14) and Pte. Mackenroth (12), were the leading scorers for the losers. Major Spence and Lieut. Hurle bowled well for the 23rd Middlesex, and Major Yates for the 2nd Corps H.Q.

488 SIEGE BATTERY R.G.A. (72) v. "E" CORPS SIG. COY. (38). This match resulted in another win for the Battery by a margin of 34 runs. For the Gunners, Naylor (15), Timms and Cartwright did the best batting, while Willan (4 for 12) and Timms (4 for 24) were the best bowlers.

In addition to nine old professionals comprising all who were available, Derby County F.C. have signed on nine others for next season. The former are Lawrence, Atkin, Barbour, Bagshaw, Walker, Moore, Leonard, Baker, and Quantrill.

The newcomers are Wightman and Noah Buxton (from Nottingham Forest), T. H. Burton (the younger brother of Noah), G. W. Needham (nephew of Ernest), and R. Moore, a local lad, with Boxley, Martin, Thornewell, and Howard, who played for Derby in the Midlands Victory League.

SPORTING ITEMS IN BRIEF.

Swimming at Harrow.

Harrow beat Rugby, at Harrow on Thursday in a series of swimming events by 16 points to 4.

A "Dishonest Horse."

The King's colt Jutland, who capped his exhibition at Ascot by another disappointing show in the Newbury Cup, is described as a "dishonest horse." He gives his proper form or otherwise as the mood possesses him.

Father As Caddie.

Laurence Ayton, the local favourite, had his father carrying for him in the recent "Tourney" at St. Andrews. When Wm. Greig, another notable St. Andrews golfer, played in a big competition some years ago, his daughter acted as caddie.

Clapton Orient's Goalkeeper.

James Hugall, who was Clapton Orient's regular first team goalkeeper before the war, has again been signed on. After joining the Footballers' Battalion, Hugall gained a commission in the Durham Light Infantry, and was twice wounded while serving with the latter regiment.

In Memory of Mr. C. E. Green.

To perpetuate the memory of the late Mr. C. E. Green, the Essex county cricket Club has resolved to make an effort to raise a sufficient sum of money to pay off the mortgage now existing on the county ground. The Lord-Lieutenant of Essex is appealing to all lovers of sport to assist in this object.

Housing Scheme.—A scheme for building 2,200 houses under the house-planning proposals of the Government to accommodate about 11,000 persons at a total cost of £2,000,000 has been approved by the City Corporation.

Opinions of the Moment.

WINDOWS THAT OPEN.

Dr. Addison, who is chief of the new Ministry of Health, says: "If we could only prevail on a large number of our citizens to sleep with their windows open we should do a great deal to improve the health of the people. I intend that the houses which are erected under the aegis of the Housing Department shall have windows that will open, and I will hang Sir James Carmichael if he provides houses with windows that won't.

LONDON'S AIR DEFENCES.

Major-General E. B. Ashmore, speaking as the officer who was entrusted with the duty of organizing London's air defences, says: "When the Armistice came on November 11th last year the defences of London were at least four times as strong as they were in the preceding May.

So far as night raids were concerned, it looked at one time as though I might be hanged, but the Government spared nothing in the way of guns and searchlights. London, however, owed its defence more particularly to the gallant boys who flew by night.

As to the future it cannot be said with certainty that London will never be raided again, as it is easy for aircraft to find, owing to the river, but if the defences are adequate it will probably never more be attacked.

THE MODERN GIRL.

The Bishop of Edinburgh has been giving his views on modern girls' morals. He says: The most experienced worker who could remember twenty-five and thirty years ago, would at once agree that the present outlook of girls has changed in a remarkable degree.

Every avenue of knowledge, both for bad as well as good, is open to girls almost from their infancy. Their natural curiosity is unduly stimulated even in tender years by what they see and hear.

Their modesty is coarsened as they grow up by what they read in suggestive stories, and cinemas complete the mischief that had been begun even before girls were 10 years of age.

Crowded together as they are in large schools. evil is readily communicated one to the other, and virtue is honeycombed with vice, even before it is known.

BOLSHEVISM DENOUNCED.

Mr. W. M. Hughes, Premier of Australia, spoke some strong words the other day on labour unrest and Bolshevism. He says: If the world is to saved — if the dreadful sacrifice of blood and treasure expended in the war is not to be in vain — force must give way to reason, might to right.

Labour might learn from the fate of Germany, which sought dominion over the earth by force at the expense of right and justice, what will befall it, if it resorted to similar methods. As it is with Germany, so will it be with Bolshevism, which rests on force and not on justice.

Out of the ashes of military despotism has sprung Bolshevism, that dark menacing and hopeless creed which set out to save the world by first destroying it, whose watchwords are murder, rapine and chaos. Both in its methods and in the goal to which it points, Bolshevism, under whatever name it masquerades, is a false and fatal doctrine.

THE JUDGES' WAR WORK.

Lord Birkenhead, the Lord Chancellor, speaking on the part our judges had played in the war, says: From the very first day of the struggle, Lord Moulton made a contribution to the work of the Ministry of Munitions which cannot be exaggerated.

Lord Sumner, on the special committee dealing with the complex problems arising out of the peace proposals has contributed so much, that if no other contribution had been made by the Bench it would have entitled it to say it had done a very great deal to settle post-war problems.

Viscount Finlay has sat on every single day, either in the House of Lords or on the judicial Committee. Lord Wrenbury, who had completed his service, and was entitled to lead a leisurely life, has done similar duty.

Two others have made contributions which received very little gratitude — Lord Haldane and Lord Buckmaster. When I hear attacks in the Press on their pensions, I feel that those who make them, have not informed themselves of the facts.

SUPERSTITION RIFE.

Captain H. G. S. Tuite says: Was superstition ever more rife than to-day?

The hundreds of varying charms and mascots would not be in the shop windows unless there were a ready sale for them, and they would not be bought in such numbers without some belief in their efficacy as bringers of good luck, warders-off of evil fortune.

The majority of flying men have their mascots, and many are openly disturbed should their tokens be lost or mislaid. Mascots by the hundred thousand were in the trenches; perhaps danger makes them more precious.

But peril does not account for the vogue of the palmist and every other kind of soothsayer.

Just before the Derby, a girl—she does statistical work in a Government office, so she must be fairly practical—confessed her disappointment at not drawing a horse out of several tickets in her office lottery.

She felt tricked by Fate, because on the very morning of the draw she met a chimney-sweep and surprised him by bidding him "Good morning," which implies impending good luck; she passed a coloured gentleman, which, of course, means a pleasant surprise.

Above all, in the tube lift she was near enough to a hunchback to touch his hump, which we all know to be a certain bringer of immediate fortune.

Pay of V.A.D.'s—It is notified that full rates will be paid as from May 17, to all women enrolled in the Voluntary Aid Detachment, General Service Section, on a 12 months' basis, who were serving on that date, and from the date of enrolment to women enrolled after that date.

RECKLESS SPENDING.

Sir Auckland Geddes, deploring our national spendthrift habits and pointing out the danger of them, says: The money that is being squandered on things that are of no value, is colossal. The people who have the cash, are following courses which threaten to destroy our victory.

By sending overseas for drinks, silk for stockings, feathers for hats, we are increasing our debts overseas for things that do not matter. What we have to get is food, raw material, cotton, rubber, iron and steel, zinc, copper, oil, wool, jute.

The more money we send away for things that do not matter, the more we pay for the things that do matter. The price of foods next winter will climb to a level none dream of.

There will be no money to pay wages because it will have to go overseas for food. Money for wages means nothing when there is no real value behind it. The country has forgotten the value behind money. You cannot live like millionares when you are as poor as church mice. That is what we are to-day.

THE NEW PUBLIC HOUSE.

Lord Lytton, who has devoted his life to the improvement of the British public house, says: In any Continental town and throughout the length of the two Americas, the indoor café is to be found. Here one can spend a pleasant time chatting over a cup of good coffee, or, if required, a pack of cards will be provided. In a great number, also, there is good music to listen to.

They are places to which it is pleasant for a man to take his wife and children, and, what is more important, to which his wife likes to go. This can hardly be said of the British public-house. Indeed, the British pub, as it exists to-day, is an atrocity confined almost exclusively to these islands.

The important question is how our present drink-shops can be developed and transformed into real houses of refreshment for the public, supplying food and drink of all kinds, music and all lawful entertainment. Such a house ought to be spotlessly clean, attractively furnished, one where the man who behaves himself, pays for what he gets and acts as a sensible man should do — will always find a welcome.

THE RETURNED SOLDIER.

Philip Gibbs, who made such a mark as a war correspondent throughout the great struggle says:—

The discharged soldier is not much of a hero in the countryside. "The return of the native" is not the cause of village celebrations. There are too many, all heroes as a matter of course. There is no swanking in the village inn. One man has done no more than another in courage and endurance.

"When I was at Gheluvelt — — —"

"Oh, cut it out!" says a lad who got his Blighty at Poelcapelle.

They are sick of all that, and presently, to many of them, the village itself seems a cramped place, limited in its prospects, dull beyond all words. There is a restlessness in the heart of the soldier who comes back. He has seen new countries, new peoples. He has come back with new ideas, new desires—what, he does not know—new passions. Peace! Somehow there is no peace in his soul, though God alone knows why. It is, perhaps, the heritage of the war.

Answers to Correspondents.

"FOR THE Y.M.":—We welcome your championship of the Y.M.C.A. You can rest assured that the profits do not go into private pockets.

J. DALTON:—We question whether Dispersal Centres at home would be prepared to exchange sheepskin coats for the summer variety. It seems a matter for your Q.M.S.

"TEMPORARILY RETAINED":— As a man who has been retained you are eligible for the bonus.

"HANTS":—Nearly all units—at least all progressive units—have associations fromwhich War Savings Certificates can be had. They can be purchased at any Army Post Office. Service qualifying you for a gratuity terminates on July 31st.

"MTG.":—If you were serving as a naval rating, yes.

PTE. J. GATES:— We are not aware of any authority to wear the ribbon you mention.

"L.N.L.:— It is usual to caution a player before sending him off the field.

"J.L.R.":—A sentry pays compliments to any officer in civilian dress if he recognises him.

LIEUT. S. A. MALLESON:—The wearing of uniform for the journey is perfectly in order.

L/CPL. J.S. MAYWOOD:—If a man attested under the Derby scheme, then he may regard himself as a Derby man. Whether it is likely to help him in the matter of demobilization is another matter.

"V.P.":—We have not the information you ask for. Sufficient, we should imagine, is the fact that Mr. Lloyd George was born in Manchester.

"L.C.2":—We should regard you as a volunteer. There are many men in the same category.

A.H. BYRON:—We agree that the inscription is a little out of place at present, but, after all, it does not matter.

"PIPS":—Try Keldenich. We have no knowledge of the whereabouts of the second unit you mention.

PTE. R. GARIOD:—The regulations with regard to quarantine must be observed. They are more stringent because of the prevalence of rabies at home.

"PERPLEXITAMUS":—No.

"MATRIMONIAL":—It is doubtful whether you could get leave to U.K. for the purpose you mention.

"R.E.":—Consult your education officer.

SIGNING THE PEACE TREATY AT VERSAILLES.

FINAL SCENES.

JOYOUS CELEBRATIONS IN LONDON.

KING GEORGE SPEAKS TO HIS PEOPLE.

SIGNING THE PEACE TREATY AT VERSAILLES.

PROCLAIMING THE NEWS.

On Saturday afternoon at twelve minutes past three o'clock, Herr Hermann Müller and Herr Bell, the German delegates, signed the peace treaty at Versailles, bringing to a formal end the world war which started on August 1st 1914. On that date Germany declared war on Russia and followed it up on the 3rd by declaring war on France. On the 4th, Great Britain declared war on Germany, and one by one the nations of the world either declared war on, or severed diplomatic relations with the powers which had thrown down the gauge.

When all the Allied delegates had taken their seats, the guard of honour outside the palace withdrew and the order was given to call the German representatives, who entered unannounced.

ORDER OF SIGNATURE.

M. Clemenceau, the French Premier, in opening the proceedings, said:

"The Allied and Associated Governments have come to an agreement on the conditions of Peace. The text has been written and the President of the Conference has stated in writing that this text which is now to be signed, is identical with the text of two hundred copies which have been distributed to the German delegation. Signatures will now be affixed. They signify a solemn undertaking to abide loyally and faithfully by the conditions of Peace. I now call upon the German plenipotentiaries to sign the treaty."

Herr Müller was the first to sign, then Herr Bell. Immediately their signatures had been appended, guns announced the news to the crowds outside.

The first of the Allied delegates to sign were the Americans, headed by President Wilson. Next came the British, comprising Mr. Lloyd George, Mr. Bonar Law, Mr. A. J. Balfour, Lord Milner and Mr. G. N. Barnes. The French, Italian and Japanese delegates followed in that order and then the remaining Allied powers.

UNIMPRESSIVE CEREMONY.

The actual ceremony of signing was singularly unimpressive, but as soon as the signatures were made, the famous fountains gushed out in wonderful display and guns barked salvos from the fort giving the cue to the warning syrens, which shrieked the news far and wide.

When the protracted ceremony was complete M. Clemenceau rose again and said:

"The conditions of peace between the Allies and Germany are now an accomplished fact. Peace is concluded. I declare the sitting over."

The German delegates left the room first, passing between two lines of troops, who rendered honours. The celebrated band of the Republican Guard was playing on the terrace guns were firing and fountains playing as the Germans entered their carriages. When the Big Three emerged from the Hall of Mirrors cheers rent the air and the huge concourse of people gave a remarkable demonstration of enthusiasm.

MESSAGE TO KING GEORGE.

A special messenger conveyed by aeroplane the following message from Mr. Lloyd George to his Majesty the King at Buckingham Palace:

"The Hall of Mirrors, Palace at Versailles.—Mr. Lloyd George, with his humble duty to your Majesty, has the honour to announce that the long and terrible war in which the British Empire has been engaged with the German Empire for more than four years and which has caused such suffering to mankind, has been brought to an end this afternoon by the Treaty of Peace just signed in this hall. He desires on behalf of all the plenipotentiaries of your Majesty's Empire to render their heartfelt congratulations to your Majesty on the signature of a treaty that marks the victorious end of the terrible struggle which has lasted for so long, and in which your Majesty's subjects from all parts of the Empire have played so glorious a part."

King George immediately issued the following message:

"The signing of the Treaty of Peace will be received with deep thankfulness throughout the British Empire. This formal act brings to its conclusion the state of terrible war which has devastated Europe and distracted the world. This manifests the victory of ideals of freedom and liberty for which we have made untold sacrifices. I share my people's joy and thanksgiving and earnestly pray that the coming years of peace may bring to them ever increasing happiness and prosperity."

KING CONGRATULATES ALLIES.

The King also sent messages of congratulation and friendship to the rulers of Allied and Associated States. To the French President he described it as "the consummation of the greatest triumph in history," and he added: "Our arduous task has been gloriously accomplished, but still there remains much work before us. Upon the ruins of this mighty conflict a new and better Europe must arise. I am confident that France and my Empire will work hand in hand in this great regeneration, and I doubt not that, mindful of their common sacrifices and their common triumph, the mutual love and respect of our two countries, resting on the sure foundation of strenuous comradeship of war, will grow even stronger in the benign fellowship of peace. In all sincerity, Britain thanks France and wishes her Godspeed."

To President Wilson his Majesty said: "It is on this day one of our happiest thoughts that the American and British peoples, brothers in arms, will continue for ever to be brothers in peace. United before, by language, tradition, kinship and ideals, there has now been set upon our fellowship the sacred seal of common sacrifice."

To the King of Italy his Majesty said that Italy's share in the final triumph was worthy of the highest traditions of the heroes of their ancient race, and to the King of Belgium his Majesty expressed the "feelings of profound gratitude and admiration with which the British peoples will ever think of that glorious and gallant country."—British Wireless.

DECLARATION BY GERMAN DELEGATES.

NO MENTAL RESERVATION.

A joint statement was made by the German delegates to the Press. They said: "We are signing without mental reservation and what we are signing, we will carry out. The German people will use every means in the attempt to meet the terms of the treaty. We believe the Entente will in their own interests find it necessary to change some of the terms which they will come to see, are impossible of execution. The Central Government will not assist any attack on Poland. Germany will make every effort to prove herself worthy of entry into the League of Nations."

HOW LONDON CELEBRATED PEACE.

KING AND PEOPLE.

Although the announcement that Peace had at last been signed reached London earlier than was expected, a huge crowd gathered in Trafalgar Square and gave vent to their long-pent-up feelings by mighty roars of cheering which completely drowned the din of the traffic. There was a rush for flags and decorations and within a few minutes the streets were ablaze with colour. Processions of vehicles were formed and traversed slowly the chief central and West-end thoroughfares.

Shortly before five o'clock, tens of thousands of people moved down the Mall towards Buckingham Palace. A few minutes before six, admidst the roar of guns and the plaudits of their subjects, the King and Queen stepped out on the balcony to witness the spectacle of London rendering homage in the hour of victory. Accompanying their Majesties were the Prince of Wales, Princess Mary and Prince Albert. When the guns ceased, the band of the Coldstream Guards struck up the National Anthem, the multitude joining in.

Then the King answered the insistent cries for a speech. Stepping forward and raising his voice so that it could be heard some distance down the Mall, he said:

"Peace has been signed! So ends the greatest war in history. I join you all in thanking God." This was followed by a prolonged roar of cheering and the singing of "O God, our help in ages past." The band continued its programme of popular and national songs, including "God bless the Prince of Wales" the "Marseillaise" and the Star Spangled Banner."

After further cheers the National Anthem was again sung, and the Royal Family, waving a farewell to the enormous crowd, retired to the interior of the palace. Later in the evening their Majesties were compelled to make another appearance on the balcony, when the demonstration was even more fervid.

Meanwhile thousands of people were flocking from the suburbs to swell the joyous throng. Street vendors did a phenomenal and lucrative trade with Union Jacks, tricolours and flags of the Allies. By seven o'clock all streets converging on Trafalgar Square were quite impassable for wheeled traffic, but the utmost order prevailed and there was no repetition of the extravagant scenes which marred the armistice celebrations. The crowds contented themselves with parading, singing, and letting off fireworks, while on a few open spaces dancing was indulged in to the music of extemporised bands. Great enthusiasm naturally prevailed in all theatres and places of entertainment, and at night numerous Peace dinners and dances were held.

JEWELS THROWN TO THE CROWD.

Late on Saturday, several guests standing at the upper windows of a well-known West-end restaurant commenced to throw roses down to the immense crowds packed in the street below. A lady in evening dress, after throwing out numbers of roses, took a bracelet from her arm and tossed it out to the people, following this with a ring from her finger. Then, after throwing out more roses, she took the ornaments from her hair and threw these also into the struggling mass of people below.

An elderly gentleman at an adjoining window threw out several spoons and forks, and, finding nothing else at hand, shied an apple, which was deftly caught and promptly returned, striking the window close by, fortunately without breaking the glass. The lady then began to throw out Treasury notes, screwing them into small balls and flinging them one by one to the excited concourse, which scrambled desperately to obtain the valuable "souvenirs" dropping amongst them. After getting rid of seven or eight Treasury notes the lady expressively spread out her hands to indicate that she had nothing more, and was loudly cheered.

On Sunday, Peace was celebrated in more serious fashion, and there were unusually crowded congregations in all churches for the solemn Te Deum which had been ordered by the Bishop of London. The coming of evening, however, seemed to produce a fresh outburst of patriotic enthusiasm. There was no attempt at anything in the nature of organised rejoicing, the throngs of pedestrians being apparently satisfied to parade the principal streets singing popular songs in the aimless fashion typical of London crowds.

THE PREMIER'S WELCOME.

MET BY HIS MAJESTY.

The arrival of Mr. Lloyd George, the Prime Minister, from Paris in the evening afforded opportunities for further exuberance. The Premier was met at Victoria Station by his Majesty the King, the Prince of Wales, and Prince Albert, and subsequently drove to Buckingham Palace with the Royal party. The thoroughfares through which he passed constituted literally a triumphal way. Tremendous crowds assembled at the station to give him a welcome. On the platform was Mrs. Lloyd George with a large number of the Premier's personal friends.

As soon as the train came to a standstill the King personally escorted Mrs. Lloyd George to the Premier's saloon. After affectionately greeting his wife, the Premier shook hands with the King. Emerging from the station the party was greeted with torrents of cheering led by some 500 Australian soldiers.

Enthusiasm was in no whit abated when the Premier left Buckingham Palace and drove to Downing Street. In response to calls for a speech, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd George appeared at a window and the Premier said:

"A just peace has been concluded by the labours and sacrifices of men of all classes and all races in our great Empire. Let us rejoice in the great victory, not in a boastful spirit over Germany's downfall but in a spirit of reverence worthy of the noble sacrifices made."

Yesterday the Prime Minister attended the House of Commons to announce that on Thursday he will make a statement concerning the peace, when the necessary steps will at once be taken to secure the assent of the House to the ratification of the treaty.

STUDIED INDIFFERENCE AT BERLIN.

BETHMANN-HOLLWEG'S POSE.

The news of the signing of the Peace Treaty was received by the public in Berlin with apparent indifference. All the newspapers had agreed beforehand to make as little as possible of the affair and only short accounts of the ceremony were published, editorial comment also being very brief.

The Deutsche Zeitung alone rushed into large type with a call for revenge, in consequence of which the paper has been suspended. A Berlin telegram states that ex-Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg has applied to the Allies to be allowed to take the place of the Kaiser regarding the charges pending against the ex-Monarch.

BLOCKADE TO BE RAISED.

M. Clemenceau has addressed a letter to the German delegation declaring the Allied Powers are ready to raise the blockade as soon as they are officially advised of the regular and complete ratification of the treaty by the German republic, instead of waiting for ratification by all the Allied and Associated Governments.

WILSON'S HOME MESSAGE.

In a message to the American people President Wilson says: "The treaty imposes nothing that Germany cannot do and she can regain her rightful standing in the world by the honourable fulfilment of the terms. The treaty ends once and for all the old intolerable order under which small groups of selfish men could use the power of peoples and empires to serve their own ambition for power and domination."

CHINA REFUSES TO SIGN.

The Chinese delegates were not present at the signature. They were informed four days ago that it was not possible for any delegates to sign the treaty with reservations. They therefore abstained, and have issued a statement protesting against the articles in the treaty which deal with the Shantung question. Their manifesto ends: "The Peace Conference having denied China justice, and having in effect prevented the Chinese delegates from signing the Treaty, to-day, without sacrificing their sense of right, justice, and patriotic duty, the latter submit their case to the impartial judgment of the world."

MARTIAL LAW PROCLAIMED AT FRANKFORT.

Martial Law has been proclaimed at Frankfort and Imperial troops have occupied the town in order to prevent the strikers from interfering with the food supplies on incoming steamers.

The strikers at Breslau have been ordered by the Military Commander to resume work immediately, otherwise Martial Law will be proclaimed.

In Hannover rioting occurred on Saturday and was followed by the plundering of the shops.

A later message states that the troops left Hamburg after reaching an agreement with the Workmen's Councils. These have undertaken to maintain peace and order.

BRINGING THE EX-KAISER TO TRIAL.

FORM OF PROCEDURE.

The Paris correspondent of the Telegraaf learns that the Associated Powers will not request Holland to extradite the ex-Kaiser, but will confine themselves to asking the Dutch Government, in the name of the League of Nations, to lend its assistance to the end that the ex-Kaiser shall not escape from "moral consequences." It is expected that Holland, as a member of the League of Nations, will not refuse this assistance, which merely consists in informing the ex-Kaiser that he must appear before an international court or else leave the country.

In an interview with a high French authority on international law, the correspondent was informed that the proceedings against the ex-Kaiser would be carried on on moral grounds. For that reason, the sentence of the court before which the ex-Kaiser will be tried will be of an exclusively moral character, and there can be no question of a sentence of death or imprisonment. Probably only the crimes of the ex-Kaiser against international morality in starting the war and violating Belgian neutrality will be severely condemned. Then the Hohenzollerns will be declared forever deposed from the throne, and finally it will be made impossible for the ex-Kaiser to do further harm by allotting him a place of residence which he may not leave.

GERMAN COMMUNIST PLOT.

A conference was held at Berlin on Saturday between the Government and the railway workers. The Government declared that it will be prepared, in the course of the next three months, to supply food at considerably lower prices, not only for the railwaymen but for the entire population. The strikers thereupon agreed to resume work on Sunday. The executive of the railway union has been against the strike from the beginning, and is again urging the members to resume work.

It has now been established that the strike was directly due to Communist agitation, the intention being to force the overthrow of the present Government and to set up a Republican Council in its place.

Despite the offer of the Government to devote one and a half milliards of marks towards the immediate reduction of food prices, work has not been resumed at Berlin.

SEARCHLIGHT STATION BURNT.

The searchlight station on the summit of Parliament-hill, Hampstead, was at midnight on Saturday totally destroyed by fire. Parliament-hill is one of the highest points round London, and the flames from the burning structure could be seen for many miles. Four fire-engines were promptly on the scene, but yesterday the place was a complete wreck. Peace celebrators ignited a fire too close to the outer wooden fence, which rapidly became involved, with disastrous results to the adjoining buildings.

VERY IRISH CELEBRATION.

Members of the Norfolk Regiment, which is stationed at Dundalk, celebrated the signing of peace by parading the streets on Saturday and waving Union Jacks. A crowd of young Irishmen seized and burnt the flags, and isolated groups of soldiers were given a rough handling. Detachments of police with rifles and bayonets had to clear the streets, and strong military pickets remained on duty throughout the night.

GENTLE HINT TO TURKISH DELEGATES.

M. Clemenceau has addressed a letter to the Turkish delegation at Paris pointing out that an exhaustive survey of the situation has convinced the Allied Council that some delay in the final settlement is inevitable. In the circumstances, he adds, nothing could be gained by a longer stay in Paris at present of the Turkish delegates

SHOCKING FAMILY TRAGEDY IN THE MIDLANDS.

THREE VICTIMS.

A desperate tragedy, obviously the work of a maniac, occurred at Hanley (Staffordshire) on Sunday morning. It is alleged that Arthur Lotham, a potter, first murdered two of his children named John and Lottie, and seriously wounded two other daughters. He then set fire to the house and cut his own throat.

Neighbours put out the fire and found the bodies of the two young children and the father.

Another daughter, Evelyn, jumped from a bedroom window and was caught in a blanket. The two wounded girls are in a critical condition.

SINN FEIN HEADQUARTERS RAIDED.

Police raided the Sinn Fein Headquarters on Saturday and made a thorough search of the premises. Every document was examined and a large quantity of written and printed matter taken away. Immediately the search party had left the premises, a blackboard was displayed bearing the words "Peace with England? Never!!!"

U.S.A. BAN ON ALCOHOL.

President Wilson has cabled to the White House that he cannot suspend the wartime ban on alcoholic liquor. With a million men still under arms, he says that it would not be in accordance with the law. When demobilization is terminated, however, he will take action in the matter.

EPSOM RIOTERS COMMITTED FOR TRIAL.

TWO DISCHARGED.

At Bow-street Police-court, on Saturday, six Canadian soldiers were committed to take their trial at the Surrey Assizes this week, on charges of rioting and being concerned in the manslaughter of Sergeant Thomas Green, of the V Division, Metropolitan Police, who was killed during the attack on Epsom Police-station on the night of June 17. Two other men who had been arrested were discharged. The prisoners were:

James Conners, 19, private, 13th Canadian Highlanders.

Robert Alexander McAllan, 45, C.A.M.C.

Allen McMaster, 30, private, 3rd Canadians.

Alphonse Masse, 27, C.A.M.C.

Gervase Porier, 24, C.A.M.C.

Herbert Tait, 29, gunner, 11th Div. Canadian.

Frank Harold Wilkie, 21, private, 102nd Batt. Canadians.

David Yerex, 32, private, Canadian Forestry Corps.

Medical evidence was given as to the nature of the injuries from which the prisoners were found to be suffering on the early morning of June 18. Captain Stanley Gordon Mills, C.A.M.C., stated that he attended to Masse, who had a recent wound over the right eye. When asked how he got it he said he didn't know; he was knocked out. Witness did not recollect anything being said about a policeman.

Sir Richard Muir: You have got a bad memory, captain. You made a statement only yesterday.

Witness: I don't remember anything else.

Sir Richard Muir: May I put it to him, Sir John?

Sir John Dickinson: No, I think not. Apparently he is doing his best, but being in the witness-box he forgets.

Captain Leonard Matthews said he dressed a small wound on the top of McAllan's head. McAllan complained that his body was more bruised than his head, but witness remarked that Scotchmen were hard to kill. (Laughter).

Sir Richard Muir: That is the result of your medical experience, I suppose?— Witness: Yes.

At the close of the case for the prosecution, Sir Richard Muir asked for the committal of all the prisoners on charges of manslaughter, rioting, and damaging the police-station.

Mr. Abinger submitted that there was no evidence against Porier and Tait, whom he proposed to put into the witness-box. As far as the other prisoners were concerned they would reserve their defence.

Porier, giving evidence, said that before enlisting in 1916 he was a deep-sea diver. He had been blown up by a shell at Ypres. On the night of June 17 he heard a bugle blowing and saw a crowd leaving the camp. He followed, and when near the park he was hit on the head by a brick. He had no weapon and took no part in the attack on the police-station.

In cross-examination, Porier said that when he heard the bugle he thought there was a fire in the town, and that was why he went out.

Tait was also sworn, and deposed that on the evening in question he had been to Clapham Junction, and returned by the eleven o'clock train. On his way from the station to the camp he passed a crowd of soldiers and received a severe blow on the head, which dazed him, and two soldiers assisted him to the camp. Witness produced his railway ticket.

Sir John Dickinson said he would accept the statements of Porier and Tait, and they would be discharged.

The other six prisoners were committed for trial.

FOUR-FOLD MURDERER'S LAST CHANCE.

The solicitor for Beckett, the man whose appeal on the grounds of insanity was dismissed last week and who now lies under sentence of death in connection with the Forest Gate murders, has received a letter from the Home Secretary.

It states that he has ordered a special enquiry under the Criminal Lunatics' Act of 1884, regarding the prisoner's mental condition, and assuring the solicitor for Beckett's defence that the case in all its aspects is receiving the most careful and anxious consideration.

DEMOBILIZATION SPURT.

An Army Order issued on Saturday makes new provision, contingent on the signing of Peace, for the release of warrant officers, non-commissioned officers and men who are eligible for demobilization.

Except in the cases of personnel serving in India and detachments for North Russia and Siberia, all those who are eligible for demobilization under Army Order 55 and all who have not volunteered for the Armies of Occupation will be released with all possible despatch, and it is hoped to complete demobilization within three months of the signing of Peace.

DEATH OF SOUTH AFRICAN HIGH COMMISSIONER.

The death occurred in London on Saturday of the Right Hon. W. P. Schreiner, K.C., C.M.G., the High Commissioner in England for the Union of South Africa.

The deceased statesman, who was born in 1857, was a member of Cecil Rhodes' second Ministry and twice held the office of Attorney General. Prior to that he was Prime Minister of Cape Colony from 1898 to 1900.

At a Naval Court Martial at Chatham, Clifford Beals, a lance-corporal of Marines, was sentenced to six months hard labour and dismissed the service for stealing registered letters.

The Peace Treaty in the final form in which it was signed at Versailles can be purchased direct from his Majesty's Stationery Office or from booksellers. The price is 4s, including all maps.

Similar enthusiastic scenes took place throughout the provinces. At naval ports ships were dressed "over all" and at Aldershot the troops were given two days holiday.

DOMINION DAY.

To-day is observed in Canada as Dominion Day. It is meet that the British Army of the Rhine should pay its tribute to the loyalty and sacrifice of a country which has in these years of war woven a new and unbreakable bond between the Motherland and its Dominion in the West.

During the first half of the nineteenth century Canada had an untoward history. In it there were two races, two provinces, and many sore grievances. The union of 1840 was a failure of many hopes; but the spirit of independence, born in that year, grew apace and made possible a happier era.

After the American Civil War of 1861 Canadians of every caste saw the hopelessness of their divisions, and set about negotiations for a unity of their scattered colonies. These were completed in 1867, and much of the credit of this notable enterprise was due to Sir John Macdonald, pioneer, statesman, and imperialist.

The Dominion of Canada was formed under a Governor-General appointed by the Crown and with a constitution similar to that of England, whilst the acceptance of a federal principle, akin to that of the United States, gave a large measure of Home Rule to the various provinces of the country.

Since 1867 Canada has prospered, and gradually the respective ideals of Quebec and Ontario have lost their antagonism. A wise policy has opened up a new vista to men who see the opportunity of their country and will not fail to grasp it.

Canada has suffered sorely in the years of war, but Canada's chivalry and whole-heartedness are omens of a bright and prosperous future.

HAVE YOU THOUGHT?

From time to time considerable criticism has been levelled at the Army scheme of education, but the difficulties have been great, and the willingness to take advantage of it has not always been too apparent.

The period since the Armistice has been a difficult one in which to inaugurate and work successfully a proper system of education for the British troops in occupation.

Everything has been unsettled, the personnel of units has been constantly changing, through demobilization, continually dwindling.

Now, however, practically all demobilisible men have gone home, and with the influx of young soldiers and those who have re-enlisted we have a more or less stable personnel.

We know better how we stand, and the educational programme should advance steadily and satisfactorily, if all ranks will realise its importance.

One often hears from the older soldier when tackled about education, "Oh, it's all very well for the boys, but I left school years ago. What's the use of my trying to learn?"

As a matter of fact there is every reason for studying some subject or subjects. One is never too old to learn, and, depend upon it, no one acquired too much knowledge when at school in the past.

By taking up further education the wheels of your brain, probably rusted from misuse, will be quickened into action again. New ideas and fresh knowledge will be a help to you.

Probably the industry to which you hope to return when your Army service ceases has been revolutionised since the war.

Are you going back unprepared to pick up the new threads, or will you be content to let things slide, and be passed over by someone who has "learned to learn?"

For the young soldier who is in the majority in our army to-day, the advantages of education are too obvious to discuss.

Much responsibility will devolve upon him as the citizen of to-morrow. In the future a much higher standard of education will be required to keep Britain in her proud premier position.

In the days to come, clear-sighted, level-headed, well-informed citizens will be needed more than ever before.

The Army offers opportunities for education which should be grasped by all. Has every young soldier thought of it, and in the interests of himself and his country will he accept all the instruction he can obtain?

WHICH CAME FIRST?

Military Collapse or Revolution.

An article has recently appeared in the German press which is of interest at the present moment when the Germans are trying to assign the blame for their failure. According to the writer of this article, the forces of reaction are constantly endeavouring to make the revolution responsible for the military collapse of November 1918. Even the leader of the Democratic party stated not so long ago, "Had our armies and our workpeople known on November 5th and 6th what course Peace would have taken they would never have laid down their arms."

There are many people apparently who are of opinion that a successful resistance could still have been organised. The outbreak of the revolution at an unfortunate moment, and the Socialist agitation completely broke up the army, thus rendering Germany defenceless. Thus endeavours are made to ascribe the blame for the military collapse to the Socialists, so making them responsible for the harsh terms of the Treaty of Peace.

The author of this article goes on to subject this claim to a searching investigation. He asks, "Was it true that the revolution preceded the military collapse, or vice versâ?" Ludendorff had played his last cards with the March offensive. Although the Americans were not in force on the Western front, and the German army had the advantage of numbers, the offensive failed. The British and French made up for the superiority in numbers by a superiority in technical means of transport.

The Allied Divisions which were taking part in the fight round Arras were rapidly transferred in motor lorries to the Ypres salient, and when the German attack increased in intensity at that point, the German Armies found before them the same troops whom they met a few days previously at Arras.

Foch's Army of Manoeuvre lying to the East and West of Paris was untouched, in order that use might only be made of it at the moment of greatest danger. There was no need for this, for the German troops were soon exhausted by the continuous attacks.

German G.H.Q. had precise information that the great French strategic reserve was intact; it appears, however, that Ludendorff preferred to rely upon the official lies circulated by his Press Bureau, rather than upon his reliable intelligence reports. What remains the inexcusable factor in the whole German conduct of the war was this ostrich-like policy of failing to recognise the fearful catastrophe which was imminent.

(To be continued.)

THE EXPERT.

"Ho! ho!" exclaimed the Colonel, glancing round the dinner table, "Who is going to be Brigade representative for the Cologne Post? We certainly must have one of our own."

"Yes," said Jimmy, the Adjutant, a quick-witted youth who saw, in agreement, the position of a selector rather than the selected. "I propose Denmark," he added. Now Denmark is our horse expert and authority on hay seeds. He also knows why they put little holes in biscuits, and has a store of other information on equally important subjects.

"The very man," said the rest of the mess, forgetting, for the moment, its great grouse that the mess cook had been demobilized.

But Denmark shook his head, though obviously appreciating the offer.

"When I was at Rugeley—," he commenced, but was suddenly interrupted by Warden, the combined orderly officer, canteen officer and mess secretary.

"You mean Namur," he said.

"Well," went on Denmark, "I'm a modest, retiring sort of chap—correct me if I'm wrong—but I think Warden, with his knowledge of life, to say nothing of his commercial opportunities in the Bank of Canada, is just the man to write for the paper."

"Umph! Financial articles on the depreciation in the value of the mark," said the Colonel, whose advance book is continually being sent to the Field Cashier to satisfy the claims of Warden as mess secretary.

"With regard to the mark—" began Warden, mounting the only horse he cares about riding, "I would like to say—"

Flannagan, the Irish Vet. interrupted. "Shure and you're just the man for it, Warden. Not that I'd not be after doin' it myself if I were not waiting for that special leave—."

"The fifth in twelve months," remarked Jimmy."

The Colonel intervened. "We must find someone. What about you, Roe?"

"Well", drawled our American Ally. "I'm not much hand at writing, 'sides you can't produce no paper here like the Chattanooga Times, but the Cologne Post is some rag, and I'll be pleased to contribute any medical articles they may require.

The Colonel chuckled, then groaned, as the alleged sweet — the new cook's latest effort, was placed before him. "Well," he said, resignedly, "We'll keep the doctor in mind for medical —"

"Compots" said Warden, rudely, evidently knowing something about such things.

"—articles" continued the Colonel, "but we must have a business and literary representative".

"There's Jerry," said the Adjutant, in a voice of quiet resignation "only he's so busy all day counting the signallers."

All eyes turned on the wretched Signal Officer, seated lamblike, next to Warden. All his attention had, for some time past, been concentrated in getting what he required to eat past the orderly officer's barrage. He had not paid much attention to the conversation.

"I know nothing about writing," he said.

"Oh! Jerry," said someone," didn't you say you once got a man the M.M.—in an Army Brigade too?"

"Is that right?" asked the Colonel.

"Well" said Jerry, meekly. "I did once write a recommendation sir, and—"

"The man got it?"

"Yes, sir, but—"

"That decides it," said the Colonel. "You are Brigade representative of the Cologne Post."

"WONOHFORZ."

THE CHILD OF PEACE.

All hail to thee sweet Liberty;
Fair child of Peace, we bow to thee!
Hail, though thy war-spun gown be red
And marred by many a broken thread —
The lives of men who fought and bled
In dark obscurity.
Hail, though thy crown of bronze be wrought
From guns whose roar Death's message brought.
Give us thy smile, which we have sought,
For all fraternity.
And use thy power, like as the steel
Whose clash made mighty nations reel,
For God, for man, for common weal
For all eternity.

TENNIS FOR "O.R's."

Sir,—As a keen enthusiast of tennis, I should very much like to see more facilities provided for the other ranks.

The Officers Sports Club has been a great success, and if something can be run on similar lines for the "O.R's" it will be a most welcome attraction to the many lovers of the game, who are at present only able to watch the officers at play.

Although this season is now well advanced, there is still time to do something. A. J. R.

DEBATING SOCIETIES — AN OFFER.

Sir,—I have been much interested in the existing demand for Debating Societies as evidenced in your correspondence column; and I do not agree with W.D. as to the impossibility of interesting the requisite quorum.

WERE THE TREES UPSIDE DOWN?

Sir,—Not having been there before, I went to the Opera on Saturday evening.

I was just in the right mood to enjoy the singing, and must admit it was "tophole," but what marred my pleasure and made me very cross, was to see that in one of the scenes the stage-hands had planted two large trees upside down!

My friend who was with me, said I was mistaken, but I am sure that the trunks were pointing skywards.

I wonder if the news of Peace which had just been circulated, upset the equilibrium of the sceneshifters and caused them to make this ludicrous mistake!

"OBSERVER."

A DEED OF GALLANTRY.

Sir:—Now that the Orders forbidding fraternisation have been cancelled, many subtle points are likely to arise as to the precise attitude which should be maintained. Perfect courtesy to Colognians of the opposite sex has, of course, always been demanded by the authorities and, I believe, has been invariably shown. Nevertheless we cannot help thinking that the artilleryman who on Peace Night raised his cap so gallantly and so gravely to some wax models decorating the windows of a shop in Hohe Strasse was straining such courtesy a little too far. By all means let us be polite to the frauleins: personally I would draw the line at a shopkeeper's shameless window models. A.D.R.

COMIC OPERA ASKED FOR.

Sir,—I herald with delight a correspondent's plea for comic opera.

We are well catered for with the concert parties and dramatic society, but Musical Comedy, and Gilbert and Sullivan's Mikado, Iolanthe, Yeoman of the Guard, etc., are sadly lacking, and at the same time hold to the majority of theatre goers the premier position.

"GONDOLIER."

FISHING EXPERIENCES.

Sir,—While fishing in the Ruhr near Arbenden yesterday, two of us were astonished to find a real swallow hanging by a fishing cast from a tree on the side of the river. The unfortunate bird had taken the centre of three flies (a March Brown) and appeared to have been dead some days.

By an extraordinary chance another officer who was fishing on the same day near Weingarten village, also caught a swallow. Luckily he was able to disengage it from the hook.

Apart from the coincidence of the above two events on a single day, some of your sporting readers might feel inclined to say if similar incidents have come to their notice.

The freedom with which wagtails, chaffinches and other small birds devour the natural mayfly for example, must no doubt expose them to mistakes with regard to artificial flies.

EUSKIRCHEN.

WANTED EXAMS.

Sir,—I do not believe that there is anything unique in a wish that the scheme of education at present obtaining in the Army achieves the purpose for which it was propagated.

What reader, however, will deny that arrangements for examinations at certain centres similar to those made for Oxford and Cambridge Local Examinations at most English secondary schools, would be greatly welcomed by those many younger soldiers whose enlistment prevented them from taking these examinations in civil life.

As an instance I know several students who failed to secure Honours in Oxford or Cambridge Senior Local Examination, high enough to procure for them exemption from London Matriculation, which to many professions is an essential examination.

The certainty that such provision is at hand would be the very necessary incentive to not a few of the younger men of the Rhine Army, that they might take practical advantage of the instruction, which the scheme has already secured for them.

MARRIAGES WITH GERMANS.

Sir,—Quite recently there appeared in a German paper, announcements of the betrothal of two British officers to two German ladies.

Apart altogether from the question of fraternization, there are some very serious aspects which call for an authoritative ruling on policy. One knows very well that love, being a product of the emotions and not of pure reason, cannot be "controlled." The bulk of the Army of the Rhine is of the impressionable age and many of them—willy nilly—will "fall in love" with German girls. Intentions will be perfectly honourable and there will be talk of marriage. What then?

Are mixed marriages between Englishmen and German women desirable from a national point of view?

There are many German men here whose English wives are in England. They have not seen each other since August 1914, nor is there any prospect of their doing so.

Would an English soldier who marries out here be allowed to take his wife home or to send her home?

At one time mixed marriages did stand a chance of being "successful," but numerous cases have occurred of families being for ever estranged because of the irreconcilable claims of love and duty.

Thousands of marriages have been made by members of the Allied forces and French and Belgian women, but that is outside the scope of this letter, although cogent to the argument.

The chief point is: Should not the British Government add to the Table of Affinity "A man may not marry a German woman"?

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

Hagenbeck's Circus.

It is agreeable to find that the real old-fashioned circus is not quite dead. The performances in the time-honoured sawdust ring continue to attract. The Hagenbeck Circus by the Aachener Gate, Cologne, has its full quota of spectators at each show. Mr. Bostock, of Bostock and Wombwell, whose fame as amusement caterers is world-wide, has paid several visits to the great marquee, since Herr Hagenbeck arrived, with all his contraptions, a fortnight or so ago.

R.A.D.C.

The Rhine Army Dramatic Company is forging ahead with refreshing vigour. It seems only a few days ago since the project was first suggested as an agreeable change from the concert party form of entertainment. The subsequent achievements of the Company have been sufficient indication of the popularity of the fare they provide. Last evening, "The Importance of Being Earnest," was played before a large and appreciative audience at the Deutsches Theatre, Cologne.

The Robin Hoods Pianist.

The "Robin Hoods" ought to be congratulated on possessing such a clever pianist and accompanist as Ernest Anderson, who in spite of his undoubted abilities is very modest and retiring.

Anderson is well known in Yorkshire musical circles and has had considerable experience out here with Army shows. Previous to joining the Robin Hoods, he was with "The Pelicans" and has had many exciting experiences, showing under shell fire.

Dragoon Band Scores.

A splendid concert was given by the string orchestra of the Royal Dragoons (by kind permission of Major H. A. Tomkinson D.S.O.) on Sunday at the British Empire Leave Club. Never has the hall been so full. There were rows of men sitting in every available space. The Bandmaster S. S. Smith conducted with great skill, and obtained wonderful effects from his orchestra. Perhaps the most successful orchestral items on the programme were "The Gladiator's Farewell," "Chu Chin Chow", "If you look in her eyes" and "Baby's Sweetheart". There were many encores. The soloists were Miss Elsa West who played Raff's Cavatina's on the violin and got two encores. She played beautifully. Sergeant Hallmark, 51st Durham Light Infantry delighted everybody with his banjo solos, especially as this is the first occasion that this instrument has been played at the club, though we hope it will not be the last. L.Bdr. G. Mason was the third soloist and sang the "Bells of St. Mary's". The hall rang with loud applause, and he had to perform again. The concert certainly was one of the most popular ever held at the British Empire Leave Club.

A Violin Virtuoso.

This is a small impression of Alfred Barker, the gunner violinist, who is so well-known in Rhine Army musical circles. His abilities and technique have created so much comment that a brief outline of his career will, I think, be interesting to our readers. He studied at the Royal College of Music, Manchester under Brodsky, was five years with the Halle orchestra and Royal Opera, Covent Garden, and afterwards leader and solo violin at the Spa, Scarboro. He, however, made his name in Russia, playing with Ziloti. After a big tour Barker was commanded to appear before the Tsar and his family (and was the last English violinist to play at the Russian Court). He was a member of the Dons Concert Party (57th Division) as leader of the Orchestra. Barker played by special invitation before Lord Derby and Sir George Keppel on New Year's Day. He has not appeared in England for many years, but many eminent musicians predict a golden future.

"The Buzzers."

Under the name of "The Buzzers" the Light Divisional Signal Coy. Concert Party gave a very successful performance at their Headquarters last week. The parts were well sustained by Sappers Unwin, Evans, Wells, Nairn, Gallow; Goddinian, Pte. Kellam and Sergt. Cornwall, while Sapper Midgeley was an able accompanist. Anyone desirous of fixing up a good all-round entertainment might get into touch with the musical members of the "dot dashers" of the Light Division Signal Coy.

The "Chequers"

The "Chequers," I am delighted to hear, are going strong at Siegburg, where full houses are the order of the day — or rather night. Their miniature musical comedy "Fatima" is proving a great attraction. The four old Chequers, Shiel Anderson, Jack Streets, Ted Lacey, and Billy French, are popular favourites, while the new members of the cast, Dan George, Larry Kingston, and Bob Wears, are entertainers of real merit and are quite up to the old "Chequers" standard. The result is a first-class entertainment.

Pedlars' New Show.

Last Saturday evening I went down to Bonn to see "The Pedlars" at the Stadt Theatre. I enjoyed myself immensely. The concluding absurdity, "Would-be Actors," is a positive scream. You should see Erb as the Manager, He is as funny as ever. Performances are announced for this evening (Tuesday), and Thursday commencing at 6 p.m. But it is advisable to book beforehand.

"Merry Micks" at Farewell Dinner.

On Saturday evening at Bickendorf a splendid farewell dinner was given by No. 2 Aircraft Park, which is under orders to disband. It was formed in 1915 and its popular Major Burnett in his farewell speech spoke highly of its efficiency and position. Dinner was followed by speeches and then, by special request, the "Merry Micks," the popular Royal Irish Troupe gave one of their finished performances. Great applause greeted the doings of H. E. Stafford, whose card tricks were worthy of a greater stage. He is the well-known south country artist, my readers will be interested to learn, who received a watch from a certain foreign royalty as an appreciation of the latters' mystification. Staff-Sergt. Stribbling and Cpl. Livingstone and Howarth were warm favourites, while L/Cpl. Jarner with Pte. Armes shared the applause of an amused audience. Lieut. McCrocken, who is the head of the show made the hit of the evening with his "Jazz Band" song. Major Burnett, it may be added, leaves to take over a new command, and the disbanding unit gave him a hearty send off.

LATEST CRICKET RESULTS.

The news that Georges Carpentier will be unable to box at the Inter-Allied sports now being held in Paris will sadden the hearts of Eddie McGoorty and his supporters.

Second-Class Billiards.

Joe Brady, the Irish champion, is a favourite in some quarters for the second-class tournament at Thurstons, although his public form is somewhat obscure.

"Inside" Golf.

Francis Ouimet, the famous American golfer, has been writing in a New York paper on what he describes as "inside" golf. Neither Ouimet nor any one else can define the term in a nutshell, but practically it means the application of skill, experience, and tactics, with a modicum of artfulness.

"COLOGNE POST" CUP MATCHES.

EIGHT WICKETS FOR EIGHT RUNS.

LANCER MACHINE GUN SQUADRON (64) v 161 BRIGADE R.F.A. (33) at Deutz, Cologne, on Saturday. For Lancer Machine Gun Squadron Pte. Marsh scored 25, Gunner Lewry took 6 wickets for 19, and Lieut. Allen 3 wickets for 12. For 161 Brigade R.F.A. Lieut. Allen not out 12 was the leading batsman. Pte. Kenworthy bowled very well indeed, taking 8 wickets for 8 runs.

4 CORPS TROOPS M.T. COY (90) v. 153 SIEGE BATTERY R.G.A. (54) at Haskurath on Friday. For the losers Cockcroft and Thorpe batted well, while the former was also their most successful bowler, keeping a good length throughout. For the IV Corps Troops Cpl. Wildgoose did well with both bat and ball and was ably assisted by Capt. Kempe and Pte. Scaift.

LIGHT DIVISIONAL SIGNALS (116) v. 3rd KING'S OWN HUSSARS (49). The chief scorers were Lieut. Gow (36), Spr. Cordery (20), Major Cobb (17) for Signals; and Lt. Barton (19) and Pte. Phillips (11) for the Hussars. Spr. Tupper took 7 wickets for 23 runs for Signals, and Major Dupre bowled well for the Hussars.

103 NOT OUT.

6th ARMY CORPS H.Q. (51 for 10 wickets) v. 41st BATTALION M.G.C. (247 for 6 wickets) (declared) on the latter's ground at Heumar. M.G.C. batted first, and some magnificent play was witnessed, especially that of Major A.G. Barry, who made the splendid score of 103 not out. Special mention must also be made of the batting of Major D. Boumphrey (66) and Pte. Blurion (32), both of whom made some good strokes. Pte. Hasler contributed 14. The 6th Army Corps H.Q., on going in to bat, made a good start, but, owing to the splendid fielding of the opposing team, and the two bowlers Driver Gorrard (7 wickets for 21) and Major Boumphrey (3 wickets for 24), could make little headway, and were all out for a total of 51.

RHINE ARMY H.Q. SIGNALS (47) v. 70 SQUADRON R.A.F. (21), at Bickendorf on Saturday. The Signals celebrated the signing of Peace with a brilliant victory over the hitherto unbeaten 70 Squadron. In flying parlance the Squadron badly "crashed". The R.A.F., winning the toss, decided to put their opponents in to bat. Godfrey (13) and Fraser (11) were the highest scorers for the Signals. With only 48 runs to win the R.A.F. thought they had a cake walk, in view of their previous performances; but they soon found they were up against some good stuff. Fraser and Godfrey again carried off the honours in the bowling department, Fraser securing 5 wickets for 5 runs and Godfrey 4 for 9, while Lieut. Melhuish secured the remaining wicket for 1 run.

135 SIEGE BATTERY R.G.A. (40) v. 11 LEICESTERSHIRE REGT. (38) at Flamersheim on Saturday. Gnr. Trotter went in to bat when seven of the Battery team were out for 7 runs. He finished up with 22 (not out). For the Battery team Gnr. Green took 3 for 20, and Bdr. Yewdall 4 for 14 and for the Leicesters. Pte. Langham compiled 19 (not out) and took 3 wickets for 15. He was ably assisted by Sergt. Lester and had 6 wickets for 18 runs.

174 SIEGE BATTERY (61) v. 145 SIEGE BATTERY (40), at Odendorf on Saturday. For the winners, who have not yet been beaten, Rysell scored 13, Varley 12, and Captain Batty 10. For 145, Lemons took 6 for 21. 145 started merrily; but after the first wicket played very carefully, taking over an hour to score 41 (Robinson 10; Major Ward 10); Bdr. Graham took 5 for 12. The fielding was good on both sides, especially that of 145, who seldom gave away a run. Bdr. Graham of 174 is a bowler of great promise, his average for the season up to date being 2.2.

D.A.C. CAV. DIV. (155 for 4) v. 29th VET. HOSP. (20) at Marienburg on Saturday. For D.A.C. R.H.A. Cav. Div. the chief scorers were:— Bdr. Cook 69; Gnr. Marshall 28; Sad. Price 23; Dvr. Bush 14; and Lieut. Bowr 10. The Vet Hosp., owing to the good bowling of Bush and Price, were all out for 20, Price taking 4 wickets for 5 runs and Bush 5 for 11.

LONDON DIV. M.T. COY. (152) v. 420 SIEGE BATTERY (58). For the former Lieut. Barlee showed good form and played an excellent innings for 52, the first wicket putting on 60. Other scores were: Lieut. Howerd (19), Pte. Pollard (24) and C.S.M. Halford (13). The 420 Siege Battery did not seem to get used to the bowling at all. Lieut. Wright took 6 wickets for 12 runs.

76th BDE. R.F.A. (49) v. 354 SIEGE BATTERY R.G.A. (28) at the Romerhof. Dvr. Luty, for the winners, batted well for 20, and Sergt. Richardson took 5 wickets for 13 runs; for the losers, Le Feaux took 8 wickets for 29.

CAVALRY DIVISION H.Q. (89) v. CAVALRY DIVISION A. C. (R.H.A.) (80) at Quadrath. The R.H.A. batted first, losing Cook and Price with only 6 runs registered. Dvr. Bush, however, decided to stop the rot and with Marshall carried the score to 34 before the latter was well caught by Bearsley off Lieut. Neil. Cpl. Adams and Spr. Evans then took a turn with the ball and somewhat altered the state of affairs, the last 6 wickets going down for 20 runs. Cpl. Adams took 4 for 14, and Spr. Evans 2 for 5. The Headquarters start appeared to be all right, but at 17 Lieut. Jennings was run out and he was quickly followed by Lieut. Fox, who received the same fate. At 55, Spr. Evans made "one mighty swipe" for a five, which made the scores level, and the next hit was by Spr. Smith, a boundary for four, which won the game. Spr. Smith and Cpl. Tolley hit out in merry style for the last wicket, making 35 before Tolley was bowled at 83, Spr. Smith making 25 (not out), and giving a splendid display.

WILLARD V. DEMPSEY.

BOXING CRITICS DISCUSS DEMPSEY TACTICS.

An American boxing critic, writing on the Willard-Dempsey fight, says: "Dempsey will have to adopt rushing tactics as Johnson did, and keep inside Willard's arms as long as possible."

This has provoked the following rejoinder from "The Old Guard" in the Daily Express—A man who never saw Johnson in action might be forgiven for saying this, as the black's list of knock-outs, reads formidably, so I can only think that the writer must be mistaken in asserting that he has seen most of Johnson's fights.

The big black was renowned for his superb defence. In the ring he was patience personified. The fetish that attack is the best defence cut little ice with him, and he never, or very seldom, carried the fight to an opponent. Indeed, he boasted of his ability to make any man in the world lead to him.

If he could not succeed in doing so by feinting and fiddling his antagonist into action with his hands he used to fall back on his tongue, and literally talk his man into a fight.

CHAMPION AND MOORE-WILDE WINNER.

Mr. C. B. Cochran has cabled Herman that he is prepared to offer a purse of £5,000 for the champion to meet the Moore-Wilde winner. The Holborn Stadium will be reconstructed to hold 13,000 people, and this contest will be staged if Herman agrees to the terms.

TWO-DAY MATCH AT MERZENICH.

CAPT. BOND'S XI DEFEATED BY H.Q. 2/4 D. OF W. REGT.

This match on Thursday and Friday took place at Merzenich and resulted in the sensational defeat of Capt. Bond's XI, who have a very fine record. Captain Bond's eleven, winning the toss, chose to let Headquarters have the first knock. Lieut. Rawson proved to be in great form with the bat, the express deliveries of Stead and the leg breaks of Albone being treated with scant respect, and the 100 being hoisted in 65 minutes. Almost immediately afterwards this officer's wicket was captured, Brewis effecting a fine catch. The only other batsman to reach double figures was Pte. Binns with a lively 18. The innings closed for a total of 142 runs, Mr. Extras being responsible for 30 runs.

Capt. Bond's eleven opened the batting on Friday, the first pair being Ptes. Brewis and Wild, to the bowling of Lieut. Rawson and Sergt. Cox. The first wicket yielded 7 runs, when Cpl. Albone (the Halifax pro) came in to bat. Playing finely, he quickly ran up a total of 27 runs, before succumbing to a catch behind the wickets. The only other batsmen to reach double figures were Cpl. Eastwood with 12 and Pte. Webster with 17, the innings closing for a total of 82 runs, leaving Headquarters the victors by 60 runs. Bowling analysis:— For Capt. Bond's XI, C.Q.M.S. Stead 4 for 42; Cpl. Albone 2 for 36; Pte. Sharp 3 for 27. For the winners:— Lieut. Rawson 7 for 42.

BASKET BALL.

TWO FAST GAMES PLAYED AT RIEHL.

Two fast games of basket ball were played at the P. & R. T. School at Riehl on Saturday afternoon. The 9th Cyclists Battalion from Euskirchen came to town with two fast teams and managed to divide honours with the Headquarters School.

The first game was won by the Headquarters players by 20 to 13. The fine work of the Riehl guards was a large factor in keeping the score down, while C.S.M. Harper and C.S.M. Stubbs seemed able to find the basket from every angle. For the visitors, the fast work of Captain Fraser and Sergt. Frame kept their opponents busy all the time. The line-ups were:—

P. & R. T. School.——Lieut. Col. Betts, D.S.O. (L.G.), Major Colvin, V.C. (R.G.), C.S.M. Harper (C), C.S.M. Stubbs, (L.F.) C.S.M. Ware (R.F.).

9th Cyclists Batt.—Major Swaine, M.C. (L.G.) Sergt. Collier R.G.), C.S.M. Tyrell (C), Sergt. Frame (L.F.), Captain Fraser (R.F.).

VICTORY FOR CYCLISTS.

The game between the second teams was won by the Cyclists, 19 to 13. The Riehl forwards had some difficulty in finding the baskets, while Lamont seemed to have an uncanny idea of its location, scoring some wonderfully lucky shots. The fine work of the Riehl guards was all that kept the score from being much larger, Captain MacSween and C. S. M. Starkey being all over the field. The line-ups were:—

9th Cyclists Battalion.— Corpl. McKend (L. G.), Lieut. Bostock (R.G.), Pte. Lamont (C.), Pte. Forward (L.F.), Lieut. Binns (R.F.).

Riehl P. & R.T. School.— Captain MacSween (R.G.), C.S.M. Starkey (L.G.), R.S.M. Stevenson (C), Q.M.S. Hammond (L.F.), L. Cpl. Padget (R.F.).

Both games were about the fastest that have been seen so far in Army circles, and were fine examples of the speed with which this excellent game can be played. With such development we shall see some keen contests in basket ball during the coming Army Championships.

Echoes from Rhineland.

Scenes of Revelry.

The centre of Cologne was given over to revelry on Saturday night. It was boat race night of pre-war days, perhaps in a lesser degree, but not lacking in youthful boisterousness. Khaki held the sway. So far as we were able to judge the civilian section of the population did not exhibit more than the customary exuberance. Perhaps it is foreign to their nature, to do so. "Thank God," was one German's comment and the old man held up his hands as if expressive of thankfulness. Then he became silent as he appeared to meditate over his country's sunken state. Tommy let himself go in no half hearted fashion. The fact that the signing of the Peace Treaty clashed with the week-end was a happy circumstance. Music was heard in the cabarets well on to 22.00 hours, a thing not possible during the past six months. Artistes, many having doffed their stage dresses for mufti, filled the bill again and there was a current of joyfulness running through the impromptu performances. There were many amusing side-lights. In one cabaret, officers mounted the stage, and the orchestra rose to the occasion with British patriotic airs. It was a remarkable scene.

In the Streets.

In the streets, khaki linked hands with wearers of French blue, and American confrères. A dense procession was formed, the men marching eight abreast, and cheering rent the air. Tommy's long promised "bust" was impressive and at times amusing. Dress was a trifle mixed. Headgear was exchanged, and there was a general demonstration of friendliness amongst the Allied troops. A gathering resembling a mass meeting was to be seen in front of the Dom. Tommy's dancing lessons stood him in good stead. Two were seen "jazzing" in a style which threatened to rip trouser buttons from their settings, while others were content to cake-walk and give expressions in general abandon. However, London signalised an historic day, the men of the Army of Occupation made things "hum" in their endeavour to give expression to their delight.

Ankles.

There are standard types of caricature in the humorous papers of at least two countries. Nobody could fail to recognise as French or German, as the case might be, the artist's caricature of an Englishman for instance. That is purely caricature. But when German comic artists draw the German female form, it is amazing how true to life they get. How many shapely ankles are there in Cologne? Very few! and for these the shortage of food is largely responsible. When beauty is appraised, not by form, but by avoirdupois it is not to be wondered at, that between the top of the boot and the edge of the skirt can be seen a roll of unbeautiful fat, be it ever so covered by an Ersatz silk stocking. There may be "a divinity which shapes our ends" but just look (discreetly, of course) at the first dozen pairs of ankles, or if too modest, at a German comic paper.

Keep the lid closed.

A sapper of the Rhine Army asks why the Germans have lids on their beer mugs. The other day, he says, he visited a cafe on the outskirts of Bonn, where the beermugs had lids. In order to quench his thirst he tipped the lid back with his thumb and left it at the open position. He did not empty the mug at one gulp, as thirst quenching he explains, is a matter of leisure with him. At the same table were two Germans. The more benevolent looking of the two explained to him that in pre-war times he might have had a pile of mugs placed on top of his—also with open lids. The Germans were right. The sapper would have had to pay for a fresh round of drinks as a penalty for his action.

Diabolo.

Do you remember the passing craze there was some years ago at home for Diabolo? The game swept through Europe, and as far as Great Britain is concerned, it came and went. But here in the Rhine and it is still in full swing, and the children are adepts at it. It seems a pity we discarded it so quickly at home, for it is a recreation that cultivates quickness of eye and limb. Some of the youngsters in Germany seem to be very skilful in making "tosses" without letting the double cone drop to earth. A sergeant of Dragoons was saying the other day, that his topscore used to be about 225, but records of 400 to 500 are freely spoken of by the boys and girls of Rhineland.

The Channel Tunnel.

At the British Empire Leave Club we are to have a great opportunity of welcoming Baron d'Erlanger at Cologne next Tuesday, when he has kindly consented to tell us something about the Channel Tunnel. Who hasn't heard of the great Channel Tunnel? But few people realize that it was started in the early eighties Sir Edward Watkin (of the South Eastern Railway Company) originally started the idea. Baron d'Erlanger formed a company in England, and the French did the same in their country. The tunnel was commenced in France at a place called Sangatte, near Cap Blanc Nez, and in England between Dover and Folkestone. The advantages of the tunnel will be fully explained by our illustrious guest. We feel that many people, soldiers of the Rhine Army, will avail themselves of this interesting opportunity of hearing all about it. The chair will be taken by Maj. Gen. Sir S. T. B. Lawford, K.C.B.

Troops Help at a Fire.

There was some excitement at the village of Hilgen the other night; just after the buglers had sounded the "Last Post" strange blasts on a horn resounded. Everyone thought it was a signal that peace had been signed. All the villagers rushed out, and most of the troops. The Adjutant mounted his bike and chased the energetic horn-blower. Collaring that individual, he asked in his best German "What's your game my lad?" Before he could answer "fire", the sky was lighted up by a great glare, so he just pointed to it, and continued his blasts. The hills and valleys re-echoed with the sound for at least an hour after, and meanwhile help began to arrive to put out the blaze. An antiquated fire brigade, which took eighty minutes to get the hose pipe in action, came on the scene and the men of the 2nd Northern Brigade gave all the assistance possible, but a considerable part of the huge building was gutted. Next day the German papers reported how the major portion of the building was saved by the aid of our troops.

Doubtless an Oversight.

One recalls the practices of adherents of various lost causes or forlorn hopes, to keep alive their pledges and to stimulate their faith. Many such are observed to this day, although they have become merely a custom, chiefly in the rendering of toasts, of which very few could explain the origin.

In English chivalry, for instance, no banner may fly higher than the King's. It is doubtful whether a Royal Standard can be seen in Cologne but is there any reason for the Military Governor daily to walk beneath coat of arms? Look at the balcony over the entrance to the Monopol.

Universal Electricity.

How general is the use of electricity in Rhineland! In the country villages and smaller towns of England one might search in vain for a power station, while here, every house, small or large is fitted with electric light and electricity is used in a variety of utilitarian ways. In most parts of Belgium you will notice this also. When the promised reconstruction schemes at home begin, possibly some move may be made to supersede the gas and oil lamps of our smaller towns. At present, the Continent has much to teach Great Britain in this direction.

Where Workpeople Live.

What seems to have impressed a great many of our men on the Rhine, is the admirable housing arrangements for working people. They fail to find anything at all approaching the foul slums too often found in our great industrial centres, but in place of them well built blocks of flats, on the most modern hygienic lines. The general opinion seems to be that this is the type of dwelling, best suited to our needs at home in cities and towns. For the country, of course, nothing equals the cosy cottage.

Prizes for "Echoes."

The Editor of "The Cologne Post" wants to encourage all ranks of the Rhine Army to make use of their powers of observation and whenever any phase of life in the occupied territory strikes any of his readers or whenever they come across any unusual incident he would like to have a short paragraph about it. Such items should never exceed 150 words, and even shorter notes will be acceptable. Every day the sum of 10 marks will be given for the best sent in, and it should be borne in mind that in awarding the prize, more credit will be given to the subject than to the style of writing, so that lack of literary ability will be no deterrent to anyone. The envelope should have the word "Echoes" in the top left hand corner.

To-day's winner of the prize of 10 marks is Pte. G.V. Gilliard, Oxfords, Train Headquarters, Eastern Division, Rhine Army.

Answers to Correspondents.

"R.H.A.15"—You are entitled to fourteen days leave — not a month.

"154.51 GUNNER J. S."—We make it a point not to answer questions re demobilization. If we did we should exceed available space on these alone.

"PERPLEXED":—The fluctuation in the value of the Mark gives rise to a good deal of misunderstanding. The sum of 72 Marks 75 Pfennigs asked for a 20s Postal order is correct, and doubtless you will be debited at the same rate by your Pay office.

"YORKIE":—Dantzig is in West Prussia.

"R.H.A.":—Captain Guest, Under-secretary for War, has stated that the claims of 1914 and 1915 men for release will not be forgotten.

"A.W.S.":—We assume that gratuities will become payable on July 31st and officers will then have the opportunity of drawing on such amounts. Nothing official has appeared on the subject.

"F. FLINDERS":—This correspondent asks for the record attendance at a football match in the British Isles. Can any reader oblige? Our last essay on this point drew several contradictions.

"GUNNER R.G.A.":—We are not aware of any A. C. authorizing the payment of the Army of Occupation bonus with the separation allowance, but there is nothing to prevent you making a remittance.

"T.L.":—N.C.O.'s and men when in mourning, may wear a band of black material 3½ inches wide, round the left arm above the elbow.

"JACK":—You are right in your assumption. Dogs are not allowed on the Boulogne-Cologne express.

"ITALIAN RIBBON":—The only ribbons for this war are the 1914 and the 1914-15 Stars. Other decorations are unauthorized at present. You are not entitled to wear any Italian service ribbon.

"K.E.H.":—The General Service and Allied ribbons are at present not authorized decorations and should not be worn. No official notice with regard to the G. S. medal has appeared, so we are unable to state who is eligible to wear it.

"V.R. 73":—Roughly 72 Marks to the English pound sterling.

S. PRATT:— Send an application for transfer through your orderly room.

"REGULAR READER." 136034:— There are many guide books which will give you the required information. We have not the space.

"CHESHIRE":— It is roughly 600 miles from Cologne to Manchester. We are unable to state the time taken to fly from London to Cologne, but the journey is made in two stages.

Other queries will be dealt with to-morrow—Ed.

REPAIRING THE RAVAGES OF WAR.

PRACTICAL HELP WANTED.

BELGIANS DISSATISFIED WITH TREATY.

WORK FOR COUNCIL OF TEN.

REPAIRING THE RAVAGES OF WAR.

DREADFUL AFTERMATH.

The British Treasury has sanctioned, within certain limits, a proposal to provide one pound for every pound raised and spent by charitable organisations in the United Kingdom for the relief of distress abroad. By this measure it is hoped that voluntary efforts towards alleviation of the suffering which has followed on war will be stimulated and that the sum already voted by Parliament for the purpose will be substantially augmented. The Government is sending great quantities of supplies but the problem is so vast that charitable effort is required in addition.

This grant will be provided out of monies voted by Parliament for such relief. It will therefore only be available for countries entitled to benefit under that appropriation, namely:—Poland, Yugo-Slavia, Rumania, Czecho-Slovakia, German-Austria, Armenia, the Baltic Provinces of Esthonia, Latvia and Lithuania, Hungary, Turkey, Bulgaria and such districts of Russia or other European territories as the Supreme Economic Council may decide.

Lord Robert Cecil, as head of the British department of the Supreme Economic Council, expresses the earnest hope that this proposal will receive such a response as will bring to some millions of children and many thousands of desolate homes, a message of practical sympathy of the British public.

PITIFUL CONDITIONS.

Lord Curzon has written a letter emphasising the urgent necessity of increasing the relief of distress in Europe and Western Asia. He says: "No effort should be spared for this end, not only in order to alleviate physical tortures of unhappy victims, but because of the effect that continuance of these conditions cannot fail to produce upon the welfare of succeeding generations of the human race.

Our first thought will naturally be for our Allies. Of these Poland, Czecho-Slovakia and parts of the new kingdom of Serbs, Croats and Slovenes have endured most cruel privations in many cases, especially in the large towns, distress is appalling. Not only grown-up men and women, but hundreds and thousands of small children are in daily want of many of the necessities of life. The effects of such a state of affairs are visible in a scale of mortality that can hardly be measured in the shocking increase of crime and in progressive enfeeblement and deterioration of those who ought to provide the population of the future. The need is as great elsewhere. Christian populations of Middle-East Asia Minor, Syria, Armenia and Caucasia are in similar plight and plead for similar relief.

Nor can we ignore the condition of Germany and Austria, where the same problems exist and where post-war conditions are in some cases even more terrible than those of war itself. The moment has indeed now come to repair the ravages of the conflict and obliterate the scars of savage strife. Europe cannot be restored to political or social health except by a combined effort of philanthropy of civilised and Christian mankind."

OPERATIONS IN LIVONIA.

GERMAN RETREAT CUT.

The Esthonian Press Agency states that severe fighting between the Esthonian and the German Baltic Militia has occurred in North West Livonia and developed favourably for the Esthonians, who have reached Rodenpois, twenty kilometres from Riga. A quantity of war material, including eight guns, was captured at Reval. The correspondent of the National Tidende states that Lettish troops have captured Riga and seized the bridge over the Dvina, thereby cutting off the retreat of the German Baltic troops.

REVERSE TO FINNISH TROOPS.

Official news is to hand to-day, stating that Bolshevist troops landed on the Western shore of Lake Ladoga, North of Petrograd, and made an attack on the Finnish troops, who were forced to retreat. Large quantities of supplies were lost.

The move is said to be the beginning of a plan for a great invasion of Finland, in which 25,000 troops will take part.

A Helsingfors message says the Finnish General Staff reports that a Bolshevist Squadron appeared off Vitell, near Ladaga, on Thursday and opened fire on the village, destroying the hospital and other buildings, afterwards landing troops who were engaged by the Finns.

The situation on the Russian frontier is said to be serious. The Bolshevists have concentrated considerable forces and are preparing an attack on a large scale against Viberg.

ITALIANS SCEPTICAL.

In Rome, apart from flags on Government buildings, there was no display of enthusiasm to mark the signing of the Peace Treaty. The majority of the newspapers express scepticism regarding the settlement.

BRITISH PREMIER CHEERED IN COMMONS.

GREAT OVATION.

Mr. Lloyd George, Chief Prime Minister of the British Empire, was given a great ovation on entering the House of Commons, yesterday afternoon. The entire House rose and cheered again and again, the demonstration lasting several minutes.

Sir Donald Maclean expressed the hearty congratulations of the House on the Premier's return, after fulfilment of duties as arduous and responsible as have ever been undertaken by any British Minister.

The Premier, returning thanks for his welcome, said it had been indeed a very anxious time because of the gigantic character of the interests concerned. He thought it would better suit the convenience of the House if he deferred making a statement regarding the Treaty until Thursday. "The document signed last Saturday" he said, "is probably the most comprehensive and far reaching ever concluded. It may alter the whole affairs of the world and give a new turn to the destiny of mankind." He added that he hoped to lay an authentic copy on the table on Thursday and at the same time introduce a Bill to enable the Government to give effect to its provisions.

Replying to Sir Donald Macleon, the Premier said there would be an opportunity for discussion of the Treaty.

The House then rose again and sang the National Anthem.

CLEMENCEAU TO THE FRENCH SENATE.

SORROWFUL HEROISM.

In the Chamber of Deputies yesterday afternoon, M. Clemenceau presented the Peace Treaty together with a treaty of alliance with Great Britain and America.

He described the Peace Treaty as a work of renovation and that the preservation of the world has been accomplished.

"Humanity" said the venerable statesman, "may arise and live its own life. The peace of the world can only be won by a continued effort for which humble, restrained and sorrowful heroism is necessary. That is the programme of France now. For the accomplishment of the duties of tomorrow, let us be inspired by the tasks of yesterday.

All the Deputies, except the Socialists, stood and cheered Clemenceau.

CLEARING UP THE DETAILS.

COUNCIL OF TEN BUSY.

A considerable amount of work remains to be done before the military and reparation clauses of the Austrian Treaty are settled and it is improbable that the treaty will be ready for signature before the end of July. Dr. Renner, the chief Austrian delegate, has sent a number of notes, the majority of which have not been published, but are, it is understood, couched in reasonable terms. This shows an evident desire for amicable arrangement and on this account it is probable that dealings with the Austrians will be more in the nature of negotiations than was the case with the Germans.

The immediate occupation of the Council of Ten, is the arrangement of details of mandates for the former German colonies. Discussions are also taking place regarding other matters of detail arising out of the Treaty, notably the disposal of German warships.

Broadly speaking, the position is that Great Britain and America absolutely, and Italy and Japan with certain reservations, are in favour of breaking up the ships which will come into the possession of the Allies. France, on the other hand, urges a distribution of the ships and submarines.

No definite action has been taken regarding the Scapa Flow affair but the matter will become acute if the Germans follow a similar course in the case of other ships to be handed over within sixty days of the signing of peace.

BELGIAN DISSATISFACTION WITH TREATY.

There is understood to be grave dissatisfaction in Belgium with the Peace Treaty. The allegation is being put forward that it keeps none of the promises made to Belgium. The Belgians say that the question of Luxemburg has been kept in the background, and that no satisfaction has been accorded in the matter of the left bank of the Scheldt. Strong complaint is also made against the preference given to Rotterdam, as the Inter-Allied provisioning base.

FIRST PEACE BUDGET IN GERMANY.

The Boersen-Zeitung states that the Government will shortly introduce a budget to raise between seventy and eighty milliards (eighty thousand million) of marks, the burden of which will fall on the capitalists.

EPSOM POLICE FATALITY INQUEST.

SEVENTH DEFENDANT.

The coroner's jury, enquiring into the circumstances attending the death of Station-Sergeant Green, who died from injuries received in the Canadian raid on Epsom police station, returned a verdict of manslaughter, against the six men who had already been committed for trial.

Another man, Robert Todd, bugler at the Canadian camp, was included in the charge and a similar verdict found against him.

The jury added the following riders:

"The police acted with discretion and great valour.

"Sergt. Green's ready response in plain clothes to the call of duty deprived him of some measure of protection."

APPEAL TO A QUEEN.

THE KAISER'S SURRENDER.

Officers of the old Prussian Army and the late German Navy have addressed a request to the Queen of Holland begging her to refuse to surrender the ex-Kaiser to the Allies. The Deutsche Zeitung publishes the text of this appeal to the Queen and Parliament of Holland.

It expresses loyalty to the ex-Kaiser, "who has been forced by treasonable designs in his own country to place himself under Holland's protection" and continues: "Our enemies, lacking in every chivalrous sense, have, besides other oppressive peace conditions, made a humiliating and dishonourable demand of the German people that it shall surrender to their jurisdiction our Kaiser and King—a man who, every educated person in the world knows is, in his deep religiousness, pure in heart and free of all guilt for war. Only pitiable anxiety for their lives and goods and chattels has driven part of our countrymen to agree to the enemy's demands that are dictated by thirst for revenge."

In conclusion the petitioners request Holland to refuse to permit any "arrogant interference of our enemies in the question of extradition of our Kaiser and King."

CONCERNING THE EX-KAISER.

Replying to questions in the House of Commons' Mr. Harmsworth said that no negotiations for the extradition of the ex-Kaiser had yet takeu place. Representations had been made to the Netherlands Government concerning the necessity of taking adequate steps to prevent his departure from Holland.

Mr. Bottomley then asked, "Is the honourable gentleman aware that according to newspaper reports the ex-Kaiser threatened to commit suicide rather than face his trial, and will the Government do its best to hasten this expeditious and inexpensive solution?"

There was much laughter, but no answer.

SEVERE EARTHQUAKE IN ITALY.

VILLAGES DESTROYED.

Severe earthquake shocks occurred on Sunday over a wide area in the region of Mugello. Reports coming in show there has been considerable loss of life and enormous damage to property, entire villages having been destroyed. At Vicchio, twenty persons were killed, while it is estimated that there is a much greater number of casualties at Covello. Churches and railway stations are reported as destroyed in many parts of the stricken area.

GALLOWS IN PUBLIC GARDEN.

River monitors bombarded the Soviet Government Headquarters at Buda-Pesth on Saturday last. Gallows have been erected in the public gardens for the execution of the revolutionary leaders. The fate of a hundred cadets arrested after a fight at the military academy is unknown.

RESTORATION OF YPRES.

A joint Commission of British and Belgian architects will shortly be appointed to formulate plans for the restoration of Ypres. The present proposal is that the city be rebuilt on its original site and that most of the new buildings shall be practically reproductions of those destroyed.

In deference to the wishes of many British families whose relatives fell at Ypres, some of the ruins will be left, including those of the ancient Cloth Hall.

AMERICANS ACQUIRE KRUPP FACTORY.

According to a Munich report in the South German papers, the Krupp works in Munich have been sold to an American group. In the Rhine districts several industrial concerns have already passed into American hands.

The Krupp works at Munich were built in 1916, because the head works at Essen were cramped and the neighbourhood was a hotbed of anti-Krupp Socialists. The Munich site cost £350,000.

Charlie Chaplin has cabled a £5,000 investment in the Victory War Loan.

The ex-Emperor of Austria, who is staying in Switzerland, is seriously ill. The latest report says his condition is grave.

During the six months ended March last, 136,000 deaths occurred in England and Wales from influenza.

LADIES CLUB OPENED IN COLOGNE.

WOMEN'S HELP IN THE WAR.

An important addition to the amenities in the life of the British lady-worker in the British Occupied Zone was inaugurated yesterday afternoon by the Commander- in- Chief, Sir William Robertson, G.C.B., K.C.V.O., D.S.O. It consists of a beautiful club house situated at 89 Sachsen Ring and is known as the H.R.H. Princess Victoria's Club for Nurses. It was at the instigation of Lady Algernon Gordon Lennox, D.B.E. (who was unfortunately unable to be present) that the first club was started in France early in the war. Eventuallly twelve were established and run under her direct supervision. The new club is the only one now in existence, the necessity for the others having happily passed away.

The new premises comprise the ordinary appurtenances of club life and in addition hot and cold baths and alimited number of bedrooms are available. Meals are served at reasonable prices.

After inspecting the parade of nurses on the lawn the Commander in Chief made a happy little speech in dedicating the club. He said that one of the most wonderful things in this war was the way in which women had helped to win it. Not only in France and elsewhere had women nobly shared the trials, hardships and dangers of the campaign, but also at home they had slaved at munitions, nursed and helped the wounded and had assisted considerably in recruiting. Lord Kitchener—although a bachelor—said, when more men were wanted, "Get the women to help; they'll do it," and they did.

The Army of the Rhine, he continued, has reason to be very thankful to the lady helpers. They not only worked hard at nursing and kindred duties during the day but by dancing and similar distractions they helped to beguile many an otherwise tedious evening.

During the afternoon the band of the 52nd Durham Light Infantry (by kind permission of Lieut.-Col. Frizzell, D.S.O., M.C., in command) played agreeable selections under Bandmaster Etherington.

Membership of the club is extended to all British ladies in the occupied area who hold officer rank.

STABBED WITH A BAYONET.

Two non-commissioned officers of the Lancashire Fusiliers, Sergeant Albert Hince and Sergeant Harry Clough, were charged at Stafford, yesterday with causing the death of Arthur William Bates by stabbing him with a bayonet during a street affray on June 21st.

Clough was discharged but Hince, who admitted that he drew a bayonet in self-protection, was committed for trial on a charge of manslaughter.

AT A FLAT IN MAYFAIR.

Lieut.-Colonel Thomas George Sowerby, of Manor House, Luton, was granted a decree nisi yesterday. He alleged misconduct between his wife, Ellen Catherine and Captain William Rathbone, and evidence was given to the effect that Sowerby and the corespondent had stayed together in a Mayfair flat.

The petition was undefended.

LONDON VICTORY MARCH.

Times of the London troops' victory march next Saturday morning from Hyde Park to the Tower have been fixed. Starting at 11.23, the head of the procession will reach Buckingham Palace at 11.30, where the King will take the salute. The route then is: Admiralty Arch 11.45, Fleet-street 12, Ludgate Hill 12.7, Queen Victoria-street 12.20.

Afterwards by way of King William-street, Eastcheap, Great Tower-street, and Byward-street to the Tower.

Nurses, after leaving the park, are to fall out at the Admiralty Arch, and the troops will pass by them on either side through the outer arches. The procession will be three miles long, and 50,000 troops are to take part.

FEMALE LABOUR IN A.P.C.

Between fifty and sixty ex-soldiers were discharged yesterday morning without notice from the Army Pay Office in Upper Thames-street where they were employed as temporary clerks. The discharged men have been employed on night work and on Friday were told that night duty being abolished, they were to call on Monday and apply for day work. When they put in an appearance on Monday, they were told to come again the next morning for their money.

The men's complaint is that while ex-soldiers are being discharged, the Army Pay Office is retaining female labour.

COLONIALS IN THE STRAND.

Traffic was completely held up in the Strand on Monday evening by a small band of noisy Australian and Canadian soldiers near Charing Cross. They refused to go away and rounded on the police, calling on their comrades for assistance. Police reinforcements were sent for, and several men were arrested. Mounted police assisted in moving the crowd which had quickly collected.

REDUCED ECONOMIC COUNCIL.

Before the Conference finally dispersed, the Council of Three met at Versailles and reached decisions on the financial and economic clauses in the Austrain Peace Treaty. The Council decided that the Supreme Economic Council shall continue in a modified form in order to maintain the organisation and act as the liaison body between the various Allies.

SOUTHAMPTON'S FINE RECORD.

OFFICERS HONOURED.

A public banquet was held at Southampton on Monday in honour of Brigadier-General Balfour, chief embarkation officer, and Commodore Wray, principal naval transport officer at that port.

Brigadier-General Balfour said that Southampton had been throughout the war the main artery of communication. They had handled 8,150,000 personnel, 860,000 horses and mules, 15,260 guns and limbers, 180,000 vehicles, 3,453,663 tons of ammunition and stores, 7,700,000 bags of mails, and 17,186 ships. He predicted a brilliant future for the port, which had achieved this stupendous aggregate with ease, and he hoped to see Southampton the premier port of Western Europe.

Both officers were recipients of handsome presents in token of public appreciation of their valuable services.

SALUTARY FINE FOR CRUELTY TO A DOG.

At Middleton (Lancashire) police court on Monday, Lord Rochdale, who commanded the 6th Lancashire Fusiliers at Gallipoli, was fined five pounds and ten guineas costs for cruelty to a dog on the links of the Manchester Golf Club.

It is alleged that defendant hit a retriever dog with an iron headed putter about a dozen times and that when a golfer sought to restrain him by seizing his wrists, Lord Rochdale kicked him on the shins.

Defendant, giving evidence, asserted that he was perfectly entitled to chastise a disobedient dog and that, as the animal, being a sporting dog, was being trained for a special purpose, it must be made to obey.

INTIMIDATION OF PARLIAMENT.

"As a protest against the policy adopted by certain leaders of the Triple Alliance (miners, railwaymen, and transport workers) for the intimidation of Parliament," the executive council of the Sailors' and Firemen's Union declare that they will take no part in a conference proposed by the alliance, and that the members of the union will not be bound by any of the conference resolutions.

The council state that as part of the alliance they never understood that the influence of the alliance was to be used in political directions.

The Minister of Ways and Communications states that he does not think that the carrying of passengers on the carriers of motor bicycles is a matter upon which legislation can be proposed at present.

LONDON T.O.T. CELEBRATION.

Filling the flag-bedecked Albert Hall from arena to gallery, the employees of London's great traffic organisation—from tube, omnibus, and tramway-car—assembled last evening at the invitation of the Underground Railways to celebrate peace, and honour with song, music, and speech their 16,000 comrades who had gone out to fight.

Two hundred and fifty had won decorations, and to these General Sir Julian Byng, described by the chairman, Lord George Hamilton, as "the leader of an unbeaten army, whose record was without flaw or set-back," gave special souvenirs, shaking each man by the hand as they marched, cheered to the echo, across the platform.

PROFITABLE SALVAGE FEAT.

A remarkable salvage feat has been performed at Hunts Bay, near Swansea. Last November the French steamship Tours ran on the rocks in a dense fog. Valued afloat at £130,000, she was sold to a salvage company for £7,000.

The purchasers have since been diligently at work dynamiting the rocks round the vessel and constructing slipways.

Last night the ship was successfully refloated, and it is calculated that the salvors will net £80,000.

NELSON'S LOG BOOK SAVED FOR NATION.

The original log book of the Victory covering the period including the battle of Trafalgar up to the death of Nelson, was sold at Sotheby's yesterday for £5,000.

It was afterwards announced that the historic document had been purchased on behalf of Mr. James Buchanan, who intends to present it to the nation in recognition of the part played by the Navy in this war.

VICTORIA FREE BUFFET CLOSED.

Major-Gen. Feilding, commanding the London district, was the last of over 12,000,000 soldiers and sailors to receive from Mrs. Kenward Matthews and her volunteer staff, tea and cakes at the free buffet at Victoria Station, which was closed yesterday, after being open night and day since February 1915.

Mrs. Matthews was presented by her staff with a diamond ring and gold chain.

ROCHESTER BRIDGE BURNT.

The South Eastern Railway Bridge over the Medway between Strood and Rochester was burned out from end to end yesterday.

It is supposed to have been caused by an engine dropping live coals on the permanent way. All railway traffic is diverted to the main line.

THE NEW ALLIANCE.

An event scarcely less important to the future security of Europe against the horrors of another war, but which has been almost overshadowed by the signing of the Peace Treaty, took place a few days ago at Versailles.

This was the formal agreement to a compact between the two great English speaking nations, Great Britain and the United States linking themselves in an alliance to defend their Latin ally, France, against any unprovoked attack from any future enemy.

This mutual agreement for defence, although the exact terms have not yet been made public, cannot be considered as of much less importance than the Peace Treaty which has taken so long to complete.

It may be recalled that early in May, on the eve of the Allies' conditions being submitted to the Germans, a note announced that Great Britian and America had decided to guarantee France against any German aggression.

It was this understanding which has been set down in exact terms and signed by Mr. Lloyd George on our behalf, President Wilson for the States, and M. Clemenceau for France.

This act sets the seal formally on the new alliance of the new Triple Entente. It forms the basis of an immensely strong combination of forces which, though it may be in thorough harmony with and will take its proper share in the operations of the League of Nations, will be able to act independently of it, if the unfortunate necessity arises.

The pact now completed between the three great allies should have a salutary effect in Germany. To know that in the event of any future violation of her pledges she will be face to face with three united nations may cause her to hesitate, before again venturing to provoke hostilities, which may have more dire consequences for her than even the recent struggle has had.

CIVIL EMPLOYMENT.

We see that Mr. Hastings Pimbury, after eulogising the splendid unselfishnes and ability of those who have fought, points out in "The Ex-Service Man" that there yet remains a great deal to be done before the temporary soldiers can be properly and profitably absorbed into the civil life of the Empire. He also hints at a scheme which would help considerably in the direction.

Learning that he was in Cologne we sought further details from him personally, as the matter is obviously one of immediate interest to many of our readers. This is the scheme he has outlined briefly.

"We propose" he told us, "to form an association of demobilized officers in London for the purpose of representing British firms on the continent and in other parts of the world.

Arrangements would be made with certain hotels in all the principal towns of Europe for stockrooms, interpreters, etc. to be at the disposal of members.

Every member of the Association would wear a distinctive badge so that all would be mutually recognizable and all would be sworn to help each other in every way possible.

Thus the camaraderie born on the battlefield would be fostered to the benefit of British commerce.

At the present moment British firms are giving their agencies to French, Dutch and Belgians, and this seems all wrong while we have thousands of demobilized officers, highly educated men of splendid address, who would make the very finest type of ambassadors of commerce.

Again, when we start trading with Germany instead of allowing Germans to come to trade in England. they should be obliged to give their agencies to the 'Boys of the old Brigade.'

With thirty years experience of Continental trading I am in a position to realise what an asset this would be for Great. Britain."

"In this manner I am convinced," continued the author of this scheme, "that thousands of those demobilized, would find most profitable and congenial employment.

Many ex-fighting men have no desire to go back to offices and other pre-war vocations. They are a national asset, of which England has not yet been clever enough to avail herself.

Once manufacturers and merchants know that the plan is properly organised, they should be only too pleased to give their representations to men who freely offered their lives to their country, to men who in a few short months learned an entirely new business, in which they displayed extraordinary adaptability, keenness and vigour, and in which they were generally very successful.

Such a scheme as the one I am advocating would enable many of them to marry comfortably and so help to ensure succeeding generations of intelligent, vigorous Britons.

I hope soon to be called to London to lay my scheme before the British public, and shall only be too happy if I can do anything to assist those who so nobly stepped forward to save our homes and country."

Mr. Hastings Pimbury's scheme seems to be quite a feasible one, provided British firms will support it patriotically as they should. All depends on this, and we hope to hear of its success.

WHICH CAME FIRST?

Military Collapse or Revolution.

From the beginning of the war those in authority allowed themselves to be led astray by the wildest delusions. In 1914 it was England's neutrality; in 1915-16 it was France which was supposed to be bleeding to death; in 1917 England was said to be at the point of famine; in 1918 it was the inferiority of America.

Through all these fables, hopes of final victory were entertained, whilst revolutions were counted upon in France, England, further India, etc. Those who were responsible at G.H.Q. either ignored the actual facts or else did not, choose to recognise them, whilst Ludendorff would not believe in the monthly drafts 150,000 strong of well-equipped, fresh American troops, though his information upon this point was perfectly reliable. He had become a blind fool.

Whilst the German dead were lying in heaps in the trenches from Arras to Ypres, great victories were being celebrated in Germany amid the ringing of bells and the fluttering of flags. Those who were acquainted with the few facts of the March offensive were filled with dismay.

The actions which followed the March offensive were merely indications of the desperate military condition. Anyone could see that the collapse was unceasing; only G.H.Q., indulged in hopes of victory. The Supreme Command rallied the scattering remnants of the armies to fresh attack. The German guns were heard for the last time on July 14th.

Meanwhile, Foch was collecting the greatest army ever known in history in the Forest of Compiegne. Nevertheless, the German Supreme Command with criminal carelessness made light of the fate threatening to overwhelm it. It might have been possible to withdraw the German army in close formation to fresh defensive positons on July 14th, if the mad attempt of an offensive on the Marne had been given up.

* * *

Meanwhile, in Germany, flags were hung out and the fruits of the March victories were expected daily. The people began to grow impatient. How could the front be shortened now in the full floodtide of victory? A last final attempt was made to rally the weary troops and advance on the French trenches.

The French Army, with cunning strategy, parried the blow and proceeded to deal overwhelming flank and counter attacks in the woods of Compiegne. Breaches were rapidly made in the German front, and very soon their resistance gave way.

The German rampart from the North Sea to the Vosges began to yield, with the enemy pressing with all their force upon them, granting the German troops no respite.

And so the pround army of Wilhelm II. crumbled utterly. After a series of victories they were now shattered, and in full dissolution retreated upon the Rhine. Vainly was the attempt made to parry the staggering blows dealt by the oncoming foe. Proud divisions melted as ice in the sun. Who could number or reckon the guns, the ammunition and all the material which had to be abandoned to the pursuer.

The German troops could save nothing but their own lives and the collapse was complete. Those who formerly had been blind now recovered their sight, and Ludendorff urged on the completion of an immediate armistice.

This was necessary for Germany for the retreating masses could no longer be restrained. They had long been weary of fighting—now they only longed to return home. Of what possible advantage could even a successful resistance be?

* * *

It was then only that the revolution broke out in Germany. It was the natural consequence of the military collapse, for with it the power and authority of the political system also collapsed. Any attempt to represent the sequence of events as inverted is a mere impertinent lie and transparent demagogy. Fears were even entertained that the Field Army was wholly ignorant of the course of events and might be employed by reactionary officers against the revolution at home. Thus, on November 18, regiments were met with, which either knew nothing of what had happened at home or else had very extraordinary ideas upon the subject. The troops on the lines of communication were better-informed as to the course of events. They hailed the revolution.

Fearing lest the troops from the front might be misled by the officers, they proceeded to disarm many regiments as they passed through. They were not without justification for their fears, for the Supreme Command was not able to premeditate capitulation before a Government had been established by the Revolution.

Far-reaching measures had been adopted some time past to protect the Emperor, who had taken refuge at G.H.Q., as well as members of the General Staff, these, however, declared at a meeting held on November 8th, against the use of arms against their fellow-countrymen.

That sanguinary conflict between the revolutionary working classes at home and the field army were avoided is to be ascribed to the credit of the Soldiers' Councils. This is clearly proved by the congress of the Soldiers' Councils held at Bad Ems on the 1st and 2nd December, 1918. The representatives of the army took their stand upon the ground of the revolution and raised no political claims.

The opponents of the revolution carried on their work by specious arguments devoid of all truth. This is not to be wondered at. They cannot shake themselves free of lies for their whole world is one of mendacity and deceit. They are only able to maintain their hold owing to the blind confidence of the German Michel, who has not changed his character despite the world-war and the revolution.

REMEMBRANCE.

A sweet voice singing! Straightway the dim day
Melts into gold before my spell-bound eyes;
I see again the radiant sun of May,
The cloudless blue of summer skies.

Oh! Summer time, enchanted days of bliss!
Cool, cloistered garden where red poppies grew—
What matter the starved years, since memory holds this;
Mid-summer skies, love's thrill, and—you?

LIONEL VERNEY.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

PAINT AND POWDER.

Sir,—I also was on leave recently, as well as "Anti-Paint", and must contradict his statement. If the painting and powdering is to be found anywhere it is in the vicinity of London, and I found no difference in the girls' appearance from what it was two years ago.

Anyhow, why should "Anti-Paint" interfere? If he wanted to grease his hair or wear a monocle I suppose he would do so. Whether English girls look like "third-rate chorus girls," or not, they have done their bit during the past four years. "KINGSTON."

OFFICER'S CLUB SUGGESTIONS.

Sir,—My last visit to Cologne was during the recent hot weather, when one needed a plentiful supply of iced drinks, but I learned to my surprise that they were unobtainable at the officers' club from 14.30 to 19.00.

Therefore it was necessary to repair to some authorised German café, where not less than 20 marks was demanded for anything at all fit to drink. Cannot the management make provision for the sale of "soft drinks" at all hours between the opening and closing of the club?

Another point. Although the sale of intoxicants ceases at 22.00; is it not possible to serve non-alcoholic drinks and coffee after that hour?

"OUTPOST."

ACHTUNG!

Sir,—In several shops in the Hohestrasse and Schildergasse are exhibited what, at first glance, appear to be genuine American-made "Gillette" blades. The familiar trade-mark and usual words and numbers are all stencilled on the blade, and it is only when one comes to shave that the fraud is discovered.

But the correct price, which happens to be twice that of the usual German-made blades, is charged. SAPPER J. C. C.

A TRAIN SUGGESTION.

Sir,—The Express trains between Bonn and Cologne at present stop at Marienburg; this halting place is seldom used except by golfers.

If the trains could stop at Rodenkirchen Station, it would be of the greatest advantage to the golfers of Bonn, by saving them a walk of half a mile, and I am sure would cause no inconvenience to the general public.

Perhaps someone in authority may be able to do something in this matter. "BOGEY."

DEBATING SOCIETIES—AND OTHERS.

Sir,—Your correspondent W.D., mentions that "much will be done in this direction with the approach of winter," also that "it is next to impossible to arouse interest in any indoor gathering just now."

But I want to suggest another society which will not mean indoor discussion. The open fields, hills, stone quarries, and the running streams are the objects which interest members of geological societies.

May I suggest that, in almost every unit of the Rhine Army may be found men who are willing to devote both time and brains to the study of geology.

Could not geological societies be formed and instructed under the guidance of competent teachers? If these latter could not be found why not establish a special department in each divisional college which would furnish units with instructors? R.M.

CLUB HOURS.

Sir,—If I could be sure that the many British ladies in Cologne do not read "The Cologne Post" I would make a suggestion about the hours for the club they so excellently manage for us.

But the probability is that they read each line of every number printed. This even though there is no column devoted to fashion plates and crocheting; no paragraphed wrinkles for the kitchen and the housenold.

The suggestion I would make is that they extend the hours during which the clubs are open in the evening. The majority, I believe, close down between 7.30 and 8.30; after then the soldier must hie him to his barracks, or saunter around the streets and perhaps call at another kind of refreshment house a together.

But I would not have the ladies think that we do not appreciate their tedious work on our behalf. We know that their husbands and fathers are also needing them at home, and proudly we shall remember their dilligence and patience. W.

CARS FOR O.R's.

Sir,—I saw an announcement that officers may now have their motor-cars and motor-cycles imported into the country in which they are serving.

But there are many N.C.O's and men in possession of motor-cycles (and quite a few with cars!) who would like the privilege extended to them also.

The writer, for one, would be delighted to have his motor-cycle and side-car with him, and gladly pay all expenses entailed by such a privilege. PRIVATE X.

TRAMWAYS—A CRITICISM.

Sir,—Your correspondent in "Echoes from Rhineland" is full of admiration for Rhineland tramways.

In my opinion, Cologne-Bonn and Bonn-Siegburg "half hour services" correspond more to our electric suburban trains than to our exellent "eight or 10 minute local tramway services."

An inspection of the up-to-date methods employed at Bradford, Yorkshire, would perhaps surprise him—especially the patent "Trackless Tram"!

And you know how cosy the tops of our tramcars are. J.P.K.

TENNIS FOR O.R's—GOOD NEWS.

Sir,—With reference to "Racket's" letter in your issue of Friday re tennis for other ranks in Cologne, tennis courts have been secured for G.H.Q. troops and a club formed.

Will "Racket" please communicate with Cpl J. H. Williams, office of D.G.T., Room 326, at the Excelsior Hotel.

T. H. FRAME
Corporal,
Secretary, G.H.Q., Troops Tennis Club.

THE VICTORY LOAN.

Sir,—I hope all ranks of the Rhine Army are taking up the Victory Loan.

With the present increased pay and the bonus, everybody ought to be able to buy at least one bond.

If that were done the Rhine Army might easily have the honour of helping our country to the tune of two million pounds sterling.

"JOY."

THE BANTAM-WEIGHT CHAMPIONSHIP.

TOMMY NOBLE DEFEATED.

W. ROSS INFLICTS HEAVY PUNISHMENT AT N.S.C.

At the National Sporting Club on Monday evening, Walter Ross, Glasgow, beat Tommy Noble, Bermondsey, in the tenth round in the contest for the Bantam-Weight championship of Great Britain and the Lonsdale belt.

Ross beat Noble in speed and generalship and from the second round was the only one in it. Ross repeatedly penetrated Noble's defence, and the end came half-way through the tenth round when the seconds threw in the towel. Noble never seemed able to get going and when he made an effort, more often than not, missed. H was repeatedly forced on the rope, where Ross inflicted a severe punishment.

BOXING AT THE RING.

Boxing at the ring on Monday evening, Johnny Sheppard knocked out Driver Fred Housego, R.F.A., in the second of a 20 round contest. Pte. Hughes, West Kents, beat Bill Lee, Camberwell, in two rounds.

JOHNNY BASHAM KNOCKED DOWN.

Johnny Basham has been knocked down and injured by a motor cycle at Newport, Mon.

THE HEAVY-WEIGHT TITLE.

LATEST WILLARD-DEMPSEY CONTEST GOSSIP.

The American papers are pretty full of the Jess Willard and Jack Dempsey contest, to be decided at Toledo on Friday afternoon, for the title of world's heavy-weight champion, which Willard gained by beating down Jack Johnson at Havana in the spring of 1915. It is a "big" event in every sense of the world, for Willard is the most massive specimen of manhood who has ever held the championship—he stands 6ft 6in high and weighs 18st or more—and his opponent is small, only by comparison, for Dempsey also tops 6ft and scales about 14st; the purse money totals the record sum of £30,000, and it is expected that the attendance will surpass all previous figures for a boxing contest.

Short Fight Anticipated.

It is not considered probable that Dempsey will allow it to be a long-drawn-out affair like that at Havana, for he is far more impetuous and less calculating that Johnson, and as it is regarded as certain that he will go in to "have a fight," his victory or defeat in a few rounds is looked for.

Twelve months ago (writes "Straight Left" in "Sporting Life"), it was predicted that Willard would never box again, because he was putting on weight to such an extent as to make training an impossibility. He was then said to weigh well over 20st. But from American exchanges we learn that Jess was far from being the fat and unweildy man Bat Masterson and others had painted him, and that, after a fairly severe course of training, which is now nearing its close, he will scale about 18st. Even so, he is a huge man, and it is only because of Dempsey's youth and aggressiveness, and speed and power of hitting, that the challenger is considered to have a chance of becoming champion. There is no gainsaying Dempsey's punch, which has laid his opponents low, one after the other, during the last two years—with the exception of Billy Miske, of St. Paul, who boxed no-decision bouts with him of 10 and 6 rounds respectively. But Dempsey's opponents were not supermen like Willard.

EXCITING SOCCER.

5/6 ROYAL SCOTS v 1/4 SEAFORTH HIGHLANDERS.

The above match took place on Sunday at Ohligs, the match being the result of a challenge. The teams had met twice before, and on each occasion the result had been 3—2, in favour of the Royal Scots. A great deal of interest was aroused by the match, which attracted a large crowd, and before the finish, excitement rose to fever-heat. The game ended with the same score as on the two previous occasions.

Gold opened the scoring for the 5/6th from a corner kick, Handon bringing the sc re to 2—0 with a beautifully timed header which gave the Seaforth goal-keeper no chance. Walker scored for the Seaforth with a lovely shot, following some good combination by the Highlanders. Half time came with the score 2—1.

Hanton the 5/6 centre-forward, scored again shortly after the second half started, getting his head on a good cross from Euman the Royal Scots outside left. About seven minutes before time, the Seaforth scored again, reducing the lead to 3—2, and the match finished amid great excitement, with the Highlanders pressing.

"GUNS" v. "HOWS."

"CATCH OF THE SEASON" AT GEISINGEN.

Bright cricket was witnessed at Geisingen on Saturday, when 195 Siege Battery entertained 121 Heavy Battery. The visitors batted first upon winning the toss, this being the fifth time in succession the coin had fallen in their favour. The first wicket yielded 25 runs, Major J. P. Jordan, M. C., and Sig.-Sergt. Banks playing steady cricket. The dismissal of Major J. P. Jordan, M. C., is worthy of note. The ball, being cut hard to point, rebounded from the fielder, and was eventually held by the home wicket-keeper, thus perhaps making the "catch" of the season.

The "Hows" took advantage of the many chances given in the field, and were able to compile 74. For the home team Gr Leach took 5 wickets for 32 runs, and Gr. Holt 2 wickets for 0 runs. The "Hows" found the deliveries of Sig.-Sergt. Banks and Bdr. Hartfield very difficult to deal with. The former obtained 7 wickets for 5 runs, and the later 2 wickets for 18 runs.

RUSH FOR BLUE JERSEYS.

14 SIEGE BATTERY v. 142 HEAVY BATTERY AT STOTZHEIM.

A football match was playded between 14 Siege Battery and 142 Heavy Battery on the former's ground at Stotzheim on Friday night. Some delay was caused in starting owing to both teams turning out in blue jersies. As the Siege had a reserve stock in the Q.M. stores, however, this was soon remedied. The "Siege" broke away, and after some fine combination Evans opened the score. 14 took the ball from the kick-off up to the "Heavies" goal and in less than three minutes Cpl. Ritchie again scored for the "Siege." The "Heavies" broke away and made a rush for the "Siege" goal and a good shot was saved by Bdr. Tenner, the "Siege" goalie, but he was not quick enough in clearing it, several of the "Heavies" falling on him and Tenner lying on the ball till the referee intervened and gave a goal-kick. At half time the "Siege" led 2—0.

In the second half the play was chiefly in the "Siege" half. The "Heavies" were very erratic in their shooting using too much elevation. On one occasion the "Heavies" goalie used the same tactics as Tenner did in the first half. About 16 minutes before time 14 again broke away and Capt. Harris scored the third goal for the "Siege." A clean fast game ended in a win for 14 Siege Battery by 3 goals to 0.

No. 6 RAILWAY TELEGRAPH COY. (282 for 7) v. 18th A.A.H.T. COY. (31), at Mülheim on Sunday. The 6th R.T.C. scored 282 for seven wickets in 2½ hours. Lieut. H. M. Chrystall, R.E., 138 (not out), and L/Cpl. T. Hoper 44, were the chief scorers, and the bowling of Cpl. Fish (5 wkts. for 13) and L Cpl. Hooper (4 wkts. for 18), proved very troublesome to the A.A.H.T.

FOOTBALL SUSPENSIONS.

The Football Association calls attention to the fact that the following resolution has been passed by the Council:—

"The suspension of all suspended persons formerly connected with the game who have sacrificed their lives for their country shall be removed, and the record expunged. The secretary shall on being informed of the address of the widow or near relative of any such person notify them of the pleasure of the Council in being able to remove the suspension and clear the record."

OFFICERS v. SERGEANTS.

The 16th Lancashire Fusiliers played an interesting match at Nieder Menden on Saturday, between officers and sergeants. The officers batted first and scored 112. Capts. Boden and Potts each scored 23, the latter not out. Lieut.-Col. Woodcock, the C. O., contributed a polished 16, and was a tower of strength behind the stumps. The sergeants were saved by C.Q.M.S. Bewicke, who, going in 1st wicket, was not out for 46. Their total was 76.

UNBEATEN RECORD.

52nd CHESHIRES (170 for 7 wickets) v. 3 COY., WESTERN DIV. TRAIN, R.A.S.C. (32) at Bornheim on Saturday. For the winners Lieut. Pollock ran up the fine total of 76, and Sergt. Allen 46. Pte. Gould took 5 wickets for 8 runs, and Lieut. Gatheridge 5 for 14. Bowling for the losers Pte. Archer took 3 for 19. The 52nd Cheshires have thus preserved their unbeaten record in the competition.

64th FIELD COY. R.E. (59) v. 90th FIELD COY. R.E. (41). For the 64th, Sapper Whelbrand made 19, and L/Cpl. Gulleward 16. Sapper Pratley bowled 6 for 23. Capt. Read scored 17 for the 90th, and Lieut. Jacobs bowled 6 for 21.

SERVICE MEN DEBARRED.

N.A.R.A. CREW REJECTED BY HENLEY STEWARDS.

APPEAL TO THE KING.

Much dissatisfaction has been caused in Service circles with the decision of the Henley Stewards who rejected the entry of the crew, composed of Service men, entered by the National Amateur Rowing Association for the Allied eight oared race for the King's Cup.

The reason is said to be because the men are not amateurs in the eyes of the Stewards. The following telegram has been sent to the King by the executive of the N.A.R.A.:—

Eight British soldiers who have fought for their country, members of the N.A.R.A., who are amateurs under every rule recognised in British sport, appeal to your Majesty to see justice done them by being allowed to compete in your cup race for the Allied Eights at Henley. They have reason to believe the entry was rejected for class distinctions, when entries from Overseas and Allied Forces are accepted, whose qualifications are similar to those of the appellants. Unless the N.A.R.A. entry is accepted we appeal to your Majesty to withdraw the Cup.

VERY FAST RUNNING.

OLYMPIC GAMES RECORD EQUALLED AT INTER-ALLIED SPORTS.

The inter-Allied sports were continued on Monday in Paris. Very fast running was witnessed in the first two heats of the 800 metres relay race, both of which were won in 1 min. 33 1-5 sec. America won the first heat from Australia, and in the second Canada beat France for first place.

The final of the 110 metres hurdles was won by the American crack, Simpson, who equalled the Stockholm Olympic games record of 15 1-5 sec. In the 200 metres race Lindsay (New Zealand) and Haliburton (Canada), prominent performers at recent English meetings, qualified for the final, winning their heats in 22 2-5 sec. and 22 3-5 sec. respectively, the former's heat being the fastest at the meeting. One only Englishman, Tittle, competed, and he ran third in a slow heat (53 1-5 sec.) of the 400 metres race.

FOOTBALL MATCHES.

B COMPANY v. A COMPANY 41st M.G.C.

Saturday afternoon saw these two companies contesting a fine sporting game. The feature of the opening stages was an attack on A Company's goal, Marsden saving cleverly from Jackson. A Company beat off the home side's strong attacks, and after a clever piece of work by their left wing the centre failed with the final shot. B Company got to work again and this time were rewarded. Sergt. Stoney let in Wright who made no mistake with a low drive after twenty minutes play. A Company then strove hard to get the equalising goal, but their forwards were weak in front of goal. Midfield play followed, and when the whistle blew for half time B Company were leading by 1—0.

The second half found A Company's goal once more in trouble, Marsden tipping a hot drive from Wright over the bar, the corner-kick being fruitless. The visitors' forwards strove hard to get on level terms, but Randall and Gorrord proved too good for them. Another attack on A Company's goal was made by Jackson, who passed inside to McCoy for the last named to put B Company further ahead after fifty minutes play. Plenty of midfield play followed, but there was no further scoring, B Company thus running out winners by 2—0.

"STARS" AND "STRIPES" AT HAAN.

This game between the "Stars" and "Stripes" of the 16th H.L.I. was played at Haan last week and created great interest. Play in the opening stages was very even. The officers scored first, through their centre-forward, Capt. Dean, and almost immediately the sergeants equalised. At half-time the offcers led by 3 goals to 2.

The second period was even more hotly contested. Capt. Lean and Lieut. Mathie scored for the officers, but, try as they might, the sergeants could only add one to their total. The end came with the officers victorious by 5 goals to 3. Capt. Lean scoring 4 out of the 5. Thus ended a most enjoyable game, and those present, who included the C.O., Lieut.-Col. Kyle, C.M.G., D.S.O., were delighted with the good-natured rivalry shown by both teams.

16th H.L.I. v. 11th ROYAL SCOTS.

The above teams met at Haan on Saturday before a very large turnout of onlookers. At the start, the Royals, who were the heavier team, pressed, but could make no impression on the rock-like defence of the H.L.I. At half-time neither team had scored.

The second half opened with a burst-away by the H.L.I., who, although playing against the wind, immediately took the game in hand. After several narrow escapes, the Scots goal fell to a splendid drive by Cpl. Wilson. Tombin, at inside right, was prominent for the Scots with some pretty play. With no further scoring, an exciting game ended in a win for the 16th H.L.I. by one goal to nil.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

Drama in Cologne.

In a G.R.O. of recent date, Commanding Officers are asked to provide all facilities possible to all ranks to take part in the Rhine Army Dramatic Company's activities. The order proceeds to announce that the Company has been formed to produce three-act plays every other week at the Deutsches Theatre, Cologne, from which it may be supposed that the original idea of arranging tours throughout the whole area has been altered.

"The Importance of being Earnest."

The unravelling of the most extraordinary and persistent complications through the agency of bright aphorisms, pointed dialogue and brilliant satire forms the basis of Oscar Wilde's comedy, "The Importance of being Earnest." The play is full of possibilities in the hands of talented performers, but the acting must be first rate, if justice is to be done to them. The British Rhine Army Dramatic Society embraces the necessary talent. From the ever increasing influx of members, Lieut. S. E. Percy, H.L.I., who produced the play at the Deutsches Theatre, Cologne, on Monday, selected a caste of such excellence as to delight a crowded house by their presentation. From start to finish, the theatre, echoed with ripples of merriment produced by the ludicrous situation and the bright humour of the book.

Players who Scored.

Major A. J. C. Pollock R.G.A., and Lieut. Percy were fully occupied throughout the whole evening as John Worthing, G. C. and Algernon Moncrieff respectively and each performed his task skilfully and with agreeable ease of movement. Miss Shirley King as Fairfax and Miss Gaorielle Paul as Cecily Cardew submitted charming impersonations of two girls very much in love, while Miss Inez Bensusan made a wonderfully successful Lady Brocknell, the iron-willed lady of society. Lieut. J. H. Hope, R.E. already having appeared in a similar role previously, was allotted the part of the Rev. Canon Chasable, D.D., which was in every way satisfactory. Miss Beale made a prim Miss Prism (the governess) while Lieut. H. L. Farwell R. F., was duly impressive as Lane, Moncrieff's servant. "S. O. S." was apparently brought along at the last minute to perform as Merriman (a butler) and he will improve as he loses his self-consciousness. The Dramatic Company will submit "The Title," by Arnold Bennett on July 14th.

25th General Hospital.

Being in hospital is always a wearisome business, and anything that helps to break the monotony comes as a Godsend. Any concert parties, therefore, who would care to cheer up their less fortunate comrades would greatly oblige by communicating with Capt. the Rev. Thomas, or 2/Lt. A. O. Priston, 25th General Hospital, Wiesdorf.

Individual Concert at Wiesdorf.

To give an entertainment off one's own bat for an hour and a half without pause is by no means a small achievement, and this is what Miss Sara Silvers, the brilliant mezzo-soprano, does nightly to units of the Rhine Army. Miss Silvers, who has been three years in France, on Saturday appeared at the 25th General Hospital at Wiesdorf, and gave her performance before several hundred patients. Possessing a voice of great power and range, she opened with a couple of light songs, and then, passing quickly to the more serious side, she gave in fitting fashion "The Stoker of the Lusitania," an item which evoked rounds of applause. This was followed by "Roses of Picardy," and "Joan of Arc," and, after other numbers, Miss Silvers concluded her entertainment with a new version of the National Anthem.

A Belated Programme.

An officer of dignified rank visited one of the Cologne places of entertainment recently and it was not until the performance was concluded that he realized that he had been referring to a programme three weeks old!

"House Full."

The ability of the "Tabs" Concert Party to attract audiences has been conclusively proved by the announcement of the business department at the Apollo Theatre, Cologne, in connection with last week's performances of the new revue "Well I'm —." Even standing room was at a premium on most evenings, but from Monday to Saturday there was not a single seat available quarter of an hour after the curtain rose. This is a record at the Apollo since the Army of Occupation took possession, and the "Tabs" are to be congratuled on the success they deservidly achieved.

"The Chevrons".

The Chevrons Concert Party after their successful tour of the Cologne area are at present rehearsing new programmes at Hastenrath. This battery concert party, I am informed, has been taken over by the 41st Brigade, R.G.A., and with the aid of a new comedian and female impersonator from the disbanded Brigade party it is anticipated that the show will be better than ever. The "Chevrons" are due to appear at the Orphanage Theatre, Düren this week.

"The Owlers" at Brühl.

The 29th Bde. Concert Party, "The Owlers", visited Brühl on Thursday night and gave a very entertaining show. Brisk and bright and splendidly staged, it is difficult to pick out any specially outstanding feature in the programme. Comedy bubbles throughout the performance, and Bdr. Davidson, Pioneer Evans, and Gunner Liebfield were very successful in that line. Bdr. Broome and Bdr. Walker are vocalists of ability; Bdr. Pawson ventriloquist, was responsible for much mirth; Pioneer Corner in the "Shooting of Dan McGrew" was seen to advantage; and Lieut. Palin and Driver Tulton in songs and dances were also a big success. A very amusing sketch "Producing a Cinema Drama", wound up a very delightful show.

JACQUES.

Echoes from Rhineland.

Missed the Point.

In a Rhineland officers' mess the other day a new servant had been engaged. While serving the soup at dinner, the Mess President discovered that the new man had his thumb in the liquid, so the fact was pointed out. "Oh, it's all right, Sir," was his reply, "it's not at all hot!"

English as she is Wrote.

While no doubt, the German educational system is a splendid one, and the Germans are thorough in their undertakings, even "Homer nods" at times. The following examples of German drowsiness are culled from the card in a chemist's shop window, giving a list of articles for officers and soldiers:— "Hands-cream, loocking-glasses, bath-balts, tooth-picker, hair-card (we wonder what this is), broshes, talk-powder, shampoon, and boracic-sourness." To most troops stationed in Cologne the card in the photographer's window worded "Photography on post-card immediate to take," will be familiar. But, painted in large black lettering over a hairdressser's shop in a street not very far from the Officer's Club is the legend:— "Barber-Chop." A choice example of the humorous possibilities of a "little knowledge," and its attendant dangers, it somehow makes one think of Chinese executions, and many have avoided the place, going elsewhere for a shave.

Our Cinemas Best.

No doubt the German film trade suffered much by the war, but that can scarcely account altogether for the poor quality of the pictures to be seen in German cinemas. It would seem that Germany fails to possess a Mary Pickford or a Charlie Chaplain, and the comedy films mostly displayed are a combination of rough vulgarity and poor acting. Of course one great disadvantage to our men at German picture palaces is that the wording descriptive of the plots is not understood by the majority, and more enjoyment will generally be had by patronising our own Army cinemas.

The "Dom-Birds."

In a recent issue, reference was made to the birdlife on the Cathedral towers. A correspondent point out, that what were described as hawks are actually kestrels, and that there are two pairs of them. In April, he says, he went up the Cathedral with a pair of powerful Zeiss glasses on purpose to observe them. He adds that the birds described as rooks, are, as a matter of fact, jackdaws. Kestrels frequently nest on lofty buildings on the Continent, and the jackdaw is of course, wellk-nown to be a bird which makes its home on cathedrals and other high structures.

Name-Days.

A very pretty custom among the Roman Catholic Germans is that of holding a "Namenstag" or name-day. Each Christian name has a certain day of the year attached to it, as for instance Margareta, 13th July, Arnold, 18th July. On these days the Margaretas, and Arnolds, hold parties at which there is great rejoicing, singing, dancing, and drinking of healths. The majority of the German Protestants, however, celebrate birthdays, after our own custom.

Photography Expensive.

Not a few of our photographic readers are comparatively beginners, and perhaps they will be interested to learn how expenses worked out in pre-war days. Prices are sure to drop from their present abnormal height, both on the Continent and at home; perhaps competition will force them as low as they ever were, so that those who practise the hobby in these times need hardly fear it will become too expensive for them. Indeed, as experience lengthens, expenses often disappear and a credit balance comes instead.

Pre-War Costs.

Before the war it was possible to buy a quarter plate folding pocket camera for 28s; a similar one could not be had to-day in Cologne for less than 300 marks. Taking quarter-plates as a standard, the general price was 1s., a dozen and "backed" plates sold at 1s, 4d. Self-toning P.O.P., gaslight or bromide papers, were as a rule ten pieces for 6d; ordinary pieces running often to sixteen pieces the "tanner" packet. The developing expenses were also down considerably, a carton of metol-hydroquinone to make 8oz of fullstrength solution costing only 2½d; pyro-soda was little dearer; whilst it was possible to make nearly half a gallon of pyro-ammonia for 1s. 8d. Hypo was so cheap that one nearly lost respect for it, being about 2½d. a pound. These were the prices from retailers, and professionals generally managed things cheaper still.

Too Many "Cooks."

It has been noticed by many of our readers that the Rhineland system of street cleaning seems to be without that methodic means to an end with which the German nation is credited. In Bonn, for instance, from 06.30 to 08.00 all manner of folk can be seen sweeping a certain portion of the pavement. One morning this week, we hear, a tradesman's delivery van stopped outside a house and the man busied himself sweeping the path for some distance. Then a woman appeared, who also made an attack on the dirt. Some twenty boys next turned up armed with brooms, pails and other sanitary impedimenta and took their turn. Finally the dust collector's van arrived, into which was shovelled the accumulated result of these various activities.

The Daily Round.

One of the minor tragedies of the war is the fact that so many of our former pleasures have been converted into unpleasant duties by constant repetition. When once a thing becomes part of our ordinary day's work it at once loses its attraction for most of us. The disgust of a demobbed R.F.A. driver, who had just paid a joyous farewell to a couple of particularly stubborn mules, on being implored to spend one of his hard-earned tanners on a donkey-ride at the seaside — "'e won't 'urt you, sir, 'e's as quiet as a lamb" — would only be equalled by the lofty scorn of an ex-bombing instructor who was asked to try his hand at the cocoa-nut shies. What infantry-man will in future pay for the pleasure of smashing bottles in a shooting gallery, after four years of smashing Germans in Flanders? If you suggested a walking tour to an infantry officer, he would probably murmur something about the heat, and ring up the nearest brain specialist.

Alarmed at the Move.

Recently orders came through for one of our battalions to move closer to the Rhine, and the preparations for the mens' departure caused considerable excitement in the villages where they were quartered. One enterprising German stationer in a certain place, who specialized in souvenirs for the troops, ranging from Picket-haube helmets to miniature models of Cologne cathedral, hearing the news of an early move became greatly alarmed. It seemed that he had laid in a larger stock than usual, a few days before and not wishing this to become baddstock, he relieved his feelings by displaying this notice in his window in large red letters: "Selling Out at considerable determinated prices." The placard had the desired effect and by the evening none of his stock remained on his hands. The soldiers had bought every scrap of it.

Prizes for "Echoes."

The Editor of "The Cologne Post" wants to encourage all ranks of the Rhine Army to make use of their powers of observation and whenever any phase of life in the occupied territory strikes any of his readers or whenever they come across any unusual incident he would like to have a short paragraph about it. Such items should never exceed 150 words, and even shorter notes will be acceptable. Every day the sum of 10 marks will be given for the best sent in, and it should be borne in mind that in awarding the prize, more credit will be given to the subject than to the style of writing, so that lack of literary ability will be no deterrent to anyone. The envelope should have the word "Echoes" in the top left hand corner.

The daily prize of 10 marks is awarded to Lieut. K. Moore, D/50 Brigade R.F.A., Lowland Division, Rhine Army.

Answers to Correspondents.

2nd LT. H.L. CROWTHER:—The silver rosette is being worn at home, but we were not aware that it had appeared on the Rhine. Regret we cannot quote you anything but a newspaper authority.

"B.G.":—On discharge from the Army a man is given a certificate of character.

"R.E.":—Under the latest regulations men who served with the colours for seven or more consecutive days and were discharged as medically unfit, are eligible for the silver badge.

"ANXIOUS":—No space for demobilization queries.

"CAUGHT":—Any payment made is debited at the current rate of exchange.

"RE-ENLISTED":—We take it that you are receiving the ordinary leave. As to the special furlough it is a matter for your Commanding Officer, but you cannot claim it as a right at present, unless you are embarking for service overseas.

"NOBBY":—Writing offhand, we plump for the Yorkshire side as that which has held the most cricket championships for the past 20 years.

"J.B.M.":—Durbar II won the Derby in 1914.

H. A. HOUSE AND E. C. MERCER:—We cannot quote you the A.C.I. The paragraph was culled from an item of news. Apply to the Air Ministry.

THOMAS BLAKELY:—You are not qualified for demobilization, but there are many courses open to you. Consult your Education Officer, or get into touch with an Army College.

"POMPY":—We know that unauthorized decorations are being worn. The General Service and Allied ribbons are not yet authorised. We have not heard of the "Re-engagement Occupation ribbon."

L/CPL. HILL:—If you drew a horse which was scratched then you stand to lose your money unless there was a special rule governing this. Make enquiries at the Empire Leave Club.

"W.W.":—We think not. Your age and shortness of service would make you eligible for further service.

"GUNNER":—Your gratuity dates from enlistment. Our contention is that you are not entitled to the red chevron.

"2nd LIEUT.":—On demobilization, uniform may only be worn at gatherings of a military character.

Other queries will be dealt with in our next issue.—Ed.

GERMAN ARMY OCCUPIES HAMBURG.

CHAOS OF SPARTACISM.

DATE OF PEACE CELEBRATIONS.

TERRIBLE BOLSHEVIST ATROCITIES IN RUSSIA.

CHAOS AT HAMBURG.

ARMY TAKES POSSESSION OF THE CITY.

The latest news from Hamburg is that the population is awaiting the entry of Government troops. General Vorbeck, with 30,000 men, numerous armoured cars and tanks, is ready to enter the town, and will undoubtedly do so, for Hamburg, besides being Germany's most important town, is also the depot for despatch of goods into the interior, and the authorities dare not allow it to be surrendered to Spartacist chaos.

It is reported from one source that Vorbeck's troops actually occupied the city at five o'clock on Monday morning, entering from three sides. There was no fighting. American food ships en route to Hamburg were ordered by wireless to change their course. No ships therefore have arrived during the past few days. It is reported that the number killed in street fighting before the military occupation was 545.

BOLSHEVISM!

TWO THOUSAND MURDERS IN ONE DISTRICT.

The American Consul at Omsk has forwarded to Washington, a startling report with regard to Bolshevist crimes in that area. It affirms that thousands of unoffending citizens have been slain and women outraged, and states that the melting snow has revealed two thousand corpses of people who were murdered in one single district.

The report is accompanied by hundreds of photographs in proof of the statements.

BELA KUN'S ATROCITIES.

Reports of atrocities are being published in Berlin with reference to Bela Kun's merciless methods. In Budapest the Bolshevists are completely masters of the situation, except for the revolt of peasants. These are well supplied with arms, but are always defeated in fighting owing to their lack of leaders. Famine must soon set in, and catastrophe is expected for the council and Government.

IN 1917.

GERMANY'S OFFER TO JAPAN.

Details of an offer made by Germany to Japan in 1917 have been published in Paris. The offer was that if the Eastern Empire would break faith with the Allies and throw in their lot with the Central Powers, the Kaiser undertook that she should be rewarded by the acquisition of the Dutch Colonies in Asia.

Japan immediately reported the offer to the Allies, who in turn did not allow the Dutch Government to remain in ignorance of the incident.

GERMANY AND ITALY.

A message from Amsterdam says that reports emanating from Berlin state that an alliance between Germany and Italy will shortly be ratified.

FRACAS AT BREST.

AMERICAN AND FRENCH SAILORS DISAGREE.

Serious collisions have occurred at Brest between French marines and American sailors. Several marines were wounded by the American military police, who were attacked and stoned by a mob. The Americans at first fired their revolvers in the air.

The military commandant ordered out several companies of infantry and the situation appears to be well in hand.

It has leaked out that several men were killed on both sides and many seriously injured. The authorities have been obliged to establish the strictest martial control. The disturbances originated in consequence of objectionable conduct and riotous behaviour of American soldiers and sailors awaiting departure for home. The censor has forbidden any reference in the French Press.

GENERAL SMITH-DORRIEN MUST WAIT.

In the House of Commons yesterday afternoon, Mr. Winston Churchill stated, in reply to a question, that General Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien had asked permission to reply to the attack made by Lord French in his book "1914." The Army Council, however, felt that such a course would be undesirable.

Mr. J. S. Holmes (L. Derbyshire, N. E.): Can you state the reasons why the Army Council arrived at that decision?

Mr. Churchill: General Smith-Dorrien is a serving soldier at the present time.

Mr. Holmes said he would raise the matter on the adjournment of the House.

A republican officers union has been formed at Berlin in opposition to the monarchist officers.

BERLIN STRIKE.

NATIONAL FOOD SUPPLY IN DANGER.

The railway and tram workers strike at Berlin is said to be engineered by Communists with funds supplied by the Hungarian Soviet Republic.

Tramway employees in other cities announce their immediate intention of striking. Meetings which have taken place between the authorities and the men's leaders led to nothing but angry recriminations.

The consequences to the community are incalculable. All imports into Berlin have ceased and 9,000 wagons are awaiting entry. Valuable foodstuffs have perished and cattle have died of starvation. The food providing of the capital and of the whole nation is thus threatened.

Oeser, Minister of Transport, has ordered that workmen who do not resume work before Thursday 3rd July will be dismissed.

COUNCIL OF FIVE.

SPEEDING UP OUTSTANDING PEACE MATTERS.

The Council of Five, which now constitutes the supreme council of the Peace Conference, holds its first formal meeting next Wednesday. Plans for expediting the work have been discussed, and it has been decided that important notes, instead of being referred to the supreme council, which method of procedure might entail several days delay, shall go direct to the proper expert commission for examination and report. It is stated that treaties similar to that concluded with Poland, of which the main object is to safeguard the rights of minorities, will be entered into with Roumania and Szecho-Slovakia.

INDIA AND RUSSIA.

ALLEGED VIOLATION OF OFFICIAL PLEDGES.

So long as the position in India remains unsatisfactory, said Captain Guest to Mr. P.A. Hurd (Co. U., Frome) no troops could be withdrawn until reliefs took their place. He added that no short service men are being sent to India.

Mr. A. E. Waterson (Ind., Kettering), in questions to the Secretary for War about troops sent to North Russia, declared that during the last two months, despite pledges to the contrary, men had been sent there who were not volunteers, but were conscripted.

Mr. Churchill asked for details of cases, adding that in principle no one was sent to Russia against his will.

ITALIAN EARTHQUAKE.

POPULATION OF FLORENCE CAMPING OUT.

Latest reports from Tuscany state that the victims of the earthquake are numbered by hundreds. In Florence almost the entire population has taken up quarters in the open fields. The shocks were felt in Rome and Venice. In all there were eighty-four concussions.

OFFICIAL PEACE DAY.

It was announced by Mr. Bonar Law in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon that the 19th July will be the official date for the peace celebrations in London and the country.

A procession will be held in London in which the Navy, Army, Royal Air Force and Mercantile Marine will take part. Contingents of the United States troops will also participate.

GERMANS FROM TURKEY.

The steamer Gul Djeman has arrived at Bremen from Constantinople with troops of General Kress from the Caucasus and the remaining members of the German colony in Turkey. Of the troops under Admiral Hopmann 6,500 still remain at Salonica but are expected shortly to return to Germany.

INTERRUPTED FLIGHT.

The machine of Lieut. Le Maire, who attempted to effect a flight from Paris to Dakar (French West Africa) capsized at Port Etienne in Mauritania about 1,400 kilometers from Dakar, after having traversed 4,000 kilometres. Pilot and passenger were unhurt, but the machine was so damaged that the flight cannot be continued.

SPEECHES PREFERRED.

The German delegation at Paris has presented a note requesting that oral negotiations may be opened respecting the method of carrying out the occupation of Rhine territories.

According to Ukranian reports Ukranian troops have prevented any possible junction of Russian and Hungarian Bolshevists.

R. 34's FLIGHT.

NAVIGATION AND OTHER DIFFICULTIES OF THE TRIP.

Permission was given by the Air Ministry for the R 34 to start last night on the Atlantic flight, subject to present weather conditions remaining unchanged. Preparations for departure from the East Fortune aerodrome were completed yesterday afternoon and officers and crew were in the highest spirits.

Two battle cruisers, the Tiger and the Renown, are already on station in the Atlantic for the purpose of transmitting weather conditions at various points by wireless to the captain of the R 34. An effort will be made to arrive in America on Friday, which is Independence Day.

SIXTY TONS DEADWEIGHT.

From the following details of the problems and difficulties inseparable from the trans-Atlantic crossing it will be seen what a stupendous task the journey is. At a cruising speed of forty knots, which is attained by running three of the engines, the petrol consumption is slightly over one gallon per mile, a remarkably low consumption with each engine rated at 275 horsepower and the loaded airship weighing close upon sixty tons. At the commencement of the outward and homecoming journeys the total weights will be adjusted to allow of rise aerostatically to about one thousand feet. During the voyages variations in temperature and barometric pressure of the atmosphere, notably those which occur between day and night, will have the effect of altering the equilibrium and height of the airship, and as petrol and oil are consumed it will have a tendency to rise. Long Island will probably be approached at an altitude of two thousand feet.

AIDS TO NAVIGATION.

Navigation of the airship admits of more precise methods than are possible in the case of aeroplanes. It is more closely allied to navigation on the sea, though far more complicated, because the swiftly blowing and variously directed winds with which an air navigator has to reckon are without parallel in sea navigation. It therefore demands a higher degree of skill. On the accuracy of the navigator will depend the larger success of the flight. The navigator of R 34 will attempt to follow a "Circle" course from the North of Ireland to St. Johns, Newfoundland (that is roughly the curved line which appears upon Mercator's chart). Thence he will steer for Long Island via Halifax. The airship will thus pass to the North of the shipping lane to New York, but close to the track of ships bound to or from the St. Laurence. One advantage possessed by the air navigator over the seaman is his ability to determine the course he is "making good." Apart from methods of navigation by dead reckoning, the position of the airship can be determined with fair accuracy either by celestial observation by sextant or by wireless direction-finding apparatus. With this instrument it is possible to determine the direction of signals received. The point of interception of such bearings from known points on the chart gives the approximate position of the airship. Both celestial observations and wireless direction-finding are liable to error but the mean of several observations should give a close approximation of the true position.

WONDERFUL NEW DEVICES.

Weather conditions must obviously be the first consideration of captain and navigator. The Air Ministry has already in existence extensive organization for weather reporting created for the benefit of competitors in the trans-Atlantic flight competition. Meteorological officers from the Air Ministry will be on board to test the wind at different altitudes by means of kites and pilot balloons. The meteorological officer accompanying R. 34 will compile his own weather charts from reports transmitted to him by wireless. The latter will comprise observations from the battle cruisers, from the United States Navy, Canada, Newfoundland, Ireland, Bermuda, Scandinavia, the Azores and ships in the Atlantic, as well as synoptic reports from the British Isles and official bulletins of conditions in Atlantic compiled by the Air Ministry.

Observations carried out from the airship itself will also be of value, and in this connection two methods have been proposed by which the meteorologist will be able to determine roughly the barometric pressure at the surface of sea. One which constitutes an innovation of unproved efficiency has for its object the determination of the exact height of the aircraft above the sea. Barometric pressure below can be calculated from the reading in the car. It consists of firing a gun and calculating the height from the time taken to hear the echo of the report from the surface of the water. Fog or low clouds detract from the reliability of this system. Alternatively a maximum reading barometer which indicates and records the highest atmospheric pressure into which it has descended may be lowered from the airship to near the surface of the sea.

"ARE YOU THERE?"

Apart from naval craft very few vessels are equipped with a wireless telegraphy installation comparable in range and utility with that of R. 34. A combination of instruments has been devised to enable the airship to communicate with any wireless station or warship within one thousand miles. A wireless telephone attachment will also be carried which will permit speech to all types of wireless receivers up to a radius of fifty miles. All possible means for maintaining wireless communication with the airship have been organized, and it is hoped that communication will be maintained throughout the whole period of the voyage.

REPAIRS EN ROUTE.

One advantage possessed by airships over aeroplanes is the possibility of executing engine repairs during the flight, and for this purpose a number of spare parts are carried on board R. 34.

On arrival in the United States the airship will be moored in the open and will probably not remain longer than is absolutely necessary for taking in gas, fuel and stores, and for adjustment of the engines. This may be completed in ten hours or at most twenty-four hours.

The return journey will present fewer difficulties; winds will probably be considerably more favourable, so that the duration of the flight and strain on personnel and engines will be less. Also there will be advantage in flying to the southward of the disturbed weather zone.

INADEQUATE PENSIONS.

SIR DOUGLAS HAIG SPEAKS HIS MIND.

Sir Douglas Haig gave evidence before the Select Committee on Pensions at the House of Commons yesterday. His evidence constituted the most outspoken criticism of the system of pensions and gratuities, and he was particularly vehement over the case of officers, many of whom he said were left penniless on discharge.

He protested against the lack of cohesion between the War Office, the Pensions Ministry and the Labour Ministry. Alluding to medical boards, he said that some were lacking in sympathy and generosity and treated every wretched individual who came before them as a malingerer. The Field Marshal advocated more generous provision for all ranks in order that they might be able to give proper education to their children. He declared the disability rates for officers and men to be completely inadequate. Some of the men were in absolute poverty. The 27/6 per week with twenty per cent. bonus was not enough. He thought the weekly allowance should be forty shillings, and should also be granted to men suffering from tuberculosis, and there should be more generous treatment of men suffering from gas poisoning, shell shock and neurasthenia. The action of the War Office in putting officers on insufficient half-pay could only be described as inhuman.

Sir Douglas Haig also sharply criticised the action of the Trades Union in preventing trained but disabled men from obtaining employment. Describing as scandalous the treatment of men who had earned pre-war pensions, many of whom had served in the present war, he said that the wretched pittance received for lifelong service was a disgrace to a civilized state.
